P.S.—I hav had to quit writing and go to bed, being still very weak. I finish this in bed, not knowing whether I shall ever be able to write another, my age being against me. But I am happy to say that the thought of death does not disturb me in the least. I am fully prepared to meet it at any moment. I am fully in the faith that the religion of humanity will certainly triumph in the end, and that all other religions will go to the wall. I felt as though I wanted to hand in the "widow's mite" of encouragement while here, knowing that every little helps, and this is what has drawn out at this time this somewhat rambling letter.

Wishing you long life and success in your undertaking, I am,

Yours sincerely, J. P. D.

Those Economic Opinions.

KIOWA, Feb. 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Our mutual friend, Mr. Darrow, in what might be termed rather unvarnished language, makes it quite evident that he does not think exactly as I do.

I will simply take up the first paragraph in which I am honored with his consideration.

My article was written in reply to certain economic opinions published in the Chicago Tribune, and copied by THE TRUTH SEEKER in its issue of November 21st last past. In this article it was assumed that "the raw material of a locomotiv—meaning by raw material the ore in the ground and the limestone used in the furnace—is not worth to exceed $5 or $10." In the same way, I assumed the statement that the raw material in the ground of a bushel of corn was not worth one-tenth of a mill. Strictly speaking, as said in my previous article, the raw material in the ground is not worth anything unless labor has been applied to it; but, for the purpose of argument, it would hav made no difference if the raw material had been worth thirty-nine cents; when corn is forty cents per bushel, the difference represents labor, ingenuity, etc. Furthermore, if Mr. Darrow will compute the value in the ground of the water, ash, carbohydrates, and albuminoid of the seed which will produce a bushel of corn, he will confer a blessing on mankind in general and myself in particular. I would like to state, by the way of digression, that, reasoning from what experience and observation hav taught the farmers in this vicinity, two and a half mills for the seed producing a bushel of corn would make corn worth just $1.87 per bushel.

In your issue of Oct. 17, 1891, Mr. Darrow states that he has a farm of forty acres, on which the annual tax is $12, and a full rental value of $120. In your issue of December 19th last he makes this statement, "My forty acres of land brings me very little money after taxes and repairs are taken out." Now, he estimates land at $20 per acre. Aside from the fact that the first principle of profitable farming is to make it profitable, bearing in mind that it takes one bushel of corn to make ten pounds of pork, and that cattle can be ranged at twenty-five cents per head per month for seven months, I am prepared to make the following statements:

1. That the taxes on Mr. Darrow's land will nearly equal its income for range purposes.

2. That unless he has extra improvements his land cannot pay a rental of $3 per acre without resorting to a crop of corn or small grains of some kind.

3. That when corn is forty cents per bushel, you cannot afford to sell pork for less than four cents per pound.

4. That neither in theory nor in practice is Mr. Darrow correct.

Having pointed out numerous errors in one paragraph, I hav not the time at present to show the inconsistencies in the remaining seven, were I even sure THE TRUTH SEEKER could spare the paper. Nearly all of these matters hav been discussed and conclusivly settled, so far as argument goes, by Mr. Holt in the issue of July 25th; T. W. C., in the same; C. Dutton, in August 1st; F. H. Marsh, in August 8th, August 15th, and August 29th; J. W. James, in August 8th; and W. B. Lewis, in August 15th. Although in THE TRUTH SEEKER of Aug. 8, 1891, Mr. Brooks annihilated every argument attributed to Colonel Ingersoll, it seems only just and reasonable that, so long as such ideas are published, their refutation is in order; and I do not consider it presumption for anybody to speak their honest sentiments. It must also be remembered that these articles purporting to be written by Mr. Ingersoll are not always authentic, and until I see Mr. Ingersoll's signature below an article it is my privilege to doubt its authenticity. Any man who admires generosity, sincerity, and manhood cannot fail to admire Mr. Ingersoll; and I am satisfied that our common champion of Freethought would take as much pride in an opponent who showed some degree of intelligence, as he would in a follower who showed many degrees of arrogance, to say nothing of the lack of a certain quality, a modicum of which is quite essential to getting along in the world.

Z. A. GLEASON.

All Should Write Thus to Their Local Papers.

FREEDOM, ILL., Jan. 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: You may send me a petition for the signatures to our Congressmen for keeping the World's Fair open Sunday. We had a protracted meeting in our village here this winter and I wrote the thing up and had it published in our local paper, the Earlville Leader, and inclosed I send a copy and you can do what you wish with it.

Yours with my best wishes,

D. M. STEVENS.

DOUBT.

What is doubt? Is doubt a benefit or an injury? Has it been a benefit to mankind to doubt the old, primitiv plow, the pack-mule, the wooden cart, the old theory of a flat earth founded on a rock and rock all the way down, and a thousand and one other things that might be mentioned? If none of these ever had been doubted, where could there hav been progress in this world? What but doubt has brought to perfection our modern machinery, farming implements, our astronomy, our chemistry, and other things too numerous to mention? What but doubt ever induced Columbus to discover America—for, knowing that land was heavier than water, he doubted the eastern continent was all the land there was; he thought there must be another continent to balance the other or else the earth would be like a grindstone with one side heavier than the other and would run irregularly.

What sensible, reasonable, intelligent man cannot say that doubt is and has been and will be the greatest blessing to mankind in gaining knowledge, and who is prepared to say that knowledge is not the greatest blessing to man?

But there are some that talk the opposit of this. We hav had a protracted meeting here in Harding for the last month where we hav been told that belief was the crowning virtue, and doubt is the most damnable sin that can be committed. We had an imported evangelist for three weeks; he ran through the catalog of texts that are used on such occasions, with a rehearsal of Talmage's and Sam Jones's blood-curdling stories. He assured us of God's promis that where two or three were united together as regards one thing God would surely answer prayer, and night after night God was reminded of his promis through the whole meeting, and at the close the preacher and all others that prayed assured God that they had done all in their power and complied with all his commands and without he condescended to answer their prayers it would be a failure.

We were entertained one evening with a contest that Elijah had with the priests of Baal on Mount Carmel—and by the way, our evangelist is a passably good story-teller. He described all the particulars how they put an ox on the altar; how they prayed and implored, and cut and slashed themselvs, to induce their gods to send down fire from heaven and consume their sacrifice for a whole half day, and how Elijah sat on a stump and provoked them by telling them to cry louder for maybe he was away fishing or hunting or on a journey, and how they failed. Then he told the other side in regular orthodox order, showing the difference betwixt Elijah's God and the gods of Baal.

Now, what is the difference betwixt the gods of Baal and the God manifested in our four weeks' meeting? The priests of Baal cried to their gods for a whole half day, with cutting and slashing, and our priests did the same for four straight weeks (the cutting and slashing was not apparent; if there was any done, possibly the yaller-legged chickens could testify) with no better results apparently than the priests of Baal.

Now, what does this all mean? Mankind are thinking to-day more than ever before on this question; there is a desire for knowledge; they are not satisfied with belief, for belief is not knowledge and believing the Christian religion to be true does not make it so. If it did it would make every religion on the face of the earth true and that can't be.

What mankind wants to know is, is there a Christian God outside of the imagination? Is it a demonstrated fact that he ever answered a prayer? Did he ever make or create anything out of a void? Has man a soul that will be sensible to pain or pleasure after all that constitutes a man has decayed or gone back to the elements of nature? Is it anything but a theory? Who is prepared to teach us, and do those that pretend to teach us know any more about it than we do, or is teaching theology, as Lord Brougham defines it, the art of teaching others something you do not know yourselvs? The greatest enemy to the spreading of the gospel, we were told by the preacher, was Universalism and Infidelity, but Universalism was the worst, for it led astray and ruined a great many good people that abhorred an Infidel.

What better gospel is there than to do right because it is right to do right, or, The world is my country and to do good is my religion? When all the leading minds of the world, such as Thomas, Swing, and Professor Briggs, doubt the divine inspiration of the Bible, and scores of others who hav left the church and its superstition because they doubt, who can help but doubt?

DANIEL M. STEVENS.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Correctly Answered.

An urchin of four in the corner stood,
Behind the great armchair,
Eyes closed in pious attitude,
Murmuring a senseless prayer.

The parson, near, just eavesdropping,
Asked the question, "What are you doing?"
Got this answer for his quizzing:
"Why, don't you see, sir? doing nothing!"

"Nothing! Nothing! What is nothing?
That is a mystery, I'll agree!"
"Oh! you go 'long—'tis what I'se talking!
It's what oo shut oo eyes to see!"

U. J.

A Sunday in the Country.

To be in the country in the summer, with the green trees, the lush grasses, waving flowers, and sweet-scented herbs, with the birds caroling their lovely songs, the humming insects, the browsing cattle sleek and fat, is of course delightful.

But the country in winter! You shrug your shoulders and say, "Excuse me, if you please."

It was the 19th of December, 1891, when I was invited to take a drive ten miles away into the bleak and deserted country. The day was fine and I was delighted to accept the invitation. The gentleman who was so kind to take me in his carriage is a sort of good Samaritan to many girls, young and old, who hav not the fortune to own a team of their own.

Well, off we started, about half-past 9 A.M. It was not very cold, hence there was no need of extra wraps. We drove southward out from the city, passing many church-goers and other pedestrians on the way, pausing to note the comers from mass filing out from the French Catholic church. By scores they came swarming, neatly dressed men and gaily attired ladies, returning from mass, and we met as many more going to take their vacated places. For strict attendance at church no sect can take the palm from the Catholic.

Soon we passed the old Townsend homestead, where a literary man of the old school once lived—and died. Only a few of the older settlers remember him, but he was said to be a man of much erudition. "Townsend Hill" was probably named in his honor, but Parnell, the horse, did not like the appearance of the hill. Pausing, he flicked his ears backward and forward as if mentally saying, "To go or not to go, that is the question." He finally concluded that discretion was the better part of valor, and moved on. Parnell is a very knowing animal, and remembers every place he ever visited.

We passed the boundary line that divides Rhode Island from Massachusetts, and I ventured to remark that it would be a good plan if Rhode Island was absorbed into Massachusetts! Do not tell Rhode Islanders I said it, for they would be mad enough to scratch my eyes out.

All the way along Westerly is a beautiful water view. Mount Hope bay and the bay of Narragansett, with the island-dotted waters near the Stone Bridge, make a picture too lovely for description. On the east are the famous Tiverton hights, and the place where the old fort stood, a remnant of the war of 1812–14.

When I rode this way before, Nature was in her bloom. Now, the golden-rod has only gray and withered plumes, the silk-weed has sent its fluffy-winged seeds abroad, the grass is brown and sere, but the scarlet berries that stand out here and there amid the dull, bare branches and the reeds and rushes giv a dash of flame to the landscape. How odd it is to see the skeleton-like trees, standing undressed, as it were, but strong to meet the pitiless blasts of winter! We know they will be clothed again, because they always hav been, and we trust the record.

I would like, if there were time, to tell you about the house that strangers know by instinct is "haunted," and the old tavern with its long ell and rickety walls, once the place of wine and wassail. Its patrons hav long since fallen asleep, and imagination can only picture the old-time comforts of the "half-way house" between Newport and Boston.

The island stretching out yonder is a pretty sight in the winter sunshine. The clump of buildings to the right is the "fish works" of the Church family, and the product of the sea has made the family rich and famous.

Yonder is Quaket, and a sweet spot it is, winter or summer. Farm-houses, schoolhouses, graveyards, and an occasional church dot the roadside, and now and then a solitary boy skating on the pond seems to say it is fine sport if it is Sunday.

The road is good, and there is no cloud of dust as in summer. There are comfortable residences all the way along, and that part of the country road guarded on either side by grand old elms is a marvel of beauty.

We were soon at Sepowet avenue, that turns toward the river. On the right, in that white house, where there is a big barn with red doors, there livs a retired school-teacher. On the other side is the Mackenzie summer home. The next pretty cottage is Mr. Henry Durfee's, and we stopped right there, for Parnell was hungry after his long jaunt. A few steps onward, leaving the team in charge of "Henry," we called at the "Father Durfee" Farm, a dear old-fashioned country home with comfort and convenience breathing from every ell and angle.

Then we went across the road to see the wonderful newly-built cottage that belongs to the Samaritan, before-mentioned. You'd laugh if I should tell you about that house, so I shall not whisper it now. It is a good house, though, and one might take lots of comfort in it. From there we took a walk down the lane leading to the shore. The day was still and the Seaconnet river was beautiful as a dream of peace. The cattle were coming up from the meadow for water, it being the noon hour. One poor old ox was lame, and he was away behind the others. Poor old fellow! But he has a good home and is well cared for.

An old scow lay high and dry on the bank of the river, and a little tuft of grass had rooted on its weather-beaten sides. The tide was just coming slowly in, and it was a pleasure to walk on the pebbly strand and watch the water play over the wide clam-bed, for it is said there in that particular spot is one of the finest clamming places in the country.

Gathering some scalloped shells and a white stone for mementoes, we reluctantly turned our steps backward to the Father Durfee Fa m. Dinner was ready and we were welcome guests. We had roast chicken (I thought it was turkey), and vegetables, with desert of pumpkin pie, jelly-cake with cocoanut frosting, and delicious coffee. The little grandchildren, May and Harry, came in at noon, and May ate dinner with us. Father Durfee is eighty-two years old, but you would not think it to look at his fine, intelligent face. He is one of the survivors of that bloodless rebellion called the "Dorr War," and at that time, which might hav been worse, he had forty men under his command. In the difficulty he was of the party known as the Algerines. Mother Durfee is a sweet-faced motherly woman, whom to know is to love. For fifty years the happy couple hav lived together on the farm; hav worked hard, and made the place to blossom like the rose. You should see the noble orchard, the trees grown from seed planted by the proprietor's own hand and grafted, from which are produced, some years, six hundred barrels of splendid apples. I know they are splendid, for when I left the mansion that day Mother Durfee kindly placed in my hands a plump parcel fragrant with orchard scents. One daughter of the couple was at home, and as she possesses the qualities of heart and mind of both parents, she is as lovable as she is gentle and unassuming.

Well, you know the days are very short, and too soon it was time to harness up the horse and start for the city. So, with good wishes commingling with good-byes, with a brief call in the other bright home up the road, and a promis from Henry to bring me some quahaugs the next time he comes to town, we were soon speeding along the highway again. We reached home safely before it was quite dark, for Parnell, like all other horses, knew he was going homeward, and that there were oats awaiting him in the stable.

We feel sure the country has its delights in winter as well as in summer, and we shall long remember with much pleasure that Sunday at Sepowet. S. H. W.

Memory.

Did you ever think what a valuable faculty memory is? How it enables you to lay away and store up all the treasures of the past?

To remember is to be able to call to mind and to recollect—that is, to re-collect—the thoughts, incidents, and events of the past—to reproduce past impressions. When we think of some past event or thing spontaneously, we call it remembering; but when we hav to make an effort to recall it, then it is recollecting, though it is all memory. All your mind, soul, and inward self is memory.

Destroy all past memory and you would not know yourself, or your parents, or anyone, nor know how to talk, walk, or eat. You would not know a man from a horse. The mind would be like that of a babe—a perfect blank. You would be only the outward shell of yourself. Many hav lost so much of memory as to know no one and even forget how to read or write, and hav to begin and be educated entirely over again, and get newly acquainted with old friends and relativs. Then others hav had remarkable memories, so that by once reading a newspaper they could repeat it all over, advertisements and all; or, like Blind Tom, catch the most difficult tunes by once hearing them.

Philosophers say we never forget anything; that every sound we hear, everything we see, everything we touch, all we feel, and all we taste, is registered on the brain and nerves, and is ineffaceable; that every bit of life could be recalled under certain circumstances. Some little trifle will often bring to mind something we had apparently forgotten.

Persons very ill of fever will sometimes repeat whole pages of some foreign language they hav heard read in former times. It was all impressed by memory, even though not one word of it was comprehended.

The more we think of memory the more wonderful it seems to us.

We need to be very careful to fill our lives as full as we can of good thoughts and good deeds, so as to hav good memories to recall.

Every sunny hour and every enjoyable event of life is a gem to be registered in memory's recollection book.

AUNT ELMINA.

Correspondence.

COLLINS, NEB., Feb. 15, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first time to write to the Corner. I like to read the Children's Corner. My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. We are going to hav school by two months. I am nine years old, and hav three sisters and two brothers. We play checkers every night, and I always beat. As this is my first time to write to the Corner, I don't want to make it too long. I like to look at the pictures on THE TRUTH SEEKER. My sister wrote once to the Corner. I hope this will not go to the waste-basket.

Your true friend, FLORENCE COCHRAN.

PORT TOWNSEND, Feb. 13, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I see no letters from here I thought I would write one. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for some time. I delight very much in reading the Children's Corner. My father, as well as myself, is, as some Christians call us, a full-blooded Infidel. There are not very many Infidels in our town. I don't believe there is one girl in Port Townsend, with the exception of myself, who is an Infidel. All the associates that I hav are Christians, and they are all so very pious and superstitious. I wish some of the girls who write to the Children's Corner would please write to me.

I remain, LIZZIE VINCENT.

BEATRICE, S. D., Feb. 13, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner once more, as it has been a long time since I hav written. My uncle has renewed his subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I am glad, because I like to read the letters in the Corner and look at the pictures. My uncle sent for "The Story Hour" for me, and the reading is very nice. I like it real well, and he sent and got my brother a book, "Little Lessons for Little Folks." We hav not much snow this winter so far. We do not hav any liberal meetings around here. I wish they would hav. Well, I guess I will stop for this time, wishing the Corner success. I remain, Yours sincerely,

GRACE A. MILLER.

TURNER, ORE., Feb. 8, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Mamma wanted me to write to you. So I thought I would try. I say hurrah! to Lores L. Goodwin. Write again, Lores. I hav a cat, too. But, instead of calling him Timothy Skittlebones, I call him Timothy Timpkins. There are no Freethinkers in the little town of Turner but my papa and mamma. Papa has joined a club called the Turner Social and Literary Club, in which there are lots of preachers, and papa thinks he is having a good deal of fun. I would like to correspond with some little girls about my age. I am twelv years old.

Yours truly, KATIE D. MATTESON.

[Do not let this be the last letter to the Corner, Katie. Tell us about the town of Turner, the trees, mosses, flowers, etc.—ED. C. C.]

NEW PUBLICATION.
FIRST EDITION
10,000.
NOT ON CALVARY.
LEATHERETTE, GILT TOP, 35 CENTS.
Sent postpaid on receipt of price.
CHARLES T. DILLINGHAM & CO.,
718 & 720 Broadway, New York.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.
By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.
Boards, - - - - - 40 cents.

MIRACLES
AND MIRACLE-WORKERS.
By JOHN PECK.
Price, 10 cts.

CHRISTIAN ABSURDITIES.
By JOHN PECK.
Price, 20 cents; six copies for $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.
Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.
Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

News of the Week.

THE quarrel between the French government and the clergy continues lively. Radicals are demanding repression of the clergy, or separation of church and state, and hav compelled the resignation of the government cabinet, or ministry.

LAST week a vast mob of starving unemployed workingmen marched to the palace gates of the German emperor to complain of their wrongs. They were repulsed with bloodshed. The likeness of this to events preceding the French Revolution is remarked.

MILLERS and others in our West hav contributed 3,095,672 pounds of flour to Russia. Also 1,500,000 pounds of corn are being sent to Akron, O., where Ferdinand Schumacher, a wealthy miller, will grind it free. All will be shipped free by the Atlantic Transportation Co.

THE Catholic Apostolic church, a minor body having congregations in Great Britain, France, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Denmark, Austria, and the United States, predicts the near coming of Christ. One of its leaders the other Sunday declared the grip a forerunner of Christ's appearance, and a token of God's anger against an Infidel age.

THE Catholic population of the United States is given by the two Catholic almanacs, the Sadliers' and the Hoffmans', as seven to nine million. It has been put by good authorities at twelv million and over. Now, however, several Catholic leaders and organs say that these figures embrace only "good" Catholics, that is, those who hav attended Easter communion, and that there are twenty million actual Catholics here.

As the Episcopal clergyman of Shenandoah, Va., was about to baptize a child, the father, David Jones, arose and exclaimed, "Hold on! If you christen that child you do it against the wish and religion of the father. I am an English Baptist." Mrs. Jones directed that the pastor go on. He did, and was arrested under the law giving a father spiritual and educational control of a child till it reaches maturity.

LARGE numbers of pamphlets are being distributed in China inciting against Christians. One says that the "Head Devil" whom Christians worship is called "Jesus, the Heir to the Throne." It goes on: "The truth is that Jesus, when alive, was a most vicious, most wicked, and most corrupt man, who, having committed many and most grievous crimes, was put to death by crucifixion. . . . There was no atom of injustice in the crucifixion."

UNITED STATES MINISTER SMITH at St. Petersburg cables that the famin and epidemic are increasing. Germany and Austria are busy repelling or quarantining typhus-bringing refugees. Some accounts of priests trading on the starving people's calamity add this description of the Russian priesthood: "The average village priest is often a drunkard, always uncultured, uneducated, unrefined. From whom is the unfortunate peasant to get his ideals? The gentleman he distrusts, the priest he hates."

REV. FATHER MACDONALD, parish priest of Coleraine, Ireland, stated from his pulpit last Sunday that Mrs. Montagu, who is being tried for tying her three-year-old girl in a dark room in such a way that she choked to death, is being persecuted and tried unfairly because she is a Catholic. The surrounding province of Ulster is hotly Protestant, and this remark, with another that the jury were prejudiced because all Protestants, are causing indignation. At the latest hearing extra constables were necessary to keep the peace.

IN Germany agitation continues over the Education bill which the emperor is attempting to push through the parliament. His motivs are: (1) To please the Poles, who are nearly all Catholic. This bill removes their religion from its position of subordinacy to Protestantism. He wishes to pose as their benefactor in contrast to Bismarck, who oppressed them and their faith. (2) To conciliate Catholics in general, whose support he wishes for his disturbed empire. (3) To gain the Vatican's support in event of war with France. (4) To crush Freethought as inimical to autocracy, and foster religion as favorable to it. The bill abolishes the present system, under which religion is taught but in a measure, and provides that sixty parents in a district, belonging to one of certain specified faiths recognized by the government, shall hav a teacher of their creed appointed and he shall inculcate religion copiously. Officials under the emperor's private directions, it is known, would apply these regulations with partiality, favoring such creeds as their master commanded. No child is to be exempted but by one of these officials, and they would compel the attendance of Freethinkers' children.

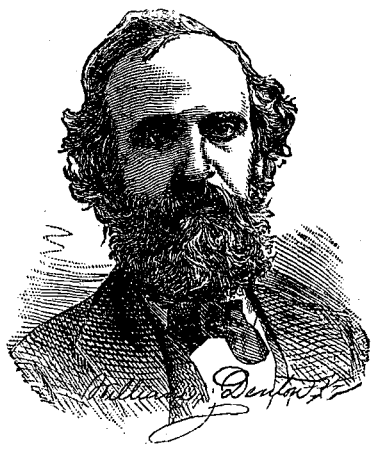
SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.



Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1 25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

FLORIDA. For full information send a two-cent stamp for a copy of South Florida Messenger.
418 LOCK BOX 253, Tampa, Florida.

HUMANITY'S SPREADING CURSE

is not the Church alone. There is another and worse culprit. Read the book with the above title. Price, 35 cents, through NEW YORK NEWS CO., Newsdealers, or E. H. ANDRAE, 718 Dallas, Texas.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial
To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

BY CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.
Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.
The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 128 pages, 50c.
Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth. 12mo, 245 pages, $1.
Universe Analyzed. $1.

THE STORY HOUR

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By F. R. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART POSS)
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.

Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.

J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.

T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.

J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.

Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.

A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.

Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.

J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.

Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.

N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.

Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.

S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.

Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.

John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.

Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.

John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.

B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.

H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.

Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.

L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 916 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.

John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.

Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.

Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.

W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.

D. Willis, A. Wanganui.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2 Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3 The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Gems of Thought.

NOR is truth arid or disconsolate; for it is the very nature of true knowledge to restore more with one hand than what it seems to take away or destroy with the other.—Buchner.

ALL these monuments [ancient scriptures] are curious, but they are monuments of human imagination alone, in which not a single truth, either physical or historical, is to be learned. There is not at present any little physical treatis that would not be more useful than all the books of antiquity.—Voltaire.

SUPPOSE that in the first century pagans had said to Christians: Where are your hospitals, where are your asylums, where are your works of charity, where are your colleges and universities? The Christians undoubtedly would hav replied: We hav not been in power. There are but few of us. We hav been persecuted to that degree that it has been about as much as we could do to maintain ourselvs. Reasonable pagans would hav regarded such an answer as perfectly satisfactory. Yet that question could hav been asked of Christianity after it had held the reins of power for a thousand years, and Christians would hav been compelled to say: We hav no universities, we hav no colleges, we hav no real asylums. The Christian now asks of the Atheist: Where is your asylum, where is your hospital, where is your university? And the Atheist answers: There hav been but few Atheists. The world is not yet sufficiently advanced to produce them. —Ingersoll.

THE whole ground of human life seems to some to hav been gone over by their predecessors, both the hights and the valleys, and all things to hav been cared for. According to Evelyn, "the wise Solomon prescribed ordinances for the very distances of trees; and the Roman prætors hav decided how often you may go into your neighbor's land to gather the acorns which fall on it without trespass, and what share belongs to that neighbor." Hippocrates has even left directions how we should cut our nails; that is, even with the ends of the fingers, neither shorter nor longer. Undoubtedly the very tedium and ennui which presume to hav exhausted the variety and the joys of life are as old as Adam. But man's capacities hav never been measured; nor are we to judge of what he can do by any precedents, so little has been tried. Whatever hav been thy failures hitherto, "be not afflicted, my child, for who shall assign to thee what thou hast left undone?"—Thoreau.

I ASK, What hav we in Christian London to render us rationally happy which they had not in pagan Rome two thousand five hundred years ago? Hav we, as the Roman people had, the stately lay of the poet, the ecstatic creation of the painter, the marble breathing into life in ennobling statuary, stupendous theaters for the people, and majestic temples for the gods? Alas! alas! our best-known poet is a senil court flunkey; our paintings and statues are shut up on the only day when the people could spare the time to see them; our Drury Lane is a hovel to the Colisseum, and our St. Paul's a mere pig-sty to the Pantheon. Then pagan Rome had its Cæsars—men of brain and character and power, whose vast resource and imperious will shaped the destinies of the world. Christian England has no Cæsars; it has the Guelphs: the able man of the race has yet to be born. Idiotic George III. and carnal George IV. were good enough for Christian England, with its beer and Bible; but something different was required by pagan Rome, with her sword and manhood.—Saladin in God and His Book.

As to surgery, this same amalgamation of theology with survivals of pagan beliefs continued to check the evolution of medical science down to the modern epoch. The nominal hostility of the church to the shedding of blood withdrew, as we hav seen, from surgical practice the great body of her educated men; hence surgery remained down to the fifteenth century a despised profession, its practice continued largely in the hands of charlatans, and down to a very recent period the name "barber-surgeon" was a survival of this. In surgery, the application of various ordures relieved fractures; the touch of the hangman cured sprains; the breath of a donkey expelled poison; friction with a dead man's tooth cured toothache. The enormous development of miracles in the church continued during century after century, and here probably lay the main causes of hostility between the church on the one hand and the better sort of physicians on the other; namely in the fact that the church supposed herself in possession of something far better than scientific methods in medicin. — Ex-President White of Cornell University.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, and at 116 Fifth avenue. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL. Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall. Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

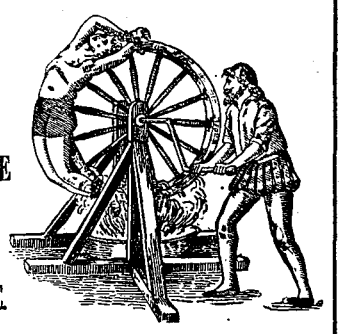
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,



Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Champions of the Church.

WHAT THEY HAV DONE FOR CHRIST'S SAKE.

By D. M. BENNETT (Founder of THE TRUTH SEEKER). Price, $3, in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

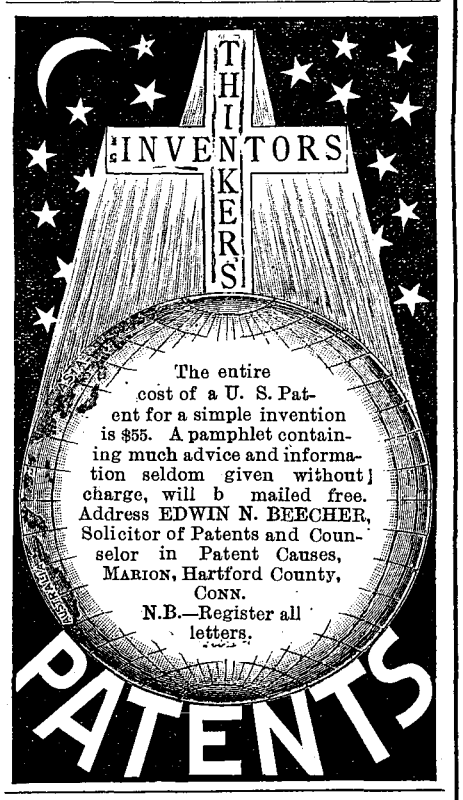
By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Rights of Women



—AND—

THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman. Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman.

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome: early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - 50 cents.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

Why Doesn't God Kill the Devil?

By M. Babcock.

Price, - - - - - - 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

ASTHMA DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

DOWN THEY GO!

Best make American Stemwind Watches. 17 jewels, adjusted, pat. regulator, in silverine case, only $11; in 3 ounce coin silver, $16; 4 ounce, $15 (a few years ago $60). In best 14 kt. filled gold cases, open face, $20; hunting, $23 to $28; 14 kt. solid gold, $40 to $100; same, not adjusted, $2 less; 11 jwls. $3.50, and 7 jwls. $5 less (lower grade watches, $5, $4, and $2.50).

THE PERFECTED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH, much finer than above, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position 16 jwls. and all modern improvements, nickel movement, cased as above, $8 more, gilt mov't. $6 more. No one else in the world sends out so good a watch at the price.

LADIES' GOLD HUNTING AMERICAN WATCHES, latest styles, best filled, 7 jwls. $17; 11 jwls. $18.50; 15 jwls. $25; 14 kt. solid gold, $10 to $100 more. All sent prepaid, kept in order one year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

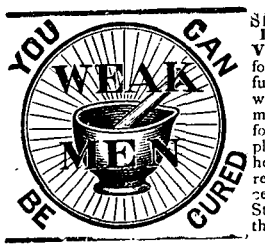
DIAMONDS: in rings, pins, drops, studs, etc., $10; $15; $25; $50; $100 to $1,000 per set. Cash refunded, if not 20 per cent below regular price, any time within one year.

WEDDING RINGS: Plain, chased, with pearls, emeralds, rubies, moonstones, opals, garnets, turquoise, solitaires or combinations, a specialty.

SUNDRIES: Rogers Bros.' triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; tea spoons, $1.80; tables, $3.49; best spects. in the world, $1; pebbles, $2; 14 kt. gold, $5 more (send line of finest print you can read without glasses 14 inches from eyes); gold-headed canes, $8; $10; $15; $20. Best razor—a luxury—$2. Solid silver spoons, $1.70 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, silver, $1.25 to $3. Tea sets, $20 to $40; everything in the line of fancy table silver, novelties, plush, and art goods, gold pens, etc. All sent prepaid (except cutlery) subject to exchange or cash back.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,
Established 1857. Rochelle, Ill.

Send for price lists, beautiful cards in colors and gold of my Freethought badges (large and small), tracts, etc. Free.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

AN INFIDEL REMEDY.

SEND 10 CENTS TO Dr. FELLOWS, VINELAND, N. J. for his book on youthful errors, early decay, wasting weakness, lost manhood &c. It sets forth an External Application—a reliable home cure, with full directions for use. Its a certainty, no failure. State where you saw this advertisement.

A patient writing from Davenport, Wash., says: "Your remedy is marvelous, and will accomplish what is said it will do. The value of which is untold."

DAVID'S JOSS PERJURETH HIMSELF.

My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once hav I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah.—(Psalms lxxxix, 34–37.)

Just Out.—A New Bible Picture-Book.

Old Testament Stories
Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

Four hundred pages—Two hundred Full-Page Pictures—The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

Price, postpaid, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book.

It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

J. D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

The Gods. A beautiful pamphlet of forty pages, with likeness of Ingersoll. Price, 20 cents. Eight copies for $1.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.]

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

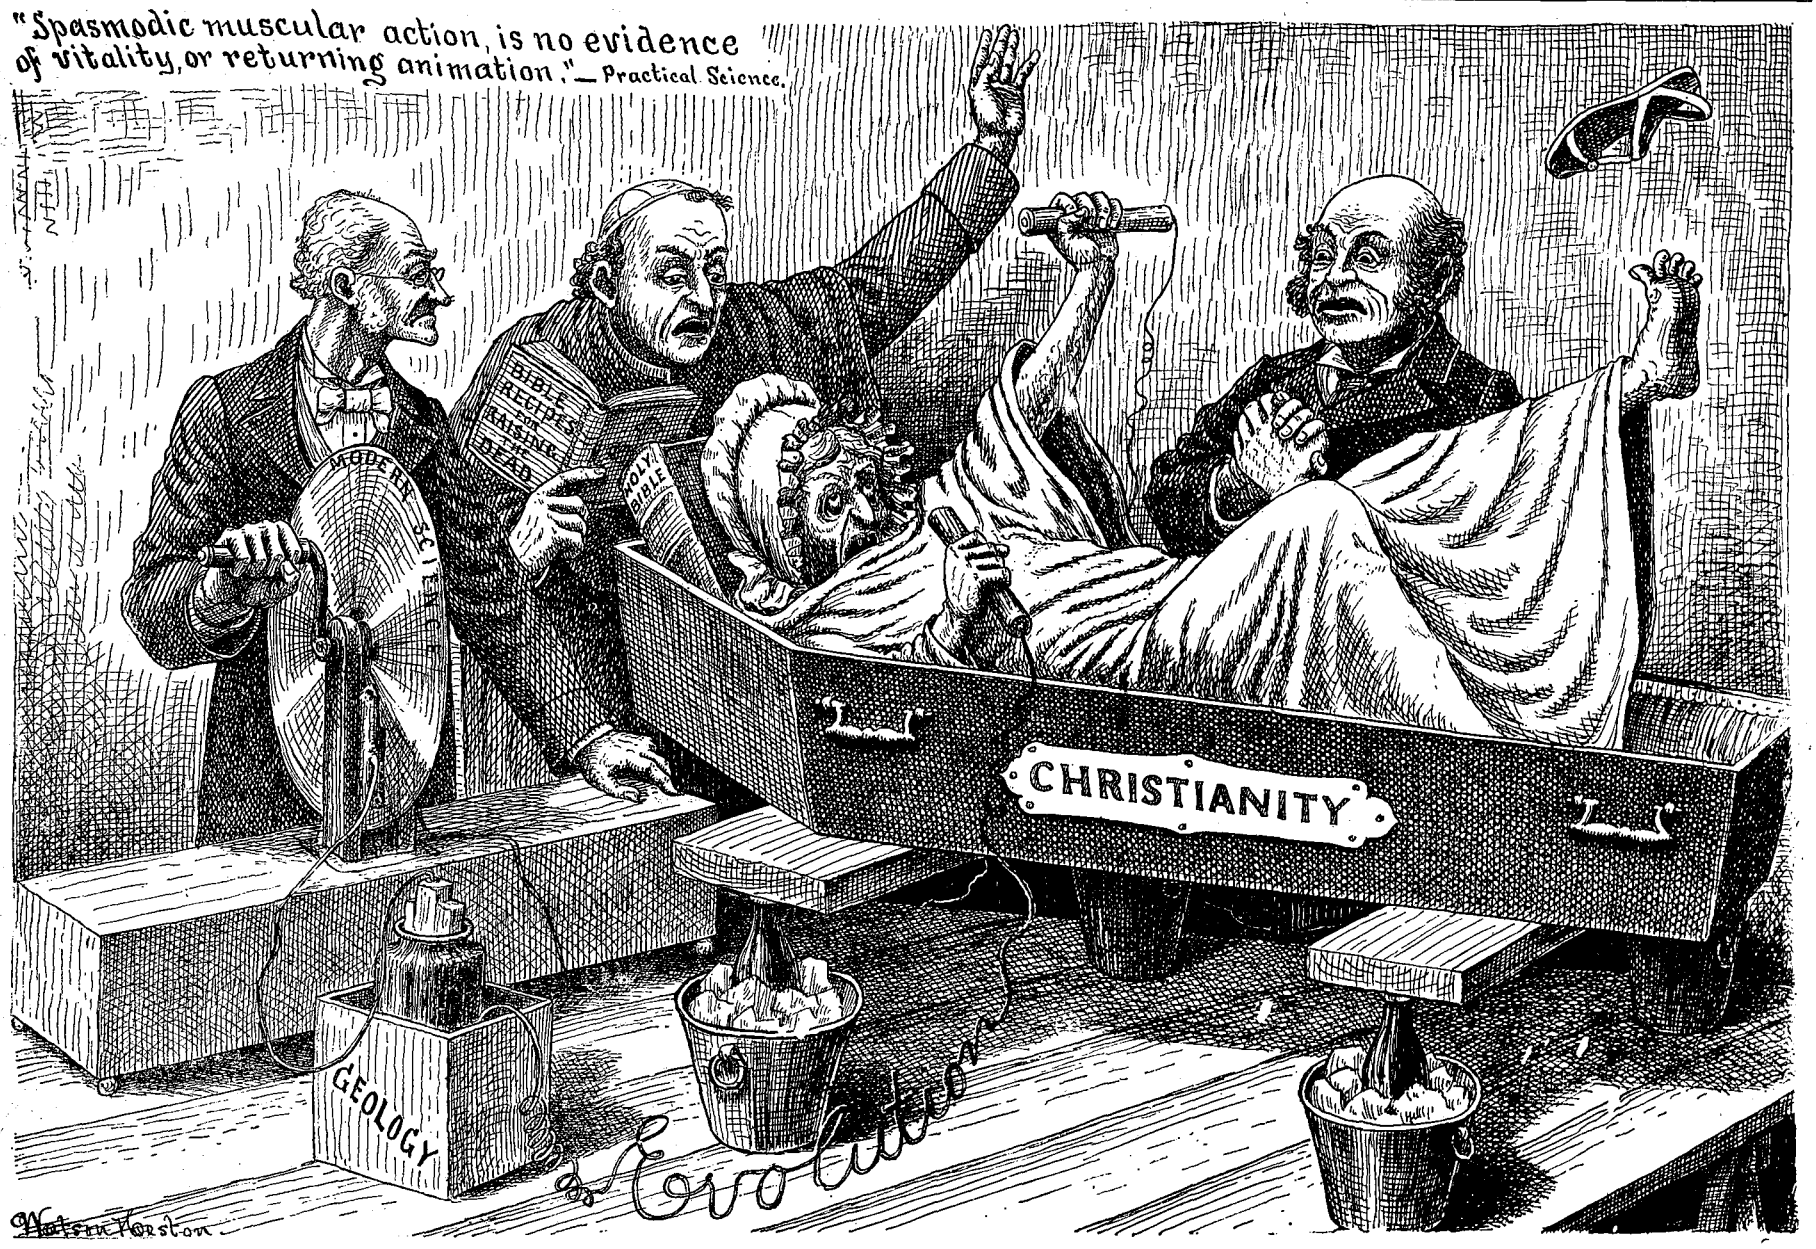
Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜



By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 11. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 12, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

IT WON'T WORK—DOCTORS OF DIVINITY TRYING TO REANIMATE AN OLD CORPSE

Just Out.—A New Bible Picture-Book.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

Four hundred pages—Two hundred Full-Page Pictures—The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

Price, postpaid, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

NEW PUBLICATION.

FIRST EDITION

10,000.

NOT ON CALVARY.

LEATHERETTE, GILT TOP, 35 CENTS.
Sent postpaid on receipt of price.
CHARLES T. DILLINGHAM & CO.,
718 & 720 Broadway, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.
By W. R. GREG.
Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

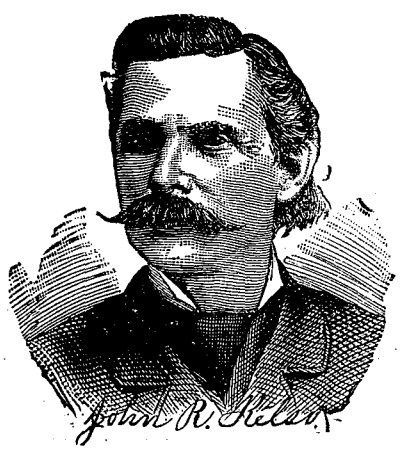
CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.



"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles."

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - 10 cents.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS,

AND

OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4 50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW, WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.

The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 11. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 12, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 12, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

"Brotherhoods!"

Commenting upon THE TRUTH SEEKER's review of the failures of Freethinkers in effecting solid organizations, which we considered as bearing upon the possibilities of success for Henry Frank, the Independent says: "These important admissions come from the head and front of the Infidel element. They show that there is no common bond between Freethinkers strong enough to unite them in a firm, aggressiv movement. They disbelieve and do what they can as individuals to induce others to disbelieve; but they hav no impulse, even in the love of their kind, which is their chief creed, to lead them to united effort, to self-sacrifice for their fellowmen. They protest loudly against the superstition and 'slavish subjection' of Christian believers, but they offer them nothing, absolutely nothing in place of their faith and hope; not even a place in a brotherhood devoted in love to the service of humanity."

This is hardly fair. No one wants a place in a "brotherhood." It is a queer thing that Christians think that people who object to the superstitious organizations of ecclesiastics must organize others just like them! One minister, in writing to the Telegram against Colonel Ingersoll, exclaimed, "Show us the temples Infidelity has built!" meaning places of worship. But who wants temples of worship? And the Independent is as wide of the mark. We were not considering benevolent institutions, but whether the sturdy individualism in thinking which makes men Freethinkers would permit them to organize solidly enough to keep Mr. Frank on the platform in this city forty weeks in the year. That phase of human nature must be taken into account as well as the slavish subjection of superstitious believers who support the preachers because they fear an angry God.

As for "doing good" and helping humanity in brotherly love, the individualistic Freethinkers are the most generous of men and women. They are very free to work for and giv to the needy, or to aid public enterprises, either of charity or propagandism; and perhaps do not weary of well-doing, nor fall by the wayside, oftener than the superstitious believers who are urged on by that hangman's whip, the fear of hell. There hav been and are thousands of Freethinkers in this country who hav sacrificed for the benefit of their fellow-men. It was love of their kind which induced Girard and Lick to make such magnificent donations. And we presume that the foremost Agnostic of the country to-day has given away, in proportion to his means, more money than any Christian alive; that he has done more acts of charity, from giving a beggar a dollar to rescuing some poor wretch from eternal shame; and helped more friends more than any deacon or minister or layman in the whole evangelical fold. Which is the better deed—sending flowers to make Walt Whitman's last days more comfortable, or giving him money enough to liv on for a year? That is a sample of the two kinds of charities practiced by the Christian and the Agnostic. A Christian brotherhood takes a few children from the street and puts them in a prison called a Christian school. And they "point to it with pride." The slandered Agnostic givs Mr. Adler's society and a Harlem society enough money to run their kindergartens a year or two each, saying nothing about it, and the Christians shriek, "What has Infidelity done? Where are its benevolences?" And the Independent solemnly criticises Freethought because it offers no "place in a brotherhood devoted in love to the service of humanity."

Not having to devote much of their time to escaping disagreeable things in another world the Freethinker tries to make this one a little better, and doing that usually takes the form of aiding others to be happy. There is no need of brotherhoods to stimulate fraternal feelings, because the members of such brotherhoods are generally anything but brotherly. But there is a common bond of great strength between Freethinkers; it has been made by the persecution of Christian neighbors and Christian lawmakers.

Our German Friends.

It is a favorit boast of the Germans—and is given by many of their orators as a reason why they will not work with the Liberals in this country—that superstition is dead, that the church is dying, and that it is not necessary to discuss the Bible and point out the errors of Moses any more. Another of their boasts is that Germany is a free country religiously, that Rationalism has its home in her universities, and that the German nation is practically Infidel. We recommend, therefore, that the following paragraph, written by the Berlin correspondent of the London Times, be read seriously:

"As bearing upon the question of religious teaching, which has been agitating Prussia ever since the school bill was introduced, it may be recorded that a few days ago a police official arrested a speaker at a public meeting in Silesia for 'inciting his hearers to forsake the national evangelical church.' The Prussian law requires that at public meetings a police official shall be present to keep the oratory within decent bounds, and the official in question was acting as moderator when he apprehended the astonished opponent of the national church, and caused him to be charged with public outrage. The radical papers are very much excited over this incident, and recall that when in 1875 the Anarchist agitator Most openly attacked the national religion, no proceedings were taken against him. They complain that during the last few weeks a reactionary current has been setting in strongly."

The school bill which has emboldened the reactionary party was introduced in the Diet by the emperor himself, who is a Lutheran, and very pious as well as dangerously foolish. The bill provides for the control of the schools by the sect dominant where they are located. It is stated that the emperor thinks the bill will stamp out Socialism in the next generation, by training the children to be religious and submissiv to the church. It is also thought that the emperor would not object to an alliance with the pope, could he be sure that the partnership would prevent his subjects from becoming Socialists.

But, says the National Reformer, the reaction is not merely a matter of the last few weeks. The cases of Dr. Voelkel and others last year, noted in these columns at the time, pointed to a general reactionary movement; and it is little to the credit of the German Liberals that they hav supinely allowed matters to go so far. The fact is that the policy which so generally prevails among them, of leaving the work of popular enlightenment to be done by the "Zeitgeist," is working its natural fruit in retrogression. It is the old story. While reason will not fight for its own hand, unreason does. While Rationalism withholds its hand, Catholicism is working ceaselessly, and gains ground. Educated Germans vainly suppose that superstition is finally discredited; that it is dying a natural death. The unspeakable exhibition at Trèves givs one part of the answer; the religious prosecutions giv another part; the new religious education bill completes it. That will undo all the work of the Falk laws. Imperialism, which is the fulfillment of militarism, naturally combines with obscurantism. Germany is going intellectually downhill.

Permanent Sunday Opening of the Art Museum.

The Metrop litan Museum of Art will profit greatly by its Sunday opening. Instead of receiving fifteen or twenty thousand dollars a year from the city it will now get seventy thousand, a bill to that effect having passed both houses of the state legislature. The bill has a Sunday clause attached, and the museum cannot take the money and then shut its doors. There was no debate on the bill in the assembly, but in the senate a few pietists protested. The Sun's report of the discussion reads:

"Senator Hunter moved to strike out the Sunday clause. He said that the bill offered a bribe to the museum authorities to desecrate the Sabbath day.

"Senator O'Connor said that milk-wagons ran on Sunday, and that it was as good for the people to see pictures on Sunday as to get milk and newspapers.

"'This is a bid for money at the expense of morality,' said Senator Smith. 'It's bad enough in Central park now without making it worse by passing this bill. People now on Sunday look at the animals, eat sandwiches, drink beer, and see snakes. It's not right for the state to put a premium on breaking the Sabbath day.'

"The Rev. Senator Edwards made the principal speech in opposition to the bill. 'Why break the Sabbath,' he said, 'and why make an appropriation of seventy thousand dollars for breaking down the American Sabbath? Degradation in morals will surely follow. Stand by the old faith. Those who go to the museum on Sunday are not the poor people and the working people who could not go on some other day, but loungers who might go as well on a week-day.'

"The bill passed by a vote of 17 to 8. The negativ votes were cast by moral Republicans and the Rev. Senator Edwards."

We feel great sorrow for Senators Hunter and Edwards, and the greater because the agitation which ended in opening the museum was begun and fostered by two Infidels of this city. But the museum and the people hav no cause to complain against them.

The Nuns in the Schools.

In some places in Minnesota and Texas the Catholics hav been sufficiently strong in numbers to unite the public and parochial schools, the state supporting the schools, and the Catholics providing nuns as teachers. The walls of the schools were also covered with portraits of alleged saints and real popes and other dignitaries of the Romish church.

Although a good way from the seat of war THE TRUTH SEEKER protested against this employment of uniformed instructors, as the garb is in itself not only religious but sectarian. Our friend Murray, of the Denison, Tex., Gazetteer, thought the garb was all right, as did Mr. Dobbyn, of the Minneapolis Progressiv Age. The latter, however, has changed his opinion, and now says that "Upon reflection and after discussion, we hav concluded that we were mistaken. The peculiar garb worn by the sisters does not represent their taste in dress, but an ecclesiastical order, which certainly involves a departure from the American idea of public school simplicity. We therefore recall this portion, and as stoutly urge our readers to consider the reasonableness of our second position on this question."

For a man who has just convicted himself of incapacity to scan the scope of a subject, Mr. Dobbyn rushes into new difficulties with surprising readiness. For his second position is this:

"As to works of art, we cannot see that any serious objection can be raised to portraits of prominent personages in the Catholic church. We should make our children familiar with the faces of all great men whose thoughts hav influenced our civilization. The great men belong to humanity more than to any church or any school of thought. The men who liv forever in the thoughts of men are those whose greatness obscured their sectarian connections. Let us study the faces of the great, good men, and let us teach our children to love and reverence them, independent of their thought on any one line, but by reason of their splendid power in typifying the nobility of exalted humanity."

If these portraits were only works of art, or if they were of great men, then the children might be inspired to love beauty and to emulate the careers of their exemplars. But such is not the case. The portraits are of men whose greatness consists only in the position they held in a church. Instead of being exalted specimens of humanity they are in many instances depraved wretches whose true history no teacher would dare tell her scholars. What is the present pope's claim to greatness? Nothing at all, but that a lot of church officials chose him for their head. As for the "saints," the less said the better for them. They were a dirty lot, and their "saintliness" is but the idle gossip of tradition. A saintship can be purchased to-day for a few hundreds, or thousands, of dollars to defray the expense of the "Process in Rome," as the collectors put it; though, as all the pope has to do is to say it and it is done, it is difficult to see where the "expense" comes in, except that the pope and the priests want money.

The sole and only object of the pictures in the schools is to inspire the children with reverence for the Cath lic church; to make them believe that all her officials are great men, holy men, perfect men, and that they must strive to become like them: first by believing the same faith; second, by joining the church; third, by submitting to the directions of the nuns and priests. The pictures are silent but potent religious teachers, just as is the garb of the nuns. They are so intended, and they hav the desired effect. They teach sectarianism as well, and they should be turned to the wall.

We trust that Mr. Murray will also revise his opinions, and help keep the nuns out of the schools of Texas.

The Ingersoll-Dixon Suit.

The Rev. A. C. Dixon seems determined to try his case against Colonel Ingersoll in the newspapers, probably thinking that it will be a good advertisement for him. Mr. Dixon is a hot-headed man, who speaks hastily and not always with sense or with due appreciation of the weight of his words, and if he keeps on talking will giv opportunity for a dozen suits for slander against him. He will do well to remain silent.

Colonel Ingersoll told a Herald reporter that he would not argue his case in the papers, and from him nothing could be learned. Mr. Dixon, however, when served with the summons, rushed to his pulpit and talked loudly about it, afterward permitting a World reporter to copy part of the complaint. The case to date stands thus, as the World reporter summed it up: Through his attorney, Robert H. Griffin, Colonel Ingersoll charges that on or about Feb. 1, 1892, he lectured on "Ingersollism As It Is" in the Hanson place Baptist church, and that he used these words, which were published the next morning in the World:

"Infidelity fosters 'impure' literature. A few years ago it was found that pictures and 'impure' publications were passing through the mails. Anthony Comstock decided to stop it. On investigation, whom should he find representing publishers of 'impure' literature but Colonel Ingersoll, paid to pollute the minds of the young of this generation?"

On February 8th Colonel Ingersoll sent a letter to Dr. Dixon, declaring that unless a retraction was made he would sue for slander. On February 14th, the complaint continues, Dr. Dixon uttered a further slander by replying to Ingersoll's letter through the World as follows:

"I did not use in my address of January 31st the words you quote from the World, but I should hav said them, or something like them, if in the press for time they had not escaped my mind. The reporter of the World got them through my private secretary from some notes that I had spoken in a phonograph in course of preparation; but I am willing to be responsible for them as they appeared in the World, for I believe them to be true [meaning that this plaintiff represented publishers of impure literature, and was paid to pollute the minds of the young of this generation].

"I believe, sir, that these charges against you [meaning this plaintiff] are true [meaning that this plaintiff represented the publishers of impure literature and was paid to pollute the minds of the young of this generation], and if you [meaning this plaintiff] desire to test them before a court of justice I will be happy indeed to represent the purity of this country as against the defenders and propagators of obscene literature [meaning that this plaintiff is and was a defender and propagator of obscene literature]."

Further than this the public will probably not know, unless Mr. Dixon reads his answer to his congregation and distributes copies of it to the reporters, until the trial. Perhaps before that occurs Mr. Dixon will conclude it to be the part of wisdom to retract his charges.

The new Bible Picture Book, we are pleased to be able to say, givs satisfaction to those who hav purchased it. It is bright, brilliant, and witty, and the pictures tell their own story. It is the biggest book for the price published. In board covers, $1.00; in cloth, gold side stamp, $1.50.

Comstock's Crockery Celebration.

The annual meeting of the New York Vice Society this year was heralded as the twentieth anniversary of Comstock's wedding to the work of the society, and it was the occasion of a mutual admiration meeting on the platform of Music Hall, with a large audience invited as witnesses. The platform presented a great array of empty seats, with a sprinkling of the society's select members and those who had been invited to address the meeting. The audience was about equally made up of men and women, with a considerable number of small boys and girls. The hall, a very large one, was perhaps one-third filled.

At 8 o'clock those present were treated to a fine program of sensuous organ music, seemingly frivolous for the event, but the one thing of the evening that was really enjoyable. In the carnal mind the thoughts reverted to a waxed floor, and the toes palpitated in unison with such thoughts. The reverends, however, had not yet taken their seats on the platform. As they entered the organ subsided. Mr. Colgate introduced Gen. Horace Porter as presiding officer, read letters from Joseph Cook, R. B. Hayes, J. J. Ingalls, and Cardinal Gibbons, and then called upon Anthony for his report. This consisted in the main of the usual résumé of "tons" of seized matter, in which he figures in a few safes and truckloads of hop bitters circulars; but much of it related on what good terms he found himself with his God, and he gave also a liberal allowance of thanks to his enemies for the help that had come to him because of their assaults. The most important of these assaults was, he said, when Colonel Ingersoll headed the movement to effect "a repeal of the mail law," inadvertently forgetting, as is his habit, that the petition was as much for modification as for repeal, and that Colonel Ingersoll never wanted the law repealed. By way of contrast with that very bad man who had led his enemies he called attention to a very good man on the platform who had rendered great service—District Attorney Nicoll, the same that Rev. Mr. Parkhurst had lately severely scored for his neglect in bringing dive-keepers to justice. And here it is apropos to explain that Parkhurst leads the business over the way, being president of the Society for Prevention of Crime, that engages in the work of arresting saloonkeepers that keep open on Sunday, much to the annoyance of Tammany and its cohorts that serve in office and behind the bars. Comstock, by keeping hands off of Tammany's pets, keeps friendly with its officials. So the wicked Nicoll, as Parkhurst sees him, is a man after Comstock's heart.

One expression in Comstock's report was surprising, in view of the pending bill for strengthening the mail law for the censorship of the press. He said: "The laws of New York state and of Congress are about as perfect as they can be made" to favor the work he is engaged in. It hardly seems possible that he expects by such a remark to make some folks believe he is not working for the new bill.

The speeches of Rev. John Hall, J. M. Buckley, and R. S. MacArthur were mainly pleasant platitudes, anecdotes with chestnutty flavor, and taffy for Anthony; but Mr. MacArthur made his mark by indorsing Comstock's methods without reserve, thus echoing Dr. Crosby's unhesitating indorsement of anything to win in the crusade against obscenity, and he also exhorted his hearers to sustain the work of the society, because there were yet two hundred and fifty gambling hells and over seven hundred policy shops running in New York, forgetting for a moment that this was not exactly a testimonial to the work of the past twenty years.

The last and worst speaker of the evening was the Rev. Walter Elliott, C.S.P., who was to speak on "The Necessity of Cultivating a Taste for Good Reading in Early Childhood." The Mail and Express truly says it was a tribute "to the worth and beauty of the Bible as a text-book for the young," but it hardly does him justice, for he acknowledged that there might be here and there a trifle of danger in permitting free access to the Holy Bible to the young, or in allowing them to roam unguided through the Old Testament; but the New Testament was all the literature any family really needed, and with that in the home one need not look farther for a supply of good reading.

Then the retiring audience was once more treated to relish of sensuous music, and as it glided out the temptation for the feet to fall into unholy steps was too much for the susceptible and unregenerate youth who were there. The organist of the Vice Society should know that there lurks danger in music as well as in books, and that to those who are not sufficiently imbued with the Holy Spirit and therefore susceptible to such suggestiv influences there is music which will start a young man on the road to damning parties, to dives and dens of damnation. We cannot be too careful to avoid the insinuating vicious tendencies of mellifluous strains of lascivious music. We need another society to attend to its suppression.

In the outer hall the day's edition of the Mail and Express displayed pictures of a $500 set of china dinner service which was to be presented to Mr. Comstock as soon as his friends should hav reimbursed Mr. Shepard for the outlay, for which the paper is still inviting ten-cent subscriptions. In the mean time the Bible-text editor hangs on to the set. Poor Colonel Shepard ought not to be permitted to bear the whole burden of this present alone, and so we gladly contribute this in the way of free advertising.

One of the most sensible-looking women there, unknown to the writer, said to her companion, also a lady, as they passed out, "It was all trash, and I was very much disgusted." The unctuous holy racket and amusing anecdotes had been overworked or didn't chime well, as she saw it all.

Forty-two Chinese Sunday-school scholars were arraigned in a St. Louis police court the other day for playing fantan. After a few hours in jail the managers of the school had them liberated, after making them promis that they would attend the school regularly hereafter.

The Catholic church is at Albany again with its "Freedom of Worship" bill and the bill to make "Good Friday" a legal holiday. Tammany having got control, Mike Corrigan is hopeful indeed. But it is doubtful if the County Democrats, not Catholics, can be induced to vote for these bills. If they do it will probably be in return for some favor for their church, or at least for their pockets.

The Romish priests hav been making so much trouble in the little South American republic of Costa Rica that the government is seriously considering the expediency of expelling a number of the most turbulent. Such a step would, perhaps, lead to a revolution, as the people are kept well in hand by the clericals, but the powers scarcely know how otherwise to deal with them. It is the same old story of rapacity, political intrigues, and arrogance on the part of the church.

The new Bible Picture Book, we are pleased to be able to say, givs satisfaction to those who hav purchased it. It is bright, brilliant, and witty, and the pictures tell their own story. It is the biggest book for the price published. In board covers, $1.00; in cloth, gold side stamp, $1.50.

On the Pacific Coast.

News and Notes.

I hav had about the hardest luck this week that I hav yet experienced. It never rains but it pours. I hav been knocked out of five lecture appointments in so many days. The elements and all things seem to combine spitefully. I sometimes think that "things" are worse than "folks," and are really totally depraved, especially earthquakes. I hav had to contend with twenty-five and more earthquakes this week's tour, and that is rather too much even for the Secular Pilgrim. I am sure that if I had had a particle of religion or faith or "Christian Science" I should hav given up; but not having any of these, but good digestion and good sleep, I am still happy, and look forward, hoping to get into the swim after a while.

At Monrovia, on February 22d, about seven entertainments of various kinds were going on in memory of the father of our country, and I did not hav more than half the number that I had before, but those who were present listened attentivly to a lecture on "Freethought and Morality." My friends the Chess family and others made the sociable part of my stay very attractiv. Monrovia is one of the most elegant residence spots in southern California. The country about it is beautiful to look upon, and for quiet prosperity and learned leisure this is a pleasurable spot. There is a growing Liberal element, and whatever fortune may be I shall always be glad to do my work here.

I was at Perris the following night and had a good audience and lectured on "Evolution and Creation." After the lecture there was a sociable and dance until early morn. At about 11 o'clock there was a sharp earthquake, and those who were asleep suddenly awoke, and for a moment thought the day of judgment was come, and dressed themselvs and walked about outdoors the rest of the night. But we dancers never noticed the shake a bit, and but for reports afterward would never hav known there was an earthquake in the neighborhood. I was sorry, for I hav a desire to know just what the feeling is to be tumbled about like a wave on the sea. There were about twenty shakes that night, but I did not catch one of them. On the following night there were several more, but I missed them also.

The Reynoldses, the Reeds, and Liberal friends in general are prospering at Perris. It is a bright and lively town and is growing fast. The big ditch is nearly completed, water is plenty, and with irrigation this will be one of the finest countries in the world.

On Tuesday and Wednesday I lectured at San Jacinto, but only one woman was present the first night, and the second night none. The earthquakes were too much. The people were afraid of a brick building and stayed away, and empty seats greeted me. I had about half a dozen for an audience, but gave my lecture with a sort of grim defiance of the powers that be. It was hard work, though. I did not want to giv in to earthquakes any more than to Gabriel's trumpet. I guess this is a good time for revivals, and no doubt the preachers are making the most of it.

However, I had a good visit at San Jacinto. Wednesday evening after lecture I went out to Dr. Wright's Sanitarium, enjoyed one of the beautiful sulphur baths, had a sound sleep, and in the morning's sunshine sparkling over earth and sky beheld one of the loveliest prospects in the world—gorgeous mountains shining like silver, and encircling vast green plains, and the city half hidden in a picturesque grove.

This is a delightful place for sojourn with my Liberal friends, the doctor and Mrs. Wright—a good place for thought, for health, and for bright and happy dreams.

However, I must away to other fields. John Vernon takes me over to Diamond valley, and Diamond valley it surely is, glittering in the sunshine. Beautiful wheat fields, with thousands of acres spread about, and orchards, are upon every side, and in the nooks of the mountains bees ply their musical trade, making honey the livelong day. This valley will be one of the brightest in California's diadem.

Vernon has been over the world with Liberal mind—at the Sandwich islands, South Sea islands, New Zealand, etc., and understands the world of humanity in its many phases, civilized and savage. He is a Freethinker clear through. I had the pleasure of a meal at his bachelor table, and it was fine. I also met the Burgess Brothers, and they are always good and true comrades, and with fun and frolic Liberalize the world. I cannot complain of my sociable surroundings in San Jacinto and could not hav the "blues" even if the lectures were an almost flat failure. I hope the next time to circumvent the earthquakes.

Friday night I lectured at Los Angeles to a pretty good audience, considering there was but little time for advertising.

Saturday I went to Anaheim, but owing to Wanamaker's post-office, the letter I sent did not reach its destination, and no lecture was advertised, and it was thought best to adjourn until Monday. It was not the earthquake this time but Wanamaker. I suppose he is so engaged in looking after the public morals that he has not time to run the post-office on business principles.

Owing to disappointment about halls at Los Angeles I was obliged to lecture at Los Angeles Sunday morning, and this precluded my lecturing at Norwalk Sunday afternoon, and the meeting there was laid over until more favorable opportunity.

I had a fair audience at Los Angeles Sunday. I guess I hav got over the worst of my misfortunes, and will hereafter enjoy good luck. I am coming to Los Angeles for a regular campaign one of these days, and know I can build up a large audience. There are stanch comrades, and the flag shall float: Mr. and Mrs. Shaug and family, whose hospitality I hav enjoyed; J. E. Clark; C. Severance; George G. T. Bruce, who promises to be one of our most brilliant Liberal lecturers, who made a splendid speech at the Paine celebration—which celebration was a grand success at Los Angeles, over a thousand being present; W. J. Foley, who also made an excellent address on this occasion, and who is a keen Freethinker. His oration last year on Bruno was one of the best ever delivered on that subject. J. M. Vars, president of the Assembly of Progress, the Schroeders, Frank C. Young, J. Hill, Frank H. Kopetcky, L. P. Paulson, G. H. Kenniston, enrolled in the ranks of THE TRUTH SEEKER; Mr. and Mrs. Parrish, Mrs. Mary E. White, who is always at the front—these and others make our labors here delightful, and fill us with hope, whatever may be the fortune of battle.

I was pleased to meet at my morning's lecture at Los Angeles Judge Thomas, of San Diego, president of Theosophical Society; Mrs. Off and family; Miss Walsh, and other members of the Theosophical Society, whom I count among friends and coadjutors. In the afternoon I attended a reception given to Judge Thomas, and there was an agreeable interchange of thought. In the evening I divided up, and enjoyed an intellectual treat. I listened half an hour to a lecture on "Creation" by Judge Thomas, and on this point we agree. There is no "creation" in the system of Theosophy. It is evolution, only, as Judge Thomas says, he has three "categories" for the classification of phenomena—matter, force, intelligence; while I hav only two—matter and force—but so far as the process of phenomena is concerned we agree—it is evolution altogether, and no "creation"—no miracle—no supernatural. I always enjoy these conferences with my Theosophical friends. They giv me something to think about. They are cultivated people, and anti-orthodox; and are not frightened by Materialism. Judge Thomas subscribes for THE TRUTH SEEKER. He says he wants the truth from all sides. After listening to Judge Thomas, I went over to hear Professor Bowman, a Liberal Spiritualist lecturer. I liked him well. He has come out of the church. He is a man of fine intellectual force—an eloquent speaker. I did not exactly agree with all he said on "Conscience," the subject of his discourse, but the drift was entirely to my way of thinking. I hope that Professor Bowman will find a broad and open field for his work. He is worthy of it, and I can recommend him as an able exponent of advanced thought, although I do not accept his Spiritualism. But in and through that he is an earnest and progressiv thinker, and we can shake hands as comrades in the great battle for liberty and justice.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Los Angeles, Feb. 29, 1892.

The Ohio State Secular Union.

In accordance with the announcements already made, the above organization will be brought to a practical issue on Sunday, April 3, 1892. I shall be in Columbus next week in order to make the necessary arrangements and preparations for the mass meeting to be held in that city on the above date.

Judging from the correspondence I hav received and the good wishes of our friends in the state of Ohio we may anticipate a successful termination of the movement.

A number of good speakers will be engaged for the occasion, and it is to be hoped that our friends will rally to our support. Without their assistance we can do nothing.

The organization will not be constructed for merely party purposes, but will be universal in its character, so far as the promulgation of Freethought principles is concerned, and for the advancement of all truths that will be beneficial to the human race. I shall try immediately upon reaching Columbus to make arrangements for reduced rates on the railroads, so as to make it as convenient as possible for friends to attend the meeting. I hope that those who hav received circulars and subscription sheets will put them to the best use they can and forward them to me in due time as directed.

Anyone desiring to help us can hav the same immediately by making application to me in care of John B. Cochran, 112 W. Maple street, Columbus, O.

There is a good field for Liberal work in Ohio, and a successful Freethought organization can be effected if our friends will only giv us their assistance.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

Lectures and Meetings.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, March 13th, at 3 o'clock, Henry Rowley, of Brooklyn, will lecture. Subject: "Jesus, Mill, and Spencer."

HENRY FRANK'S subject Sunday night, March 13th, will be a review of the Evening Telegram Ingersoll controversy. The lecture will be given in Carnegie Recital Hall, 57th street and Seventh avenue.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club's program for the remainder of the month is as follows: March 11th—"Is Anarchism Practicable?" by Marie Louise. March 18th—"Hindoo Philosophy, Including Buddhism," by Dr. Duren J. H. Ward. March 24th (Thursday instead of Friday evening)—"Religion and Morality," by Henry Rowley. German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH began a four months' lecture tour at Philadelphia last Sunday, going from there to Pittsburgh for the following Sunday, after which he will go to Columbus and Cincinnati, O.; Centralia and Strasburg, Ill., and other places as calls require. He won such good opinions on his previous trip that he will probably be kept busy. His address now is in care of John B. Cochran, 112 West Maple street, Columbus, O.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Phœnix, Ariz....	March 12,13	New Orleans.....	" 13,14
El Paso, Tex...	" 16	Brookhaven, Miss.	" 16,17
Flatonia, " ..	" 19,20	Chicago.....	" 24
Calvert, " ..	" 27,28	Massillon, O.....	May 1
Austin, " ..	April 2, 3	New York.....	" 6
Waco, Convention of Texas Liberal Association.....	" 8,9,10	Boston.....	" 8
		Montreal.....	" 15
		Boulder City, Col....	June 5

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

THE SECULAR UNION WAKES UP.

"The government of the United States of America is not, in any sense, founded on the Christian religion."

This was the legend, in big black letters on a white background, that was stretched across the balcony back of the stage in Central Music Hall last night. The legend is a sentence taken from the treaty negotiated with Tripoli during the administration of George Washington. A silk American flag suspended immediately beneath this inscription furnished an appropriate background for the speakers.

The audience, says the Chicago Sunday Press, was especially noticeable for its wide divergence in make-up from the general music-hall gathering. It was not an assemblage of capitalists or people whose features are often observed at social functions.

Quite the contrary. It was in the main a gathering of working men and women, who had assembled to protest against the closing of the great Columbian Exposition on Sunday at the demands of a puritanical minority of Sabbatarians. The members of this assemblage saw in such action their total exclusion from the benefits and advantages to be derived from a study of the great Exposition unless at a serious loss to them of time taken from their work, and this time meant loss of money. It was a gathering met to demand due consideration of the working many as against the leisurely few.

The meeting, which was called under the auspices of the American Secular Union to demand an open World's Fair, was composed of members of the following unions and societies, each of which had a certain section in the hall allotted to it:

Local Union (55) American Flint and Glass Workers.
Chicago Secular Union.
Federation of Turners, thirty-five societies.
United Carpenters' Council.
Carpenters' Union, No. 28.
Socialistic Labor party.
Glaziers' and Glass-cutters' Union.
Tin and Sheet Iron Workers.
Cigarmakers' Union.
Journeymen Tailors' Union.
Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners.
Painters' District Council.
Ottawa, Ill., Turnverein.
Englewood Social Science Society.
Central Labor Union.
Carmakers' Union.
Machinists' Union.

C. B. Waite, president of the American Secular Union, acted as chairman or master of ceremonies, which were opened by a drum and fife corps of twenty-five uniformed boys. The Edelweiss Zither Club followed and won an encore by their artistic playing. Then, after a vocal solo by Mrs. Annie Lund, the real work of the meeting—the discussion of the right of the World's Fair directors to close the Fair on Sundays—began with an address by Mr. Waite. The speaker's remarks were frequently interrupted by the applause and laughter of the audience at the telling points scattered through his remarks. Mr. Waite spoke as follows:

The sanctity of the Sabbath is founded upon a myth. It is founded upon an old legend, according to which the entire universe was created in six days. Then, on the seventh day, the creator rested; and because he had done so, he blessed the seventh day and sanctified it. This is the legend.

And afterward, God enjoined upon the Jews, it is stated, to keep the seventh day holy, because he had rested on that day. This is Jewish scripture based upon the legend.

But science having shown that such a creation as that described in the book of Genesis, would be absurd, and in contradiction to the known course of nature; the earth having been created and covered with blooming vegetation before there was any sun, and other things equally absurd, it is now claimed that the six days were indefinit periods of time. What then becomes of the holy Sabbath? If the six days were indefinit periods of time, then the seventh day was an indefinit period of time also; and that of itself would be a sufficient reason for not closing the Fair on that day; nor on Sunday, the first day; which is supposed by some to hav been substituted for the seventh day, and to hav drawn to itself, in some way, the sacredness of its predecessor.

The attempt to close the Fair on Sunday is essentially a religious movement. The Rev. Dr. Crafts, while addressing the Knights of Labor in Indianapolis, was asked if a day of rest could not be secured to the working classes, without reference to religion. His reply was: "If you take religion out of the day, you take the rest out." Nine-tenths of all that is said or written on that side of the question is of a religious character. Examin the petitions on file in favor of Sunday closing of the Fair, and you will find that while something is said occasionally about a civil rest-day, the petitions themselvs are based invariably upon the sacredness of the day. It is even admitted, substantially, by some of those supporting the petitions, that the Sabbath-day as a rest-day has no foundation in nature. For instance, the Rev. Dr. Stevens, a bishop of the Reformed Episcopal church, in his letter accompanying the petitions, says the history of nations who hav no Sabbath shows that it is not necessary to physical well-being. He thinks the rest-day a blessing, but goes on to point out that the blessing is of a religious character. The reverend gentleman is quite right when he says the Sabbath is not necessary to physical well-being. Especially is it not necessary now, when laborers work but eight hours a day. Eight hours for work; eight hours for sleep; eight hours for leisure, for meals, and mental improvement, and what need of a Sabbath?

The sum and substance of all is, that Sunday closing would giv the people a chance to go to church and listen to the sermons. But they would rather go to the Fair.

It is a religious question, and a religious movement. But religious legislation and religious regulations in conducting a great public enterprise like this, are alike contrary to the genius of our institutions.

There is one reason why the World's Fair should be open on Sunday, which we think conclusiv—that is, because it is to be a World's Fair. It is not a national enterprise merely, but an international one as well. All the nations of the earth hav been asked to participate. And my friend Bonney says that in his outside religious congress all the religions of the earth can be represented and their advocates can all be heard upon any point wherein their religion agrees with the Christian religion.

This being, then, a fair in which all the world is to participate, how does the matter stand?

Even if we were to admit—which we do not—that a majority of the people of this country are in favor of Sunday closing; and if we were to admit further—which we do not—that the majority of the people of Great Britain are in favor of Sunday closing, still that would not be sufficient. The entire population of the United States and Great Britain is less than 100,000,000, while the population of the world is over 1,400,000,000. What right hav the 100,000,000 to ask the 1,300,000,000 to conform to one of their religious customs? When an American visits Rome, and goes into the great cathedral, he is not obliged to kiss the pope's toe, nor the brass toe of the marble St. Peter.

Only the English and a few American exhibits were closed on Sunday at the Paris exhibition. The continental Sunday is very different from the puritan. The Russians are a very religious people, and a Christian people, and yet, in St. Petersburg, not only are places of business open on Sundays, but the public works go on as usual.

Again, even if we were to admit that the sanctity of the Sabbath is an essential element of the Christian religion—which we do not, by any means, since three-fourths of the Christian world do not believe in it—still the argument for Sunday closing would be insufficient. The total number of nominal Christians—counting all the inhabitants of a country as believers in the prevailing religion—is, it is true, something over 400,000,000; but the number of believers in other religions is over 800,000,000. What right has the one-third to impose its religious observances upon the two-thirds? Especially, in face of the solemn declaration made by this nation in one of its foreign treaties that "The government of the United States of America is not, in any sense, founded on the Christian religion?"

At the conclusion of Mr. Waite's remarks, he read the following resolutions, which, he said, would be voted on at the close of the meeting:

WHEREAS, The government of the United States is not, in any sense, founded upon the Christian religion, or in any way connected therewith, but, on the contrary, it was the determination of the fathers of the republic that church and state should be kept forever separate, a determination which has been sanctioned by the statesmen who hav followed them, and which patriotic citizens should now unite in carrying out; and

WHEREAS, The coming exhibition, so far as it is national in its character, should be regulated in its management by these principles; and

WHEREAS, The Fair is to be not only national but international, all nations having been invited to participate in it; and

WHEREAS, It would be manifestly improper and unjust that the visitors, representing, as they will, all the religions of the world, should be required to conform to religious customs or observances in which so many of them do not believe; therefore

Resolved, That the World's Fair should remain open on Sunday, as well as on the other days of the week.

Another outburst of applause that sufficiently denoted the result of the ballot that was to come followed.

Mrs. Corinne Brown, whose remarks, incisiv, logical, and sarcastic occasionally, were received with frequent expressions of approval by the audience, said:

One of the most significant points in the discussion of the question of opening the World's Fair on Sunday is the fact that both sides want it their way for the good of the workingmen, so important hav the workingmen become. Another point is that neither side seems to think that the workingmen are able to decide for themselvs whether they wish it closed or opened. So incapable as well as important do they seem to be. Why do they seem to be incapable, and why are they important? They prove him incapable because on election day he either jumps to the call of the Democratic whip or dances to the sound of the Republican whistle and supports the tools of the very men who are grinding out his life. He is important because the possibility exists that he may learn better—may learn to unite and demand through legislation the relief he needs.

But, laying this aside, I, too, am an advocate of opening the World's Fair on every day—aye, and all night, if possible. I would speak for a class of working people. But they are a class who cannot speak for themselvs—a class who work from Monday morning till Saturday night—ten hours a day—many of whom work on Sunday, and at times until 10 and 12 at night, for $1 and $2 a day; a class whose hollow cheeks, tired eyes, and lagging footsteps cry to all humanity for justice; a class who are neglected most by the very ones who profess to follow one who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not."

Yes, friends, I speak for the children, who, to the shame of society, are forced to earn their own living. There are twenty thousand of them in Chicago fourteen years old and under, wearing their fingers to the bone pulling out basting threads, poisoning their lives stripping tobacco, running their feet off on errands, standing on hot bricks chipping off sausage meat, perched on high platforms in the hottest air of the store, taking parcels out of a basket and putting goods in one, standing in cold drafts opening and shutting doors, having their senses pounded out by the noise and buzzing of machinery. The future of civilization depends on these children, and how are they to see the Fair if not on Sunday? These people, who for the glory of God would consecrate one day in the week to the darkness of ignorance, should create a fund for the purpose of enabling every child who earns his bread to go inside the gates on Sundays, and not on one Sunday, but on every Sunday, the whole twenty thousand of them.

That is enough for a fair-sized city, twenty thousand. Shall the World's Fair come here and they not hav the advantage of it? They might as well liv at the North Pole. I know of people who are planning to come to Chicago at that time to spend every day of the six months at the Fair. They regard it as the opportunity of their lives, and these fanatics would shut up all those wonders of ingenuity and accomplishment one-seventh of the time—for twenty-eight days we must stay outside the wall that incloses the most marvelous works of man. I hav made a suggestion as to what the church people might do for these children. It would cost about $60,000 to let every child who earns his bread in Chicago visit the Fair every Sunday, and arrangements could doubtless be made at less than that. There will doubtless be provision made for the children of the various grades of the schools—for children interested in the various sciences—botany, natural history, mineralogy. Charitable provision will also be made for the waifs and strays of the city to see the Fair. I know Mr. Daniels, of the Waifs' Mission, wouldn't let such a chance go by; also, for the children in homes and asylums. Why not for the little ones who are earning their bread? Not in the name of charity, either; but in the name of justice.

Let the education and fun which is stolen from them because of the indifference of society be made up to them in this way.

The Aurora Turn Verein, twenty strong, then gave a vocal selection and responded to an encore. The chairman then introduced Mrs. M. A. Freeman, who spoke in part as follows:

There is no one thing that has done more toward Liberalizing the people of the United States than the agitation of the Sunday question. The bonds of superstition with which they hav so long been shrouded hav been pierced and a ray of light thrown on their ignorance which is now producing results. The arbitrary designation of one particular day of the week as a day of rest is a relic of paganism. Its advocates appeal for support of their theory to nature. But nature works every day in the year. Nature is a democrat and is certainly no respecter of persons. Nature never takes a day in seven to recuperate its exhausted energies. By nature the advocates of the Sunday closing of the Fair are supposed to mean God, for whom they presume to speak. Now, I do not know much about God, but I think and firmly believe that I know as much about him as these people who assume to speak for him. It is my honest conviction that they misrepresent God. And one reason for my belief is that I do not believe God is so much worse than we are. These people who assume to speak for him make him a cruel God, a carnivorous God, with cruel claws and an insatiable maw, who tears and rends the people he has created, and swallows a continent in his wrath. But this is a God of man's creation solely. Woman never made a God. The man would not giv her a chance to do so. They would not even let her share in his creation. The men who made this God now try to make us believe that he has engineered a corner on Sundays in connection with Sam Small, Sam Jones, Dr. Herrick Johnson, and the Sabbath Union, John V. Farwell, and Colonel Elliott F. Shepard. I refuse to believe that God has any mercantil instincts in his composition, or that the sanctimonious pleaders for the closing of the World's Fair on the Sabbath are his accredited mouthpieces.

Loud applause greeted Mrs. Freeman as she bowed at the conclusion of her speech, and when Chairman Waite could make himself heard he stepped forward and introduced as the next speaker Horace Bennett, who said:

From behind the eastern hills, the sun, in majesty and grandeur, rises. Before its burning rays, darkness recedes. The mists of morning melt away. Its light penetrates everywhere. Through the shutters, behind the blinds, into the palace and hovel it goes, to bid the sleeping world awake. The lethargy of the night passes off, and all behold another day. Nature speaks no word, neither givs any sign from behind the eastern hills or elsewhere to indicate to either Jew, Christian, pagan, or Infidel that one day is holy and another unholy; that one day is sacred and another secular.

Some of those who hug with an idolatrous delusion the legend of the garden of Eden and the story of the destruction of all living by the flood entertain the belief that Jehovah, the God of the Jews, 1491 B.C., traced with his finger on a tablet of stone:

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates. For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it."

This belief justifies some of our fellow-citizens in publicly expressing the opinion that the World's Fair should be closed on Sunday. So zealous and earnest are they in this purpose, that they are forming organizations in various states and trying to create a public sentiment in this direction. In addition to a general activity, they hav asked and been granted a hearing before the management with a view of having their wishes complied with.

As I understand it, those who are thus activly engaged claim to represent the Christian church, but, at the present time, that claim is unfounded. Eminent and highly respectable laymen, as well as some of the most intelligent of the clergy of the Christian church, are avowed advocates of the World's Fair being open.

At about the same period of time the Ten Commandments were given, upon the same mountain, the same Jehovah, through Moses, the same Jewish oracle, spoke as follows:

"And the Lord spake unto Moses in Mount Sinai, saying: Both thy bondmen and thy bondmaids, which thou shalt hav, shall be of the heathen that are round about you; of them shall ye buy bondmen and bondmaids. Moreover, of the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy, and of their families that are with you, which they begat in your land; and they shall be your possession. And ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for a possession; they shall be your bondmen for ever" (Lev. xxv, 1, 44, 45, 46).

The fourth Commandment is broken in letter and spirit by every Christian in the civilized world on the recurrence of every Sunday. The American people, as well as the people of every civilized nation on the globe, hav repudiated in word and deed the principle of human slavery as commanded by God. It is regarded by civilized nations as an institution of the past, barbarous, inhuman, and degrading. From whence do our fellow-citizens derive their authority to declare one day God's day and six days man's days?

Is it custom? If so, it will, like all other customs which hav been in discordance with reason, be repealed. Once it was the custom to burn disbelievers at the stake. In America they are permitted not only to disbelieve but to utter their disbelief.

Are those who are to-day making every effort to create a public sentiment in favor of closing the World's Fair on Sunday actuated by high and lofty motivs? Hav they the same earnest desire which was expressed by Christ in many different ways to benefit their fellow-men? If so, let me ask these to mention some spot or place within the limits of the city of Chicago, within the boundaries of the state of Illinois, yes, mention some spot or place in all this broad land over which the starry flag waves, which will be so shielded and exempted from places and associations which corrupt, pollute, and degrade as that spot of land set apart by the city of Chicago for the World's Columbian Exposition.

I assert, without fear of contradiction by Jew, Christian, pagan, or Infidel, that there can be nothing within the gates and under the management except that which is elevating and ennobling. A panoramic history is before you. The progress of the race will be taught by object-lessons. There will be a collection of the products of scientific investigation and work such as was never before brought together; the world in miniature will be on exhibition, except its pitfalls, its dens of iniquity, and its vices. In the nature of things, the atmosphere, appointments, and surroundings will be the best that the heart, hand, and mind of man can produce. Science, art, beauty, and music, each will strive with the other for the plaudits of the multitudes. There will be one grand aggregation of music and beauty, either of which kindles the spark of nobility in man and arouses the ambition to higher ideals.

We insist upon Sunday opening that these standards of excellence may be seen, heard, felt, and appreciated by all again and again.

We insist upon Sunday opening for that multitude of workers, whether clerks, laborers, or artisans, that on that universal rest-day they may, with their families, enjoy this great privilege without the sense that it costs the wages or the salary of a day.

We insist upon it because it partakes of that broad, generous, liberal way of doing things, which is in keeping with our American institutions, as contrasted with those narrow and contracted methods which seek to dominate and rule.

If the commissioners who hav been selected by the president from every state and territory in the Union, equally divided between the two great political parties, together with the local directory, in short, the management, shall to the end, as they hav commenced, conduct this greatest of all expositions with sagacity, business judgment, skill, and the exercise of the greatest attribute of man, sound reason, and not misled or side-tracked by the wails and petitions of a few superstitious or self-righteous Christians, then and in that case they will merit and receive the approval of the American people who are so typically represented by this grand and magnificent audience.

The next speaker was M. V. Britzius, who said in part:

You hav now before you the first workingman who has spoken this evening. I speak for 26,000 cigarmakers. As a trade or class of men we do not look upon Sunday as binding. As a class we demand the right to use our leisure time in the way we think will best answer our necessities. We concede the same right to everyone else.

At the conclusion of Mr. Britzius's address Mrs. Lund sang Arditi's "El Basio," and then Charles Bary said:

The Turners of the district of Chicago, who hav chosen one of the least of their members to speak for them in favor of an open Fair on Sunday, do so, not as Germans, but as American citizens, who hav cast their lot with this great republic, and are the stanchest supporters of its institutions.

The twenty-four nationalities which compose the nationalities in the city of Chicago are each and every one too important to allow anyone to arrogate to himself the right to decide this question. The movement to close the Fair Sundays, while ostensibly in the interest of the laboring man, is exactly the opposit. It is really in the interest of the class who idle away six days in the week—and then idle away the seventh. It is an agitation fomented by millionaire directors, who sell their daughters to titled nonentities, who are European aristocrats and libertins. The money contributed by labor is exhausted in the payment of $15,000 salaries, and now they seek to deprive the workingman of his only chance to view the results accomplished by the dollars he has so liberally contributed. Will the workingmen of Chicago tolerate this? Is it not enough that they are now called upon to tolerate Nordrum as chief of the World's Fair police? I dare to place myself in the category of those who will be denounced as enemies of Chicago's interests in my position on this question. I believe in Chicago as firmly as any of these millionaire directors, but my belief in Chicago and of its still greater grandeur is because it is the hotbed of radicalism, and because it is destined to giv birth to a movement that among other reforms is destined to sweep that body of American aristocrats, the Senate of the United States, out of existence. On behalf of 45,000 Turners, whose accredited spokesman I am, I demand that the World's Fair be open on Sundays and at lower prices.

Mr. Bary then amusingly depicted the consequences that would follow if the various nations and religions represented at the Fair should demand its closing on their Sabbath, and showed that it would be closed every day in the week if such action was taken. He also cited the Centennial exhibition, which had an enormous deficit, due to Sunday closing, and the success of the recent Paris exposition, where Sunday was the best patronized day of the entire week.

Dr. Juliet H. Severance followed Mr. Bary with a speech, in which she demolished the superstition on which the Sabbath of servants is based. She was followed by T. J. Morgan, who ridiculed the pretended interest of the clergy in the laboring man—an interest for his welfare that would deprive him of his very opportunity to benefit by the Fair. He only asked the reverend doctors to get out of the way, and the workingman would look out for himself. T. B. Wakeman, of New York, made the closing address, and then a rising vote was called for on the resolution. Every man and woman in the house, except fourteen students of a divinity school who were present, arose, and as the divinity students were not workingmen, the resolutions were declared carried unanimously.

The Book a Success; the Meeting Ditto.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: I hav just received from your office a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," for which receive my heartfelt thanks. It is time, I think, that such nonsense, called by many sacred, should receive its justly merited ridicule, which, while not argument, is often more potent as a force to free the mind from accepted superstitions. I hav just returned from the great "Industrial Conference" held in St. Louis, which was a great delight to those who expect to right labor's wrongs by legislativ action. I hav no such hopes, and only expect of such a movement a means of propaganda of such ideas as may at last create a public opinion in the interest of justice and truth, and help to evolve humanity to a higher plane of development.

We had the pleasure, last evening, of listening to one of T. B. Wakeman's eloquent lectures on "Evolution." Not having heard him for some time, it was indeed a treat. He also spoke at the great mass-meeting at Central Music Hall on Saturday evening, held by the American Secular Union in the interests of the Sunday opening of the Columbian Exposition, which was a great success, and the speeches, music, etc., were fine and enthusiastically received. Juliet H. Severance, M.D.

Look Out For the Holy Humbugs.

Whom? The pious frauds of all sects who seek to stuff the schools with their foul superstitions. The Catholic Quarterly Review says:

We would much rather our children should grow up in utter ignorance of letters, than be taught in a school that is not Catholic.

The Freeman's Journal says:

Let the public-school system go to where it came from—the devil. We want Christian schools (meaning parochial schools), and the state cannot tell us what Chistianity is.

Then score one for the devil—if he loves learning he is better than a priest. Of course the state can not tell what Christianity is, nor can anyone else; it is too metamorphose. The state has no business to buy or sell religion.

Rev. W. W. Carson is preaching for the Jefferson avenue Presbyterian church, which for the time being holds its meetings in the Detroit Opera House. He recommends the union of all Protestant sects with the view of forcing the Bible into the public schools, which he declares are Atheistic. Mr. Carson is lately from Canada, and cannot be expected to hold very clear views regarding American affairs. He should know that our school system is secular. It deals only with the facts of life, and teaches nothing either affirmativly or negativly as to a future life. His demand is simply putting arguments into the mouths of Roman Catholics, because they hav an equal right to demand that their Bible be placed in the schools. The safety lies in maintaining their secular character and keeping them free from sectarian scrambles.—Patriotic American.

Precisely, Mr. Patriotic American, and what you hav said of the Presbyterian sky-pilot applies equally well to the Junior Order of American Mechanics, who do not know the meaning of American, as is seen by the following articles of their platform, cut from your pages!

We affirm our devotion to the public school system of this country. We believe in compulsory education, and that all teaching in our schools should be in the English language, to the end that future generations may be able to take their place in the ranks of our country's workers educated in the history, the customs, and manners of Americans.

We guarantee to every man the liberty of worshiping God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and would giv every assistance to protect all in the exercise of this liberty, but we object most strenuously to the interference of any church, no matter under what name it may exist, in the temporal affairs of this country.

We believe that the Bible should be read in our public schools, not to teach sectarianism, but to inculcate its teaching. It is the recognized standard of all moral and civil law, we therefore believe that our children should be educated in its teachings, but that no dogmas or creed should be taught at the same time.

We believe that patriotism, and love of country, should be instilled into the hearts of children, and that with the sacred words of "mother, home, and heaven," our children should be taught that our flag is the symbol of all that makes a "home" for us. We should place a flag upon every public school in our land, and a Bible within, and the object-lesson therein set forth sh uld be a beacon light in every storm which threatens to engulf us.

These holy fakirs professing to defend secular government and schools, "guarantee to every man the liberty of worshiping God according to the dictates of his own conscience." What do they guarantee to a man who, according to the dictates of his own conscience, will not worship God, and is not conscious of any God? What will they do but declare that such a one has no conscience and no rights? These godly dudes admit none but white men in their order. They probably expect to go to a white man's heaven, and yet the original Christ who came down from heaven was a negro, as you may see by his images all over India and Italy. These heavenly harpers further require for membership belief in a supreme being, in addition to a good moral character; thus admitting that either the belief or the character may exist without the other. If a man is moral without such belief what need of the belief? And if he is not moral with the belief what does it amount to? This requirement of the order shows that its purpose is not American patriotism, but groveling godliness, a scheme to wrest the government from the people and secure it to the priests, the anti-Catholic portion of them, who hav only the same grounds for their claims as hav those Christian brethren of theirs whom they strain to debar. O Consistency! thou art a jewel not found in the belongings of anyone who believes in a God! Pius IX., Enc. 30, says: "The people are not the source of civil power." Who, then, shall speak for the supreme being? Produce God in court before assuming his jurisdiction.

"We believe that the Bible should be read in our public schools, not to teach sectarianism, but to inculcate its teaching." Beautiful! What is the difference between teaching sectarianism and inculcating its teaching? Perhaps inculcate the teachings of the Bible is meant. In that case the scribes of the order should study grammar before they interfere with the teachings of the schools. But what do they want the teaching of the Bible inculcated for? and what teaching of the Bible do they want inculcated? Since the Bible-expounders disagree, what are the poor children to do? Will the contradictions of such a book make them clear-headed? Are they to be made critics by examining its absurdities? Will reading its atrocious filth keep their young minds pure? Will its rant about an angry God make them kind?

The Bible is "the recognized standard of all moral and civil law, we therefore believe that our children should be educated in its teachings, but that no dogmas or creed should be taught at the same time." Very simple! But the statement that the Bible is a recognized standard of morals is a dogma, a part of a creed, and a most contemptible falsehood at the same time. Recognized by whom? Pretended to be recognized by some of the Protestant churches, but not one man on earth does so recognize it, since all agree that parts of it were binding only on a particular people at a particular period, and since the laws of Christian countries are made in direct conflict with the laws of the Bible, and thus modern governments are getting civilized. We do not cook witches any more, though they are as plentiful as ever. We do not stone Sunday cooks nowadays, but make our Sunday dinners the best. Nay, Sunday itself is an institution of the gentiles, in contravention of the Sabbath of the Bible.

What do these pietasters want the children taught "heaven" for? Do they know anything about it themselvs? "Our children should be taught that the flag is the symbol of all that makes a home for us." Exactly. Then hav done with the Bible, the Christ, the cross, and all the gibberish about a God. Put a flag on every school, put every Bible out, and put every cross or other symbol of foreign government and conspiracy against reason and liberty in the furnace. Blot the word of God and religion out of the dictionaries; let common sense reign supreme in place of sacred insanity, so shall we not be engulfed by Romish or any other priestcraft and churchdom. JOHN P. GUILD.

Detroit, Mich.

The new Bible Picture Book, we are pleased to be able to say, givs satisfaction to those who hav purchased it. It is bright, brilliant, and witty, and the pictures tell their own story. It is the biggest book for the price published. In board covers, $1.00; in cloth, gold side stamp, $1.50.

Christianity During the Middle Ages.

In the tenth century the ignorance of the people had developed to an extraordinary degree, and found expression in general vulgarity, superstition, and immorality. Yet Christianity spread. The most degrading doctrins of the Old and New Testaments were most insisted upon as matters of belief, and heresy was regarded as the worst form of criminality. The Normans embraced the Christian faith without pretending to understand it. And wherever the pious missionaries went in order to carry on their propagandist work, they invariably accompanied the gospel of glad tidings with certain edicts and penal laws that were intended to awe their hearers into subjection.

In this century the Christian religion was established in Russia, where its history has been a long unbroken period of persecutions upon all who would not accept it. Each century in England the vices of the clergy seemed to get more numerous and more blatant. In the tenth century the vice of the clergy was simply terrible.

According to Mosheim, "both in the Eastern and Western provinces the clergy were for the most part composed of a most worthless set of men, shamefully illiterate and stupid, and ignorant more especially in religious matters, equally enslaved to sensuality and superstition, and capable of the most abominable and flagitious deeds. This dismal degeneracy of the sacred order was, according to the most credible accounts, principally owing to the pretended chiefs and rulers of the universal church, who indulged themselvs in the commission of the most odious crimes, and abandoned themselvs to the lawless impulse of the most licentious passions, without reluctance or remorse; who confounded, in short, all differences between just and unjust to satisfy their impious ambition, and whose spiritual empire was such a diversified scene of iniquity and violence as never was exhibited under any of those temporary tyrants who hav been the scourges of mankind" (Ecclesiastical History, page 221).

Hallam, the historian, corroborates this dark picture, and paints in vivid colors the base careers of some of the popes; then, turning to another aspect of the subject, he observes that "the corruption of the head extended naturally to all other members of the church. All writers concur in stigmatizing the dissoluteness and neglect of decency that prevailed among the clergy. Though several codes of ecclesiastical disciplin had been compiled by particular prelates, yet neither these nor the ancient canons were much regarded. The bishops, indeed, who were to enforce them, had most occasion to dread their severity. They were obtruded upon their sees, as the supreme pontiffs were upon that of Rome, by force or corruption. A child of five years old was made archbishop of Rheims. The see of Norbonne was purchased for another of ten." (In a footnote Hallam observes that it was almost general in the church to hav bishops under twenty years old. Even the pope Benedict IX. is said to hav been only twelv, but this has been doubted.)

By this relaxation of morals the priesthood began to lose its hold upon the prejudices of mankind. These are nourished chiefly, indeed, by shining examples of piety and virtue, but also, in a superstitious age, by ascetic observances, by the fasting and watching of monks and hermits, who hav obviously so bad a lot in this life that men are to conclude that they must hav secured a better reversion in futurity. The regular clergy, accordingly, or monastic orders, who practiced, at least apparently, the specious impostures of self-mortification, retained at all times a far greater portion of respect than ordinary priests, though degenerate themselvs, as was admitted, from their primitiv strictness (Hallam's Europe During the Middle Ages, page 353). With corrupt and vicious popes, and ignorant and bombastic priests, was it anything but natural to find the people in a wretched, degraded, and servil condition?

The houses in which they lived were nothing better than mud cabins; the food they ate was of a coarse and innutritious character; while the moral condition was as low as can be well imagined (see Draper's Conflict, page 265). Mosheim describes the situation at this period in very graphic terms. "The Anglo-Saxon nobles," he says, "devoted to gluttony and voluptuousness, never visited the church, but the matins and the mass were read over to them by a hurrying priest in their bed-chambers before they arose, themselvs not listening. The common people were a prey to the more powerful; their property was seized, their bodies dragged away to distant countries; their maidens were either thrown into a brothel or sold for slaves. Drinking day and night was the general pursuit; vices, the companions of inebriety, followed, effeminating the manly mind. The baronial castles were dens of robbers. The Saxon Chronicler (William of Malmesbury) records how men and women were caught and dragged into those strongholds, hung up by their thumbs or feet, fire applied to them, knotted strings twisted around their heads, and many other torments inflicted to extort ransom (Ecclesiastical History).

In this age the doctrin of "the joy of the return of a repentant sinner" appears to hav been practiced to a very large extent; for when people had been robbed and murdered the church gave absolution to the thief, providing a share of the plunder was handed over to the coffers of the church (Luke xiv).

The year 1000 was thought by many Christians to be the one upon which the world would come to an end. All work was discontinued for a time; and as most of the people thought that their lives were soon to terminate, they became exceedingly pious, and went through all sorts of strange antics of a religious character.

"Prodigious numbers of people," says Mosheim, "abandoned all their civil connections and their parental relations, and giving over to the churches or monasteries all their lands, treasures, and worldly effects, repaired with the utmost precipitation to Palestine, where they imagined that Christ would descend to judge the world. Others devoted themselvs by a solemn and voluntary oath to the service of the churches, convents, and priesthood, whose slaves they became in the most rigorous sense of that word, performing daily their heavy tasks; and all this from a notion that the supreme judge would diminish the severity of their sentence, and look upon them with a more favorable and propitious eye, on account of their having made themselvs the slaves of his ministers. When an eclipse of the sun and moon happened to be visible (see also Hallam's "Europe During the Middle Ages," p. 599), the cities were deserted, and their miserable inhabitants fled for refuge to hollow caverns, and hid themselvs among the craggy rocks and under the bending summits of steep mountains.

The opulent attempted to bribe the deity and the saintly tribe by rich donations conferred upon the sacerdotal and monastic orders, who were looked upon as the immediate vicegerents of heaven (Ecclesiastical History, page 226). Some extraordinary superstitions prevailed in this tenth century. Some of them were mere delusions of the ignorant mind; others were natural deductions from the doctrins then almost universally entertained by Christians. At intervals there hav arisen certain foolish fanatics who hav proclaimed the approaching end of the world, and the fear of the uneducated portion of the population has led them into strange conduct; but it may be doubted whether the doctrin of the approaching end of the world was ever more strongly believed in than in the tenth century; for Hallam tells us that "an army marching under the emperor Otho I. was so terrified by an eclipse of the sun, which it conceived to announce this consummation, as to disperse hastily on all sides. . . . A far more remarkable and permanent superstition was the appeal to heaven in judicial controversies, whether through the means of combat or ordeal. The principle of these was the same; but in the former it was mingled with feelings independent of religion; the natural dictates of resentment in a brave man unjustly accused, and the sympathy of a warlike people with the display of skill and intrepidity. These, in course of time, almost obliterated the primary character of judicial combat, and ultimately changed it into the modern duel, in which assuredly there is no mixture of superstition."

But in the various tests of innocence which were called ordeals, this stood undisguised and unqualified. It is not necessary to describe what is so well known—the ceremonies of trial by handling hot iron, by plunging the arm into boiling fluids, by floating or sinking in cold water, or by swallowing a piece of consecrated bread. It is observable that, as the interference of heaven was relied upon as a matter of course, it seems to hav been reckoned nearly indifferent whether such a test was adopted as must, humanly considered, absolve all the guilty, or one that must convict all the innocent. The ordeals of hot iron or water were, however, more commonly used, and it has been a perplexing question by what dexterity these tremendous proofs were eluded. They seem at least to hav placed the decision of all judicial controversies in the hands of the clergy, who must hav known the secret, whatever that might be, of satisfying the spectators that an accused person had held a mass of burning iron with impunity. For several centuries this mode of investigation was in great repute, though not without opposition from some eminent bishops. It does discredit to the memory of Charlemagne that he was one of its warmest advocates (Hallam's Europe During the Middle Ages, pages 599 and 600).

Thus far we hav seen that the appeal to history does not show that Christianity in practice in the Middle Ages had those beneficent influences which hav been claimed by its adherents, but that the worst portions of Christian teachings were insisted upon and enforced with the disastrous results we hav pointed out. It remains to be seen how in succeeding centuries Christian practice became worse and worse until its wickedness culminated in what are described by historians as "the Dark Ages of Christianity."

ARTHUR B. MOSS.

The new Bible Picture Book, we are pleased to be able to say, givs satisfaction to those who hav purchased it. It is bright, brilliant, and witty, and the pictures tell their own story. It is the biggest book for the price published. In board covers, $1.00; in cloth, gold side stamp, $1.50.

Spelling Reform.

The following petition is for signature at the Spelling Reform rooms, 24 Clinton place, New York:

To the Senate and the House of Representativs, in Congress assembled:

Your petitioners would respectfully represent that our present American orthography, though much improved within the last hundred years, is cumbersome, illogical, unhistorical, and misleading; that millions of dollars are wasted, each year, in writing and printing unnecessary letters, while the progress of our children in their education is greatly retarded by the difficulties in the way of learning to spell. Your petitioners recognize the fact that in the future, as in the past, changes in our written language must be made by gradual steps. The modifications herein suggested hav the indorsement of the highest scholarship in the land, and, if adopted, would serve as the entering wedge for the introduction of other reforms. Worthy precedents for such simplifications of spelling are afforded by the enlightened action of Austria and Germany in 1879 and 1880, regarding the German language, and, with respect to an important class of words in our tongue, by the valuable work of the board of geographic names, established by order of the president of the United States, Sept. 4, 1890. Your petitioners believe, however, that these changes should be made at once in the printing done for the government; and they therefore pray that your honorable body will adopt the following resolution, which was offered in the House of Representativs by Hon. Allen C. Durborow, Jan. 11, 1892:

"Resolved by the House of Representativs (the Senate concurring), That the public printer be and is hereby directed in all works of Congress and for the departments begun after the passage of this resolution, to adopt the following rules for amended spellings, except in educational and other works where a different orthography may be required.

"First. Drop ue at the ends of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc. When the preceding vowel is long, as in prorogue, vogue, disembogue, retain final letters as at present.

"Second. Drop final e in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., when the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc. When the preceding vowel is long, as in polite, finite, unite, etc., retain present forms unchanged.

"Third Drop final te in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, videt, gazet, etc.

"Fourth. Drop final me in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.

"Fifth. Change ph to f in words like phantom, telegraph, phase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.

"Sixth. Substitute e for dipthongs œ and æ when they hav the sound for the latter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

"N.B.—No change in proper names."

Mr. Henry R. Boss, one of the leading spirits of the reform, says: "The prejudice against and the inertia in regard to spelling reform remind one of the filling of a mill-pond. The dam stands as a barrier until the water rises to its top, and when this point is reached small streams begin to run over, which gather strength and volume until they form a resistless torrent, sweeping away all obstructions. The feeling in favor of spelling reform is growing and the top of the dam is nearly reached. Let us secure the adoption of Congressman Durborow's resolution for the introduction of a few new spellings in the public printing, and they will soon be incorporated in the dictionaries and adopted by the people, who will wonder why they hav not done this thing before. This will pave the way for the twenty-four rules of the Philological Society, which will rapidly lead to phonotypy. At this time all differences should be dropped, and we should unite in an aggressiv fight for the Durborow resolution, trusting to its good effects to help us to the accomplishment of greater reforms."

ELIZA B. BURNZ.

The new Bible Picture Book, we are pleased to be able to say, givs satisfaction to those who hav purchased it. It is bright, brilliant, and witty, and the pictures tell their own story. It is the biggest book for the price published. In board covers, $1.00; in cloth, gold side stamp, $1.50.

Our London Letter.

Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh, editor of a poor little struggling paper called the Anti-Infidel, has sustained a terrible shock to his highly moral feelings at the hands of the Freethinker, and his righteous indignation has found vent by means of a solicitor's letter to Mr. Foote, in which it is denied that he attempted to enter the sick-chamber of his late brother, or endeavored to prevent the Bolton branch of the National Secular Society from hiring a certain hall for lecturing purposes. Under penalty of a libel action Mr. Foote is called upon to make humble apology and remit the sum of three guineas to be sent to some institution named by the aggrieved party, and one guinea to the lawyer. Strange to say, the culprit, having not the fear of the Lord before his eyes, has neither apologized nor paid, and this course of procedure appears to hav somewhat nonplussed the anti-Infidel and his legal champion. Perhaps an appeal may be made through his powerful organ to scrape together the necessary funds to commence an action, though more probably the matter will be quietly and unostentatiously dropped, which in some respects is rather a pity, as the chances are greatly in favor of his ignominious defeat. For many years past he has consistently abused Freethinkers, individually and collectivly. It is unfortunate he should be so very thin-skinned, but as he could never get any of the parties he has libeled to answer or take notice of him, and finds it utterly impossible to gain the smallest amount of notoriety, he may hav thought this was his one and only chance of bringing himself before the public. Poor fellow! It is to be feared that he will still hav to wait for the attainment of his darling object.

The National Reformer has considerably improved during the past year, and the editor has written a personal article in the current number of the paper, wherein he givs a slight review of what he has done in the time he has had sole control, and makes a fair appeal for an increased circulation, holding out a hope that he may be enabled to reduce the price to that of the Freethinker. It is evident that as there are three well-established Freethought papers paying their way, though making no gigantic profits, the Freethought party cannot be declining, as is so fondly hoped and reiterated by certain sectarian papers, which themselvs, thanks to the advertisements—some of which no daily paper would insert—are little mines of wealth, for if they depended solely on sales they would quickly fall into oblivion.

Further information has come to hand regarding the troubles in China, and a special correspondent of a daily journal attributes the "persecution" greatly to the missionaries themselvs, who liv on the fat of the land, and require as much attention and deference paid to them as the mandarins, and if they do not get all they require demand compensation from the Chinese government and the protection of British gunboats. The missionaries are a curse to the country they liv in, as well as those they come from, and hav been the instigators of more than one war in which we hav been unfortunately engaged. If they only made some pretense to practice what they preach, there might be some degree of sympathy shown them, but they do nothing of the sort, and think the "heathen" can be easily hoodwinked by their impudent hypocrisy. How can it be expected that the Chinese or anyone else can decide between the conflicting sects? There are in China missionaries of the Roman Catholic, Church of England, Presbyterian, Methodist, Congregational, and Baptist persuasions, and a residue of thirty-eight per cent of sects unclassified. The Chinese are not a nice people according to Western ideas, but they are to be pitied for so severe an infliction. What a happy time it will be for the world when missions are things of the past!

Two of the chief exponents of widely divergent creeds hav passed away within a month—Cardinal Manning and Rev. Charles Spurgeon. The men were in entire contrast, and although their creeds were strongly opposed one to the other, still there was a great similarity in that each was the only infallible one and neither was willing to concede anything to other sects. Of the two churches, the Baptist has undoubtedly sustained the greatest loss, and the particular section which he led will, with the demise of their shepherd, fall away from the only true faith. If all the clergy held as iron-bound opinions as these two men hav done, Christianity would hav been broken to pieces long since. It is only by bending to the breeze and trimming their sails that the more pliable Christians hav maintained their existence as such. J. D.

The Immortal One.

The dust of sleeping heroes may be scattered to the breeze,
Their bones burnt in the fire, or sunk beneath the seas,
But loving memory's bugle call awakes them to the fight,
And Paine, our hero, livs again, and greets us here to-night.

He sleeps not in oblivion, while bigotry is heard.
As superstition's mortal foe, he wields the victor's sword.
In church and state, his master-mind detects the monstrous fraud
That priest and king, by right divine, rule in the name of God.

Where'er a soul lies fettered, fast held in bonds of faith,
Or slaves are claimed by tyrants, and hounded to the death,
Paine springs to life in power, sweeping away the lies,
And men are won to freedom, by the truth that never dies.

The priest must furl his banner, and the monarch leave his throne,
For freemen serve no master, or such allegiance own,
And every race, in every land, must utter the decree,
Life, liberty, and happiness for all humanity.

O faithful son of seventy-six! Thy memory shall be Enshrined within the people's heart, o'er continent and sea.
In every pulse for liberty, they will thy mission trace,
When creeds are all forgotten, immortal as the race.

And when in coming ages the great pantheon's dome
Shall be ready for the heroes, and the nations bid them come,
When Hindoo, Mongol, and Malay with Columbia shall plan
To grace with laurel wreath the brow of universal man,
Paine's fame shall rest eternal on his motto understood,
"The world, it is my country; my religion, to do good."

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 29, 1892. THOMAS CURTIS.

The Crucifixion a Fiction.

The following clipping from a religious paper is sent to THE TRUTH SEEKER by a correspondent at New Duluth, with a request to the Editor or some one else to comment thereon:

In an article from Prof. H. Schubert, in the Literary Digest of July 25, 1891, quoted from Vom Fels Zum Meer, Stuttgart, June, we find this testimony relativ to the wonderful scenes of the day of the crucifixion of Christ, showing that they were in no way connected with the ordinary phenomena of nature:

"Eusebius says that Christ suffered in the nineteenth year of Tiberius, and we learn from Greek records that in this year the sun was darkened, Bithynia shaken, and the greater part of Nicea laid in ruins. Phlegon narrates that a total eclipse of the sun, which lasted from the sixth to the ninth hour, occurred in the reign of Tiberius 'during full moon.' Paulus Diaconus says the same, and adds that neither the moon nor the clouds intervened to produce it, and that it occurred on the 14th day of the month. Now, an eclipse of the sun at full moon is an impossibility."

Eusebius does not say that Christ suffered in the nineteenth year of Tiberius, but in the fifteenth. And that is the date given by all the ante-Nicene fathers, who attempt to fix the time. Now, the reign of Tiberius began August 19, A.D. 14; consequently, the fifteenth year of his reign began August 19, A.D. 28, and the ensuing passover was in the spring of A.D. 29.

Tertullian, about A.D. 200, says that the crucifixion was "at the time of the passover on the eighth day before the calends of April," i.e., March 25, in the year 29. March 25 A.D. 29 happened to be Friday, but it was a whole week after the full moon, and one day earlier than the passover ever occurred. The fact is that the passover full moon in the year 29 was Saturday or Sunday, April 16 or 17. And no one will maintain that the crucifixion was on either Saturday or Sunday. In whatever year it may hav occurred the day was Friday.

The testimony of Phlegon was adduced by Father Lambert in his attempt to demolish Colonel Ingersoll. The irate priest averred that the darkness at the crucifixion was attested by the pagan Phlegon, who lived about the year 150, as follows:

In the fourth year of the 202d Olympiad, there was an eclipse of the sun, the grandest that had ever been hitherto. About the sixth hour of the day, a night so obscured that the stars in the heavens became visible. A great earthquake took place which overturned many houses in the city of Nice, in Bithynia.

On this the priest remarked:

The 202d Olympiad, year 4, corresponds with the 33d year of the Christian era. That is the year and time of the crucifixion.

Turning to Haydn's Dictionary of Dates, under the head of "Eclipses" we find one remarkable eclipse, and only one, between the year 188 B.C. and A.D. 968, and that was A.D. 33. The only authority given for the latter is Josephus; but this is an unaccountable error. The only eclipse either of the sun or the moon mentioned by Josephus is the lunar eclipse just before the death of Herod, which has been determined to hav occurred March 13, in the year of the Julian period 4710, or B.C. 4 (see note to Antiquities, XVII, 6, §4, by Dr. Whiston).

Consequently it remains for astronomers to determin whether in the year 33, on a passover day (or the day before, as the fourth evangelist and most of the apocryphal gospels hav it), the sun was totally obscured by the interposition of the moon, which, at the "sixth hour of the day," i. e., at noon, was at the antipodes, six hours before it could become visible in the eastern horizon!

Paulus Diaconus we never heard of before. He is not named in Lippincott's Biographical Dictionary, nor in Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History. Did Diaconus say that the darkness occurred on the 14th day of the month in the year 33? If so that was Sunday, eight days after the passover, and April 14, A.D. 29, was Friday, but that was two or three days before the passover.

Often and often hav we demonstrated that there was no Christ crucified under Pontius Pilate. Again and again hav we maintained that every scrap of testimony to such an event is a Christian forgery. We hav in our library twenty-two volumes of the "Ante-Nicene Fathers," translated into English. We are quite convinced that, with the possible exception of a few fragments, all of those writings were fabricated after the revival of learning. And two years ago we undertook to prove in THE TRUTH SEEKER that Eusebius's Ecclesiastical History is a modern forgery. ANTICHRIST.

The new Bible Picture Book, we are pleased to be able to say, givs satisfaction to those who hav purchased it. It is bright, brilliant, and witty, and the pictures tell their own story. It is the biggest book for the price published. In board covers, $1.00; in cloth, gold side stamp, $1.50.

Theological Suppression of Science.

Why the people at large took this view is easily understood when we note the attitude of the guardians of learning, both Catholic and Protestant, in that age. It throws great light upon sundry claims by modern theologians to take charge of public instruction and of the evolution of science. So important was it thought to hav "sound learning" guarded, and "safe science" taught, that in many of the universities, as late as the end of the seventeenth century, professors were forced to take an oath not to hold the "Pythagorean"—that is, the Copernican idea—as to the movement of the heavenly bodies. As the contest went on, professors were forbidden to make known to students the facts revealed by the telescope. Special orders to this effect were issued by the ecclesiastical authorities to the universities and colleges of Pisa, Innspruck, Louvain, Douay, Salamanca, and others; during generations we find the authorities of these universities boasting that these godless doctrins were kept away from their students. It is touching to hear such boasts made then, just as it is touching now to hear sundry excellent university authorities boast that they discourage the reading of Mill, Spencer, and Darwin. Nor were such attempts to keep the truth from students confined to the Roman Catholic institutions of learning. Strange as it may seem, nowhere were the facts confirming the Copernican theory more carefully kept out of sight than at Wittenberg; the university of Luther and Melancthon. About the middle of the sixteenth century there were at that center of Protestant instruction two astronomers of a very high order, Rheticus and Reinhold; both of these, after thorough study, had convinced themselvs that the Copernican system was true, but neither of them was allowed to tell this truth to his students.—Andrew D. White in Popular Science Monthly.

IT was expressly commanded by the Jewish law to sacrifice men devoted to the Lord: "Every man that shall be devoted shall not be redeemed, but shall be put to death without remission." The Vulgate translates it—"He shall not be redeemed, but shall die the death." Thus then we perceive sacrifices of human blood clearly established; there is no point of history more incontestable; we can only judge of a nation by its own archives, and by what it relates concerning itself.—Voltaire.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Letters of Friends.

Praise and Kind Advice.

PITTSBURGH, PA., Jan. 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The last issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER is indeed a beauty. I hope you will giv more space for scientific, moral, and advanced ideas instead of those old-fogy ideas, Bible and ghost stories, spirit-hunting, etc. I like the new issue by keeping editorials on the front page and on live topics. One can learn a good bit more by keeping up with the advanced time. Yours truly,

JOHN S. JUERGENS.

An Old Correspondent Turns Up.

LINCOLN, ILL., Feb. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: It is a long time since I wrote a line for the favorit old TRUTH SEEKER. I miss several correspondents of old—notably the versatil Si Slocum, with his "Holy Queer!" What has happened him? He was always forcible and very readable. Where is E. A. Stevens's trenchant pen? And then there are A. J. Grover and M. Babcock! Come out of the brush, brethren, and let us hear you.

Yours ever, JOHN BUSHEL.

The Value of Silver.

LAFAYETTE COUNTY BANK,
GEO. WILSON, Pres.,
LEXINGTON, Mo., Feb. 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. A. H. Darrow, of Hartford, Kan., being a (free) thinker, ought to do some thinking. In 1872 the right which we had always had to go to our mints with silver was taken from us. When we demand its restoration, Mr. Darrow says, "No, 412½ grains of standard silver will only sell for 73 cents." What was their bullion value when we were robbed of our ancient right? It was 103 cents. Restore the ancient right and you at once restore the former bullion value. For the demonetizers to plead the present bullion value of a silver dollar, which their own attack on silver brought about, is what is known in law as pleading one's own wrong in one's own defense. Colonel Ingersoll, or any other lawyer, will tell him that everyone is estopped from doing that.

GEO. WILSON.

We Relieve His Disgust.

VICTORIA, B. C., Feb. 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The weekly treat, called TRUTH SEEKER, is a real delight for my material soul; and I keep it circulating among friends, hoping to make some subscribers very soon. I trust to get quite a colony of Freethinkers together in my neighborhood. The only trouble is, there are so many semi- and full Liberals who hide their lights under the bushel, through the influence that the many churches and religious associations hav among people. I wish a good lecturer would shake them up a little. The Secular Society in this city is in a somewhat dormant state. Perhaps spring will revive it again—though we hav had no winter yet. Inclosed find money order for $10 for the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" and the new Bible Picture Book as soon as it comes from press, and some others, of which I add a list. The new books will relieve me much of the disgusting feeling I hav when I read the Bible or the Koran, compared with Humboldt's "Cosmos."

I am sorry to read that one German Freethought paper exists no more. Please send me a copy of the Menshenthum, or at least the address of its birthplace.

I am very pleased with the 1892 shape of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and Heston's pictures. Ergo my best respects.

Yours, truth-seeking, JOHN W. HORN.

What To Do at the Fair.

MUSCATINE, IA., Jan. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1.50 for the Bible Picture Book, by Heston, and "Maria Monk."

There being strong efforts made to secure the Sunday opening of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, should they fail I would suggest that the Liberals hold Sunday meetings at some suitable grounds or hall and arrange for some popular lecture for each Sunday. Ingersoll, Watts, Putnam, Reynolds, Remsburg, and many others of this and other countries who will visit the big show would make a rattling among the dry bones that would be long remembered by our Sunday-closing fanatics, and would popularize the Liberal movement in such a way as years of hard labor could not accomplish.

They may baffle agitation,
The living issue choke;
Cast wet blankets on the fire;
But how will they bide the smoke?

We must keep the ball rolling. We are gaining ground every day. I hav made arrangements for Remsburg to lecture here on his return trip, which will be in February. The different religious denominations hav been holding extra efforts this winter and hav not got a score of converts in all of the twelv churches of this place, so I anticipate a good time when Remsburg reaches here.

Yours truly, J. N. NEWMAN.

Object-Lessons for the Fair.

BREATHEDSVILLE, MD., Feb. 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The suggestion, seconded by Mr. A. H. Bonsteel in THE TRUTH SEEKER of January 30th, that Freethinkers secure space at the World's Fair for an exhibition showing "The Progress of the Church," has my hearty approval.

In addition to having reproductions of the instruments of torture used on heretics, wax figures representing the persecution of such scientists as Kepler, Galileo, and Bruno; the hanging of witches; persecution of Quakers, etc., there should be kept on sale an abundance of Freethought literature and periodicals, and, for free distribution, a lot of Freethought tracts, embellished with some of Brother Heston's most striking pictures.

Toward the consummation of this project I will giv $10, and I know another Freethinker who will do likewise, and think I can get several more.

This striking object-lesson, placarded with well-authenticated historical references, would accomplish a world of good—more indeed than would the opening of the Fair on Sunday.

Yours truly, D. WEBSTER GROH.

Lying and Extortionate Preachers.

GEORGE STATION, PA., Feb. 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I received the books in due time, and am pleased with all of them. The "Pictorial Text-Book" is a "dandy." It takes with every person that reads it. Inclosed find $4. Send me another "Text-Book," a new Bible Picture Book, "Sabbath Breaking," "Christian Absurdities," and Miss H. H. Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods."

I get a weekly paper that has a sermon from the holy Talmage. Well, he is a curiosity. His sermons put me in mind of Ezekiel's vision of four living creatures. The four had the faces of a man, lion, ox, and eagle (i, 10; x, 14), and the likeness of their faces was the same that he saw at the river Chebar. Now, you see he could not giv an account of a small vision without lying. So it seems to be characteristic of all the holy drones to exaggerate. I had a small conversation with a Lutheran preacher from Greensburg. We came to the conclusion that exaggeration is lying; that extortion is theft; that sending out to everybody for a dollar, no difference if they belonged to the church or not, to help build a tabernacle for a congregation that is worth millions, is audacious, unbecoming a gentleman, and as small as the little end of nothing whittled down.

In conclusion, I will say to the Rev. Mr. Talmage, when he blows his gospel foghorn about Infidels it would be more credit to him to slander live ones—take Colonel Ingersoll for instance—not dead ones that had more common sense than all the Talmages, Pauls, Sam Joneses, Davids, Solomons and concubines, and Salvation Army thrown in. I mean Voltaire.

Precision of speech is essential to accurate reasoning. It becomes far more important when a sentence has the authority of law. But its value is immeasurably enhanced when the expression claims to be received as the word of God. Saint Paul had no stability or precision in his writings. He thought he was doing right to curse any person that differed with him. And fools believe he was right. In order to be saved hav faith. It is the elementary principle of all religions. But faith is no virtue. It is an inheritance of the uneducated. An ignorant generation repose in a paradise of illusions. In vain preachers now exhort to faith and in vain they denounce Infidelity. Some stronger law overrules mankind, and everywhere as experience advances faith recedes.

ALEX. STOREY.

Faith Cure Explained.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., Jan. 23, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: If the cure by faith of the man with sixteen running sores is the only "stumbling-block" in the way of A. S. Lehr, of York, Pa., becoming a Rationalist, let us try and remove it. Faith cure is simply mind cure. Most cures are faith cures—faith in the remedy—faith in the doctor. The brain controls the nervous system and the nervous system controls the circulation and the vital organs. Thousands of persons annually die as sudden deaths from hearing three or four words spoken—such as, "Your husband is dead!"—as though they were struck by a cannon-ball. The power of mind over body is almost unlimited. Now, this afflicted man had from years of over-expenditure of vital energy or wrong living, become a vital bankrupt. His nervous system was practically dead. No power to eliminate dead tissues. No natural sewerage. Hence the sores. Rest, changed conditions, and proper habits will restore him to health in one or two or three years. He tries one doctor after another. Of course they fail to "cure" him and he loses faith in them. The case is not ripe for a cure yet. Nature takes her time. Much suffering and fretting finally bring his nerves back to life. At last he reaches a condition when the poorest quack doctor in the world is liable to step in and gather a harvest that others hav sown. But the poor fellow hears of the faith curists, and, rendered almost frantic by his sufferings, his doubts and his fears, he lends a willing ear to the glad tidings of hope they bring. Gradually he is wrought up to a high state of mental excitement and expectation. The "windows of heaven," to use a cant phrase of ignorant piety, "are opened, and a revivifying flood of divine grace is poured down upon him." Well, the upshot of the business is, the man is cured. His morbid conditions are swept away as effectually as though he had taken a thorough treatment of alternating sweats and hot baths. But there is nothing miraculous about it. It is purely scientific and hygienic. Read up, read up, friend Lehr. First send $1 to Helen Wilmans, Lithia Springs, Ga., for her bound volumes of the Express, and study her doctrin of mental science or mind cure.

S. R. SHEPHERD.

Would Revive the Secular Union

FORT WORTH, TEX., Feb. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of January 16th, "A." indulges in what I regard a very unjust criticism of the American Secular Union. He makes the sweeping charge of inefficiency, "lagging behind" all other organizations, etc.

Friend "A.," this is a "secular" government, "of the people, by the people, for the people." In other words, the people are the supreme rule-makers, not priest or king or God, but the state and the state only. This being true, the Secular Union is or ought to be the representativ head of all Liberal organizations, and expressing their sentiments. But if it does "lag behind," as you charge, would it not be well to bear in mind that it is the only organization that we hav trying to do something for the cause of human freedom? Do not forget this, and throw a stumbling-block in the way of a weak brother. Help him to stand alone. It is for us. Try and put your shoulder to the wheel and strengthen the pulling force, won't you, brother? If it is weak, the reason is easily found. When the time comes for an annual congress, instead of a grand enthusiastic meeting of Liberals from all over our land, only a few are to be found there, all others having the grumbler's chair at home.

All honor to our noble press—TRUTH SEEKER, Investigator, Magazine, Age, etc.—we cannot exist without them; but we must hav grand annual congresses, and live, activ, shrewd officers of the Secular Union for offensiv work in 1892-3. We do! Then, my brother, let you and I prove our chivalric spirit by not censuring, denouncing, and crippling the new board of officers and directors until we hav, you and I, done all in our power to aid them, and the close of their year has proved their incapability.

We ought to make a grand showing at the congress of the World's Fair. We can, if we try. Will you not go to work—I know that you hav grand abilities—and enthuse all, far and near, with the spirit of work, and second the efforts of this new board to unite and place at work all Liberal organizations, for the success of Secular principles in 1893?

We need money to do this. Let Liberals now try for once to fill that treasury by direct personal effort among their friends, and send representativs to make rules—select live workers for officers at the next congress. The cause is ours. We hav the ability to do this. The fault is our own if we do not hav such officers and such a working union as we desire in the American Secular Union.

Here is my hand and a pledge, my brother, to do all I can to sustain this new set of officers and our noble press for 1892 and 1893. Will you help me?

ISAAC S. LEE.

Rencontre With a Christian Lady.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., Dec. 24, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $4.25 for renewal of my old friend, THE TRUTH SEEKER, and for books.

I will try to giv you a little idea of what a pious, priest-ridden town I am in, with a population of between six and seven thousand, and only fourteen churches of different denominations, and a sprinkling of Jews, Buddhists, Spiritualists, Christian Scientists, and a few skeptics—half-breeds, that keep their light under a bushel, as Christ did: "See that no man knoweth it, see thou tellest no man." I keep my candle on top of the bushel as you do, and always lit and ready for use. And it so happened I got in conversation with a Christian lady of the higher circles of society, and belonging to one of the biggest Protestant churches in the city. I made a remark for fun, and she took me up as quick as thought. "What," she said, "are you an Infidel?" "Well," I said, "I am a Freethinker." "Oh," she said, "I hate, detest, abhor an Infidel." I said, "That is pure Christianity. Christ says, 'If any man come unto me and hate not his father and mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters, yea and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.'" She said, "Oh, I love Jesus." I said, "I suppose you believe God is the father of all." "Yes," she said, "I do." "Then," I said, "God committed incest with a virgin daughter, what the law would send me to state prison for." She said, "You don't understand it." "Well," I said, "it was plain reading." I asked her if she ever read Paine's "Age of Reason." "No," she said, "I wouldn't read such trash as that. I had a cousin that read it, and it ruined him." I asked her if she ever read Num. xxxi. "Yes," she said, with a snap. "Why didn't Moses giv the Lord his tribute of thirty-two virgins as he agreed to, instead of giving them to Eleazar the high priest, or had the Lord got too old, like old David, so that there was no heat in him?" "Oh," she roared, "you must not ask such questions as that! The reason? Why, let such things be just as they are." Selah!

As for the paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER, it fills the bill as far as I am concerned, for it is the most fearless, outspoken paper I ever read, for exposing the most damnable fraud and the greatest curse that ever was entailed on the human race, called Christianity. A man came along here with his grip of Bibles and tracts, and offered to sell me a Bible. I said, "I wouldn't giv ten cents for a carload, unless it was for wrapping-paper, for it is the worst book I ever read." He asked, "In what way?" I said, "For lying, stealing, rape, ravishing, and murder, and 'Thus saith the Lord' to it all." I told him that these priests and preachers didn't know as much as a sucking pig. I said, "Put a pig in a bag and tie it up, and take the priest and pig out on a prairie five miles, in a cloudy day or at night; the pig would come home, but the priest couldn't unless he followed the pig. 'I, even I, am the Lord, and besides me there is no savior'

(Isa. xliii, 11; Eccl. iii, 19, 20, 21), but the priests say we must hav faith and believe on a crazy piratical Jew, that came not with peace but a sword. Christ says, 'I am the way.' I don't like his way."

Yours for truth, LEVI BANCROFT.

Woman Suffrage.

OAKESDALE, WASH., Feb. 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: If you will allow me space I will say a few words in regard to woman suffrage. In THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 13th John Peck, in his discussion of "Woman To the Fore," quotes an expression of R. G. Ingersoll, namely, "Woman possesses all the rights which I enjoy and one more—and that is the right to be protected," and then says that "he might hav added that he possesses the right to protect her and that would hav made the list of rights equal."

These two great and good men are in error. All persons are born with the same natural rights, without any regard to race, sex, or color. Man has every right that woman has; this must be so in the very nature of things.

Women hav no right whatever to use their influence in bringing on a war, and then send the men out to do the fighting. They hav no right to a voice in military or naval laws.

I cheerfully admit that the election franchise should be extended to them on all other questions.

I hav been taking THE TRUTH SEEKER since S. P. Putnam's last lecture at this place. I come nearer reading everything in it than any paper I ever read.

W. O. HADSELL.

Madam Blavatsky, Theosophy, Mrs. Besant.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Jan. 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In the December number of the Freethinker's Magazine is an article entitled "Theosophical Thanks," by Mr. A. L. Rawson, wherein we find this quotation from Moncure D. Conway: "Mr. Conway asked Madam Blavatsky about her miracles—wonder-works—and she answered: 'It is a glamour; people think they see what they do not see; that is the whole of it.'"

And Mr. Rawson adds: "We should be thankful to Mr. Conway, and also to Madam Blavatsky, for the clear light of this revelation from the only original source of Theosophy."

This is unequivocal language, without a single qualification. And it is from high authority, because there is not one in ten thousand, as the world goes, that has had the opportunity of studying peoples, collectivly and singly, that Mr. Conway has been favored with. And besides all that, he is regarded as a gleaner of knowledge and bestower of it for the good it will do.

Now, on the supposition that there is no mistake or misconception in relation to it, t is one of the most frank and plain confessions on record. And frauds of all kinds are crimes, and the authors criminals, and should be held amenable to law.

In plain language Mr. Rawson's ambiguous phrases would be simply this, nothing more or less: The great leading lights of Theosophy hav not only duped the unsophisticated, but made them pay for it.

There is not a word in Mr. Rawson's lengthy paper by which the general reader, not favored with the circumstances or occasion, can guess what induced Madam Blavatsky to make that astounding confession.

Was Mr. Conway commissioned in confidence to keep silent until after her death? Or was there no condition or obligation on his part one way or another? To hav made public that confidence before her death would hav at once ended the money-making, that Mr. Rawson claims was the main, if not the only, object. Here we find a palpable conflict in relation to causes and motivs, that needs a like explanation. The making of accusations and charges after the accused has passed beyond the possibility of denying should never be practiced, without giving all the details and conditions.

More, it is an evasion, leaving out that which ought to hav been put in. If such omission is purposely done, in order to make out a case, it is not a commendable or manly act.

Characterizing the deed in that way works sometimes injustice, and may be a side-thrust at the living.

There is nothing extravagant in saying that Mrs. Besant is now filling as large a place both in the eye and ear of the public, not only in England and America but on the Continent, not excepting crowned or titled heads, statesmen and philosophers, as any other living personality. In the endeavor to see and hear there is an unparalleled eagerness manifested—not by drones or dullards but by men and women competent to think and judge for themselvs. With a persistency that hardly has a parallel, she has fought her way to a splendid eminence, and had to contend with adversity, detraction, and falsehood. And, when "sitting at the feet of Madam Blavatsky," has she learned some truths? Or is it all a glamour? When struggling to find a truth it was not for self alone, but for humanity. And whoever charges her with motivs selfish would be lacking in self-respect, and respect from the world would be withheld because undeserved. Of herself Mrs. Besant has written: "May I add that its call to limitless self-sacrifice for human good—a call addressed to all who can answer it—came to me as offering satisfaction to what has always been the deepest craving of my nature—the longing to serve as ransom for the race. At once I recognized that here was the path to that which I had been seeking all my life."

JOHN VAN DENBURGH.

On Thinking, and Colonel Ingersoll.

IPAVA, ILL., Feb. 10, 1892.

"He that hath brains to think, let him think" (Ingersoll).

MR. EDITOR: Can there be found one text in the Old or New Testament that has as broad and deep a meaning? If the average text of the average preacher can be talked upon intelligently, why not the above? Is not thought the greatest of all privileges, all blessings? To thought—the liberty of thought—we owe our elevation. To the thinking mind we owe our railroads, our ocean steamers, our books, and our comforts in life. Why should there be any restraint put upon thought? It is only the weak in mind, the pessimistic, that desire to clip the wings of the thinker. There can be no more harm in thinking than there is in a bird flying or a horse trotting. True, there is a great difference in the flight of birds. The sage-hen can not enjoy the soaring of the eagle, and if she reasons at all she no doubt would say it is wrong for the eagle to fly so high. And so the draft-horse objects to the speed of Maud S., and so the preachers and priests object to the colonel's intellectual soaring. They think he should hav his reason dulled, or a gage put upon his brain and allow them to hold the crank.

The colonel is frequently alluded to as "the apostle of the new faith." It seems to me he is almost entitled to be called the creator of the new faith, for he has done more toward throwing intellectual and progressiv light upon the benighted and superstitious brain, by painting beautiful word-pictures to take the place of the dark and cruel daubs of the stumbling theologians, than all who hav gone before. These little pessimistic fellows continue in trying to smirch the reputation and character of the colonel by telling the people that he does not believe what he preaches. When a man is insincere in his own work, when he disbelieves his own saying, then he naturally thinks everybody as dishonest as himself. I think Colonel Ingersoll is honest in his teaching. And I believe he is right, and I believe the time is not far distant when all thinking men and women will see the beauty and necessity of the new faith. I think Colonel Ingersoll the greatest man living, in the true sense of greatness. He has the most fertil brain. He is a true artist; and his paintings will never fade, for he uses the finest natural colors. Besides, he is a connoisseur on all that is beautiful. How about his creed? It is short and simple. It applies to all. It covers the whole. Here it is: "Happiness is the only good. The place to be happy is here. The time to be happy is now. The way to be happy is to make others so." There never fell from the lips of man, god, or king anything that touches this creed in truth and simplicity. When once we liv according to this creed there will be no more use for theologians, devils, or gods. The difference between the colonel's creed and those of the old schools is this: The old creeds are founded upon faith, without investigation, for the most of the followers of the old schools hav not enough reason to investigate. While the colonel's creed is natural; and requires reason only to see that it embraces more than all the rest; and it has a tendency to lead men and women upward in the path of thought, for once a person begins to reason every day furnishes new and interesting thoughts and new subjects for thought, until said person in a short time finds himself reasoning like a philosopher. And then he will become an admirer of Colonel Ingersoll, even though he does not believe as he does, for anyone with good taste that can rise above prejudice must admire the colonel as a man, and also the simplicity of his writings. They are destitute of ambiguous terms. A small child can understand this:

> We do not know, we cannot say,
> Whether death is a wall or a door,
> The beginning or end of a day,
> Or the spreading of wings to soar.

Could anything be plainer? It is truth and simplicity in one breath. How can anyone capable of reading and reasoning fail to see the beauty, the clear and able reasoning? But such reasoning implies a doubt? Yes, and doubt leads to investigation, and investigation leads to truth, the temple of Agnostics.

We hav many able and efficient men who would make splendid timber for the presidency in 1892, but the people's minds are hardly ripe for selecting the best—although it would not be any surprise to me if the best under existing circumstances should be selected. I am satisfied that this creator of the new faith—investigating school—will, everything being equal—that is, everything progressing as it is now—be ripe in 1896, and surely this many-sided man, this man who is indisputably the blossom of the intellectual tree, should before he quits this life hold the highest office in the gift of the American people. This would in a measure redeem the people from the error of having, a few times in the past, placed stupidity on this elevated seat.

Yours truly for truth, progression, and optimistic education, C. S. RANDOLPH.

If the Church Wants Thinkers, It Must Giv Something to Think About.

NORTH BALTIMORE, O., Feb. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am told that Christianity does not attempt to discourage reason or investigation. In this instance it becomes the duty of those who already hav the "light" to instruct those who are yet in "darkness," when such persons come to them earnestly seeking instruction and the truth. This is exactly as it should be. If it be in the power of anyone to enlighten another of his fellow-creatures upon the greatest of all themes for the contemplation of the living, the future state of the soul, I am of the opinion that it becomes an imperativ duty for such a one to furnish the desired information. This person must remember that while there are thousands who are willing to accept his flight of imagination as an infallible guide to the heaven which we all hope to reach, there are also those who very properly desire to investigate this matter of future existence and to subject it to the same course of thought and reason as it is customary to apply to all other departments of knowledge. So, while bare statements are eagerly accepted by some, there is also to be found a great need of reason among others, and the Christian who cannot or will not combine the two—substantiate his statements by reason—has arrived at a conclusion illogically; is thoroughly incompetent as authority on religious subjects, and is a greater hindrance than a helper to the cause he represents.

I am yet a young man and am desirous of making the most of life. I hav thought earnestly and honestly upon the creeds and doctrins of the Christian church—having, in fact, been accepted into fellowship with the Presbyterian branch of this great institution. I did so with hope and expectancy of being enlightened. I hav been seeking enlightenment ever since. I find, to my great disappointment, that those in the church know just as little, and hav the same feelings and experiences, as those out of the church. However, my experience has not been altogether fruitless, for I hav ascertained, to a certainty, that the modern Christian church strenuously encourages and suggests the development of the imagination and hypocrisy. I find that the man who will accept any statement, whatever, without inquiring for a reason, and can successfully pretend to be what, in reality, he is not, is capable of being the most thoroughly Christianized. I, for some reason, cannot appreciate this sort of a highway to holiness, for I am in the habit of thinking that if the Christian church means to include thinking men among its supporters, it must giv them something to think about. The child's implicit confidence in the parent lasts until its own reason exceeds that of the parent. A man's confidence in the church should last until his own reason exceeds that of the church. The parent may inspire continued confidence by the possession of a higher ability to reason than the child will ever attain. So may the church hope for a continued confidence from its supporters by being over and above what they may think or do for themselvs. But, quite naturally, the child must be informed upon every question it may ask the parent, or its confidence in the parent's ability will be shaken. Likewise should the would-be Christian be informed by the church upon every point which calls for elucidation. Now, imagin the parent making an indignant refusal to answer the questions which are of utmost importance to the child's well-being. Would there be any fairness in censuring the child for losing confidence in the parent? And now imagin the church making an indignant refusal (from obstinacy or inability) to answer the questions which are of inestimable importance to the well-being of every human being. Would there be any justice in condemning anyone for losing confidence in the Christian church after such refusal? It is because I hav sought this information and found it not, that I write this letter. I hav asked for it many times, but find my would-be informants equally incapable and uninformed. So I am led to hope for the desired information through the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Should I again be disappointed, I see no alternativ than to greatly deplore the ability of the Christian church to maintain the high standard of knowledge and excellence of which it boasts.

1. Giv such an idea of God as will suggest his nature, attributes, and location. Does he see, hear, and think?

2. Was Christ's death on the cross a necessary sacrifice? In what way does it affect me? In what way did his death facilitate salvation?

3. Is there a heaven and hell? If so, where are they, and what are they? What proof is there for their existence besides the Bible?

4. Is the Holy Bible inspired? Is it strictly true in every particular? Is it the only foundation for the Christian faith?

5. Is the soul material or immaterial? In either instance, what proof is there, besides the Bible, that the soul preserves its consciousness and individualism after leaving the body?

6. Is the church a human or divine institution? Does eternal pleasure or remorse depend upon sectarianism? Can anyone be saved who is not a church-member?

7. Is there any positiv knowledge of anything other than what we may see, hear, feel, taste, and smell?

In closing my letter, I desire to reiterate and emphasize the statement which I made in the beginning. I am earnestly and honestly seeking "light," and I shall be under eternal obligations to anyone who may think it worth his time to enlighten me. Yet I would not ask so much attention were I alone to be benefited, but I know that there are hundreds of other young men who are equally anxious to be satisfied upon the question I hav asked. Further, I am so constituted as to think that the life or death of the church depends upon reason. J. EDW. S.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

After the War Comes Peace.

Oh, this dull, weary, heartsick pain!
Will it never, never cease?
My heart is sad, the world seems dark,
Oh, where is there rest and peace?

I seek for it ever; I find it not,
Though I search for it night and day.
And if in my dreams it is sometimes nigh,
Yet waking, it passes away.

Oh, days of my childhood that seem long past,
How I could value you now;
When trouble, and worry, and care hav cast
Their shadow o'er my fair brow.

My heart is weary, the world seems dark,
Ah, dark as the blackest night;
And though I hav looked on every side,
I see not one gleam of light.

What, do I fear the battle for truth
In a world so dark and chill?
Would I turn coward while others strive
To shed light o'er vale and hill?

No, never! A hand now cold in death,
But a cherished memory still,
Will giv courage to stand for justice and right,
With a firm, unaltering will.

The struggle for justice, for right, for truth,
It surely must some time cease.
So I'll labor in hopes of a happy dawn,
For "After the war comes peace."

ANNIE M. MOHN.

The Little Brown Farm.

A little brown farm is over the hill
Where the shadows are held with a song;
Where the oriole calls to the lost whippoorwill,
And I find peaceful rest from the throng.
Oh, the dear little farm, the queer little farm,
The brown little farm on the hill.

Sweet children once played on this brown little farm—
Now answer me this with your ken,
"Does a mother not feel secure from harm
'Neath the roof whence her boys grew to men?"
Oh, serene little farm, you are queen, little farm,
The little brown farm on the hill.

Here the daughters went forth, their eyes like the stars,
To toil in the world's busy looms,
Till the lights in the west from the golden-red bars
Are each a love-lamp in my rooms.
Oh, the glad little farm, you are sad, little farm,
The little brown farm on the hill.

MARY BAIRD FINCH.

Clearwater, Neb., Feb. 20, 1892.

My First Tomato.

Tomatoes originated in South America, but were not cultivated to any extent until introduced into this country. Horticulturists hav perfected them to that degree that they hav become a luscious fruit, necessary on every table and at every meal in a variety of forms. The natural taste of the tomato was disagreeable at the first introduction, though one could hardly think so now, their use has become so prevalent, but the relish for them is an acquired one. The first one I ever saw was in 1830. I was then in my twelfth year, being sent to a distant city for a two weeks' visit from a home where apples, pears, peaches, and plums lay rotting on the ground, where I would get up in the morning with a craving appetite and eat unconsciously to a surfeit, never thinking I should ever want more; yet getting up the next morning with the same yearning. So on the morning of my departure for the city, after eating of fruit to gluttony, it never occurred to my boyish thoughtlessness what I would do for the morrow. Indeed, I took "no thought of the morrow—what I should eat or what I should drink" (I hav learned better since). Well, after three or four days of walking the noisy streets, and the disappearance of my money, I began to hav a hankering for the flesh-pot of Egypt, or rather the pears, peaches, plums, or even apples, I had left behind me. One evening, while walking down the street, I espied what seemed to me a beautiful basket of pears standing in front of a grocery store. Such a beautiful variegated green and red I had never seen before. I believed them to be a variety of pear superior to any I had ever tasted. I had not been told not to touch them, like Mother Eve of old, or that I should surely die if I ate them. But enough, I wanted one. After walking past them a number of times I plucked one from the basket. Then my courage ceased; I never stopped running until I was safe in my little room at my aunt's. Though the groceryman did not see me, I believed that God, whom I had been told was always watching, did see me; but I had been told also that God would pardon at the last minute. I thought I would eat the pear and settle with God afterward. Yet I felt that my heart was deceitful above all things and desperately wicked.

Well, after lying in bed a few minutes with the pear in my hand I took a big bite. Oh, horror of horrors! it was an enchanted pear with which the devil beguiled me.

I jumped out of bed quicker than I ever jumped out to drive the cows to pasture, and prayed to God, whom I had been informed was never out of hearing, to forgiv me, telling how wicked I had been, never for a moment thinking he knew anything about it before, or that the groceryman was the real party injured. I also told God how good I was going to be in the future. While at this business, Tommy Cook, my room-mate, came in. Tommy was a runner in a bank, about two years older than myself, and well used to city life. "What's afoot now, simpleton?" a name he had given me from our first acquaintance. I told him all my trouble. He thought for a moment, and said, "Well, you can settle it better with God than you could with old Chubbs, the grocer. But where is the pear?" I gave it to him, and to my utter consternation he ate the whole of it with avidity, saying, "Why, simple, this is a tomato. I love a love-apple, and you put on your clothes and go and steal me some more!" This I very decidedly refused to do, although Tommy contended it was as wicked to steal a pin as a greater thing. I, in spite of my early training, took a more practical view of the matter. The next day I went to Mr. Chubbs and told what I had done the night before. Mr. Chubbs was inclined to be severe on me at first, but a kind lady customer heard my story, patted me on the head, bought me two large pears and a peach, said she loved me and every other good boy. The soft tones of her voice still linger in my ears.

My young readers, there is a satisfaction in being honest from principle and an inward satisfaction. It is not different from being honest from policy, which needs no prison to keep you so. "An honest man is the noblest work of God," as Pope said. No matter who said it, as an old man of experience I know it is true.

OLD MAN PAXTON.

Correspondence.

BANDON, ORE., Feb. 9, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Having been a reader of the Children's Corner for over a year, and not seeing any letters from this part of the country, I thought I would write you a short letter. My papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I like the pictures very much, especially the one of December 26th, where the goat is making its meal out of the little darkey's head. We are living in the woods, and it is very lonesome sometimes, and it is very seldom I see any boys to play with. I hav a little sister fifteen months old, and two kittens. I am helping my papa clear some land around our house. I help him pile brush and roll logs onto the fire. We hav cleared quite a piece of it now, so you see I do not hav much time to get lonesome. Well, I guess I hav written enough for this time. From a young Liberal. I am eleven years old.

LESLIE MOULTON.

ALLIANCE, O., Feb. 23, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter. I hav been reading the letters in the Corner for some time, and am much pleased with them. I hope you or some one of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER that will read this letter will write to the Liberals of Alliance, and giv them some good advice. We hav a good brick church in this place, and we little folks hav no place to go on Sunday only to orthodox Sunday-schools, all because the older folks are so selfish. They differ because some think spirits come back, and some think when they die that is the last of them, and some don't know. Well, I don't know, but I do know we should get together every week and hav a good time no difference whether we believe we will liv after this life or not, but make the best of this. Sometimes I think the Bible must be right, and that old Adam or some one else has played the mischief with us all, and sometimes I almost conclude it struck in harder on the Liberals than the rest of mankind.

Yours, N. C.

[The Liberals should see that the little folks hav a suitable place to meet together on Sunday. "Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined.—ED. C. C.]

CLEARWATER, NEB., Feb. 19, 1892.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: I was very much pleased with your speech at the Paine celebration. I am proud of you, dear. How much I would like to hav been present and seen all the people and heard the good things said of that grand man. The world is just beginning to learn his true worth. It makes me so glad to hear how the celebrations in his honor are on the increase everywhere.

The only thing I heard that saddened me was that our young friend Geo. Remsburg is in poor health. I wish he could travel about and deliver lectures as far as he is able. I think the climate of Colorado or California would benefit him. Being so young and wide awake he would draw good audiences, I am sure.

The poems inclosed are small, and one, "The Little Brown Farm," was published last fall in the Farmers' Alliance in Lincoln, Neb.

Wishing you the best of everything in earth and air, I am,

Your sincere friend now and always,

MARY BAIRD FINCH.

[To win the approbation of a sweet singer and deep thinker like the author of the above counts a great deal. We appreciate the kind wishes and tender love of our friend, whose poetic breathings are felt all over the land. That they hav graced the Corner many times is an added luster to the page that children love. May our friend liv long and continue the music that always thrills and charms the listener.—ED. C. C.]

Science Column.

The Ugly Worm.

Pah! a worm. You don't like to touch it. But it is clean. Let us examin it. What a big head! Its color is a grayish-yellow with blackish head, and this full-grown one is fat and a good three inches in length. But when first born it was not more than a quarter of an inch long, and was dark in color. We can count twelv segments to its body, and nine stigmata, or breathing-holes, on each side. And see: it has sixteen legs, six of them being hooked, while the others, including the two on the last segment, end in disks. What strong, serrated jaws, and what a big aldermanic stomach.

This fellow is a silkworm. As soon as he is hatched he commences to eat like a glutton and keeps it up for five days. He likes mulberry leaves best of all and grows fat on them. On the sixth day he is apparently full to bursting, and lies as still as a mouse. He hangs himself up by his hind legs, and apparently goes to sleep. After two or three days in this comatose state, his skin begins to crack open at the back of his head, and finally down goes the crack the length of his entire body. He wiggles and squirms, and presently there he is in a brand-new dress, his old one being entirely thrown off. He is bigger, too, and fatter than ever.

This action is called moulting, and our silkworm is subject to it four times during his life—that is, if he does not die in performing this feat, which he is sometimes liable to do.

It takes about thirty-two days for this worm to reach mature life. During the last ten days he does not hav such an appetite, and he manufactures something that is called the silk gum.

The silkworm is one of the finest spinners on the face of the earth. This gum is kept in long, slender bags near his mouth. See how nicely they are closed below, while above they end in two tubes, one on either side, which unite to form one single spinning tube.

How uneasy he is. But he is trying to find a convenient place to hang himself up again by his hind feet. Now he has found it, he begins to spin. Soon a thread of silk appears, and see, it is composed of two strands; that is to hold the cocoon he is about to make to the twig up there. How deftly the little worker outlines his new house, which takes three days to complete it. Look! you can see the spinner inside as the cocoon grows thicker and thicker. Now it is finished. Its color is a lovely yellow, and its size is that of a pigeon's egg. From his own little body he has spun and woven a close, compact abode. The silken thread of which it is made is of one unbroken fiber, and is eleven miles long. Think of it! Here he remains secure in his palace of rest for fifteen or more days. Then, according to temperature, the house is gradually opened, and it is as if a fairy had touched the worm that we saw last weaving around himself a web, for lo, there appears a beautiful butterfly, and that worm has disappeared forever. If we look we find his first covering was floss, to keep out the rain. Then this was lined with very fine silk, and within this again a still more delicate silk, so well glued that it is all impervious to wet or cold.

In manufacturing, cocoons are not permitted to burst of their own accord, you know, for that would spoil the silk for use. But they are put into tepid water which softens the gum and loosens the silk. It also kills the worm. Stirring the water with a stick exposes the ends of the silk. These are taken up by the fingers and wound on a reel. This is raw silk. Then it must be cleaned, doubled, and twisted before being made into silk, velvet, or spool silk. It takes about eight thousand cocoons to make a silk dress.

Does the little moth lay eggs?

Oh, yes, the female moth lays eggs on the mulberry trees, and in a few hours after it dies. One hundred newly-hatched silkworms weigh but one grain. At maturity they weigh 9,500 grains. As before stated, they are enormous eaters, and an ounce of silkworm eggs consumes, after being hatched, 1,200 pounds of leaves, from which are furnished 120 cocoons, if they all liv.

You inquire where they are raised. Mostly in China, where the industry has been carried on for four thousand years. But in Italy, France, and Spain the people are engaged in the business, also in some parts of our own country, where the soil is adapted to the growth of the white mulberry tree.

Now, you see that ugly worm, or caterpillar, is an interesting creature, to whom you are indebted for your beautiful silk dresses and your silken gloves.

S. H. W.

QUESTIONS.—Describe the silkworm. What is the first thing he does after being hatched? What food does he eat? Describe the process of moulting. How many times does he moult? At what time does he come to maturity? When does he begin to manufacture gum? For what purpose? Is the silkworm good at spinning? Describe the way he makes his cocoon. What is a cocoon? Is the thread he spins of one length? How long is it? What happens after a cocoon is completed? Does a cocoon open at once? Is it allowed to burst for manufacturing purposes? Why not? What is raw silk? How many cocoons are required for a silk dress? What follows after the silkworm lays its eggs? Tell about the weight of the eggs. What countries are engaged in raising worms and making silk? To what creature are we indebted for our most beautiful and costliest clothing?

A SHORT
HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.
BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.
By BRONSON D. KEELER.
CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

BIBLE MORALS.
Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.
By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.
By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.
A LIBERAL STORY.
By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.
A SUMMARY OF
THE ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY,
Price, cloth, 50 cents.

News of the Week.

If the czar reinstitutes serfdom it will probably cause the subversion of his throne.

A picture of the pope giving his audience to the French workingmen is being painted for the Vatican.

Protestants in France are feeling hope at the prospect of divorce of the Catholic church from the state.

John Weih, who has received a five-year sentence in New Jersey for burglary, says: "I stole those things to start a church with."

Hatred of Europeans in Persia is unusually rampant. Fruit that a Christian has touched or cups from which he has drunk are destroyed as unclean.

Antislavery societies of Europe may exhibit at our Fair specimens of the instruments used in capturing and confining slaves. The slave-yokes, etc., they think will prove useful object-lessons.

In France Radicals are planning to suppress religious orders by a law guaranteeing "liberty of association" but excepting societies the majority of whose members are foreigners or whose superiors reside out of France.

Catholics in France dread a rupture with the state, as "the French people hav for so long seen their clergy paid by the state that it would be some time before they learned the power of voluntary contributions to replace state budgets."

Signor Crispi, the ex-premier of Italy, endeared to Freethinkers by his opposition to the papacy, may retire from public life temporarily. He says that his party can do best without him at present, but that he hopes to be remembered by them when a fit time comes.

The Austrian war minister has ordered army officers to take their men to church at least once a month, and when there discard the flippant behavior of which they hav too often been guilty on such occasions. He also requests that no military dances be given during Advent or Lent.

Governor Fifer of Illinois said, a few days ago: "A war between religion and irreligion is approaching, not of bullets but of ideas. Hold fast to your civil and religious liberties; guard well your moral growth, and if you are strong and courageous, the battle will be won; if not, then some Gibbon will write the decline and fall of this republic."

A Mexican dispatch states that while President Diaz "has been very popular with all classes in Mexico except the clericals and has done more to develop the country, build railroads, and get foreign capital interested in the development of mines and the advancement of manufactures and agriculture in Mexico than any of his predecessors, he has lost no opportunity to curtail the power of the church," and for this the priests league with Garza to accomplish his overthrow.

Radicals in many countries, knowing that Catholic victory in Germany would help to the same elsewhere, are holding meetings to denounce the bill in the German parliament instituting denominational schools. Herr Rickert, a leader in the German House, declared in a speech that the measure would ruin education and place the schools under the rule of ecclesiastics who are less concerned with genuin culture than with enforcing their belief in dogmatic creeds. His party was ready to oppose the bill to the bitter end. The government, he declared, would find itself face to face with an unceasing conflict with the best elements of the nation, whose life depended upon the results of the struggle.

In one of the pamphlets circulated in China by Antichristian nativs the writer asks if the Christians are not more stupid than hogs. When anyone enters a church, he says, a devil book [the translated scriptures and tracts] is given to him. "Those devil books are in large numbers, but not one exists that ought not to be destroyed! I hav, disguising my feelings, received several of them, and for every sentence that I read I uttered a curse, and when I had finished reading I there and then burnt them. They say that the Chinese, who venerate heaven, earth, the sun, the moon, and the stars, are wrong, all wrong. Of all our saints and sages the only ones whom the devil books do not dare to abuse are Yao, Shun, Yü, T'ang, Wen Wang, Wu Wang, Chou Kung, Confucius, and Mencius, but whether they will not abuse them in the future is doubtful. Apart from these, Wen Ch'ang, the God of Literature; Kuan Ti, the God of War; Laotzu, Sakyamuni, Kuan Yin, the God of the Hearth, the God of Wealth, together with all the greater and lesser true gods, are abused without exception in the devil books, which one and all declare that in heaven above and earth beneath, in the past and in the present, only one is great; that is the corrupt devil Jesus whom they worship."

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A Controversy between the

Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Prof. Max Muller,
Prof. T. H. Huxley, M. Reville,
E. Lynn Linton.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. Bennett. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

The Proposed

POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.

In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.

By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.

Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.

Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Obituary.

On Jan. 25, 1892, Henry Moore passed to the "beyond" in his sixtieth year. He leaves no relativs except his bereaved widow. The last of their four children were buried nineteen years ago. He was born in Tennessee and was left a poor orphan when six years old. By industry and perseverance he succeeded in making a lovely home, which he beautified with flowers and made cheerful with his music and genial ways. He was afflicted with heart trouble and expected to die suddenly, therefore he had his business so arranged that he could take a long journey at any time. Sunday night, Jan. 24, 1892, after entertaining friends, he retired and slept several hours, when he suddenly arose with a pain in his left side. He put on his attire and sat by the fire while his wife applied remedies, laid his head back as if going to sleep and suddenly expired without a struggle.

He belonged to the Truth Seeker family, and was an outspoken Agnostic and ardent supporter of Freethought.

By his death the friends of Secularism here feel keenly the loss of an esteemed friend, and all who knew him must acknowledge the loss of a good citizen, a man of sterling worth and undoubted honesty. H. B. Milks.

Leon, Kan., Feb. 15, 1892.

I was at the funeral of a very dear friend the other day, a life-long Freethinker and a man in every respect. His greatest enemy, if he had any, could not say a word to his discredit. His family, however, were tainted with the popular superstition, and must hav a Methodist preacher at the funeral, and I expected to hear the usual balderdash about future torments, etc. You can judge my surprise, when he said the friend whom we had come to take the last farewell of, from all we could learn of him, held some views that were not considered orthodox by the churches, but he had the courage of his convictions and the honesty to disclose them; that through life he had been honest, truthful, and industrious. Indeed, he had practiced through life those moral principles without which no one could be a Christian, and he thought such a man would stand a better chance in the future world than a very great many who joined the church for selfish motivs and thought that was all that was necessary to insure their entrance into the realms of bliss; but he thought they would be woefully deceived when they found themselvs before the judge of all. And I thought the world was moving, and the time is coming when right living would be the test of a man's character, instead of believing any nonsensical stories interested priests may insist are necessary to salvation; the time is coming when men, and women too, will think for themselvs and will know too much to be frightened with bugaboo stories that were used to frighten children fifty years ago. But even the children hav outgrown such nonsense, and the churches will find that they must change their tactics and teach common sense, or they will find their occupation gone as teachers of the people. It will not do for them to stand up before an intelligent congregation and denounce the truths of science much longer. They must lay aside their musty Bible stories, too ridiculous for old grannies' tales, or stand aside and let men of science take their places, who will teach the people demonstrated truths, and not myths two thousand years old, that were spun in the brains of ignorant men, to deceive the masses, so they could liv by their credulity. J. Downes.

Steubenville, Feb. 20, 1892.

O. S. BARRETT.

This morning, at 11 o'clock, death ended the sufferings of Mr. O. S. Barrett.

The deceased was fifty-nine years of age. For the last four years he has been a great sufferer. About eight years ago he was stricken with paralysis, and since that time he has used a roller chair to enable him to move from place to place.

He was a familiar figure on the streets of this city (Adrian).

Mr. Barrett was a member of the Fourth Michigan infantry, serving as second lieutenant. He leaves a wife, who has been untiring in her devotion, and two brothers, Dr. R. C. Barrett, of Toledo, O., and Dr. James Barrett, of Oswego, N. Y.

Mr. Barrett has contributed quite a number of articles to the press, and also wrote in book form a history of the Fourth Michigan infantry.

The funeral was held at the residence, No. 11 Cross street, Sunday, February 14th, at 2 o'clock, standard time. It was held under the auspices of the Grand Army. Mrs. Nellie Barrett.

Adrian, Mich., Feb. 23, 1892.

I am pained to chronicle the death of Bro. O. S. Barrett, of this city, who died yesterday, February 11th, at 11 A.M., after a short illness of La grippe. He has occupied an invalid's chair for many years, caused by a wound while defending the union of our states. He died as he lived, true to his principles, trusting to the great immutable laws of force and control, ever ready to obey the last mortal summons that must sooner or later be served upon us all. He was ready to meet the destiny marked out for him by the creativ law of cause and effect. Being a great reader, a sound reasoner and of good judgment, charitable by nature, only asking from others such rights as he could freely grant to them, he had many personal friends even among those who opposed him in his irreligious views.

He was a friend to the needy, ever in sympathy with a brother in distress. He leaves a wife who has ever proved true to him in administering to his many needs in his long years of physical suffering. The mortal casket in which once dwelt his intelligent being has been placed under the supervision of the G. A. R.'s who so well remember his worth as a soldier and comrade both in battle and camp.

A soldier brave, in battle he fought;
When duty called he faltered not;
When, midst showers of bullets and cannon-ball,
He saw many brave comrades fall,
In the great intellectual battle of life
He was ever ready and competent for the strife,
Fighting for that he believed to be true,
Yet never ignored what others knew.
He believed in no devil or a God
That strews thorns in the pathway we trod,
Simply because Satan tempted Mother Eve;
The story seemed too foolish for him to believe.
But trusting to the great immutable laws,
He believed them to be the great first cause;
Further than this he could not tell.
Who can say he believed not well?

A. D. Swan.

Lieut. O. S. Barrett, Adrian, Mich., will write no more of his bright and breezy notes to The Truth Seeker. On February 11th was mustered out of earth's camp of war this brave soldier for union and liberty. He "was made a cripple for life for offering himself as a target for traitorous bullets to protect the integrity of the nation and emblem, the flag." He lately wrote to me: "The same spirit to disrupt the nation exists to-day as did then; certain elements are waxing bolder and bolder, and only wait a favorable opportunity. Any attempt to desecrate our national banner should be punishable with death. Such punishment is mild enough. It is not Anarchists and rebels that are interfering with our flag and institutions. Instigation and enactments can be laid at the shrine of a much worse faction—Roman Catholics. They are a bad crowd, and sooner or later will hav to be squelched." Mr. P. B. Reasoner writes me: "O. S. Barrett died as he had lived, a true Liberal; he requested that his funeral should be conducted by the Grand Army post and that no Christian minister should officiate in the services, and his wishes were carried out to the letter. Lieut. L. H. Soulsbury, one of his comrades, made a few appropriate remarks at the grave, and that was all."

I append a passage from Mrs. Besant touching my theme.

Detroit, Mich. J. P. Guild.

What has Rationalism to say to us when we stand face to face with the mighty destroyer of all living things? "Your creed may be good enough to liv by," say objectors, "but is it good to die by?" A creed that is good in life must needs be good in death, and never yet was a hero-life closed by a coward-death. What can better smooth the bed of the dying man than the knowledge that the world is the happier for his living, that he leaves it better than he found it, that he has helped to raise and purify it? What easier pillow to rest the dying head on than the memory of a useful life?

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FLORIDA. For full information send a two-cent stamp for a copy of South Florida Messenger.

4t8 Lock Box 253, Tampa, Florida.

HUMANITY'S SPREADING CURSE

is not the Church alone. There is another and worse culprit. Read the book with the above title. Price, 35 cents, through New York News Co., Newsdealers, or E. H. Andrae, 7t8 Dallas, Texas.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 916 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
O. Willis, A. Wanganui.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2 Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3 The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.
An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

—144—

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents: cloth, 50 cents.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Gems of Thought.

If we are to credit the accounts of the Bible, God once dried up the Red sea, so that the Jews might pass over it, and in all ages he has frightened people out of their wits with comets and eclipses. The New Testament tells us that he actually clothes the lilies of the field and feeds the birds of the air. But where is the educated person who, at this day, beholds in these occurrences anything more than the results of natural causes and conditions? and who is ignorant of the fact that neither the lilies of the fields nor the birds of the air could exist if the natural conditions of life remained unfulfilled?—Büchner.

Although God "created" the world in six days "by the word of his power," it is apparently one thing to "create" a world and quite another thing to keep it jogging after it is "created." A mere word "created" the world; but apparently a mere word could not keep it out of serious difficulties. Once it waxed so wicked that he had to drown it; and even that failed to put matters right, and he had to come down in person and get nailed to a stick. And even that is not sufficient; even yet people are so egregiously wicked that it requires tens of thousands of parsons to keep them from going straight to hell; and still myriads go to hell in spite of them. Therefore, you see that, although a word—perhaps an idle word—may "create" a world, it is no joke to keep a world going. And, although the Lord promised, when he flew up to heaven from Olivet, to come back to the earth almost immediately, he has apparently changed his mind, and has taken eighteen hundred years to consider what he will do when he does come, determined not to make such a bungle of it as he did the last time.—Saladin in God and His Book.

Cæsar was right when he said, that with gold we may procure men, and with men acquire gold. This secret had been known for ages in Asia and Egypt, where the princes and the priests shared the benefit between them. The prince said to the priest, "Take this gold, and in return uphold my power and prophesy in my favor; I will be anointed, and thou shalt anoint me; constitute oracles, manufacture miracles; thou shalt be well paid for thy labor, provided that I am always master." The priest, thus obtaining land and wealth, prophesies for himself, makes the oracles speak for himself, chases the sovereign from the throne, and very often takes his place. Such is the history of the shotim of Egypt, the magi of Persia, the soothsayers of Babylon, the chazin of Syria (if I mistake the name, it amounts to little)—all which holy persons sought to rule. Wars between the throne and the altar hav in fact existed in all countries, even among the miserable Jews. We inhabitants of the temperate zone of Europe hav known this well for a dozen centuries. Our minds not being so temperate as our climate, we well know what it has cost us. Gold and silver form so entirely the primum mobile of the holy connection between sovereignty and religion, that many of our kings still send it to Rome, where it is seized and shared by priests as soon as it arrives.—Voltaire.

All through the Middle Ages, as we hav seen, some few laymen and ecclesiastics here and there, braving the edicts of the church and popular superstition, persisted in medical study and practice; this was especially seen at the greater universities, which had become somewhat emancipated from ecclesiastical control. In the thirteenth century the University of Paris gave a strong impulse to the teaching of medicin, and in that and the following century we begin to find the first intelligible reports of medical cases since the coming in of Christianity. During the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth centuries the revival of learning, the invention of printing, and the great voyages of discovery gave a new impulse to thought, and in this medical science shared; the old theological way of thinking was greatly questioned, and gave place in many quarters to a different way of looking at the universe. In the sixteenth century Paracelsus appears—a great genius, doing much to develop medicin beyond the reach of sacred and scholastic tradition, though still fettered by many superstitions. More and more, in spite of theological dogmas, came a renewal of anatomical studies by dissection of the human subject. Finally came a far greater champion of scientific truth, Andreas Vesalius, founder of the modern science of anatomy. In the search for real knowledge he braved the most terrible dangers, and especially the charge of sacrilege, founded upon the teachings of the church for ages. First of all men he began to place the science of anatomy on its solid, modern foundations—this was his first great sin.—Ex-President White of Cornell University.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, and at 116 Fifth avenue. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

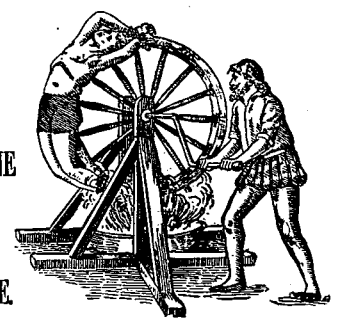
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,



Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1 00
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Champions of the Church.

WHAT THEY HAV DONE FOR CHRIST'S SAKE.

By D. M. BENNETT (Founder of THE TRUTH SEEKER). Price, $3, in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2 00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final RE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, orifiam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the diphthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell collan, eshetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - 50 cents.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

THE

LOGIC OF DEATH,

—OR,—

Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents.

THE

LOGIC OF LIFE,

—DEDUCED FROM—

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT.

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

DOWN THEY GO!

Best make American Stemwind Watches, 17 jewels, adjusted, pat. regulator, in silverine case, only $11; in 3 ounce coin silver, $16; 4 ounce, $15 (a few years ago $60). In best 14 kt. filled gold cases, open face, $20; hunting, $23 to $28; 14 kt. solid gold, $40 to $100; same, not adjusted, $2 less; 11 jwls. $3.50, and 7 jwls. $5 less (lower grade watches, $5, $4, and $2.50).

THE PERFECTED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH, much finer than above, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position 16 jwls. and all modern improvements, nickel movement, cased as above, $8 more, gilt mov't. $6 more. No one else in the world sends out so good a watch at the price.

LADIES' GOLD HUNTING AMERICAN WATCHES, latest styles, best filled, 7 jwls. $17; 11 jwls. $18.50; 15 jwls. $25; 14 kt. solid gold, $10 to $100 more. All sent prepaid, kept in order one year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

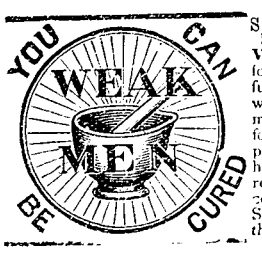
DIAMONDS: in rings, pins, drops, studs, etc., $10; $15; $25; $50; $100 to $1,000 per set. Cash refunded, if not 20 per cent below regular price, any time within one year.

WEDDING RINGS: Plain, chased, with pearls, emeralds, rubies, moonstones, opals, garnets, turquoise, solitaires or combinations, a specialty.

SUNDRIES: Rogers Bros.' triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; tea spoons, $1.80; tables, $3.49; best spects. in the world, $1; pebbles, $2; 14 kt. gold, $5 more (send line of finest print you can read without glasses 14 inches from eyes); gold-headed canes, $8; $10; $15; $20. Best razor—a luxury—$2. Solid silver spoons, $1.70 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, silver, $1.25 to $2. Tea sets, $20 to $40; everything in the line of fancy table silver, novelties, plush, and art goods, gold pens, etc. All sent prepaid (except cutlery) subject to exchange or cash back.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,
Established 1857. Rochelle, Ill.

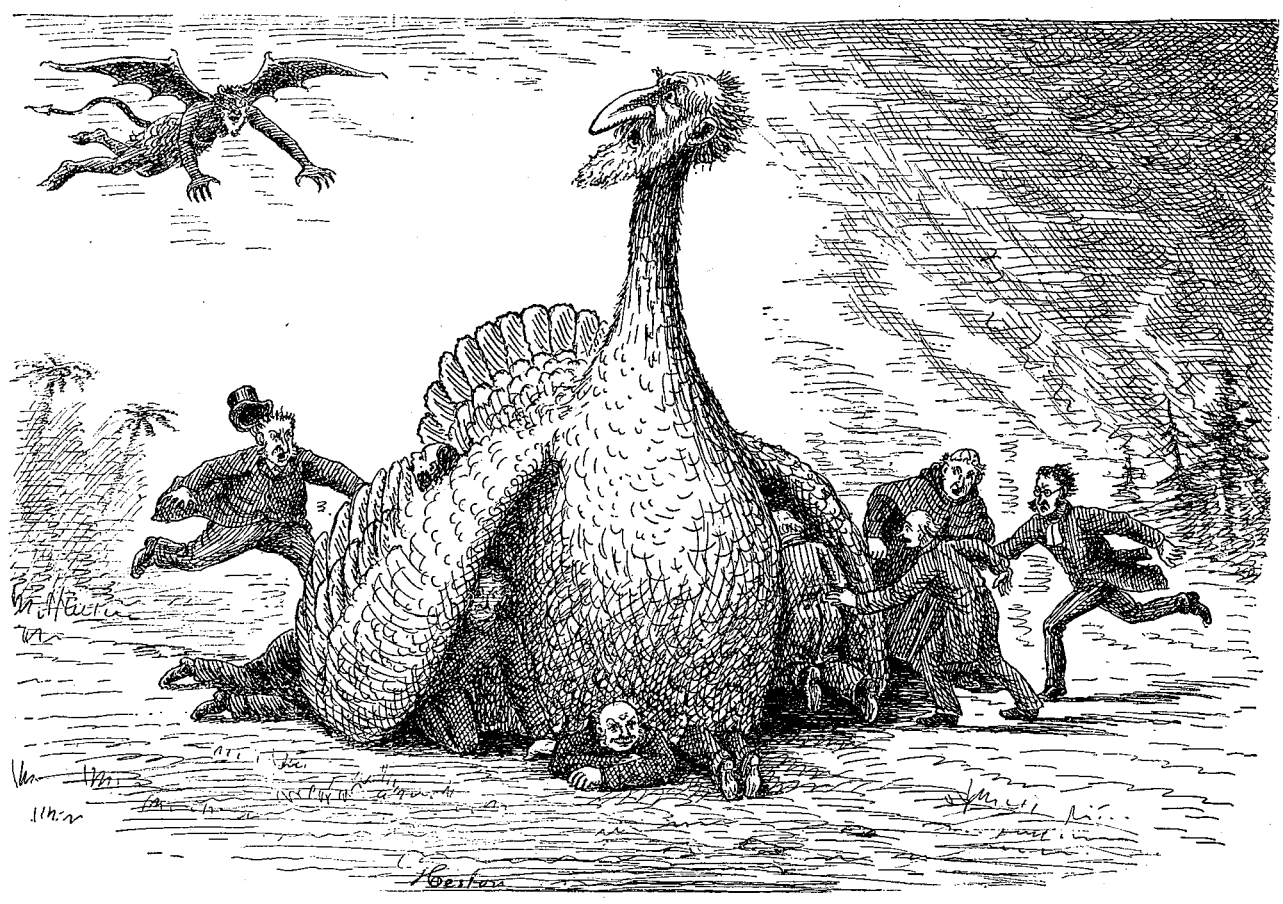
Send for price lists, beautiful cards in colors and gold of my Freethought badges (large and small), tracts, etc. Free.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.



ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

AN INFIDEL REMEDY.

SEND 10 CENTS TO DR. FELLOWS, VINELAND, N. J. for his book on youthful errors, early decay, wasting weakness, lost manhood &c. It sets forth an External Application—a reliable home cure, with full directions for use. Its a certainty, no failure. State where you saw this advertisement.

A patient writing from Davenport, Wash., says: "Your remedy is marvelous, and will accomplish what is said it will do. The value of which is untold."

DAVID'S JOSS MUST BE LIKE UNTO AN OLD HEN.

He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.—Psalms xci, 4.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—THE STRAIGHT; so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—THE JUST.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

CONTENTS:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Co-operation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP.
DARWINISM.
DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION.
JESUS NOT PERFECT.
UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

MIRACLES AND MIRACLE-WORKERS.

By JOHN PECK.

Price, 10 cts.

CHRISTIAN ABSURDITIES.

By JOHN PECK.

Price, 20 cents; six copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

TRUTH SEEKER COLLECTION OF FORMS, HYMNS, and RECITATIONS.

FOR ORGANIZING SOCIETIES.

FOR MARRIAGES, FUNERALS, NAMING OF INFANTS, OBITUARIES, EPITAPHS, ETC.

ALSO 525 LIBERAL AND SPIRITUALISTIC HYMNS

FOR SOCIAL AND VARIOUS PUBLIC OCCASIONS.

18mo, 550 pp. Price, 75 cts.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

The Gods. A beautiful pamphlet of forty pages, with likeness of Ingersoll. Price, 20 cents. Eight copies for $1.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Why Doesn't God Kill the Devil?

By M. Babcock.

Price, - - - - - - 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - - - 40 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 12. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 19, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE DUTY OF UNCLE SAM IN REGARD TO THE MAIL MEDDLERS.

Just Out.—A New Bible Picture-Book.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

Four hundred pages—Two hundred Full-Page Pictures—The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

Price, postpaid, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,
Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.
Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.
Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

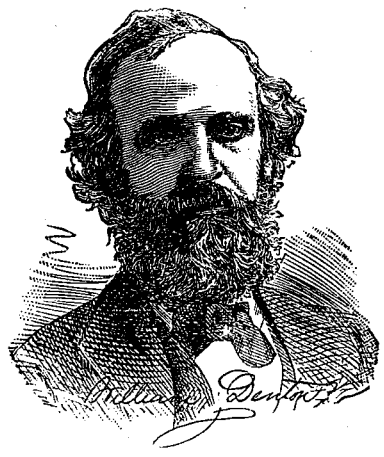
12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.



AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.

Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.

Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.

Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.

Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.

Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.

Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1 50

God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.

Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.

Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.

Is Spiritualism True? 10c.

Man's True Saviors. 10c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.

Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.

Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1 25.

Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.

Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.

Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.

What Is Right? 10c.

What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.

Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By F. R. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

The Proposed

POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.

In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.

By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.

Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.

Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - - $1.50.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

The Rights of Women

—AND—

THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

BY KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman. Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman.

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

The Gods. A beautiful pamphlet of forty pages, with likeness of Ingersoll. Price, 20 cents. Eight copies for $1.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - 40 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 12. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 19, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 19, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Bible Picture Book.

"FENTON, MICH., March 5, 1892.

"EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: I received the 'Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated,' and am well pleased with the same. Inclosed find $1, for which please send me another, and oblige,

"Yours as ever, S. H. ELLINWOOD."

"BONAPARTE, IA., March 6, 1892.

"EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: I received the Bible Picture Book and am highly pleased with it. Yesterday I started out among my Liberal friends, and succeeded in taking orders for six copies, and shall take another day this week and see what I can do, and send my order the last of the week. Respectfully, L. C. CHENEY."

The Universalists, The Truth Seeker, and Colonel Ingersoll.

The Universalists are queer people, religiously, and their oracles well represent them. They are themselvs, theologically, neither fish, flesh, nor fowl, nor good red herring, but their oracles talk like John Calvin and the ancient Pharisees combined. In a recent number of the Christian Leader is a definition of the position the editor takes toward Colonel Ingersoll, and an incidental scoring by insinuation of that other queer and unclassified sect, the Unitarians. To which is added what the editor evidently regards as a very severe criticism of THE TRUTH SEEKER. As a sample of Universalist logic the article is worth reading:

"The fact that Robert Ingersoll was invited to make an address before the Unitarian Club of New York seems to hav been taken by the public and by those journals that hav commented on it—so far as we hav noticed—as a matter of course. The assumption is, that the colonel holds to views which, if not technically Unitarian, are substantially so. This is a suggestiv straw. If the club of any other denomination had been addressed by Mr. Ingersoll, the conclusion would be that it was a challenge to the famous Infidel to state his case as strongly as he was able before a Christian jury. It would not be taken as indicating sympathy with his position, but rather as showing a disposition to let the enemy of Christianity hav the benefit of his own statement.

"This is not the view taken of his address before the Unitarian Club. We judge it is not the view taken by the club itself, nor by the Unitarian journals. The Christian Register printed the greater part of the address; and from the frequency of 'laughter,' 'renewed laughter,' 'applause,' 'loud applause,' in the report, the colonel was justified in concluding that he had 'struck good soil to-night.' Apparently the speaker had his auditors with him as completely as he could hav desired. The Register does not dissent from the position of the address or its author more than it might from that of a recognized Unitarian oracle, nor so much as it did from the position of Dr. Abbott, Dr. Gordon, and Professor Tucker. This is sufficiently remarkable. But when we add to it that the respectful protest of a life-long Unitarian of New York was returned to the author by the editor of the Register, it seems to be settled that there is a wide welcome for Ingersollism in the Unitarian body and no chance for protest.

"It seems to be incumbent on us now to go on and state our own position in regard to Mr. Ingersoll. He is a man whose wide sympathies and wonderful eloquence hav commended him to thousands of people, and whose felicitous exposure of many an absurdity has laid all genuin lovers of truth under obligation to him. His is an attractiv personality, and his practical benevolence often expresses itself in ways that Christians cannot improve upon. We hav heard him at his best and at his worst, hav enjoyed his wit and been shocked by his awful irreverence. We rather like him on the whole, and while we hav never heard of his making any sacrifices for the good of his fellow-creatures, we hav no doubt he is a better man than many who criticise him.

"Our objection to Ingersoll is what he represents. He stands for a particularly brazen and unmannerly and coarse variety of Infidelity. He is its great apostle. Those who would know just what Ingersollism comes to in the life and thought of the day should get a copy of the New York TRUTH SEEKER, the paper which publishes 'the only authorized editions' of Mr. Ingersoll's works, and read and inwardly digest it, and contemplate its illustrations. In the number which prints in full the address above referred to are sample nuggets of the refined gold which this form of 'Liberalism' yields. The first page is embellished with a cut of 'The Gospel Mill.' An old hag labeled Superstition is pouring out of a sack into a hopper marked 'The Sunday-School' a grist of children. Below the hopper is a mill labeled 'The Church,' operated by a mule placarded as 'Faith.' Spouts from the mill convey nearly the whole of what was poured into the hopper into receptacles marked 'Beggary,' 'Nunnery,' 'Brothel,' 'Penitentiary,' 'Gallows.' One small spout dribbles out 'God's share.' A fine portrait of Colonel Ingersoll flanks this cut. If this delicate bit of art had been visible to those who listened to Colonel Ingersoll at the Unitarian Club, it is fair to believe that the laughter and applause would hav been sensibly moderated."

We shall allow the Unitarian press to deal with the insinuation that they are all Ingersollians, or Agnostics; nor do we regard as of such great importance the editor's strictures upon THE TRUTH SEEKER. We are used to them, and besides, truth fears no kind of questioning. The picture referred to represents a state of affairs easily apprehended by all who pause to think, which the editor of the Leader evidently did not. If he had, he would hav seen its truth. He knows that Superstition is what drives people to church, and he knows, or might know if he studied the subject, that through the Sunday-school the children graduate to the various institutions pictured. He would know if he studied prison statistics that ninety per cent of the inmates are church attendants or Sunday-school scholars. If he reads the daily newspapers he knows that the gallows is but a stepping-stone to heaven. He knows also, if he reads Reformatory reports, that the fallen women are not Infidels but religiously trained girls, and he knows if he has read history that nunneries hav always been houses of ill repute. He sees, too, every time he walks the streets that God does forsake the "righteous" and allows his seed to beg bread. And if he does not know that according to Christian theology—not Universalist theology—God's share of the souls brought into the world is exceedingly small, he is not fit to be a teacher of his brethren.

But it was not of these things we meant to speak, but rather of the logic which holds one man responsible for what another does. Evidently the Leader believes in vicarious atonement, and would consider justice satisfied by hanging Smith for Brown's crime. It is true that THE TRUTH SEEKER sells the authorized editions of Colonel Ingersoll's books; it is true we hav published two or three authorized lectures; and it is true that the distinguished champion of liberty and ourselvs are on terms of amity. But to object to Ingersoll because of these things is about the silliest and shallowest "reasoning" that ever even a theologian invented. Think of "objecting" to a man because a bookseller placed an advertisement of his works on the same page in a paper with a picture the objector does not like! and with which the man has nothing to do. Think of the depth and breadth of that objector! Think of his giant intellect! of the discriminating logic he uses! of the reasoning power he called into play! And then think of the theology such a person represents, and how well fitted he evidently is to represent it!

Of the same character is the Leader's admission that in "practical benevolence" Colonel Ingersoll is at least equal to the average Christian, while insinuating that he never made any sacrifices for the good of his fellow-creatures. These kind of slurs are as common as grass, and they are always made by fellows who know nothing about the matter. How can a man be practically benevolent unless he sacrifices something? But what would the Leader hav? Do the Universalists desire to tie Colonel Ingersoll to the stake to see him sacrifice himself? Or do they want to put him in jail? Or starve him? Colonel Ingersoll is not the kind of a man who never sends a check for charity except through a newspaper, or at the solicitation of a preacher he knows will tell it to a reporter; but from what the public learns through no effort of his it is quite safe to say that his "sacrifices" are equal at least to those of his critics. When a man with a throat so seriously afflicted that he may lose his voice goes miles through a storm to help another man accused of blasphemy, and spends days defending him, not only without hope of fee and reward but refusing a fee in a case which to others would be a year's earnings, as Colonel Ingersoll did in the Reynolds suit, finally paying Mr. Reynolds's fine and costs out of his own pocket, we think he ought to hav a little credit for it, and not be accused of making no personal sacrifices. There are but few men, and probably no ministers, who would hav hazarded so much as Colonel Ingersoll did when he went to Morristown to plead for Mr. Reynolds. The Universalists talk a great deal about benevolence, and humanity, and good works, but they exercise very little charity toward those who dissent from their own views, and we never heard that they hav rescued many from jail, or done such a volume of good that they can afford to sneer at even an evangelical Christian—much less at Colonel Ingersoll.

It is queer how things turn out sometimes. Last week an old friend of Anthony Comstock, the treasurer of a church, a member of the Sons of Temperance, head bookkeeper of a large firm, was arrested for stealing from his employers over thirty thousand dollars which he had lost in—playing policy! which is a game Comstock pretends to hate with such undying hatred that he has raided the policy shops many times and oft. But still his old friend could find five shops open in which to lose the money he stole. And that he is as pious as his friend Comstock is shown by the fact that the church funds in his keeping are intact!

Religious Questions in Our Legislature.

The Assembly of New York has voted to strike out the Sunday closing clause in the bill appropriating money for the state exhibit at the World's Fair. The Senate, after an angry debate, referred the same matter to the State Commission.

The argument on Sunday closing was held on the 9th, and began on Senator Hunter's proposition to close the exhibit. Mr. Hunter represents the Sabbatarians. He wished a resolution to pass requesting the members of Congress from this state to oppose the granting of any appropriation to the Columbian Exposition unless promis was made to close the affair on Sundays. The senator pointed to the fact that many bills were recently presented to the legislature calling for Sunday privileges, and that the tendency seemed to be to indorse the requests. It was time, he said, to call a halt. The American Sabbath was purely American and should not be invalidated by the foreign element that sought to desecrate the holy day. Senator O'Connor took exception to the reference to the foreign population. The Christian religion, he said, was no part of the laws of the United States, and all sects were entitled to the same respect and consideration. The statutes of this state, he declared, respected the Mosaic law, as well as the Christian, and made provision for the religion of the Hebrew and the observance of the Hebrew Sabbath, as it did for the Christian Sunday. Senator Brown said he was glad the days of the Blue laws were gone, when the prattle of children's voices was subdued in pent-up rooms for fear of desecration of the Sabbath. A man could attend divine worship in the morning, he argued, and visit the Fair in the afternoon on Sunday without offending his creator. It is thought by Senator Erwin that the Sunday opening was a scheme to swell the Fair receipts, but to open the Fair on Sunday would shock the moral sense of the whole community. He did not approve of Senator Hunter's arbitrary demand upon the Congressmen, but presented an amendment, which was agreeable to his colleague, to the effect that the members of Congress be requested to use their influence to hav the Fair closed on Sunday.

Senator Hunter read extracts of remarks from Catholic priests favoring the Sunday closing, evidently to influence the opinion of Senator O'Connor, who is a Catholic. But the latter took occasion to remark that there was no earthly power that could alter his convictions, whether it came from priest, cardinal, or pope.

Senators Cantor, Coggeshall, Saxton, Smith, and Roesch followed in lengthy speeches for and against the Fair, the last named presenting a substitute to the original resolution referring the subject matter to the World's Fair Commission of this state for action. This passed with a vote of 16 to 14.

Last week the Assembly went on record, too, as favoring Sunday fishing. Around New York city there are many bays where the fish feed Sundays as well as Saturdays, and thousands of workingmen hire boats on Sundays and go out and catch their Monday dinner. Jamaica bay is one of these places, and owing to the crowds patronizing the boat liveries around its shores the pious ones seek to enforce the Sunday law against sports. But when the Fisheries and Game bill came up for discussion in the Assembly Mr. Sulzer presented a petition with twenty-six thousand names in favor of allowing the fishermen to continue their sport.

The country members opposed the petition, and the city members favored it. Mr. O'Connor thought he could find good biblical authority for fishing on Sunday, and Mr. Sullivan said: "I am in favor of Sunday fishing, though I own several bar-rooms. I would rather people went fishing than come to my saloon on Sunday. They should go fishing and let me keep my place closed at least one day of the week." The Sunday fishing clause was retained by a majority of four.

These are encouraging signs, and it may be possible some time to repeal all Sunday laws. And there is one thing the country legislators should understand, and that is, that whatever Sunday laws are enacted in this state the people of New York will not observe them. New York city folk are shut up in stores and offices and factories six days in the week and the seventh day they will go out fishing or sailing, or to "sacred" concerts, or on excursions to the country, do what the bigots please to prevent. Steamboat and railroad men find Sunday the most profitable day, and they will carry the crowds just as long as it pays. And those who really seek to increase morality and sobriety should encourage all these forms of recreation rather than suppress them, because if the people are compelled to remain in the city they will do things which are not good. The liquor stores of the city are open and men who cannot do anything else will frequent them. There is more immorality and intemperance in the city in the winter than in the summer because the people cannot get out of doors. A hothouse life breeds vice. So if the churches desire the well-being of the people they will repeal their Sunday law and turn their missionary money into open-air excursion funds. The law of substitution—a good thing for a bad thing—as an eminent criminal judge once wrote, holds good in this matter. An open museum takes people away from a possible injurious amusement. So does a sail on the ocean, a visit to the country or to the parks, or a good concert. All these things ought to be made cheap and pleasant. No question has been treated so foolishly as the Sunday question. What we hav pointed out as to the ill effects of a Puritan Sunday is undeniable, and the churches by opposing a free Sunday show that they are not sincere in their prayers for the welfare of the people. We are glad that some of our lawmakers are getting common sense on this subject.

But if, on the whole, the legislature has done well on the Sunday question, it has retrograded in other respects. Mr. O'Connor, who struggled for an open Sunday, and said he took no orders from priest or pope, has put a bill through exempting churches from the collateral inheritance tax, and the Senate has passed the Freedom of Worship bill, so-called. The exemption bill is in favor of all churches, and hereafter they will get the legacies they frighten from their dupes by the fear of hell without reduction. The Freedom of Worship bill permits the Catholics to set up an altar and introduce their paraphernalia in the House of Refuge on Randall's island. The bill has passed because of the ascendency of Tammany Hall. The country Republicans hav generally been against the bill heretofore, but this time several voted for it. Senator Zerubabel Erwin led the opposition to the bill. He said that he was in favor of the utmost freedom of worship, but he did not believe in designating a commission of state officials to look after it. He feared that politics would affect the commission, and he wanted to keep religion and politics as far apart as possible. Senator Saxton offered a substitute that the courts should hav jurisdiction, and that they should be substituted for the proposed board, so that anyone who felt aggrieved would go to the court and get redress instead of appealing to a state board. "This is the beginning of the plan to inject religion into politics," said Senator Erwin. "The next thing will be to ask for a division of the public school moneys and to giv part of them to the sectarian schools. I want to keep the church out of politics." "I deny it, I deny it," said Senator McMahon. "I ask for the proof." "The Senator givs his opinion. He is expressing only that. I think differently," said Senator Erwin. The substitute was lost by vote of 16 to 15 and the bill was passed.

The bill in its present shape constitutes the attorney-general, the superintendent of prisons, and the president of the state board of charities, a board to see that freedom of worship is secured to all inmates of state institutions, and the board of managers of the Randall's island institution will be guilty of a misdemeanor if they do not admit Catholic priests, in case this bill becomes a law.

There is only one way to settle all these matters permanently, however, and that is the right way, as pointed out by Liberalism, which was represented at the hearing before the Senate judiciary committee on this bill by our old friend J. J. McCabe of Albany, who told the committee that the bill under consideration would not do what the title seemed to indicate. The subject of the bill, he said, was not to permit freedom of worship, but to compel the state to enforce religious worship. The clashing of Roman Catholic ecclesiastical dogmas with evangelical Protestant interests in these matters would, in all probability, eventuate in an irrepressible religious conflict if all public institutions were not administered on a purely non-church basis, and he therefore offered the following substitute for the so-called Freedom of Worship bill. He said that he believed that two-thirds of the people of the state of New York would prefer the substitute to the original bill:

"An act to provide for the complete separation of church and state in all institutions which are under state control, and also in all institutions, associations and societies which receive state aid.

"Section 1. It shall not be lawful for any officer of the state to pay to any incorporated institution, society, or association, nor to the managers, agents or officers thereof any moneys of the state to be used for the purpose of founding, maintaining or aiding by appropriation, payment for services, expenses or otherwise, any church or religious denomination, or any institution, society or undertaking which is either wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control.

"Section 2. No officer of any incorporated institution, society, or association, the expenses of which are paid wholly or in part out of any fund which is raised by a tax on any kind of property, or by fees of any kind, shall permit the teaching of any special or general system of theology or religion, by any priest, minister or other teacher, in any such institution, or on any property belonging to the state."

But Mr. McCabe's substitute was not adopted, the committee reported the bill favorably, the Senate passed it, and it will probably become a law, for Tammany Hall is in the legislativ saddle, and the hand which hold the reins reaches out from Archbishop Corrigan's marble palace on Madison avenue, just back of the St. Patrick's cathedral. Our state legislators are his servants as well as our city officials, though we are thankful to observe they hav not gone so far as Mayor Grant did in kneeling and kissing his hand on the late occasion of the pope's birthday celebration at Cooper Union. But they will do as he directs without much murmuring.

The "Evolution of the Devil," by Henry Frank, is one of the very best of all the numerous works about that anti-divine personage. It differs from the Christian biographies in that Mr. Frank knows what he is talking about. The price is twenty-five cents for a single copy, and five for one dollar.

We would call special attention of those of our friends who take sufficient interest in Liberalism to work for its extension among church-members to the new and cheap edition of Robert C. Adams's "Travels in Faith," which has the interest of a personal memoir, while at the same time it takes its readers along with the author out of the land of mental bondage. It is a splendid book to lend to Christian neighbors, and at twenty-five cents it is one of the cheapest of all our publications.

The close connection between church and state under the present administration receives additional proof from a story in the Ohio State Journal, by which it appears that Mr. Harrison holds his church vows above his party obligations. The story goes: "If it had not been for the president's somewhat peculiar notions about some things, Col. O. J. Hodge would be at this time governor of Alaska," remarked a member one evening last week. The appearance on the floor of the well-known Cleveland politician recalled the incident to the legislator, who continued: "He had backing strong enough to get anything the administration had to giv. McKinley, Sherman, Foster, Stanford, Hawley, and other influential men gave him their heartiest indorsement. Mr. McKinley and Senator Sherman took the matter to the White House in person. The president read over the long list of names, and glancing up, inquired: 'Is Colonel Hodge a religious man?' Major McKinley, who is a personal friend of Colonel Hodge, was a trifle staggered, but he smiled and replied that he believed not. Then the president said it was his desire to appoint a man who would work in harmony with th missionaries. The Ohio statesmen pleaded the colonel's cause earnestly, but a few minutes' talk satisfied them that he had just as good a show to go as minister to the moon, and they gave it up."

It is not always well to be a close student of the Bible. Mrs. Mary Pachus, of Williamsburgh, has been "under conviction" for two or three weeks, and has continually read that religious work, neglecting her household duties and talking and acting strangely at times. When Pachus returned home one night last week he found his wife reading it, and no supper provided. He upbraided her and his words threw the woman into a frenzy. She became violent and screamed so loudly that neighbors were attracted to Pachus's rooms. She seemed to hav recovered her reason the next morning, but at 8 o'clock, while Pachus was in the kitchen, his wife picked up her two youngest children and ran to the front window with them. She took the infant by the legs and dangled it out of the third-story window. A policeman reached the rooms just in time to save the child. The woman was then taken to the station, and afterward sent to the insane asylum.

On the Pacific Coast.

News and Notes.

Monday, March 29th, 9 A.M., at Anaheim. The way begins to brighten. The earthquakes hav rolled by, though mists and clouds still are in the heavens. A fair audience is present. S. Littlefield, Leudke, Harker, and other comrades are around the campfire. I miss some old faces, but I guess they will be with us next time. One good friend, however, has said the last good-bye—stalwart Comrade Pullen, always ready to stand by the flag. Without fear he passes to the eternal sleep. The flowers of memory shall bloom upon his grave.

Tuesday morning, sunshine struggling with clouds, I reach Orange. I find I. H. Parker working away at his hedge beside the golden orange trees, and receive a warm welcome to his pleasant home. He is called "Big Parker." I guess he is about as tall as Abraham Lincoln, and all the way a Liberal. However, he was once a devout Methodist, but failing to be sufficiently "sanctified," he was rejected by the "unco holy." This led him into the path of Freethought, and now he reads THE TRUTH SEEKER every week. In the afternoon he givs me a drive over the surrounding country to Joel Parker's, Mrs. Hendy's, and on to Olive Hights. Here I found some stanch Liberals—Hubert, Gardner, Shoemaker, and others. They are digging a tunnel with the biggest concrete pipe in the world. I take a walk into it. Parker has to get on his knees, which he would not do anywhere except in a tunnel. We get as near to hades as possible, but no devil makes his appearance. Things seem to be pretty solid in the tunnel, but no church-members can be found to take chances there and "meet Jesus." Only Infidels will work in that shadowy place. They are not afraid of ghosts, and can put their trust in firm masonry if not in God. Through this concrete pipe, nearly seven feet in diameter, will flow the waters of the Santa Ana for the irrigation district. They also turn the wheels of the Olive Hights flouring mill, which makes some of the best flour in the state at the rate of about one hundred barrels a day.

The audience at Orange is the best I hav had yet in this somewhat orthodox town, although it threatened rain. I am quite hopeful about Orange. The Liberal element is always ready to do its work, and the people seem to be willing to hear. There is some hint of progress even among the Christians. The religious journal of the place was willing to announce my lecture as an item of news. This is an improvement on the old style of orthodoxy.

I had a fine time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Parker, where the children and all are in the atmosphere of Freethought, and enjoy the light of day, so different from the experience of Parker and myself when we were young in the gloomy orthodox regions of "down East," Parker in Nova Scotia and I in New England. What a mighty change has come over the world of infancy! God and the devil hav disappeared, and the "fair humanities" shine.

It begins to rain at the close of the lecture and pours down heavily during the night. But the morning dawns beautifully, and Parker harnesses "Dolly" and away we go to "Hope Ranch." Edson Smith is not there, having gone to the station to find me, who of course will be "missing." We wheel to Santa Ana and greet Col. Dan Baker in his editorial sanctum. Another hitch is discovered in the Freethought campaign. O'Neil's Hall, engaged for the occasion, is by some misunderstanding given to another party, and we hav to rustle to secure a hall, the Congregational Hall, and announce the change. Baker does this. Dodgers are out and we are ready for the "new departure."

The skies change too, and as I meander out to Hope Ranch afoot the showers overwhelm me, and I am dripping when I reach Smith's. A good fire warms me up, a good sleep refreshes me, and a good dinner strengthens me, and I am ready for the evening's task.

In spite of all, I hav the best audience that has greeted me at Santa Ana. The storms of the day rolled off and the stars sparkled in the sky.

The first thing on Thursday morning was to look out and see if it was fair weather. If the sun shone and the clouds were not threatening, it was our plan to drive to Arch Beach, twenty-four miles away. Otherwise we must giv up the trip. The experience of Wednesday made things uncertain. It was, however, a glorious morning. The skies were really dazzling in splendor. The clouds were white as if they were perfectly empty of rain, and hung like jewels in the sky. Smith harnessed his bright two-year-old pony, Oscar, and off we started for Arch Beach. Through Tustin, gem of the valley, we reach Irvine ranch. Here is over one hundred thousand acres owned by one man. He probably paid two bits an acre, and now he holds it for the increased value given to it by the labor of others. It is a beautiful piece of land, stretching for miles from ocean to foot-hills. It is sown with barley this year, and presents a magnificent picture of verdant beauty far as the eye can see. Reaching the hills that encircle this vast plain, we plunge down through the canyon toward the sea. This is a delightful ride. Varying vistas open on the view. Two gentle lakes sparkle along the way. The ducks and geese float over their bosom or fly in the sunny air on our approach. A flock of buzzards—a thousand of them, I should think—are hovering and plunging about a dead sheep. They do not seem to agree among themselvs, and it looks as if the big, strong buzzards got the sheep while the weaker ones had their chances fluttering on the outer circle, looking on, and getting a little dab now and then. Evidently the buzzard world is a good deal like the human world—the big ones hav the most of it, the little ones hav to starve. The bosses rule, the inside ring gets the sheep. Large flocks of sheep are feeding on the hillsides, and the blackbirds keep them company, as if there were a common interest between them. The canyon becomes more rocky, wild, and picturesque as we descend, and we can note the huge bowlders where once the rushing torrents sped, thousands, perhaps millions of years ago, for this canyon was once the bed of a mighty river.

Over the vast plain above where Santa Ana now is, and the Irvine ranch, was an immense lake, but the bottom of that ancient lake is to-day covered with soil one hundred and sixteen feet deep, washed down from the neighboring mountains. So it must hav been a long time ago when the waters were drained into the sea.

At the foot of the canyon the first building we see for miles is a neat little school-house, and by the side of it is a dilapidated church about one-quarter its size. This is a good sign—the school-house becoming more beautiful, and the church more forlorn. That is a glorious evolution. May the church soon disappear like the ancient river and lake, and the school-house tower resplendent with radiant promis of education and reform. The church belongs to the buzzard family. Let it go with the rest of the preying tribe.

As we drive out of the canyon to La Guna, a panorama immense and glorious astonishes the view. The sea, broad, bright, is before us, rolling away in boundless volume. A magnificent steamer speeds along the horizon with enormous clouds of smoke that glitter in the sun. The Catalina islands gem the glowing west with lofty hights. The ocean breaks upon the rugged shore with music and iridescent spray. Alongside the mighty Pacific we pass. Arch Beach is two miles from La Guna, and is one of the prettiest places on the coast. Mr. H. S. Goff is proprietor of the hotel. Around it are flower-gardens and arbors. Back of it extend the hills tufted with groves. In front is the mighty sea, breaking upon the rocks. I suppose this is called Arch Beach because the shore curves inward and makes a sheltered spot for the bathers when the tide is high. The temperature of the place seldom goes below 40° and not above 85°. Bathing all the year round, roses all the year round, and gorgeous and ever-varying views of sea and land.

Mr. and Mrs. Goff and the six children enjoy life without any shadow of superstition. THE TRUTH SEEKER comes here, music prevails. The big dining-room is fitted up for the lecture. The children play and dance. The people come from all about and fill the house; it is a merry assembly. There are some Mormons here, besides Christians of the orthodox sort, and Freethinkers. I speak on the Demands of Liberalism. After the lecture the festivities continue until 2 o'clock in the morning. I find quite a number of Liberal friends. Mrs. S. L. Thurston, with her family of fifteen children, make quite an addition to our ranks, which we welcome with hopes of the future. I was glad to come to this verge of the western world and float the flag of freedom. D. Edson Smith did a good thing when he suggested this delightful trip. He livs at Hope Ranch, and of course is always ready for some new endeavor. In fact, he has just evolved a new variety of peach, which is pronounced to be about the best there is. Hope Ranch peach is the name of it. It will no doubt become famous.

Friday morning still bears good fortune for us. The weather is clear and the journey is back to Santa Ana, along the canyon until the wide and opening view reveals an immense panorama of mountains shining beyond the green expanse. The fair cities of Santa Ana and Tustin glitter between, modern life mingling with ancient landmarks.

I bid good-bye to Hope Ranch, with its pleasant companions, to Dan Baker, Smithwick, and others who giv good cheer to the Freethought wanderer. Smithwick is eighty-four years of age. He was in Texas before 1840, and passed through strange adventurous times in wars with Indians and Mexicans. He was in Burnet county and hunted buffalo over the place where the city of Austin now is. He has witnessed world-wide changes since he was a boy. He is still activ and wields a vigorous pen in the cause of reform.

The Methodist church at Orange, as Dan Baker says, has settled the question of the World's Fair opening on Sunday. By a unanimous vote of all its members, both dead and living, it was declared that the gates must be shut. There were about two hundred and thirty votes recorded, but most of these were in their graves. One member of the church who goes duck-hunting on Sunday was rather recalcitrant. He tried to dodge, but the sisters scowled at him, and the brethren prayed, and he finally voted with the rest. With all the dead Christians against us, as well as living, and duck-hunters thrown in, it shows that there is a good deal of business on hand about the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. It reminds me of the old hymn, "Hark, from the tombs a doleful sound," a unanimous No from every buried saint. This beats Tammany all to pieces as to ballot-box stuffing.

Those who are "asleep in Jesus" can still exercise the right of suffrage. That is a union of church and state with a vengeance. The Christians are indeed wise as serpents, but not so harmless as doves.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Santa Ana, March 4, 1892.

Lectures and Meetings.

THE Newark Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, March 20th, at 3 o'clock, Van Buren Denslow, LL.D., of New York, will lecture. Subject: "If Knowledge Were Universal, What Would Religion Be?"

THE lecture before the Society of Human Progress, Sunday evening, March 20th, is Mr. Frank's answer to the question, "Is Dogmatic Agnosticism Consistent?" The society meets now at Carnegie Recital Hall, south-east corner of 57th street and Seventh avenue. The entrance to this hall is at the corner.

AT the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East 15th street, Friday evening, March 18th, Mr. Duren J. H. Ward will explain "Hindoo Philosophy, Including Buddhism." On the evening of Thursday (not Friday), March 24th, instead of Henry Rowley on "Religion and Morality," Prof. Lester F. Ward, of the Smithsonian Institute, will lecture on "The Two Trunk Lines of Psychic Development."

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Flatonia,	" ..March 19,20	Brookhaven, Miss.	" 16,17
Calvert,	" .. " 27,28	Chicago.....	" 24
Austin,	" .. April 2, 3	Massillon, O.....	May 1
Waco, Convention of Texas Liberal Association.....	" 8,9,10	New York.....	" 6
		Boston.....	" 8
New Orleans.....	" 13,14	Montreal.....	" 15
		Boulder City, Col....	June 5

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Communications.

What Shall Liberals Do To Be Saved?*

In presenting this paper I hav chosen for my text, "What shall we do to be saved?" I do not refer to our souls, nor to any concern we may feel about the Christian's heaven, but I refer to the adoption of some methodical working plan, which shall more speedily secure for the demands of our Union popular favor and support.

We think these demands are just, and ought to be the law. We think they are of so much general importance, that we contribute time and money to cause others to think as we do about them, and make them the law.

If enough people were already of our opinion, our efforts might cease. If even those who are of our opinion would be more earnest, perhaps then our efforts might cease. But the facts are, our demands are still ignored. If, then, we would succeed, we must continue our efforts; and we ought not simply to continue them, we should increase them, for effort is always the measure of success. Battles are won by courage and disciplin, as well as by numbers. Disciplin always fosters courage, and courage is strength. Do we lack disciplin? If we do, we lack the courage it would inspire, and the strength it would giv.

We all know what we want to accomplish, but do we all agree as to the methods of accomplishing it? Unless we do our efforts are scattered, and our strength to that extent neutralized. We can spare none of our strength. We need it all. Not that we hav not accomplished much, but that we hav very much yet to accomplish.

So far as our record goes our Union has been organized only since 1876, and we hav no reason for feeling discouraged with results. No one can say it is a record of defeats or disasters. We hav made reasonable progress everywhere, on every issue, and in every land. We may proudly sing of many a victory, shake hands over the grandest of triumphs, and smile and congratulate our friends; not only in every state, but in every county, and every precinct of every state, and in every nation of the globe. Can a showing like this be called one of failure or defeat? On the contrary, is it not one to be proud of? Would not the church be proud if it had accomplished as much for Christ, in so short a time—fifteen years—as our Union has for truth, reason, and liberty? Would it, with our success, be despondent, and let its cause drift? No. Instead, it would everywhere hold festivals of joy; every pulpit would boast of, and exaggerate, its achievements, and every Christian throat would echo them. Wherever the spires of superstition's temples pierce the skies, there would its bells ring out tidings of its conquering march, and a following of fanatics stand ready to maintain by main force, at least in the form of statutory laws, each step gained. Nor would it stop here. The church has a financial machine, a political machine, and a social machine. It would set all of these running; its money would find editors without ideas or courage; its votes would find politicians without patriotism or honor, and its social machine would become an ostracising lever, which only a few dare face, and the great, alone, could withstand. It would relax no effort. It would take fresh courage, and with all its stupendous power, strive further, in the interest of its dogmas, to suppress reason, fetter speech, press, and mails; and to confine the liberty of men to the will of its Bible God, constituting its preachers his vicegerents on earth who alone should be interpreters of that will. We know this is the spirit in which the church works, and knowing it, do you think we should let our efforts slacken? Would we not be truer, nobler, and more heroic men and women, if we oppose with increased energy every error of the church, and its every infringement of human rights? We, too, may hav our financial machine, our political machine, and our social machine, and let us hav them, but let us use them for no base purposes. Let our editors be brainy men with courage, our politicians patriots with honor, and our social machine cosmopolitan above ostracism of any person, because of belief or unbelief, whether Mohammedan, Buddhist, Jew, or Christian. Let whoever is true to his honest thoughts be our friend, no matter how widely we differ. Let no social fences be built of creeds. A conviction that bears the stamp of honesty is always respectable, and must pass current with us in every field of investigation.

Now, it would seem that our organization, working harmoniously and persistently along these lines, must become popular and increase in numbers rapidly, provided we find a way to get before the people to tell them of our objects, and of their importance. To get the people to listen to our arguments is the greatest trouble we hav to contend with. As sure as we get new listeners, we make new friends, and earnest followers. If we cannot get them, then our following must come only from those who evolute out of old ideas into the new by the slow process of thinking alone, without the aid of help.

As Freethinkers or Secularists, we sometimes feel lonely, and it is no wonder, although, in fact, we are not alone. In every community are men and women who believe as we do, but they are too often silent, and we do not know them, except by accident. I is no wonder we feel lonely when we do not know we hav friends about us—it is no wonder, when the first thing to greet us in every town is one or more church spires, and not one of them erected to our cause. We hav undertaken to designate each other by wearing a badge, but how many wear them? The badge is all right as far as it goes, but we can hardly say we are satisfied and wish to stop at that. Just fancy the loneliness, the uncertainty, and the strain our speakers must suffer traveling over the country, from place to place, never sure of a greeting, or a hall, or an audience, or even a collection large enough to take them out of town. How lonely it is for most of us to hear the church bells ring every Sunday, and see the people going to church, while we must stay at home or roam the fields, because we hav no congenial church to attend. Is it true that we cannot hav churches as well as the Christians? Why not? Don't we want them? Is it because we would be copying the ways of Christians? When the Lutherans broke away from the Catholic church, they did not drop the idea of churches in which to worship; nor did the Church of England; nor did the Methodists when they left the established church; nor did the Baptists when they set up a separate creed; nor the Presbyterians; nor the Congregationalists, nor any of the other sects, not even the Mormons. Now, why did they not each adopt a new plan of carrying on their work, and drop the old idea of building churches everywhere, and forming circuits, and putting a preacher in charge of each one of them? They must hav had some good reason for it. When we look about us, and see how all of these denominations hav succeeded, are we not bound to conclude that they deemed the old way the best and cling to it for that reason? And does not their success prove they were right? What good reasons can we assign or not pursuing their tactics? We need not call it a church, although to say "Secular Church," as "The First Secular Church of Portland," or "The Morrison Street Secular Church," would not sound objectionable; on the contrary, the word "church" would, to some extent, modify the prejudices some now entertain toward our cause. Call it "Secular Hall," if you wish. What we call ourselvs is not so material; it is the cause we seek to maintain. The idea is, to giv our speakers a particular field in which to work, and deliver regular lectures, organize Sunday-schools, get up socials and other entertainments, as the churches do. Let our speakers be paid by subscriptions, collections, and donations, as the preachers are. For example, let us take this city of Portland. As things are arranged at present, the people of Portland do not hear one of our lecturers, except occasionally, and never at stated times. In the mean time, our friends here get in the way of attending some one of the Christian churches, although they do not prefer it, perhaps; whereas, if we had an able speaker assigned to Portland, with a regular place and time for lecturing, he would soon build up a large attendance, and derive almost a certain income. To start with, we might hav to rent a hall, as the churches do when they first start. After a while, by the aid of festivals, contributions, etc., after the fasnion of the churches, we could buy a lot, and build our own hall or church; and the congregation by this time might be regarded as a permanent one. This same speaker might include in his circuit East Portland and Albina—perhaps other places—and giv regular lectures at stated times and places, so that the people might depend upon them, similer to the plan pursued by Hugh O. Pentecost, who, every Sunday morning, lectures in Newark, in the afternoon in Brooklyn, and in the evening in New York city. It does not appear that any of his congregations yet own a hall of their own, but it is only a matter of time when they surely will. More than this, the time will come when Mr. Pentecost will not be able to meet the demands of these three cities; each will hav a speaker of its own, perhaps several of them, just as they now hav several Methodist Episcopal churches each.

We hav now only illustrated this plan by considering how it would work in a large city. In smaller towns and country places, our speakers would be provided with larger circuits, and it would be incumbent on them to hav regular lectures, at regular times and places, as once in two weeks or a month. Gradually we would hav the whole state divided into circuits, and provided with speakers just as the church has now, each one keeping a faithful record of his work, including funerals conducted, visits to the sick, etc.; also of his receipts and expenditures, and such other matters as might be required, and report the same to the State Secular Union, which, in turn, would report to the American Secular Union. With a working system like this, would not our cause begin at once to reap grander results; would not Liberals everywhere take new courage, contribute more liberally, and work more earnestly? If the reports of these circuit lecturers were faithfully made, they would show who our friends are, and giv us, from time to time, an idea of our strength. We would thus, gradually, be laying the foundation of a power which, when required, could be relied upon to offset the power of the church—politically or otherwise.

A part of this system could also be the organization of Young Men's Freethought Associations, and Young People's Freethought clubs, Temperance societies, free reading-rooms, literary clubs, gymnasiums, museums, etc., to supplant similar church organizations, and we would try and make them so attractiv as to force the church from its own ground. Would not such a system be also more satisfactory to our speakers than roaming over the country, from state to state, as they now do, delivering lectures here and there, at long intervals, poorly paid, and giving results that could hardly be called satisfactory to themselvs or to the Union?

Times hav changed. The present generation is not satisfied with the old-time sermon; it demands something abreast of the age; something new; something practical; something to interest. It demands speakers who can awaken thought and spur to action; speakers whose souls occasionally reflect the cheerful side of life; speakers who see something good, and sweet, and joyous in the world, instead of always something bad and gloomy. But a very few preachers fill these demands, and those who do are so well liked they hold one pulpit for life, as Beecher, Spurgeon, and Heber Newton, and are well paid; the rest are sent from pillar to post, because they do not know anything, and nobody wants to listen to them. This statement is not mere assertion; it is a fact well known to every observing person. The church knows it, and is in a quandary; it will not let its preachers think outside of, or beyond, its creed, and it dare not change its creed; yet it wants to hold its congregations. But it cannot do it; its congregations are restless; they are thinking; they are going; Sunday excursions get thousands of them, while the baseball parks and race-courses are getting the rest. Of all times propitious for us, could any be more so than the present? Hav we not men and women equal to the occasion; and would not our cause—the cause of humanity—be more acceptable and more worthy than creeds of churches? We think so. Therefore why not act, and act now? We can act now. No cause has more able lecturers than ours; nor more energetic, self-sacrificing, and aggressiv; nor was an occasion ever riper, or a field more promising, in which to display ability, win renown, and do good.

Some of you may say that this plan has already been adopted by our Union, and that our lecturers hav for years been engaged in organizing local Unions, but that they do not all seem to thrive. In this you are mistaken. Our local-union plan is so unlike the church plan in detail that it can hardly be called similar. One primary difference consists in the strict disciplin which all churches are under to a head; while our Unions seem to yield allegiance to nobody. Each is conducted independent of any central authority, in a go-as-you-please fashion of its own. Some of them liv, and some die. Those that liv hav regular speakers, who hold regular lectures. Those that die hav no regular speakers or lectures. They appoint speakers and essayists from among themselvs for each meeting, and hold free discussions, where every crank is permitted to get up as often as he likes—and he never tires—and bore everybody else. No Union can ever liv that depends on the body of its members for its speakers. They will not all respond; they will not all giv satisfaction; it breeds talk and contention; and after the first enthusiasm or novelty is gone there is a falling off, the Union finally dies, and everybody tells everybody else, "It is no use to try to do anything in B——, because no one will take enough interest in it;" and so what might hav been a living, thriving

*A paper read at the last convention of the Oregon State Secular Union.

Union is dead, because what was everybody's business was nobody's business. Whereas, if one lecturer was stationed in that community and had full charge as a preacher has, being seconded by a committee or trustees, with duties corresponding to church trustees, and who was depended upon to provide regular services or lectures for the people, and the people had nothing to do with it, except to go and listen when they wish to, and chip into the hat when they wish to, then that Union would hav been well patronized, according as the lectures were interesting; and he or she would hav been a very poor Secular lecturer indeed who could not get off something more interesting than comes from nine-tenths of the pulpits.

Other primary differences which go to make church congregations self-supporting while ours are not are readily discernible in the details of their work. They do not succeed over us because the goods they carry in stock are better than ours—our goods are better than theirs;—they succeed better because they hav a more systematic and certain way of delivering their goods. Ours cannot be had except occasionally, when we send out an Ingersoll, a Putnam, a Krekel, or others to deliver them, which is so rare as to interfere with the demand for them.

I venture that if you station any one of our good lecture agents here in Portland and let it be advertised as the church agents are, in six months he will hav a larger trade than half of the orthodox agents put together, and I urge upon you a trial of it at once.

Let such of the Liberals of Portland who will get together, appoint a committee or trustees who will send a call to the lecturer of their choice to fill their pulpit in this city for, say, a year, offering to pay him say $1,200 annually, provided the weekly collections, yearly subscriptions, etc., after paying the hall rent, lights, etc., will come to that. If you do this I hav no doubt whatever you can secure an able speaker who will take his or her chances with you in the venture; in fact, it would be no venture; it would be a success; and if it would be a success here, it would in other places, and in time the whole state would be filled with stationary lecturers and permanent congregations.

KATIE KEHM SMITH.

Port Townsend, Wash., Oct. 1, 1891.

Driven From His Work Because He Is an Infidel.

EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER: I hav but lately come back from Pawnee City, Neb., where I hav been engaged as teacher in the public schools of Pawnee county. I had almost finished a two months' fall term, and was going home for a short vacation before beginning a five months' winter and spring term, when one evening, just before school was out, the board came over to my boarding-place to see me.

One of them, a Mr. Waddell, informed me that he had lately come home from a visit to a brother of his living close to my home in Kansas. "His brother," he said, "had informed him that I was an Infidel, and that I had made several Infidel speeches through the country."

He hoped, however, that there was some mistake and that I was not an Infidel. He farther said that if I would consent to read a chapter in the Bible and offer prayer each morning they would let the matter drop and say no more about it. I quickly informed Mr. Waddell that he was correctly informed. That I had long been an avowed Infidel, and that I would neither make a prayer nor read a chapter in the Bible. Then they tried to argue with me, but when I began to cite contradictions and vulgarities, they quickly concluded I was past redemption, and finally they asked me to resign my position as teacher.

This I consented to do, as I knew that with the entire district against me they could throw such overwhelming opposition in my way that I could never succeed.

However, when I resigned I demanded a statement setting forth the reason I resigned, and they signed the following:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: This is to certify, That F. B. Wheeler resigned his position as teacher in District No. 4, Pawnee Co., Neb., in all friendship and good feeling, our sole objection to him being his religious belief (Infidelity).

Signed by the board, J. W. MOORE, Director. J. T. BROWN, Treasurer. J. M. WADDELL, Moderator.

I never taught or spoke Infidelity in my school, and it was only through the merest accident that they discovered that I was a skeptic.

You can see where the fight is. They do not propose to let a Liberal hold a position of trust or profit. They would ostracise us from society and make us outcasts. If they had the power the Presbyterian churches would to-day burn heretics as they burnt Servetus. If they could but turn back the advancing shadow on the dial of time, they would again imprison the human mind. They would again waste us over slow fires, fill the world with fear, confiscate our property, deny us the right to vote or to testify in a court of justice, and inflict upon us every evil that can be inflicted in this world, and then pray for our eternal damnation in the world to come. Our public schools are now our hope. In them we must teach the coming generation the infamous, blood-stained history of the past. We must teach them the part religion has played to elevate or debase the passions of men. We must teach them the sacrifice men like Bruno, Huss, and Servetus hav made that the chains should be stricken from the intellect of man. We must teach them that science and reason are the only true saviors that will ever come to save a lost and fallen race.

We want to educate men whose vision of intelligence will take in the entire earth and the history, objects, and destiny of its various institutions and races, and who will cull from these institutions the best and noblest of their fruits and create a central generating source of freedom and liberty, for the perpetuity and prosperity of those institutions and the emancipation of the entire earth from the errors of darkness and from the chains of physical and intellectual slavery.

F. B. WHEELER.

Axtell, Kan., Dec. 14, 1891.

"He Builded Better Than He Knew."

Mr. Ingersoll's unique, unpretentious Christmas Sermon has in its results, no doubt, astonished him more than anyone else, seeing that "he builded better than he knew." A cloud not bigger than your hand—a little ripple on an ocean wave—may portend or stand as a pledge of a storm which will rock the ocean from shore to shore. The tempest which his Christmas Sermon produced—not even surmised by him—was immense. Its very simplicity and modesty would exclude the idea that the author had in his mind any thought as to the real extent of the tempest which rocked the old theological ocean of antiquated thought. A pebble in the sling of David did fearful execution—so saith inspired authority. This pebble which Mr. Ingersoll dropped into this stagnant theological ocean stirred it with wild fury. The clerical watchmen, who are the guardians of this theological ocean, were greatly alarmed at this commotion, seeing that they hav an eye on everything which produces a disturbing ripple; and all crafts are strictly watched who venture on this ocean. But this Christmas launch was too much, inasmuch as it caused all of the theological crafts to ship water, which called every man to the pumps and to the guns on every battlement. "To your guns, O Israel! The Philistines be upon thee. Man every gun on the ramparts of Sinai. Load to the muzzle with every deadly missil which theological lore and ingenious cunning hav invented. Ram down a carload of slander, misrepresentations, and lies; a few choice words from brothels; bigotry and superstition, and then cap the climax by filling up every crevice with recently imported brimstone from his Satanic majesty's dominions. Ram all down in a spirit of malice and hate. Fire the fuse and behold the desolation as the smoke clears away." See what fearful execution has been done as a result of these overloaded guns which exploded. The citadel of theological lore is exposed, and its deadly weapons are rendered visible; but these deadly missils refused to leave their nativ soil, so remained within the shattered citadel, exposed to the view of saint and sinner alike. The recently imported brimstone got out of bad company as soon as possible and left. And thus it came to pass that the true inwardness of the policy of Sinai in meeting the rational arguments contained in that Sermon became known to all men that had eyes to see, showing that the methods and policies of the "theological embassadors" 'builded worse than they knew." This beautiful little Christmas Sermon would hav been read by a part of the readers of the Telegram, and would hav been copied into the Freethought papers of the country and a few thousand would hav read it, and these largely in harmony with the views of Mr. Ingersoll. But "Mr. Ingersoll builded better than he knew." Through the malicious attack of the clergy upon it, it became the property of the nation, and many thousands hav had a chance to read him, and did, which had never done so before. Hundreds of thousands hav heard of Mr. Ingersoll in a way they had not before, through this unwitting coöperation of the clergy.

Not only this, but these hundreds of thousands had a chance to compare the words of Mr. Ingersoll with these clerical gentlemen's words, who professedly hold in their hands a commission from the author of the Sermon on the Mount, who authorized them to "go into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature," and also commanded them to overcome evil with good, and to return good for evil. Read the words of hate and slander which characterize many of the clerical criticisms offered—professedly upon the Christmas Sermon, but really the author much more than the Sermon was the object of the criticism. Those gentlemen in their supreme love for Christ lost sight of the love which they ought to cherish for their fellow-men. They forgot to be gentlemen, and could not afford the usual use of words which characterizes gentlemen. Not one word of common decency. Venom, hate, ill feelings, run through most of the criticism. Now for the contrast. How widely different are the words of the author in his replies to his critics! A spirit of kindness and good will, also generous feeling, showing that his manly heart knew no words of hate or unkindness for the foibles of a fellow-pilgrim. He has words sharp and severe for systems of error which hav wronged the race beyond all power to estimate that wrong; but nothing but kindness for the victims of those errors. Which, Mr. Ingersoll or his critics, shows the greatest love for our humanity? It is very clear and well defined in the sayings of Mr. Ingersoll that he would make the world better through kindness, as well as that he would make it easier for his brother man to secure in this life a larger share of happiness.

All will see at once that the author of this Sermon has all the advantage in this controversy. It will also be seen that to assault the man is one thing, and to answer his arguments quite another thing. His critics find it much easier to throw mud and malicious slander at the author than to answer his reasoning. The clergy and the laity are so well drilled on the subject of silence that a great surprise in this case was created when they lost their usual prudence. Silence is the best argument which theology has devised to meet rational criticism. Neglect and silence on the part of the clergy as to all rational criticism of their creeds and doctrins is the only true policy for them to follow. The application of the scientific method to their theology must not for a moment be recognized. Closing of the eyes and silence is their strongest and best possible defense. And it is not often that they lose themselvs and render aid in support of what they fear and condemn, as they hav in this case. So we see that "they builded worse than they knew." There is not in the range of human thought any one thing more profoundly mysterious than fear on the part of the Christian ministry and Christian people at the rustle of a leaf in the camp of heresy. If their scheme is divine and divinity is in it and all around it, what chance is there for the use of hate and ill will toward those who are so unfortunate as to hav no part in this divine scheme, but are the same victims of the divine wrath, and with an endless hell as their doom forever? It would seem, if this is true, that all Christian people should be very kind to these unfortunates. They would hav tears of pity for them and not words of hate, even though those with the decree of an endless hell hanging over them were stubborn and threw bitter words at your creed, which to them seemed so infinitly cruel. The thought of their eternal doom should melt every Christian eye to tears—tears which might ease the throbbing heart and burning brain as the dreadful reality of the doom of the sinner was in thought realized by the Christian devotee. Sad that a Christian minister, or any Christian man or woman, can indulge in a smile when the terrible thought in consciousness demands audience, that in all reasonable forms of thought some of the dear ones whom they love will be doomed to endless tortures, for they must remember that the master has said that "there are but few that are saved."

J. H. BURNHAM.

Mr. Ingersoll's and Mr. Darrow's Errors.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: I hav just skipped over THE TRUTH SEEKER of January 23d. I find the tariff question is still unsettled, and likely will not be for some time to come. When men like Ingersoll are blind enough to fall into a rut scooped out by despotism years ago, it is to be expected that lesser lights will fall into the same rut. I hav hopes of Mr. Ingersoll getting out of the rut, as he is in only to his shoulders and still able to see above it: but there is no hope for A. H. Darrow, who is in the rut above his eyes and can see nothing but the rut before him.

Well did Mr. Ingersoll say in his address to the Unitarian Association, "Men cannot go beyond their experience." Evidently Mr. Ingersoll's experience in economics is very limited; hence his mistakes. Mistakes which he may sooner or later see himself. It is different with Mr. Darrow; he will never see his mistakes, since he is unable to look out of the rut that has engulfed him. He makes statements which hav no foundation in fact, and indulges in assertions the folly of which he himself would hav seen if he was not entirely blind. There is no truth in the statement that farming machinery is dearer in Europe than in America. Neither is there anything in the assertion that Europeans attribute our prosperity to our tariff. As for the assertion that protection cheapens the price of everything we buy abroad, and that our home manufacturers reduce the price of the home-made article below what we could buy it for abroad, they are self-evident absurdities and need no refutation. If the tariff is added to the price of the goods the consumer must pay that tariff in addition to paying for the goods; and if the home manufacturers reduce the price below what the article can be imported for, importation must cease. Such nonsense as Mr. Darrow indulges in ought to be put in the "Children's Corner," and even the children would get disgusted with it.

Judging from Mr. Darrow's article, he has never set foot on foreign soil. Traveling expands the mind, and Mr. Darrow has evidently never traveled. Farming machinery, even that of American manufacture, is much cheaper in Europe than in America; and American consuls who assert the contrary lie for the sake of whitewashing the Republican party. In regard to our prosperity Europeans well know wherein it lies. Our soil is rich and cheap. No country in the world has a greater amount of good soil and a better climate than the United States. Our mines are rich and easily worked, and minerals and metals can be produced much cheaper here than in any other country. We likewise find a forest already grown, and we reap a rich harvest where we did not plant. Besides, this country is still so thinly settled that millions of cattle pasture on Uncle Sam's premises, and cost the owner next to nothing. Compare this with the condition of Europe, where a great deal of the soil is steril; where the mines, having been worked for hundreds of years, are worked with difficulty; where the land is high in price, but mostly poor in quality; add to this a greater population than the country is able to support, and you will easily see why we are prosperous and Europeans poor.

In regard to Mr. Ingersoll's arguments that a protectiv tariff is conduciv to intellectual greatness, I must say that I believed it myself once, but living in Germany in 1849, when the people rebelled on account of the high tariff, besides other grievances, and the tariff was reduced on some things and abolished on others, I hav seen the folly of those arguments.

Saxony produces iron, yet, notwithstanding that there was a duty on iron of $2 per ton, England supplied Saxony with iron. The Saxons rebelled, and the duty on iron was abolished. As predicted by the tariffites, the iron-works shut down. But the owners of the works, who, until then, never had an idea in their lives, began to think. They threw out the old worn-out machinery that allowed them to make a profit under protection, and put in the most improved machinery, and in a year from the time they started up again they employed more hands than they did before and exported iron. And as better wages were paid than before shutting down, it is likely the profits were better likewise. That showed me the folly of protection.

Now let us take a humanitarian view. Does it show honesty on our part if we, who claim that the world is our country, and to do good our religion, deprive a part of the human race of the benefits they might enjoy? Say nothing of the injustice we do to ourselvs. A man who would deprive his fellow-men of the means of making a living, no matter in what part of the world they liv, is a narrow-minded egotist who does not deserve the respect of the public. I know Mr. Ingersoll is far from being narrow-minded, but the economic rut in which he moves will not allow him to see the other side of the question distinctly.

Protection can hav but one effect upon the public. It makes a few millionaires on one side, and countless paupers on the other. It enables the manufacturer to sell his goods at an enormous profit and lay up millions. The wage-worker, on the other hand, is compelled to pay the outrageous profit on the articles he consumes without being indemnified for it, since the price of labor depends upon supply and demand, and not upon the price of the articles manufactured. Unfortunately, the laboring classes seldom see their interest. They waste their opportunities in useless strikes and riots, and, being blind, they kiss the rod that smites them.

ROBERT GUNTHER.

Eureka, Cal., Feb. 25, 1892.

A Glimpse of the Dark Ages.

The eleventh century was marked by the fact that the Prussians were driven into the acceptance of the Christian creed through a bloody war in which Boleslaus, king of Poland, was victorious; after which, by penal laws and brute force, the Prussians were compelled to acknowledge themselvs converted to the Christian faith (Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, page 230); those who would not yield were subjected to various kinds of punishment, and some were put to death.

Sylvester II. called upon Christian princes to commence a "holy war" against "the Infidels;" Gregory VII. gathered an army fifty thousand strong with the same object, but through a quarrel between the emperor of Germany—Henry IV.—and the pope this bloodthirsty plan fell through. During this century, however, several attempts were made to excite the people to arms.

"Every means," says Hallam, "was used to excite an epidemical frenzy, the remission of penance, the dispensation from those practices of self-denial which superstition imposed or suspended at pleasure, the absolution of all sins, and the assurance of eternal felicity. None doubted that such as perished in the war received immediately the reward of martyrdom. False miracles and fanatical prophecies,* which were never so frequent, wrought up the enthusiasm to a still higher pitch. And these devotional feelings, which are usually thwarted and balanced by other passions, fell in with every motiv that could influence the men of that time, with curiosity, restlessness, the love of license, thirst for war, emulation, ambition. Of the princes who assumed the cross, some probably from the beginning speculated upon forming independent establishments in the East. In later periods the temporal benefits of undertaking a crusade undoubtedly blended themselvs with less selfish considerations.

"Men resorted to Palestine, as in modern time they hav gone to the colonies, in order to redeem their time or repair their fortune. Thus Gui de Lusignan, after flying from France for murder, was ultimately raised to the throne of Jerusalem. To the more vulgar class were held out inducements which, though absorbed in the more overruling fanaticism of the first crusade, might be exceedingly efficacious when it began to flag. During the time that a crusader bore the cross, he was free from suit for his debts, and the interest of them was entirely abolished; he was exempted, in some instances at least, from taxes, and placed under the protection of the church, so that he could not be impleaded in any civil court, except on criminal charges or disputes relating to land" (Europe During the Middle Ages, pages 29, 30).

The same writer continues: "None of the sovereigns of Europe took part in the first crusade, but many of their chief vassals, great part of the inferior nobility, and a countless multitude of the common people. The priests left their parishes, and the monks their cells; and though the peasantry were then, in general, bound to the soil, we find no check given to their emigration for this cause. Numbers of women and children swelled the crowd. It appeared a sort of sacrilege to repel anyone from a work which was considered as the manifest design of Providence. But if it were lawful to interpret the will of providence by events, few undertakings hav been more branded by its disapprobation than the crusaders'. So many crimes and so much misery hav seldom been accumulated in so short a space as in the three years of the first expedition. We should be warranted by contemporary writers in stating the loss of the Christians alone, during this period, at nearly a million; but at the least computation it must hav exceeded half that number" (Ibid, page 30).

At Nice the crowd of crusaders numbered seven hundred thousand after the great slaughter in Hungary. Jerusalem was taken A.D. 1099, and it was there "where their triumph was consummated that it was stained with the most atrocious massacre, not limited to the hour of existence, but renewed deliberately even after that famous penitential procession to the holy sepulcher, which might hav calmed their ferocious dispositions if, through the misguided enthusiasm of the enterprise, it had not been rather calculated to excite them" (Ibid, page 31). The first crusade occurred in 1096, and the last in 1270, and it is impossible to calculate the number that must hav perished by the sword during that time.

During the ninth, tenth, and eleventh centuries the state of learning was anything but creditable to the clergy and others in authority. Schools afforded no encouragement to the mass of the people. Indeed, it was a rare thing to find a layman who could write his own name, and quite a remarkable event to discover a man with a little learning. So ignorant were the people that contracts had to be made verbally, few being capable of writing an agreement. In respect to learning the clergy were almost as badly off as the laity. They were steeped in ignorance, which formed a subject of reproach at almost every council.

In the twelfth century the religious wars had not quite terminated, whilst struggles between popes and certain princes respecting certain "rights and privileges" continued as vigorously as ever. Fresh heresies found exponents during this century, and the advocates almost invariably met with one kind of reply—viz., death.

Some were burnt, others crucified, and others maltreated in such a way that death followed as a consequence. Arnold of Brescia, who merely argued that church revenues should be handed over to the state, became so obnoxious to the clergy that they arrested him, crucified him, and burnt his dead body—A.D. 1155—(see Freethinkers' Text-Book, page 466, part I, by Mrs. Annie Besant).

Peter de Bruys, who objected to infant baptism, and may be called the ancestor of the Baptists, was burnt A.D. 1130.

Many other reformers shared the same fate, and one large sect must here be noted.

Peter Waldus, its founder, was a merchant of Lyons, who—A.D. 1160—employed a priest to translate the gospels for him, together with other portions of the Bible. Studying these, he resolved to abandon his business and distribute his wealth among the poor, and in A.D. 1180 he became a public preacher and formed an association to teach the doctrins of the gospel, as he conceived them, against the doctrins of the church. The sect first assumed only the simple name of "the poor men of Lyons," but soon became known as the Waldenses, one of the most powerful and most widely spread sects of the Middle Ages. They were in fact the precursors of the Reformation, and are notable as heretics protesting against the authority of Rome because that authority did not commend itself to their reason; thus they asserted the right of private judgment, and for that assertion they deserve a niche in the great temple of heretic thought; for they were in truth pioneers of liberty and progress.

The thirteenth century saw the erection of the Inquisition in France, and strenuous efforts were made to extirpate heresy in whatever form it made its appearance. The Inquisition spread its influence over Europe, and the Spanish Inquisition carried on the insidious work of torture and bloodshed to such a degree that upon the lowest computation nearly three hundred thousand persons were either burnt alive or suffered torture of the most horrible character.

Add to this list the ruined families some of whose members fell victims to the Inquisition, and then—remembering that Spain was but one of the countries which it desolated—let the student judge of the huge total of human agony caused by this awful institution. Nor must it be forgotten that its dungeons did not gape only for those who opposed the pretensions of Rome; men of science, philosophers, thinkers, and reformers of all kinds were regarded as enemies and treated as such. Llorente givs a list of no less than one hundred and nineteen learned and eminent scientific men who in Spain alone fell under the scourge of the Inquisition (see Histoire Critique de l'Inquisition d'Espagne, t. ii, pp. 417–483).

But do what the religious bigots would, heresy increased and spread. Brave men and women were ever prepared to bear any persecution and punishment in the cause of truth; and though truth was again and again crushed to earth, it rose again with increased force until its ultimate triumph was assured.

ARTHUR B. MOSS.

* Mosheim says that Peter the Hermit carried about with him a letter from heaven, calling on all true Christians to deliver their brethren from the Infidel yoke (Ecclesiastical History, page 231).

Protection or Free Trade.

I desire to make a few observations in regard to D. Webster Groh's article of February 13th, "Does Protection or Free Trade Giv the Most Employment?"

I am aware, however, of the reluctance of the generally biased editor of a Freethought journal to print anything derogatory to the doctrin of free trade, under the erroneous conception that free trade and Freethought are virtually synonymous terms. An advocate of the latter, to be consistent, must necessarily also be an advocate of the former.

A truth seeker, however, should be Liberal enough and generous enough to hear "the other side."

Mr. Groh, a confirmed free trader, in his opinion admits that "a plausible argument in favor of our protectiv tariff is that it givs Americans more employment."

He makes haste, however, to qualify this statement by the further observation "that this is true only in the sense that it necessitates more labor to accomplish the same results."

He has not given a single fact in evidence to prove this latter assertion.

Does he mean to say that in our country more labor—what he calls waste labor—is required to produce a ton of steel rails than in England? If so, I'd like to be further enlightened on this, to him, momentous question.

Is it really true that the American workingman must labor more to accomplish the same results, that he is less expert, less intelligent, less able, physically or mentally, than his foreign brother—that it requires more labor here in America to produce a ton of iron or steel, or any other commodity of which we are large producers under our protectiv system, than in England? And should we therefore be forced to discontinue the production of these articles because there is a certain per cent of so-called American waste labor expended in excess of foreign labor to produce a "certain article?"

What other "certain article" should we substitute for iron, steel, etc., requiring less labor, as an exchangeable equivalent?

Mr. Groh does not specify, but incidentally mentions gold and silver bullion, and calls them commodities, when in fact gold is the only recognized legal international currency used in the liquidation of balances and debts between the nations, and as such is used as money. Why does he hesitate to come straight to the point and suggest agricultural commodities, to produce which there is no waste labor expended, but poorly paid labor employed?

He is probably unwilling to be placed in the awkward dilemma of choosing between bankruptcy and the inevitable metamorphosing of our many and varied industries into a purely agricultural one.

This, in my opinion, would be the inevitable result of a policy of free trade under present conditions, and would naturally hav the effect of reducing remunerativ employment to a minimum.

No. We strenuously object to lower the present condition of our working classes to the peasant life of starving agricultural Russia. Mr. Groh is certainly wrong in supposing that we employ a large amount of unrequited, or waste labor, under our system of protection.

The higher American price of a ton of steel rails does not prove an undue expenditure of American labor or toil. The true answer to the higher American price is found in our higher standard of prices as compared with the foreign low standard.

If we lower our wages interest on capital invested freight-rates, rents, and insurance fifty per cent, to the European level, and stop watering stocks, we may be able to compete with foreign prices, and gradually substitute free trade for protection.

But would it be advisable at present? Would our working classes submit to so great a reduction, and suffer themselvs to be placed on the level of pauper labor; confined to Chinese and Hungarian diet; meat once or twice a week, with rye bread and water for dessert, minus many of the other conveniences and comforts of life which the American workingman enjoys?

Our country absorbs, or uses, more iron, steel, breadstuff, and clothing than any other country in the world. Under protection, America has the monopoly of this great market; under free trade, England would get the most of it.

A good market creates demands for labor and givs employment.

It is true, we may, at a venture, under a depressing system, gamble for the rest of the markets of the world, but one bird in hand is generally worth more than two in the bush; besides, we may, to our sorrows, "kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

Argue to giv up our great home market, just because we are Freethinkers, and should, therefore, be very Liberal in our ideas? No. Follow the lead of our great American Liberal, rather than the teachings of the English Cobdenites.

It is true the fruits of labor—the wages, etc.—are the great incentivs to toil.

Penury is also an incentiv, but a servil and deplorable one.

Mr. Groh's rambling argument about labor-saving machinery is quite irrel vant—not at all pertinent to the issue. He inadvertently puts words in the mouths of protectionists, and from such false premises draws illogical conclusions to suit his own purposes—finally landing protectionists in "darkest barbarism."

He makes other inconsiderate statements that are only partly true, such as: "Imports are purchased with exports," and that "The importation of foreign-made goods does not displace American labor."

He speaks lightly of the exportation of gold and silver, as being only a collateral issue, not at all germane to the real question, as if it did not matter how much goods we import as long as we had a dollar left for exchange.

Nations, like individuals, if they buy more than they sell of perishable goods, will soon hav to mortgage their property. The next step in line will be bankruptcy. As for example: Manufacturing England has mortgaged and owns agricultural Ireland.

Under protection and our higher standard of prices the foreigner pays the bulk of our government taxes; under free trade a direct tax must be wrung from the people. Of the two, the latter alternativ is by far the more obnoxious, and can only with difficulty be collected.

Lowering this standard is more apt to be an injury than a good.

A reduction of duties is an incentiv to increased importations.

The latter, history informs us, is a forerunner of depressions and panics, reducing employment and wages in a proportionate ratio.

To arrive at a logical conclusion on any question, the premises must be true; if either the major or minor proposition of the syllogism be false, there can be no logical demonstration. Mr. Groh has not proved his major premis—that free trade givs the most employment—to be true, and, therefore, has not yet unmasked the "protectionist fallacy."

RICHARD LECHNER.

Sheridan, Pa., Feb. 16, 1892.

For Sale?

AN ARGUMENT AGAINST INGERSOLL.

An argument! An argument!
An argument is found,
Against the mighty Infidel,
That seemeth good and sound.

What am I offered for it—
What will you giv to know
How to get back at Ingersoll
And giv him one good blow?

You preachers often answer him
But never make him budge;
You preach at him and screech at him
And deluge him with fudge;

You cry at him, you lie at him—
Your slanders all are met—
You pray for him, you lay for him,
But never caught him yet.

The grace that makes the foolish wise
Abundantly you claim:
He worries you and flurries you
And trips you just the same.

You bluster up and muster up
To make a bold advance;
Your guns are fired; they make him tired,
And then he makes you dance.

He shows you up; he throws you up,
As he would top a feather;
He seizes you and squeezes you,
And bumps your heads together.

He hasn't time to pick you out
And air you one by one;
He lumps you off, and dumps you off
Until you break and run.

Now, somewhere in his easy warp
There is a flaw, no doubt,
That will not scintillate and shine
The more you pick it out.

On slippery ground he must hav stood
Some time—but when and where?
What will you giv to know the spot?
Just make a bid that's fair.

For sale! For sale! An Argument!
The only one that's known
Against the greatest Infidel
That ever made you groan!

"'Tis not so deep as a well perhaps Nor as a church door wide,"
But good enough for these hard times
And warranted to decide

One point against the giant mind
That makes you seem so small,
And snatch a jewel from the crown
That overshades you all.

Into the scale where, light as air,
You flounder all undone,
This molehill may be placed against
The man who weighs a ton;

And when the telescope of faith
Shall cause it to appear
A mountain, it will answer you
To harp on for a year.

FRANK FELT.

Secularism in Trinidad, West Indies.

It might be of some interest to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER to learn something of the progress of Secularism in these parts.

I am an entire stranger to this country, being a traveling agent, and of course a Freethinker, consequently one of the first things that attracted my attention was the number of Secularists and Freethinkers there are. I hav visited nearly all of the other West Indian islands and British Guiana, and hav occasionally come across a Freethinker, and therefore I never expected to meet so many here; but what a surprise, when taking an evening walk, to hear, being discussed freely about the city, Freethought subjects. In the daytime one is again regaled with such discussions, but this time in the various artisan establishments of the city. The artisans constitute a vast majority of the Freethinkers, and they all seem to be a happy and contented lot, far superior in intelligence to their Christian brothers. The manner in which the people handle Freethought subjects is something far above my comprehension, but when I again take a serious view of it, I am led to the conclusion that it is the freedom of thought which has made them so intelligent. Freethought here, Freethought there, and Freethought everywhere. I am sure the various Christian sects will soon hav to look more seriously to themselvs or else Freethought, as it surely will eventually, will uncamp them.

I noticed that the propaganda work is carried on by the free distribution of Freethought literature, printed locally, and also imported, both from England and the United States.

In my wanderings I inquired, as I wanted to get acquainted with him, for the leader of the Freethought movement, and when introduced to him at a fashionable hotel I would scarce believe my eyes. I expected to meet a man ripe in age—I meet a youth not yet out of his teens, but for whom, if he adheres to Freethought, I predict a brilliant career, one destined to be an honor to it.

I see a young man before me whose age is about twenty-four, and he is introduced to me as Mr. E. dos Santos. From him I got a great deal of information with regard to the movement here, and he informed me that it was his intention to, at no distant date, take to lecturing. He is a brilliant conversationalist and a good speaker, and no doubt will make a good lecturer. The Freethinkers of Trinidad ought to be proud to hav such a leader. His family are all Freethinkers. His brother, J. dos Santos, is a stanch supporter of the movement; being a man of means, he is capable of doing a lot to advance the cause. Other stanch supporters are Chas. A. Meltz, the genial and happy Atheistic jeweler, and his neighbor, also a jeweler, C. L. David. Edgar Maresse-Smith, the president of the branch of the National Secular Society, is a lawyer, and by his position and ability is fully entitled to it. Mr. Smith is quite a young man, and I had the pleasure of hearing him in the courts of law recently. He is a good argumentator, and a brilliant and fluent speaker. If he follows the path in which he has hitherto traveled, he is sure to occupy a high position at the bar.

Philip St. Laurent, the indefatigable coachmaker and Atheist, is another proof of the movement. He employs about fifteen hands in his carriage factory, who are all Freethinkers. Jos. Creteau, S. A. Roach, and Philip A. Paul are others who hav the movement dear at heart, as also A. Spooner, a bookseller, who should be induced to add to his stock Freethought works.

The other sex are represented by Mrs. E. Maresse-Paul, a lady of high literary attainments, and no mean writer, who has from time to time pitched boldly into the clergy. I hav seen some of her writings, and can only say that the Freethinkers of Trinidad ought to be proud of her.

Judging from what I hav seen and heard, there ought to be about three hundred Freethinkers in the city. It is indeed refreshing to find Freethought in such far-off places, and I predict that before another decade the majority of the civilized portion of the globe will be Secularists.

On the 29th of January, 1892, about twenty representativ Freethinkers met at Mr. Charles A. Meltz's place, at his invitation, to partake of the good things which had been provided by him. It was the first time the Freethinkers in Trinidad commemorated the birthday of Thomas Paine, and I sincerely trust that they will celebrate many more such anniversaries. It was thought fit to resuscitate the branch of the National Secular Society, and accordingly E. Maresse-Smith was elected president, S. A. Roach vice-president, E. dos Santos honorary secretary, and Charles A. Meltz honorary treasurer.

I wish the branch all success, and hope when I return to find that by their work they hav doubled the number of Secularists in Trinidad.

J. F. A. BROWNE.

He Is Poor Pay.

Who givs to the poor but lends to the Lord,
Is a text to ourselvs we daily do say;
By the sums that we dole, our friends might conclude
That the Lord was to us but very slow pay.

Letters of Friends.

Recommended by a Good Man.

GILMORE, IND. TERR., Jan. 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Send me THE TRUTH SEEKER four months. I hav known the paper for several years, and think it quite interesting. Any intelligent person that will read THE TRUTH SEEKER will become a skeptic. THE TRUTH SEEKER was first introduced to me by Dr. W. R. Bachelor, of Pauline, Ark., who has the honor of being one of the best-read men in the state, and one of the most moral. Anything that Dr. Bachelor would introduce is worth reading. ETTIE MCDONALD.

Weight of Woman's Brain.

ORANGE CITY, IA., Feb. 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I took the following from a foreign religious newspaper, verily a kernel of grain from amongst a mountain of chaff:

L. Bischoff, professor of physiology, died recently at Munich, Bavaria. He always maintained and defended the opinion that woman is intellectually inferior to man. He based this on the by him observed fact "that a man's brain weighs 1,350 grams and a woman's only 1,250."

Weighing the dead professor's brain proved it to be net—1,245 grams.

Comment is unnecessary.

DE LESPINASSE.

Appeal to Libertarians.

COLUMBUS, KAN., Feb. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: "Rouse, ye Romans!" "Guards, up and at them!" "Why stand we here idle? Shall we lie supinely on our backs hugging the delusiv phantom of hope till our enemies hav bound us hand and foot?"

What enemies? Those who want to close the World's Fair on Sunday. It is vastly important that they fail in their unmanly and desperate efforts. Everyone that can, circulate the petition, and write a letter to your member of Congress and Senator. Let all others subscribe to the letters: "We the undersigned emphatically indorse and confirm the above letter," or in some other words. J. H. COOK.

Can Anyone Oblige?

WOODVILLE, ORE., Feb. 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I thought perhaps you might hav "Parson Brownlow;" anyway, perhaps you will remember that during the war some one, I hav forgotten whom, asked him when he was going to turn over to the Democracy. I remember part of his reply, but I want it full and complete, just as he gave the answer. It runs something like this: "When the sun shines at midnight, the moon and stars at midday; when there are no sects in churches, or fleas in hogpens; . . . when Democrats lose their inclination to steal; when good men cease to go to heaven and bad men to hell; when the world is turned upside down," etc. That is some of it, though a little mixed. I am sure you can giv it to me in full. If so, I will be very grateful.

Yours truly, THOS. H. B. TAYLOR.

A Naval Inquiry.

GRAFTON, N. D., Feb. 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to beg space in the best paper in the land for a few lines, as I never see any correspondence from this part of the country. There are a considerable amount of Liberal-minded people, but a good many of them go to church, it seems, for the sake of being "popular." Some time ago we were visited by a Methodist revivalist, and the obscene language which he so freely indulged in while in the pulpit was simply infamous. One of our newspapers published a part of one of his sermons, with the result that several persons stopped their subscriptions.

Would somebody, through the columns of this paper, giv some light in regard to the dimensions of Noah's ark, according to our system of measures?

With wishes of a prosperous future for THE TRUTH SEEKER, I remain,

Very truly yours, P. A. L.

That Provision to Allow Sinning.

INDIAN GROVE, MO., Feb. 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: For the inclosed draft please send THE TRUTH SEEKER one year to our friend O. N. Ashley. Mr. Ashley is a young man belonging to a respectable orthodox family, who has never in any way become identified with the church. It seems that his cool deliberation and common sense hav proved an efficient safeguard against the infectious religious fanaticism so characteristic of the revival meetings that during the autumn and winter months stir up such great excitement among the true believers, on account of the sins they find it so convenient to hav transferred from their own calendar of crime to the voluminous account of one J. Christ, who graciously answers the demands of justice in their behalf by referring the father to a few drops of his coagulated blood shed on Calvary nearly one thousand nine hundred years ago, to the end that the guilty for all time to come by this provision might go free. Yours truly, W. E. WALTON.

Instructiv Letter on Evolution.

LESLIE, MICH., Feb. 23, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The question is often asked, What do H. Haynes and wife believe in? Well, we can answer that question very easily. We not only believe, but we know, that evolution is the only truth. And the most intelligent clergy admit it to-day; but there are thousands that will preach against it as long as they can make money out of it. We hav positiv proof. Look at the fire that is thrown out of the bowels of the earth every day, that proves that the planet was once a ball of fire. And that is not all—how do you account for the coal you burn? That is proof of the changes. And the changes are going on all the time. The clergy hav a great deal to say about how long it took to make this world. Well, it is not made yet—only changing all the time. The clergy are telling the young people they must not study evolution. They are afraid of it. But I want to say to these gentlemen that they hav only a few years longer before science will tip their whole scheme overboard.

Yours for truth, H. HAYNES.

A Glut of Cheap Gospel Goods.

MONTE VISTA, COL., Feb. 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Editor of the best truth finder for the most truth seekers in this or any other country that I know of: It is not very often that I see any marked progress of Liberalism in this part of our vineyard. And I do not think anyone could, and be honest about it, when a place like Monte Vista, only eight years old, having a population of about eight hundred, can support six church organizations. Four of these hav their shops up and in running order, and are manufacturing lots of cheap gospel goods every Sunday. And the Liberals are so few, and so poor and indifferent or vapid, that we cannot hav a Liberal lecture more than once in a lifetime.

But I was going to tell you that the first Sunday in January, 1892, a few of our best Liberals met for the purpose of organizing some kind of a society wherein everybody would hav the privilege to express their honest opinions on any and all subjects. And we did organize a society called the Monte Vista Philosophical and Social Society, "to meet every Sunday at 2 o'clock P.M. in their hall; the public cordially invited.—W. S. Felt, Sec."

ANDREW MANSON.

A Superb Lecture.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 19, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: On Tuesday evening the great champion of Freethought gave his lecture, "Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child," in Case Hall. The crowd was so great that hundreds could not gain admittance. Colonel Ingersoll spoke without notes, walking up and down the little space on the platform not occupied with seats, speaking in his own inimitable manner, and for two hours eloquence and sparkling wit brought forth roars of laughter. The colonel closed his lecture with an eloquent peroration consisting of an apostrophe to liberty. Four hundred copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER and about one hundred Boston Investigators were given away at the door in hope that of the good seed thus sown broadcast some might fall in congenial soil to the benefit and profit of those noble champions of Freethought, THE TRUTH SEEKER and the Boston Investigator.

Talmage gave a lecture the following evening entitled, "Good Cheer," read from notes and in a school-boy, sing-song way, which did not suit a Cleveland audience, and instead of being elated with the science of good cheer as promulgated by your Brooklyn acrobat, everybody seemed to hav got a very large dose of the dumps. JAMES HENDERSON.

On Pious Rogues.

NEW KIOWA, KAN., Feb. 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please inform me when my subscription expires, as I am very anxious for every copy of the paper and should dislike to miss a single issue.

It might amuse you to learn the spiritual condition of these people. Last September a certain form of Methodism called "holiness" shook the community. Some claimed they had always had it; others, even including a Congregationalist minister, rejoiced in a new and blessed experience; and all claimed to rejoice in something. But when it came to gathering the jewels into the different folds, then the tug of war commenced, and it is not ended yet; it probably will end only with the extinction of one or the other.

After a while the Episcopalian church came along, and with it also came all the apostolic unction which it alone possesses. It also furnished a far-off kind of religion which allowed certain sorts of violators of law to enrich themselvs so long as they enriched the church. It would hav pleased you to see those who are daily violating the usury laws of the state, those who are aiding and abetting the violators of the Prohibitory law, and those who, their employees say, hired them to steal hundreds of tons of barbed wire out of the Cherokee Strip—all of them occupying the front seats, and when the time came singing "Amen." Yours for mental liberty,

Z. A. GLEASON.

The Bible Enough For One With Good Intentions.

MERCED, Jan. 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find subscription to the dear TRUTH SEEKER. I value it as I would an old and dear friend. Its weekly visits hav been a source of pleasure as well as of information on all subjects to me and some of my friends. I hav had several visits from Christians urging me to attend church, each of a different denomination. One lady examined my library, read a few sentences in Holbach's "System of Nature," and asked if that was the kind of books I read. I told her it was, and many more of the same class of scientific works which are of value to anyone who wishes to learn something of nature. She remarked that the Bible was good enough for her or anybody else who has any good intentions. I told her: "My conduct will compare well with yours or that of any other superstitious believer in an imaginary God or devil." She was terribly shocked, and jumped up and told her daughter who was with her: "Come and let's get out of this Infidel's house, for I love the Lord and can't bear to hear anyone speak against him. I intended to ask you to come to the church and play the organ for us, but now I don't wish to giv you the position." I said: "Injustice is what I always expect to get from Christians. So good-bye."

Heston's last picture is fine. Success to THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MRS. E. M. HANNSON.

From Amidst the Psalm-Singers.

AUBURN, CAL., Jan. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As this is my first attempt to write to a Freethought journal, I hardly know how to begin. I can say that THE TRUTH SEEKER is a most welcome friend in my household, especially for me. And I can farther say that I hav all the orthodox superstition taken out of my nature, and THE TRUTH SEEKER has helped do it. I am living in a community of psalm-singers, with a few Liberal-minded men, but they are afraid to speak their sentiments, owing to their business relations. But I hardly ever go in Auburn without a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER or some other good work, and you can imagin how I get on, for I am outspoken, and will tackle anybody that opposes what I believe is right and just.

Inclosed please find a subscription for THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year to a new subscriber. When I write again I shall want a copy of the Bible Picture Book.

THE TRUTH SEEKER goes the rounds. I keep it moving on. In other words, I am doing a missionary work with THE TRUTH SEEKER and Independent Pulpit. I think we can get you one or two more subscriptions for your paper. Keep the ball moving.

I forgot one or two little items. One is, giv my regards to Watson Heston and John Peck. Mr. John Peck livs in the town I was born in, viz., Naples. I was born and got most of my Sunday-school superstition in Naples, Ontario co., N. Y., in the year 1831. I like to read Mr. Peck's articles, for our ideas are the same.

Yours for truth and justice,

O. D. STORRS.

A Gifted Lecturess.

CARTHAGE, MO., Feb. 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, of Kansas City, Mo., has just concluded the delivery of five Freethought lectures in the Grand Opera House in this city. The subjects of discourse were: "Evolution of Thought and Progress of Ideas," "Evolution of Morals," "Christian Civilization or Civil Christianity, Which?" "The Church and Religion of the Future," "What Is Secularism? Its Aims and Objects." Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, the house, from the first, was well filled with an attentiv audience, whose numbers, as well as interest in the questions discussed, increased with each succeeding lecture, until at the last one the new and capacious opera house was filled to its utmost capacity. It must be said that the lecturess is a veritable living, breathing encyclopedia of literary, historic, and scientific knowledge, imparting it with the consummate tact of an experienced instructor, and with an easy and natural grace, both of gesture and manner, that so materially assists in the electrifying of an audience. Her line of thought is sequent and logical; she never fails in making telling points; her enunciation is remarkably distinct, and her voice is audible to the extent of making herself understood in the remotest parts of the hall. Her lectures will hav a salutary effect in every community where she may speak, and while inciting to thought and study which is necessary to mental as well as material progress, the substance of them will, as I hope, never be effaced from the minds of her thoughtful hearers.

REUBEN ROESSLER.

Business Notice—Bankruptcy and Assignment of Sins to Jesus.

Feb. 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Several weeks ago the piously inclined of the little hamlet of Middlefield, N. Y., conceived the idea of holding a series of revival meetings for the purpose of bringing into the fold the lost sheep of the surrounding country, in season for shearing. Accordingly the leaders in such matters borrowed a gospel-stuffer from the Baptist Association, and the work of converting rational beings into insane dupes began. At first it looked as if their efforts would not be crowned with success, but this was only the calm that precedes the storm of emotional insanity that is sure to strike a revival meeting in a way-back country town. Soon that element that is not blessed with very strong minds began to show emotional signs. Then the rapid workings of the gospel-stuffer so enthused several of that class who make a regular business of getting saved at every revival meeting they attend, that they arose, and staggering forward to the anxious seat with their burdens of sin dumped the whole business on Jesus. At this point in the proceedings a tall, heavy individual from the Quaker City stole to the organ, and caressing the keys with a gentle touch lifted up his voice, and the mellow notes of "Jesus paid it all, all the debt I owe," floated down the aisle and out in the stilly night.

The meetings hav continued up to date with fair success as to numbers, but those sheep that carry the large fine fleeces are still out on the mountain wild and bare. This is very much deplored by the piously inclined, for do not the clergy rant their insane vaporings for revenue only? When they draw the net it is not the little bull-heads that are wanted, but the large, plump, and succulent suckers.

AN EYE-WITNESS.

Pious Women, Catholicism, Parochial Schools.

ROCHESTER, MINN., Feb. 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to thank A. B. Bradford for his long "unimportant" letter. It is just such a clean-cut criticism as ought to be applied to every church stickler. People are so hypnotized to hav a "Christian" tag attached to them, that it is about time they were shown how "profane" it looks to others who consider reason and common sense superior to any commands of a "Master." Is it not about time that women ceased to call any man, Master? I think so. Much better results for humanity would follow if Ingersoll's axiom were substituted: "I care not so much for the freedom of religion, as I do for the religion of freedom." Let churchianity die a natural death; freedom will giv us something much more humane and just—and not any God "in it." When you get a God outside of humanity he does not amount to much, and I freely admit a woman God would be no improvement!

I send you a clipping from our paper to show how silently the parochial sisters wedge into our public schools. Voters, what are you about that you do not awake to the great danger of Catholicism? All Catholics are sworn servants of the pope and cannot be loyal to any other government. What is the press of our country doing to enlighten the people on this question? Absolutely nothing. THE TRUTH SEEKER has carried on the fight almost alone. Hudson Tuttle wrote a romance, founded upon fact, for the Progressiv Thinker recently, and "The Convent of the Sacred Heart" brought to light so many truths that he received a warning letter to desist. It was signed by a death's-head and cross-bones. What means it that all these horrible facts are hidden from public notice? Should not all nunneries be subject to public inspection the same as jails or asylums? They do not differ, in reality, as I can see.

Let theologists differ and fight, howl and screech,
We must hav liberty of mind and speech;
But be governed by reason, and honesty teach,
Till freedom's banner waves over each.

FLORA W. FOX.

STILLWATER, MINN., Feb. 2.—The mixing of the pupils and instructors of the public and parochial schools was begun under the orders of the board of education to-day with considerable excitement. The exchanges were made between what is known as the Hill Parochial and the Central public schools. Sister Hyacinth took her place in the Central school and Miss O'Brien at the Hill school. No serious trouble has occurred, but many parents will not allow their children to attend school as long as Sisters of Charity are employed as teachers. An injunction will probably be served within the next twenty-four hours, and the matter pushed through to the supreme court with all possible speed.

The Lottery Question.

PINEVILLE, KY., Feb. 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Since the recent decision in the United States Supreme Courts in a lottery case bearing on the Louisiana State Lottery, the press of the country has had a great deal to say. Most of the papers approve of the prohibition of lottery advertisements and lottery business being carried on through the United States mails. It will be remembered that nearly all the press of the country are somewhat biased toward the Christian religion and the Bible. Then in order to make laws governing the lottery business they should hav consulted their Bible. How strange it is that so many believe in the Bible teachings yet are not willing to liv by them, knowing too that damnation must follow disobedience. Well, let us hear what the Bible says about lottery. "Lot causeth contentions to cease, and parteth between the mighty" (Prov. xviii, 18). Let it be remembered that this is the writing of the wisest man that ever lived or that ever shall liv.

We see that lots were cast among the Hebrews in many places of scripture. For example: God commanded that lots should be cast upon the two goats which were offered for the sins of the people, upon the solemn day of expiation, to know which of the two should be sacrificed and which set free (see Lev. xvi, 8–10). He required also that the land of promis should be divided by lot as soon as it was conquered, which command Joshua accordingly executed (Num. xxvi, 55, 56; xxxiii, 54; xxxiv, 13, etc.; Josh. xiv and xvi). When people employ a medical adviser they should follow his advice. If they hav a spiritual adviser ought they to follow his advice? Then how shall we account for the Christian press denouncing the lotteries of the country? If the Louisiana Lottery had given to the churches a percentage of its receipts, we would not hav heard that anything was wrong with the lottery business. Ah, we would hav heard the texts referred to above quoted as approving it. Do they not hav church fairs in which lotteries are carried on without the least hint of wrong in them? Can Christians account for the righteousness of the Bible lottery and in the same breath denounce the Louisiana Lottery? I do not wish to be understood as approving the lottery business, but I think that Christians should consult their spiritual adviser when calling on lawmakers. This nation may bring down the wrath of the Lord upon them by denouncing that which the Lord has in days past approved of. And he is an unchangeable God. S. P. HERRON.

P.S.—I send $5 order for my renewal and one new subscriber. Success to your noble paper. I hav the promis of more subscribers in the near future. S. P. H.

Hav a Monkey-Show of Preachers at the Fair.

CRESCO, IA., Jan. 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: A local paper publishes a hint to the effect that all "prominent divines" should meet and preach at Chicago during the Fair period, assuring its readers that this would be of "great moral benefit."

Holy smoke! Wouldn't a public exhibition of a herd of gospel galoots be as "prominent" a feature for the credulous as would be a monkey show for the average boy? But I cannot see how the former show could by any possibility be more beneficial to morality than the latter. I am unable to comprehend how the chinmusic of the peddlers of a book which contains so much obscenity and untruth could by any means be of "great moral benefit" to really enlightened beings in the closing decade of this nineteenth century.

Perhaps the writer of that article insinuates that the "eminent" Bible fakirs should exhibit themselvs in bulk as a disgusting example, as an abomination which is the fruit of centuries of just such work as they are expected to perform if rounded up in 1893.

Well, if the Fair could not be kept open on all days of its duration without this proposed gospel attachment, then I hope the pious and hypocritical pickpockets will put in an appearance and either bring with them the old Jewish Jehovah for a wrestling bout with some nocturnal Jacob, or trot out his (Jehovah's) modern successor, who is described as something which has neither body, parts, or passions, and is incomprehensible. I am inclined to take things as did the man who said that he preferred a swim in a big pond which happened to contain a few little polliwogs to no swim at all. And if the recent suggestion in THE TRUTH SEEKER should materialize, we would hav "Pope Ingersoll" in the pond as big whale to devour the mentally diminutiv Jonahs in case they possessed the courage, or rather foolhardiness, to venture into deep water (debate). The diet might prove a trifle nauseating for the big whale, but I opine that he would not be apt to disgorge the beggarly Jonahs in as good a condition as did the big fish in the old Jew fable.

In the course of a conversation I asked a modern Christ-eater—a very knowing (?) man spiritually—what was the fate of the legion of devils after the swine in which they had been stowed away had been drowned. He advised me to go to the infernal regions and find out. I agreed to make the trip if possible, on condition that he point out the road leading there, telling him that that particular road is not to be found on any map I had ever seen. He then informed me that evidently his great Bugaboo had made a deplorable mistake in creating me. I praised him for his frankness in admitting that his notorious man-maker and man-destroyer was also a great blunderer. This God-image referred to a Jew near by as a Christ-killer, when I replied that in accordance with that expression all Christians must be Christ-eaters—à la Lord's supper.

He then got mad and decamped.

Best wishes for Mr. Heston as the champion picture-maker, and to you as the Editor of the best paper known to me.

F. L. DAUBERSMITH.

Is Particular About Saviors.

ALBION, MICH., Feb. 19, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been a constant reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for nearly twelv years, and hav always read the "Letters from Friends" with much interest; and as almost every imaginable subject has been treated upon, by the many different writers, but little chance is left for me to express any particular new ideas. But an idea has suggested itself to me, and I thought I would pen a few lines upon the subject of an infant redeemer. Now, when I was a boy and used to go to meetings (we did not call it church in those days), the congregation would all rise and sing a song about our infant redeemer, and of course I joined in with the rest. But the thought has since suggested itself to me of the supreme ridiculousness of intelligent men and women, educated ministers, professors of colleges, and teachers in institutions of learning singing praises to and worshiping an infant redeemer, a baby savior. Why, Mr. Editor, it seems to me that if such men as yourself, John Peck, Heston, and myself, and other Infidels that I might mention, need any savior at all, he should be full-grown, broad-shouldered, and stalwart. No baby savior for us. Infant saviors might do for infants and small children. But as the idea of infant damnation or children being lost is nearly or quite abandoned and given up by everybody, they of course need no savior. Now, I am very fond of children and I like babies in their places. I like their music. I am delighted with their squalls, and I like their baby ways. But the idea of a baby savior! Oh, whew! not any in mine!

Yours in search of truth,
W. BIDWELL.

Mr. Charlesworth and the Kent Secular Society.

KENT, O., March 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 5th, Brother Charlesworth reports the story of his failure to draw larger houses here in Kent at our meetings given under the control of our executiv committee on January 25th. He asks, What is the cause of this? And in answering his question misrepresents the management and puts all the blame upon the board of control. He announces that our society is called the Portage County Science Institute, and then proceeds to lecture us on the folly of having such a name—"utterly incapable of exciting interest among the people." But who gave us the name? Surely no one except Brother Charlesworth. I never heard of it before. Perhaps he found it used as a title of one of our posters. Yes, there he must hav found it, for we announced our last meetings under that title. In like manner we had previously advertised other meetings entitled "Library Benefit." What would our brother hav thought of Miss Campbell, whose coming here was thus announced, had she reported in THE TRUTH SEEKER that our society was called "Library Benefit," and then occupied valuable space to lecture us for it? Would he not hav thought her verdant? Plainly, Brother Charlesworth, like the Irishman in the story, has mistaken one of our guideboards for our tombstone. Again, our brother is troubled because his name was perverted into Professor Charlesworth. I confess that I am to blame for that slip, but as he had repeatedly "esquired" me, so I "professored" him, not dreaming that so small a thing could rankle in the bosom of either. Surely, if lecturers are "knocked out" by such trifles, I do not wonder that the officers of the American Secular Union hav had, and are having, a hard row to hoe to please them. Brother Charlesworth reports that fewer people attended the second session than the first, which is a mistake. Evidently our brother was depressed, for I can scarcely believe that it was his intention to make a bad showing worse.

The truth is, as found by actual count and taken down in my diary on the spot, the following figures: First audience numbered just thirty persons—collection, $2.72; second audience numbered fifty—collection, $3.43. But I may add that of the thirty who were present at the first session only ten returned to hear Brother Charlesworth in the evening, although the roads and weather were most propitious.

Who is to blame if the speaker fails to keep his audiences? Acting as a mediator between the will of our brother and the will of the ex-committee, I told Brother Charlesworth why the committee had selected his lecture on the "Philosophy of Secularism" rather than his lecture "Why I Do Not Believe in God" for the opening session's discussion; yet in the face of this Brother Charlesworth, while ostensibly delivering the former lecture, created the impression that he was really delivering the latter. If he was himself thus sailing under false colors, what shall we say of his advice to others to be "frank, honest, open, and free?"

If he did substitute one lecture for the other, wholly or in part, then why blame the management for the consequences of his own act?

Would it not hav been more just to hav asked himself, "Hav I not contributed to the alienation of my hearers?"

Like Brother Charlesworth, I, too, disagreed with the management in its policy of concealment, but I was outvoted. As it was only a question of methods, I yielded rather than cavil over details that time would soon settle.

In the past I, too, hav been just as anxious to tell the people why I did not believe in God.

I found that people preferred to hear what I knew rather than what I believed. But after all, perhaps, if Brother Charlesworth had devoted a long life to the study of astronomy he might agree with Herschel in tracing an intelligent governing power in the manifestations of the universe, or if he knew more of geology he might agree with Sir Charles Lyell, who said: "But in whatever direction we pursue our researches, whether in time or space, we discover everywhere the clear proofs of a creativ intelligence, and of his foresight, wisdom, and power" (Principles of Geology, vol. II, p. 620).

Of course I regret Brother Charlesworth's failure to hold his Kent audiences against dwindling as much as he does, for those whom he alienated, most of all, ought to hav heard his masterly exposé of the flaws in the Christian's code of ethics. Charlesworth again complains because the title of his subject, "Philosophy of Secularism," was changed to read, "The Science of Human Cultivation." Carping personified! Pity for his fine faultfinding! We were only trying to relieve his title of its sectarian smack in making the change complained of. To many, the term "Philosophy of Secularism" has become as sectarian as "the philosophy of Methodism." Looked at in that light the "shame" is in the carping and not in his title.

In conclusion I hope Brother Charlesworth will pardon me if I suggest that in the future when he thinks that he sees a mote in his brother's eye, he should first be sure there is no beam in his. Then, having a clear vision, he will be less likely to see molehills distorted into mountains to perplex his judgment.

Fraternally yours, M. H. HEIGHTON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

A Complaint.

I think it really mean—don't you?—
To leave us nothing at all to do!
In a world all made to order so
A modern boy has no earthly show.
Columbus sailed across the sea,
Which might hav been done by you or me,
And now they call him great and wise,
They praise his genius and enterprise,
Although when he found our nativ land
He took it for India's coral strand!

There's Newton, too, saw an apple fall
Down from the branch and that was all—
Yet they talk of his great imagination
And say he discovered gravitation.
Goodness me!—why, I could hav told
Him all about it; at ten years old
I knew why things fell, and I studied the rule
For "falling bodies," in grammar school!
There's noble George, who wouldn't lie—
Perhaps he couldn't. He didn't try.
But if I should cut down a cherry-tree
My father would only laugh at me.

Benjamin Franklin—what did he do?
Flew a big kite; on Sunday, too,
Standing out in a heavy shower
Getting soaked for half an hour,
Fishing for lightning with a string
To see if he couldn't bottle the thing.
Suppose I should fly my kite in the rain?
People would say that I wasn't sane.
Why should there such a difference be Between Ben Franklin, Esq., and me?

I can see steam move a kettle lid
Quite as well as James Watt did,
And I can explain about engins, too,
Bigger and better than Watt ever knew;
But somehow he took all the praise,
And I'm neglected nowadays.
Then there's Napoleon First of France—
Suppose that we had had his chance,
No doubt we'd hav been emperors, too;
But we'd hav conquered at Waterloo.
I wouldn't hav had old Grouchy make
Such a stupid and grave mistake;
I should hav sent him the proper way
To arrive in time to save the day!

Still, what makes me feel the worst
Is Adam's renown for being first.
That was easy enough, you know;
It was just a thing that happened so.
And my sisters say, "If it had been me,
I wouldn't hav touched the apple-tree."
That's so. If she sees a snake to-day,
She givs a scream and she scoots away.

To write such things as Shakspere's plays
Was not so hard in Queen Bess's days;
But now, when everythiug has been done,
I cannot think of a single one
To bring a boy to wealth and fame.
It's a regular downright burning shame!

P.S.—When it's fine, I shall play baseball;
For you know it would never do at all
To forget about "Jack" who becomes, they say,
A very dull boy without plenty of play.
But wait!—when a rainy Saturday comes,
As soon as I've finished Monday's sums,
I'm going to build a great flying machine
That will make T. Edison look pea-green!

—Tudor Jenks in December St. Nicholas.

Biographical Sketches.

X.—TENNYSON.

Alfred Tennyson was born in the year 1809 at Somersby, Lincolnshire. His father was a rector of that parish. He was the third of a large family, several of whom shared with him the literary honors. Like Mrs. Hemans, Tennyson wrote poetry while he was still very young, though there is a vast difference between his and Mrs. Hemans's poetry. In the year 1827, Tennyson, with the help of his brother Charles, issued a small volume entitled "Poems, by Two Brothers," which is now out of print. He went to Trinity College, Cambridge, to finish his education. He gained a prize for a blank verse entitled "Timbuctoo," in which was oberved for the first time some impress of his peculiar genius. His literary career, however, dates from 1830, in which year he had published "Poems, Chiefly Lyrical, by Alfred Tennyson." These poems were not received by the public with much display of enthusiasm, but while some poems seemed weak and immature, others announced in no indistinct manner the genius of a true poet. In the notice of the book by Professor Wilson, in Blackwood's Magazine, the promis of the young writer was recognized in sufficiently express terms. The praise was, however, not entirely free from censure, to which Tennyson replied in later poems, "Crusty Christopher," published in 1833. In 1847 appeared one of his most popular poems, "The Princess, a Medley." This poem consists of a prolog, a story, and an epilog. The prolog is an idyl of modern life. It describes a rustic fête in Vivian park with college friends picnicking in the ruins of the abbey. Lilia Vivian, "a woman yet in girlhood," who championed the cause of woman's rights, cried,

Oh, I wish
That I were some great princess; I would build,
Far off from men, a college like a man;

and, as one of the "seven" said,

With prudes for proctors, dowagers for deans,
And sweet girl graduates with golden hair.

At last, for the sake of a diversion, some one suggested that a story should be told, and that each of the seven students should narrate a chapter of it. Then the story of "The Princess" was told. Each narrator in turn is the prince, betrothed in boyhood to a princess, who, however, according to Lilia's fancy, renounces men, founds a college, and death to the man who enters! But the prince and his two friends dress as women and register their names as students. They are discovered by the "dowager deans," who, however, in pity for the princess, refrain from reporting them. But their own imprudence "givs them away" at a feast, and a disorderly retreat follows, during which the princess throws herself into the river and the prince rescues her. Meanwhile the prince's father comes with a large army to claim his son and bride. Some time after that the brother of the princess and the prince hav a tournament, in which the princess's brother wounds the prince, and the latter is carried into the college. During his sickness the princess begins to think that men are not so bad after all, and this one in particular. The story ends just as the students, or rather Tennyson, evidently intended that it should. The epilog is merely a renewed meeting between the students.

In 1855 appeared "Maud, and Other Poems." "Maud" is written upon the Socialistic questions that were being agitated at that time, as "Locksley Hall" in that sense might be used as a prelude. This poem belongs to the practical part of life, and tells of the orphan-nephew becoming engaged to his cousin, the heiress of the estate. She jilts him, and he, in his despairing rage, rebels against the whole constitution of things.

O, my cousin, shallow-hearted! oh, my Amy, mine no more.
Oh, the dreary, dreary moorland! Oh, the barren, barren shore.

He then absurdly contemplates going east, and taking a savage woman for his wife. But upon after-consideration he reflects that after all, because he has been disappointed in love that is no reason why the world should come to an end, so he exclaims in the bitterness of his despair—

Overliv it—lower yet—be happy! wherefore should I care?
I must mix myself with action, lest I wither with despair.

"Maud" is written in something of the same strain. I could not begin to tell you of all the poems that Tennyson wrote, as it would consume so much valuable space. And then, there is so much I do not understand, and so much that I do not like, that I can only giv you a little sketch of the most popular of his poems, and not as much as I would like to. Of all his poems I greatly prefer "The Miller's Daughter." It is a very tender poem, relating how the son of a rich squire fell in love and married the miller's daughter. How reluctantly the consent of his lady mother was given:

And slowly was my mother brought
To yield consent to my desire;
She wished me happy, but she thought
I might hav looked a little higher;
And I was young—too young to wed;
"Yet I must love her for your sake;
Go fetch your Alice here," she said.
Her eyelid quivered as she spake.

The whole poem is evidently intended as an address of the young squire (now old) to his wife, probably upon some commemoration day—a silver wedding, perhaps. Of his prose poems I like best "The Gardener's Daughter," a true poem, showing plainly that Kind hearts are more than coronets,

And simple faith than Norman blood.

"Dora" and "Enoch Arden" are also nice. Their sweet self-sacrifice is touching.

But so much for the records of the poets—true actors in the play of life, as Shakspere tells us. In these little sketches I hav only sought to giv some little biographies of the most popular poets in hopes of having the Cornerites take more interest in reading biographies from more gifted pens than mine; for I think that it is right for us to know the lives and characters of the "sages, seers, and scholars" who left their work for us to finish. But if these little sketches, imperfect as they are, hav contributed toward making the Corner bright and instructiv, be it ever so little, I shall feel amply rewarded. IDA A. BALLOU.

Buffalo, N. Y.

A Puzzle.

I rather like puzzles and enigmas, and coming across an old one I laid aside some thirty years ago, I am thinking you Cornerites will enjoy deciphering it. So here it is:

14. Mr. —wood, being at the . of king of terrors, 10 mills for his quakers, and who, which, and what. They odor for Dr. Juvenil Humanity, who to Dr. Hay preservers, and little devil behold scarlet his assistance; but, B 4 he arrived, the not legally good changed color, and taker was ct. for. the Answer next week. AUNT ELMINA.

Speak No Ill.

Speak no ill of anyone, not even your enemy. No matter if you do know some things of him that are not very creditable. If their publicity would injure him, keep them to yourself. Suppose one has gone astray and you know it. It is better to confine such knowledge to your own breast. Your repetition of the story only results in some harm to him and does you no good. When tempted to speak ill, to denounce another, to tell of some indiscretion, pause and think, Will this do any good? Would I like all my actions reported? No. Then be silent. Speak no ill. S. H. W.

An Untaught Diplomat.

"You know, Nick," said his mother, "a gentleman never asks for things, no matter how badly he wants them."

"Why doesn't he?" said Nick, opening very wide his round four-year-old eyes.

"Because it is impolite and greedy. That is why it annoys me so to hav you ask your Uncle John, whenever he comes, if he has brought you candy. Remember, now, you must never do it any more."

"But it's my candy—he says so—and he wants me to hav it."

"Then he will certainly giv it to you, and you must wait his time for it. If I ever again hear you ask him I will not let you hav it. So promis me that you will not. I know my little boy wants to be a gentleman."

Nick made the promis with a very sober face. He was the normal small boy, not a little angel, yet he had been trained "upon honor," and felt that a promis once made could not be broken. This is the way he kept it. When Uncle John came again, his nephew, after greeting him, leaned meditativly against his chair and said, "You didn't bring anything but yourself this time, did you, Uncle John?"

"Yes, I did," said Uncle John with a laughing shout; "I brought a whole pound of candy, and after that I wish it was two."

Correspondence.

DORCHESTER, NEB., March 5, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON, AND DEAR FRIENDS: I will write to you again. I am well. I did not get La Grippe, and I am glad of it. My school is out and I am glad; it is vacation for four weeks. In the winter I had to go to school when it was 20° below zero. I had a nice time on Christmas. The Amish hav split and hav got two churches. The reason they split is, one part of them drinks and the other does not. There hav been no speakers here this winter. I liv seven miles from town. Papa has not been to town for a week and has six letters to send off to-day. I would like to hav some of the little children write to me.

To Editor: I send you a card. I hope you will accept it with pleasure. Well, I guess I will close now. Good-bye.

JESSE JOHNSON.

[Thanks for the handsome card, and we shall be glad to hear from you again some time.—ED. C. C.]

HARTFORD, KAN., Feb. 26, 1892.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: As I hav just been reading the letter my cousin, Miss Darrow, has written to the Children's Corner, I thought of the great pleasure of seeing one of my own in print. We read THE TRUTH SEEKER and think it splendid. Many of my friends are trying to persuade me to giv my heart to God; but I hav found a better way to travel the path of life. My favorits of all amusements are music and dancing. As this is my first letter to THE TRUTH SEEKER, I will close, with best wishes to all. Correspondence from the Corner solicited.

Your friend for the right,
CARRIE BOYD.

ST. ELMO, TENN., Feb. 29, 1892.

MISS WIXON: When I was about four years old I went into a cave in Lookout mountain with my father and two brothers. We wandered about for a long time in the cave. At one place there was a deep, dark crevice; it went away down, I do not know how far, and there was a plank laid across it to walk on, and when pa led me across that place I said it made me feel lonesome. There are a great many such caves in Lookout mountain.

In my last letter to the Corner I spoke of my cat, Tim Skittlebones. I guess he joined a serenading club and some club was too much for him, for I havn't seen him for a week, but I hav his picture to remember him by.

Your Freethinking friend,
LORES L. GOODWIN.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.

The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

HUMANITY'S SPREADING CURSE

is not the Church alone. There is another and worse culprit. Read the book with the above title. Price, 35 cents, through NEW YORK NEWS Co., Newsdealers, or E. H. ANDRAE, 7t8 Dallas, Texas.

News of the Week.

PORTLAND, ORE., will hav a Catholic cathedral that will eclipse any other church edifice on the Pacific coast.

THE Russian government is increasing its severity against dissenters from the state religion. Stundists are especially persecuted.

AT the cathedral in Agram, Austria, last Sunday, Bishop Casparitsch was fatally stricken while in the midst of his rites. The cause was not providential visitation, as it would hav been in the case of a Freethinker, but paralysis.

THE empress of Germany has quit novel-reading and forbid it to the ladies of her court, and consults with the court preachers two or three hours daily, afterward retiring to pray and weep. Some say that she has become a mystic, and others that religion is crazing her.

VOODOOS hav been stirring up the negroes of Richland parish, La., against the whites, and predicting that God will send on the latter awful pestilences unless they divide their property with the blacks. On the 12th it was rumored that a colored girl who had put poison in a family's coffee was connected with the voodoos, and she was lynched.

ALONG the Volga river many Russian villages can get nothing to eat but a tea made from grass. In other districts bread made of wild hemp is the sole diet. The horses hav been largely killed off for food. As Russians hav a superstition that the horse is an unclean animal, it often happens that their stomachs revolt at its flesh and they die. Being unable, in their poverty-stricken condition, to buy fuel, many hav taken to burrows dug in the ground, and are degenerating into beasthood. Outlawry is increasing.

ONE "Malachi the son of God" was found last week selling medicins from house to house in New York city. He said: "I am a prophet, sent by the son of God to cure mankind. I foretold and caused the Johnstown flood, the famin in Ohio two years ago, and the recent Russian famin. I hav only to raise my hand now to cause the rain not to fall on the city of New York till famin shall come and the city shall burn. This I will do if you venture to lay a hand upon me." But one of the police of this irreligious age did lay a hand on him and lock him up.

THE election of a pope to succeed Leo XIII., whose demise is near, may lead to serious troubles. It is thought by some that the choice of a non-Italian pope would provoke a schism—a division of the "one universal" Catholic church. Others apprehend an international war as the result. The causes of any trouble would be two, viz., first, the jealousy of Italian cardinals; and second, general fear that any European nation, except Italv, which supplied the pontiff would derive too great aggrandizement from his influence throughout the Catholic world. This fear could not be entertained of Italy, because of her minor power, and the terms of hostility on which she stands with the papacy.

MELBOURNE, the Australian rainmaker, is experimenting in Mexico. His stay in Kansas has caused several rainmakers to spring up there. Two companies hav been incorporated in that state who propose to make contracts with counties, at $600 a county, to furnish one to two inches of rain under each contract. They will sell the secret at $2,500 a county. Their agents experimenting in California and Arizona report, one 1½ inches of rain at Pixley, Cal., and another 1½ inches at Tulare, Cal. Citizens of Thomas and Cheyenne counties, Kan., are organizing to meet an offer of a company to giv a test. Doubters point out that the experiments are conducted at a distance from the places where business offers are made.

THE flour so far contributed by the millers of America to famishing Russians has come from the following states, etc.: Alabama, 400 pounds; Canada, 8,000; Colorado, 5,000; District of Columbia, 37,860; Iowa, 51,160; Indiana, 114,915; Illinois, 124,940; Kansas, 149,900; Kentucky, 11,760; Louisiana, 360; Maryland, 9,200; Michigan, 186,525; Minnesota, 1,553,504; Missouri, 127,160; Nebraska, 69,240; New Mexico, 3,000; New York, 1,021,400; North Dakota, 103,020; Ohio, 108,977; Pennsylvania, 142,734; South Dakota, 98,780; Tennessee, 15,024; Texas, 3.280; Virginia, 1,500; Wisconsin, 91,145; total, 4,038,784. At the shipping of supplies at New York recently clergymen conducted exercises, but failed to mention how largely the famin is due to the influence of their religion. Large sums of money hav been contributed. Philadelphia has given $100,000; the New York Chamber of Commerce, $30,000; the Red Cross Society, nearly $100,000. The dishonesty of Russian officials has necessitated painstaking arrangements to insure that the supplies reach the right hands.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 916 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
J. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
D. Willis, A. Wanganui.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4 50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1 50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1 50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,
Immortality of Matter,
Immortality of Force,
Infinity of Matter,
Value of Matter,
Motion,
Form,
Immutability of Natural Laws,
Universality of Natural Laws,
The Heavens,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,
Original Generation,
Secular Generation,
The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Man,
Brain and Mind,
Thought,
Consciousness,
Seat of the Soul,
Innate Ideas,
The Idea of God,
Personal Continuance,
Vital Force,
The Soul of Brutes,
Free Will,
Morality,
Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles."

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - 10 cents.

Gems of Thought.

WHAT recommends commerce to me is its enterprise and bravery. It does not clasp its hands and pray.—Thoreau.

WHAT right hav we to trace back to supernatural causes or to a creativ will whatever may be done and has been accomplished by the civilized man, who at present stands at the top of a ladder of a hundred thousand years, and has behind him and beneath him the whole work of countless generations?—Buchner.

O LORD, while I am on the subject of creation, may I be pardoned for drawing your attention to the fact that you "created" . . . boundless and numerous worlds of which you knew nothing? You hav turned out to be a far, far cleverer God than you thought you were. You "created" the Earth on the first day; while, on the third day, you, apparently as the result of an afterthought, "created" the Sun, Moon, and Stars, just as a sort of lamps to giv light to the Earth. You seem to hav had no idea that you had "created" the lamps vastly bigger and grander than the object they were "created" to light. Just read the following few lines, O Lord, and you will see what I mean: This earth is nearly eight thousand miles in diameter. You, when you wrote your Book, supposed the earth to hav been flat and immovable, resting on four corners. The Christian theologians believed that theory down to the day when Galileo and Bruno declared the world was round, and moved, and Bruno was put to death. They continued in that belief even down to the day of Columbus, whom they caused to be imprisoned as a heretic for espousing the Copernican system that the world moved, thereby contradicting the Bible.—Saladin in God and His Book.

IN Russia . . . they hav been murdering old men; they hav thrust daggers into the breasts of women; they hav violated maidens—because they were Jews. Thousands and thousands are sent each year to the mines of Siberia, by the Christian government of Russia. Girls eighteen years of age, for having expressed a word in favor of human liberty, are to-day working like beasts of burden, with chains upon their limbs and with the marks of whips upon their backs. Russia, of course, is considered by Mr. Talmage as a Christian country—a country utterly destitute of liberty—without freedom of the press, without freedom of speech, where every mouth is locked and every tongue a prisoner—a country filled with victims, soldiers, spies, thieves, and executioners. What would Russia be in the opinion of Mr. Talmage, but for Christianity? How could it be worse, when assassins are among the best people in it? The truth is, that the people in Russia, to-day, who are in favor of human liberty, are not Christians. The men willing to sacrifice their lives for the good of others, are not believers in the Christian religion. The men who wish to break chains are Infidels; the men who make chains are Christians. Every good and sincere Catholic of the Greek church is a bad citizen, an enemy of progress, a foe of human liberty.—Ingersoll.

A FUNDAMENTAL law, arising from the fluctuating inclinations of mankind, and yet at the same time irrevocable, is a contradiction in terms, a mere creature of imagination, a chimera, an absurdity; the power that makes the laws can change them. The Golden Bull was called "the fundamental law of the empire." It was ordained that there should never be more than seven Teutonic electors, for the very satisfactory and decisiv reason that a certain Jewish chandelier had had no more than seven branches, and that there are no more than seven gifts of the Holy Spirit. This fundamental law had the epithet "eternal" applied to it by the all-powerful authority and infallible knowledge of Charles IV. God however did not think fit to allow of this assumption of "eternal" in Charles's parchments. He permitted other German emperors, out of their all-powerful authority and infallible knowledge, to add two branches to the chandelier, and two presents to the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit. Accordingly the electors are now nine in number. It was a very fundamental law that the disciples of the Lord Jesus should possess no private property, but hav all things in common. There was afterward a law, that the bishops of Rome should be very rich, and that the people should choose them. The last fundamental law is, that they are sovereigns, and elected by a small number of men clothed in scarlet, and constituting a society absolutely unknown in the time of Jesus. If the emperor, king of the Romans, always august, was sovereign master of Rome in fact, as he is according to the style of his patents and heraldry, the pope would be his grand almoner, until some other law, forever irrevocable, was announced, to be destroyed in its turn by some succeeding one.—Voltaire.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Promethens, A Poem. "It is crammed with life, thought, and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary beauty."—[Dr. Henry W. Bellows. Price, $1.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP. DARWINISM. DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION. JESUS NOT PERFECT. UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, and at 116 Fifth avenue. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF Millionaires Against Miners;
—OR—
THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, orifiam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

Kennedy's
Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY.
ROXBURY, MASS.

ASTHMA—DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creatiou; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distrioution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - 50 cents.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

THE LOGIC OF DEATH,
—OR,—
Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents.

THE
LOGIC OF LIFE,
—DEDUCED FROM—
THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT.

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

DOWN THEY GO!

Best make American Stemwind Watches. 17 jewels, adjusted, pat. regulator, in silverine case, only $11; in 3 ounce coin silver, $16; 4 ounce, $15 (a few years ago $60). In best 14 kt. filled gold cases, open face, $20; hunting, $23 to $28; 14 kt. solid gold, $40 to $100; same, not adjusted, $2 less; 11 jwls. $3.50, and 7 jwls. $5 less (lower grade watches, $5, $4, and $2.50).

THE PERFECTED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH, much finer than above, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position 16 jwls. and all modern improvements, nickel movement, cased as above, $8 more, gilt mov't. $6 more. No one else in the world sends out so good a watch at the price.

LADIES' GOLD HUNTING AMERICAN WATCHES, latest styles, best filled, 7 jwls. $17; 11 jwls. $18.50; 15 jwls. $25; 14 kt. solid gold, $10 to $100 more. All sent prepaid, kept in order one year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

DIAMONDS: in rings, pins, drops, studs, etc., $10; $15; $25; $50; $100 to $1,000 per set. Cash refunded, if not 20 per cent below regular price, any time within one year.

WEDDING RINGS: Plain, chased, with pearls, emeralds, rubies, moonstones, opals, garnets, turquoise, solitaires or combinations, a specialty.

SUNDRIES: Rogers Bros.' triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; tea spoons, $1.80; tables, $3 49; best spects. in the world, $1; pebbles, $2; 14 kt. gold, $5 more (send line of finest print you can read without glasses 14 inches from eyes); gold-headed canes, $8; $10; $15; $20. Best razor—a luxury—$2. Solid silver spoons, $1.70 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, silver, $1.25 to $2. Tea sets, $20 to $40; everything in the line of fancy table silver, novelties, plush, and art goods, gold pens, etc. All sent prepaid (except cutlery) subject to exchange or cash back.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,
Established 1857. Rochelle, Ill.

Send for price lists, beautiful cards in colors and gold of my Freethought badges (large and small), tracts, etc. Free.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

AN INFIDEL REMEDY.

SEND 10 CENTS TO Dr. FELLOWS, VINELAND, N. J. for his book on youthful errors, early decay, wasting weakness, lost manhood &c. It sets forth an External Application—a reliable home cure, with full directions for use. Its a certainty, no failure. State where you saw this advertisement.

A patient writing from Davenport, Wash., says: "Your remedy is marvelous, and will accomplish what is said it will do. The value of which is untold."

MOSES [PERSUADETH] DAVID'S JOSS [TO KEEP COOL.

Therefore he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.—Psalms cvi, 23.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Valuable Books on

Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1 50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

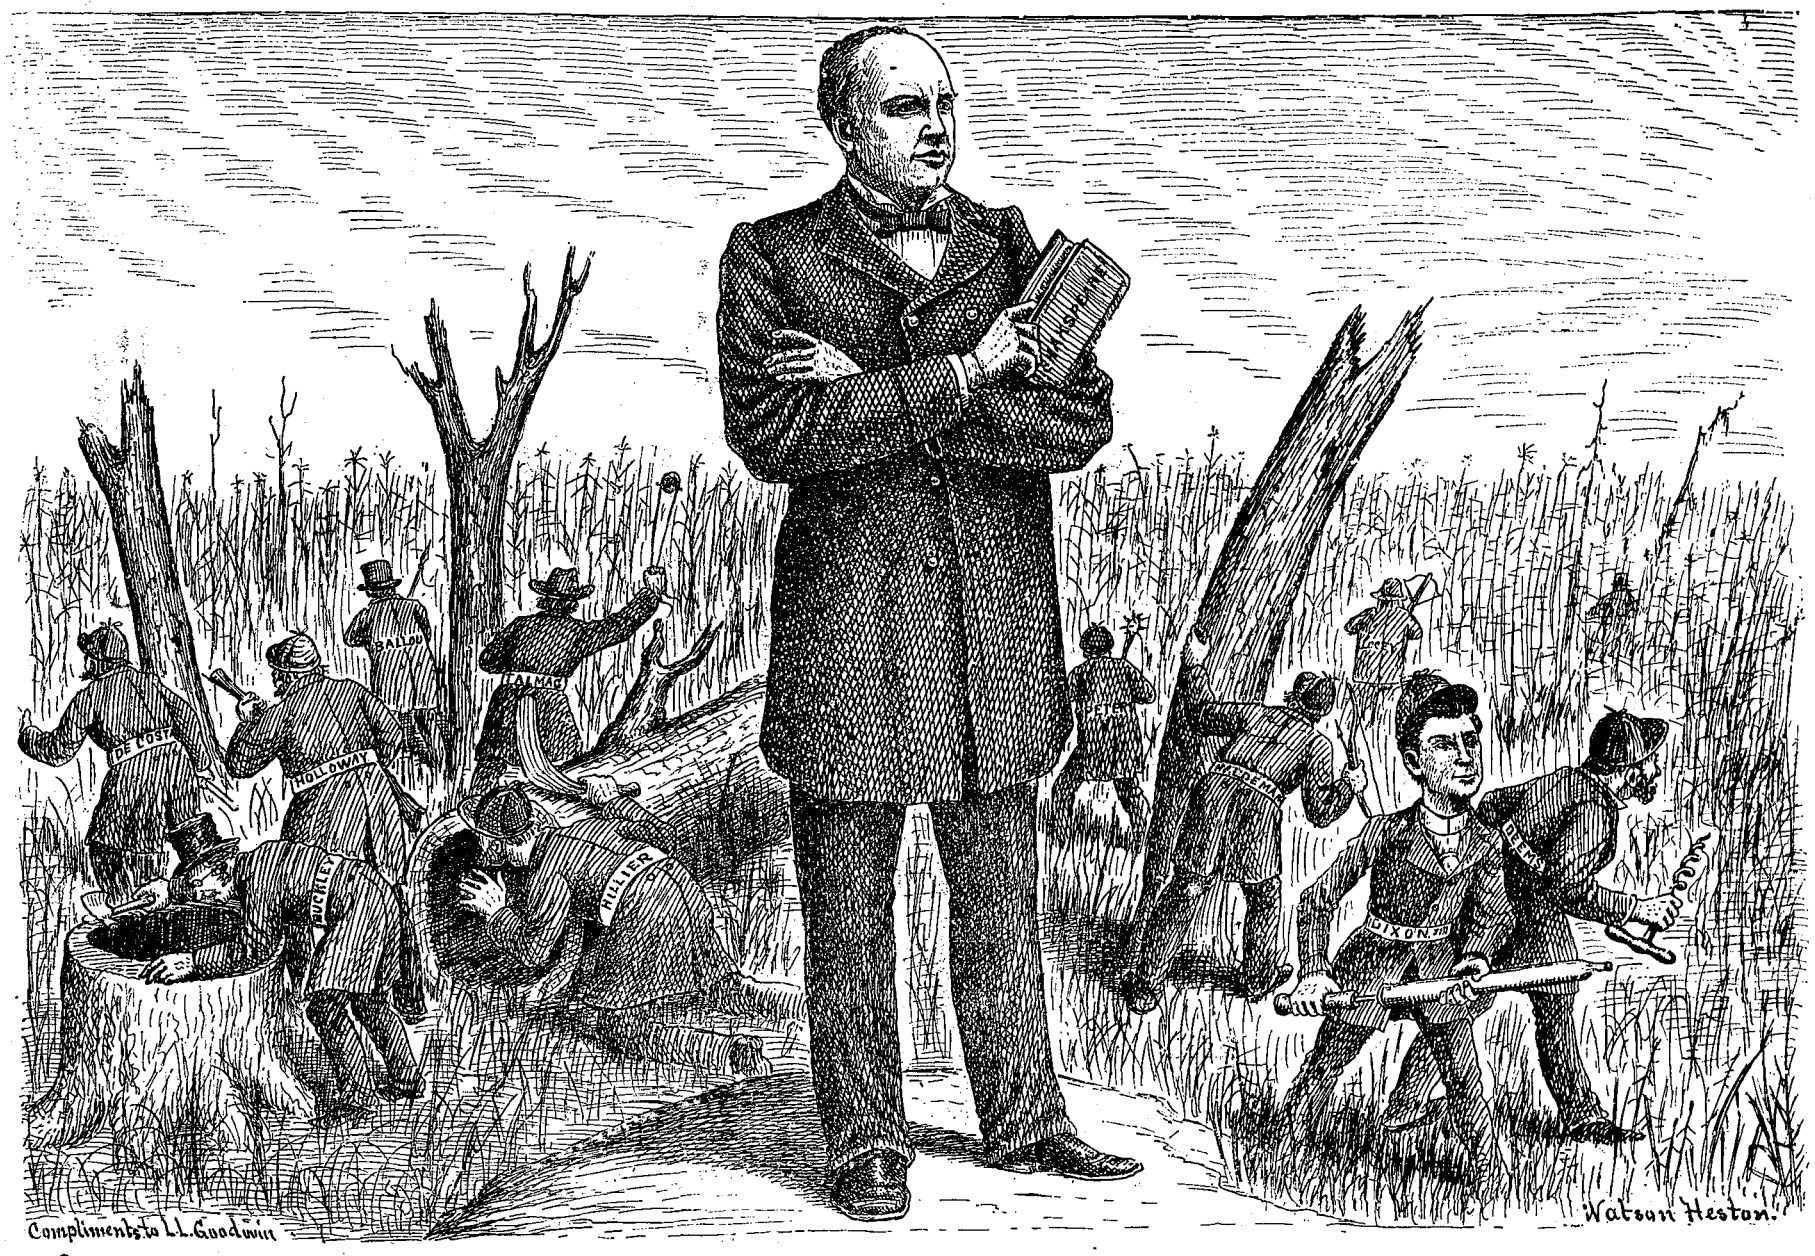
Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜



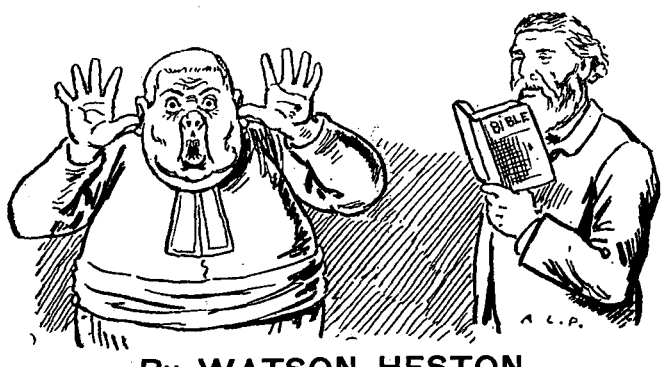
By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 13. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 26, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.



HOW THE ORTHODOX PIGMIES HUNT FOR THE FREETHOUGHT GIANT.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

OLD TESTAMENT STORIES COMICALLY ILLUSTRATED,

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Price, postpaid, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,
Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.
Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2 50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By Rev. G. T. Fox, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - - 40 cents

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—(Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—(Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4 50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By Van Buren Denslow, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By Dr. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4 00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3 00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.

Studies in Theology. 10c.

Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By Prof. F. W. Newman. Price, 25 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 13. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, March 26, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - MARCH 26, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Bible Picture Book.

"FRIEND, NEB., March 8, 1892.

"EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: I hav just received the Picture Book, and been showing it to some friends. It takes well.

"Inclosed find $5 for five more copies. I think I can dispose of that many, perhaps more. J. W. GILBERT."

"MISSOULA, MONT., March 10, 1892.

"EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: I shall hav to order more of the Bible Picture Books, two board and two cloth. Those I received were all sold before night, and I borrowed one from a friend and sold that. This makes twelve Picture Books and five 'Text-Books.' It would look as if there was something rotten in Denmark. Those books ought to be in every house in this land where there is a Bible. It sets people to thinking. There are plenty of people who would never giv it a thought if the pictures did not take their eye. It is a young child that can't read a picture, while there are lots of old ones who can't or won't read anything against the Bible.

"Wishing you and Heston long success, I am,

"Yours for liberty, A. M. STEVENS."

The Iniquity of Catholic Rule.

In writing of the religious questions before the legislature of New York, we referred last week to the ease with which the Catholics are carrying out their policy so far as securing the cooperation of that body is necessary. It is well known that Tammany Hall is under ecclesiastical control—that is, its leaders are—and its "heelers" are but subservient servants of the church. The spectacle of our mayor kissing the hand of Corrigan on Cooper Union platform was one to make the gods weep and self-respecting Americans swear. Everyone who frequents the municipal headquarters knows that on pay-days the "sisters" are on hand to take their tithes, and this begging custom led to a very pretty row in one of the police station-houses. From top to bottom, from the mayor to the dirty Irish boss at the garbage dumps, this city is under Roman Catholic rule. The result is the old Tweed times over again. Our streets are not cleaned, though the appropriation is cleaned out regularly; corporations gobble up public property for their own use, and obtain for nothing franchises worth millions; the church gets all it thinks it can hold; the politicians are getting rich, and the people are getting left, as the phrase goes.

But this is not all. The city is a hotbed of vice, with no attempts to restrain it. The police are inefficient in all things except collecting money. At least these are the charges brought by a minister, and brought in such a way that the public is pretty well convinced of their truth. When Howard Crosby died, Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst was made president of the Society for the Prevention of Crime. It is a nosing society, which ought never to hav been given a charter—as all vice and crime should be dealt with by public officers, and not servants of ecclesiastical bodies—but in this instance it has performed a good work in calling attention to the rottenness of Tammany rule. A few weeks ago Mr. Parkhurst made charges that saloons were open on Sunday and gambling-houses allowed to do business, if not by connivance of the police, at least without their protest. And he further insinuated that they probably were paid money for their forbearance.

These charges were denounced as slanders by the parties implicated, and a grand jury was induced to censure Mr. Parkhurst. But, like Brer Rabbit, that gentleman lay low, and sent his detectivs out to gather evidence, and went into the business himself. The result was given in a sermon which all the city heard and read. We quote the gist of it:

"You will remember that the substance of the charge that four weeks ago was brought against a certain official was that he betrayed a languid interest in the conviction of violators of law and allowed other considerations to intervene between himself and official obligations. Now, that last is exactly what he has done in my own person since then. I went to him with business that pertained to his own department, and he peremptorily refused to hold official communication with me.

"I am a citizen and a taxpayer, and I am refused an audience with an officer whose salary I as a taxpayer am helping to pay, and whose services as an attorney I am entitled to avail myself of. I, as a citizen, could get nothing from an officer of the government, because, forsooth, I was not solid with him.

"Now that is the genius of the entire Tammany business. You cannot get anything from Tammany unless you are solid with Tammany. The fact is that Tammany, taken as a whole, is not so much a political party as it is a commercial corporation, organized in the interest of making the most possible out of its official opportunities, so that what the rest of us get from Tammany we hav to get by fighting for it or by paying for it.

"And not only does the organization just referred to stand as the organization of crime, but it embodies the tyranny of crime. There are citizens in this town abominating the whole system that do not dare to stand up and be counted.

"It is a pretty trying state of affairs for such as are trying to improve the moral condition of our young men, in particular, to hav officials high in power against whom the most damning and excoriating thing that can be done is to publish their history. Awhile ago the treasurer of a certain bank downtown, who was not even suspected of being dishonest, but whose name, through no fault of his own, had become associated with a disreputable firm, was thrown out of his position. The reason stated by the directors was that, while they cordially and unanimously recognized the integrity of the treasurer, they could not afford to imperil the interests of the bank to hav associated with them a man that was tainted even to the slight degree of being mentioned in connection with dishonest dealing. Now, that's the way you run a bank. That's the style of condition you impose upon candidates for positions of financial trust. But when you come to run a city with a million and a half of people, with interests that are a great deal more than pecuniary, and a city, too, that is putting the stamp of its character or of its infamy upon every other smaller city the country through, then you hav not always shrunk from putting into positions of trust men that are ex-dive-keepers, and crooks, and ex-convicts, and men whose detailed written history would draw tremblingly near to the verge of obscene literature.

"Last Sunday I had a force of five detectivs out studying up city missions and trying to discover whether the police department shows any practical respect to its obligation to enforce excise laws on the Sabbath. I hav here the results of their day's work, sworn to, corroborated, and subject to the call of this district attorney. There is here the list of parties that last Sunday violated the ordinance of Sunday closing. One of these covers the east side and the other the west side of town. These names are interesting; some of them especially so, from one cause or another; in some instances on account of their official position, either present or recent; in other cases because of the family connection, or intimacies with the powers that be. These lists include violations in twenty-two precincts. Of course I am not going to take up your time by reading the names. Only a little in the way of recapitulation for illustration's sake:

"Second precinct, seven saloons open, 55 people present; Fourth precinct, ten saloons open, 45 people present; Fourteenth precinct, 15 saloons open, 169 people present; Nineteenth precinct (that is ours), eighteen saloons open, 205 people present; in all (I do not mean all the saloons that were open, but all the open ones that our detectivs happened to strike), in all, 254 saloons, 2,438 people present. They do not want 'generalities,' they want particularities. Well, there are 254 of them, not pulpit grandiloquence, nor ministerial exuberance, but hard, cold affidavits. If the concerned guardians of the public peace and the anxious conservators of municipal laws want facts we will guarantee to grind them out a fresh grist every blessed week. Now let them take vigorous hold of the material furnished above or quit their hypocritical clamoring after specific charges.

"It has seemed to me that there would be a peculiar propriety in studying a little way into the general trend of things in the Nineteenth precinct, as that is the one in which our own church is situated and from which we draw the major part of our congregation. To this end I hav had during the past few days a number of interested people, some of them paid detectivs, some of them volunteers from this congregation, scouring the ground with a view to learning something about the gambling-houses and the houses of disorderly character. A gambler, who is a dealer in one of the faro banks here, told one of our party that the small games were running pretty quiet now because Dr. Parkhurst's society (the Society for the Prevention of Crime) had so frightened the police that they had made the gamblers close up for a time till the thing should blow over. I only mention that that you may get at the true inwardness of the situation. The police can stop the gambling just the instant that they conclude that it is unsafe not to. They will go just as far as the exigencies of the case push them, and to all appearance not a step further.

"Leaving the gambling-houses for the present, I must report to you what was discovered in a region of iniquity that in this presence will hav to be dealt with with as much caution and delicacy as the nature of the subject will allow. I hav here a list of thirty houses, name and addresses all specified, that are simply houses of prostitution, all of them in this precinct. These thirty places were all of them visited by my friend or my detectiv on the 10th and also on the 11th of March, and solicitations received on both dates. One of these places I spent an hour in myself, and I know perfectly well what it all means and with what entire facility such houses can be got into. That house is three blocks only from the spot where I am standing now. All of this is subject to the call of the district attorney.

"I never knew till within two weeks how almost impossible it is for a young man to be in the midst of the swim of New York city life under present conditions and still be temperate and clean. I had supposed that the coarse, bestial vices were fenced off from youthful contact with some show, at least, of police restriction. So far as I hav been able to read the symptoms of the case I do not discover the restrictions. There is a little advantage in preaching the gospel to a young fellow on Sunday if he is going to be sitting on the edge of a Tammany-maintained hell the rest of the week. Don't tell me I don't know what I'm talking about. Many a long, dismal, heart-sickening night, in company with two trusty friends, hav I spent, since I spoke on the matter before, going down into the disgusting depths of this Tammany-debauched town; and it is rotten with a rottenness that is unspeakable and indescribable, and a rottenness that would be absolutely impossible except by the connivance, not to say the purchased sympathy, of the men whose one obligation before God, men, and their own conscience is to shield virtue and make vice difficult.

"I am not ignorant of the colossal spasms of indignation into which the trustees of Tammany ethics hav been thrown by the blunt and inelegant characterizations of a month ago, and I hav a clear as well as a serene anticipation of what I hav to expect from the same sources for having deliberately sought out and entered into the very presence of iniquity in its vilest shape, for there is nothing in the first chapter of Romans, read this morning, that will outdo in filthiness the scenes which my eyes hav just witnessed. But the grim and desolate part of it all is that these things are all open and perfectly easily accessible. The young men, your boys, probably know that they are. Ten minutes of sly indoctrination, such as a tainted comrade might giv them, would afford them all the information they would need to enable them with entire confidence to pick out either a cheap or an expensiv temple of vile fascination where the unholy worship of Venus is rendered. The door will open to him, and the blue-coated guardian of civic virtue will not molest him. I spent an hour in such a place yesterday morning, and when we came down the steps I almost tumbled over a policeman who appeared to be doing picket duty on the curbstone."

To a reporter he afterward spoke quite as plainly, though still guardedly, as to the moral delinquencies of the police force. Asked whether the laws were being infringed, he said:

"I consider that Superintendent Murray has certain laws by which to direct the police service of the city, and when he givs his judgment of the situation of vice in New York he assumes a prerogativ which belongs to the legislature only!" replied Dr. Parkhurst, warmly.

"In view of which you consider the police department corrupt?" I asked.

"I consider that the police and fire departments of New York city are the finest in the world, and the police could be nearly perfect if they chose to be."

"Do they evade the law as the legislature has dictated it for them?" I asked.

"I hav been studying the consolidation act, and I find that a patrolman is instructed by law to perform certain duties on his post, one of which is dictated but certainly neglected," replied the doctor, warming to the subject.

"You refer to the presence of fallen women on street corners and to disorderly houses?" I asked.

"Exactly. Now, speaking frankly, you and I and our neighbors are perfectly satisfied that I might say on every post patroled in this city to-night police protection is guaranteed to gambling dens or houses of ill repute, even to the poor woman who exhibits herself on the streets, but it is next to impossible to secure absolute proof of a legal evidence of the fact. Police captains of the different precincts hav their patrons among keepers of these dens, and their vice is carried on uninterrupted."

"Do you propose to secure this difficult evidence?" I asked.

"Ah! that is a question which only fortuitous circumstances can decide. All I hope and wish to effect is protection from vice for the young men of my own congregation."

"What method will you pursue now?" I asked.

"I shall endeavor to make the police suppress the outward evidence of immorality upon the streets, which the law really compels them to do. Why, it is almost an impossibility for a young man to avoid temptations in New York to-day. The city is developing a perfect network of vice. It has a code of signs and alphabet of directions, that can be learned in ten minutes by the most ignorant, designating such places, from the gutter dive to the most palatial home of vice, where every refinement and esthetic taste is clearly arranged. It is awful."

It has been said by the defenders of Tammany Hall that Dr. Parkhurst has lived in a very small and narrow world, and that his talk is that of a child to whom the world had been a world of imagination and not of reality, and who has just had his eyes opened suddenly to the truth as it is. This is true in a sense, and if the wickedness existed in spite of all official efforts to prevent it—if such efforts were ever honestly made—then the city officials could plead human depravity in mitigation of the minister's charges.

Every department of the municipal government is in the hands of Tammany. That organization turns all the wheels. But it is not the fact that it turns no wheel which would crush the dens of iniquity for which Dr. Parkhurst condemns it as for the very general suspicion that through its politicians it profits by the low state of affairs. It is very generally believed, in fact, that the police are paid money to allow the bawdy houses and gambling dens to remain open. And it is also generally believed that the police demand cash from saloonkeepers for the privilege of keeping open a side door on Sundays. Certain it is that the side doors of all saloons are open whenever the Sunday trade makes it profitable, and certain it is that the police could prevent it if they would. The writer has been told circumstantially, and with detail of street and number, of a German saloon-keeper who pays ten dollars a month as regularly as he pays his rent, to an agent of the police; and his saloon is open each and every Sunday. The writer has also been told, by the man who paid the money, that a saloon was kept open without a license for some weeks by payment of cash to an excise inspector. And the writer is likewise informed that a man in the north part of New York runs an unlicensed saloon because he "knows where to buy his beer;" meaning that the police captain of that precinct will not molest the customers of a certain brewery. Why, it is not difficult to surmise.

As to gambling and other unlawful houses, the keepers are bold because they know they hav the sympathy of the officials. The police are on good terms with them apparently, and it is said that some of our high politicians are not infrequently found in them. They are now all Tammany men—and women—and they are such because, as one independent journal charges, Tammany shields offenders. The friends and companions, says the Post, of those who trade in evil, are in possession of the city offices. And what else could be expected of an organization which brings liquor-dealers, and, in some cases, convicts, to the front to serve in the legislature, in the city council and in various city offices? It is perfectly true of Tammany, as a writer has said in the North American Review: "It counts absolutely on the ignorant, the venal and the depraved voters, holding them with the adhesiv and relentless grasp of an octopus. It never alienates the grogshop-keepers, the gamblers, the beer-dealers, the nuisance-makers, or the proletariat." And an evening paper says of the Hall: "It is an organization of vice and ignorance for private gain. Its chiefs hav no ideas or knowledge of public policy. What they are engaged in is seeing how much money from any source they can put in their pockets without having to go to jail."

For the evil of Tammany Hall the Roman Catholic church is directly responsible. It is her own organization, with her own characteristics, and engineered by her own officials. If Mayor Grant would kiss the archbishop's hand on a public platform what would he not do for that church official when approached privately! Such subserviency has rarely been witnessed. Tweed gave the Roman church city property worth millions of dollars; but he did it for votes: he would kiss no archiepiscopal hand. It was left for our present officials to add to their gifts to the church that of their manhood as well as their honor.

There are bad governments and rotten cities where the officials are Protestants—some Agnostics, perhaps; but the two rottenest administrations of municipal affairs in this country are the Roman-Catholic-ruled cities of Chicago and New York.

A Sabbatarian Judge's Error.

At a meeting held recently in a church in Philadelphia to influence the World's Fair authorities to close that show on Sunday, Judge Ashman, of the Orphan's Court, presided, and in his remarks he quoted Mr. Cooley, an authority on constitutional law, who said: "The fact is notorious that the prevailing religion in the United States is Christian, and that, in a certain sense and for certain purposes, Christianity is a part of the law of the land. The Sabbath is one of the institutions of Christianity, and we are therefore bound to obey the law which upholds the Sabbath."

This one-sided opinion took well with the "congregation," says Taggart's Times, as the meeting was under the auspices of the Philadelphia Sabbath Association, the self-righteous members and friends of which consider themselvs several pegs higher than "common people" in their professions of superior piety and morality. And it is true that the prevailing religion of the country is the Christian superstition. But it is not true that the government is bound to enforce religious rules. The federal Constitution says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; and it further declares that "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office of public trust under the United States."

That is the principle upon which Congress has acted, and the first president of the republic but wrote in accordance with it when he penned Article II of the treaty with Tripoli, as follows: "As the government of the United States of America is not, in any sense, founded on the Christian religion, as it has in itself no character of enmity against the laws, religion, or tranquillity of Mussulmans: and, as the said states never entered into any war or act of hostility against any Mohammedan nation, it is declared by the parties that no pretext arising from religious opinions shall ever produce an interruption of the harmony existing between the two countries."

In 1829, in a report to the Senate of the United States, which was adopted, Mr. Johnson said in reference to religion and our government: "Our government is a civil and not a religious institution. Our Constitution recognizes in every person the right to choose his own religion, and to enjoy it freely without molestation. Whatever may be the religious sentiments of citizens, and however variant, they are alike entitled to protection from the government, so long as they do not invade the rights of others."

The report to the House of Representativs on the same bill declares: "Congress acts under a Constitution of delegated and limited powers. The committee look in vain to that instrument for a delegation of power authorizing this body to inquire and determin what part of time, or whether any, has been set apart by the almighty for religious exercises. On the contrary, among the few prohibitions which it contains is one that prohibits a religious test, and another which declares that Congress shall pass no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. . . . The principles of our government do not recognize in the majority any authority over the minority, except in matters which regard the conduct of man to his fellow-man. . . . The equality of rights, secured by the Constitution, may bid defiance to mere political tyrants; but the robe of sanctity too often glitters to deceive. The Constitution regards the conscience of the Jew as sacred as that of the Christian, and givs no more authority to adopt a measure affecting the conscience of a solitary individual than that of a whole community. That representativ who would violate this principle would lose his delegated character, and forfeit the confidence of his constituents."

Justice Joseph Story, a lawyer perhaps as eminent as Judge Ashman, in his Commentaries on our Constitution says of that clause prohibiting religious tests for office: "This clause is not introduced merely for the purpose of satisfying the scruples of many respectable persons who feel an invincible repugnance to any religious test or affirmation. It had a higher object: to cut off forever every pretense of any alliance between church and state in the national government. The framers of the Constitution were fully sensible of the dangers from this source, marked out in the history of other ages and countries, and not wholly unknown to our own. They knew that bigotry was exceedingly vigilant in its stratagems to secure to itself an exclusiv ascendency over the human mind, and that intolerance was ever ready to arm itself with all the terrors of the civil power to exterminate those who doubted its dogmas or resisted its infallibility. The Catholic and Protestant had alternately waged the most ferocious and unrelenting warfare on each other, and Protestantism, at the very moment when it was proclaiming the right of private judgment, prescribed boundaries to that right, beyond which if anyone dared to pass, he must seal his rashness with the blood of martyrdom. The history of the parent country, too, could not fail to instruct them in the uses and abuses of religious tests. They there found the pains and penalties of non-conformity written in no equivocal language, and enforced with a stern and vindictiv jealousy."

In the debates in state conventions on the adoption of the Constitution the religious question was well to the front. In the Virginia convention

Mr. Madison said: "There is not a shadow of right in the general government to intermeddle with religion. Its least interference with it would be a most flagrant usurpation. I can appeal to my uniform conduct on this subject, that I hav warmly supported religious freedom. It is better that this security should be depended upon from the general legislature, than from one particular state. A particular state might concur in one religious project."

In the debates on the Constitution the same sentiments were freely expressed, and it certainly was the intent of the founders of our government to separate church and state instead of establishing Christianity. The facts here shown—and hundreds of other equally important and authoritativ utterances could be quoted—ought to settle the bold assumption of the Sabbatarians that we hav adopted in this country that part of the common law of England which recognizes Christianity as part of the law of the land. Even the Tennessee judge in the King case did not recognize the Sunday law as legal and constitutional because religious, but because the state may make sanitary and police regulations.

Think of This!

We hav received the following letter. We got one just like it when the Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book was issued:

"TREMONT HOTEL, VANCOUVER, B. C.,
"March 14, 1892.

"EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: The customs authorities (in Winnepeg) say the Bible Picture Book is immoral and hav sent it to Ottawa for decision. Please tell me if there is any possibility of getting it again, should they decide against it. Yours truly, E. DAIG."

The Canadian customs officials had to giv up the other book. Perhaps they may not this one, as it retells several Bible stories, and possibly the Canadians may conclude that the Bible is an immoral book. And if they do there is no redress for Mr. Daig but to get a book through in some other way.

The Bible Picture Book.

"ELMIRA, N. Y., March 19, 1892.

"EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: Though busy, I cannot longer defer writing informing you that the Bible Picture Book, 'comically illustrating Old Testament stories,' has reached me by express in good condition. I feel just like writing a whole volume for it. It is just unique, superb, gorgeous—the best accession to Freethought literature, in the way of convincing argument showing up to the world the ridiculousness, the absurdity, the burlesqueness of the Old Testament stories, that has been produced since I became a champion of the grand and noble cause of Universal Mental Freedom. Its very expressiv illustrations are most convincing, and comprise telling arguments against the alleged truthfulness of the Jewish portion of the 'Word of God.' The monkey figures as a most conspicuous character, but it should not be forgotten this self-same monkey 'is for ornament, not for use.'

"Anyone having but a smattering knowledge of Old Bible history at once sees the lesson to be inculcated, and those who never hav read their 'holy' Bible, and know absolutely nothing of what it contains, also at once become interested and go to investigating, and finally make up their minds that these stories are not the 'word of God,' and that they hav been greatly deceived by the sky-pilots who hav preyed upon their credulity and ignorance. In carefully looking over the Picture Book I would smile once, twice, thrice, and then laugh. It ought to be in the home of every Liberal.

"Too much cannot be said for Heston, the cartoonist, and THE TRUTH SEEKER publishers, for adding to the Freethought literature the Bible Picture Book.

"L. DE WITT GRISWOLD."

The Cause in Washington.

The son of Peter Selde, Sr., one of the most stanch Liberals and highly esteemed citizens of Lincoln county, was expelled last December by the teacher (Mrs. Campbell) from district school No. 14, Davenport, Lincoln county, on account of his lack of religious faith.

The boy was asked by the teacher to recite a piece; he informed her that he knew but one piece, entitled "Jonah and the Whale." The teacher smiled and said: "Jonah swallowed the whale, eh? That's all right." The next day on reciting the piece ("Jonah and the Whale," by Nelson Hunt, of Soldiers' Home, Wis.) the teacher stopped the boy while reciting the last verse, exclaiming in great anger, "No more! no more! we won't allow such blasphemy in our school; we all love our God." This was on Friday afternoon. On the following Monday morning the teacher took the boy to task and under cross-examination elicited the declaration that he did not believe in the Bible God. The teacher then expelled him from school, declaring, "I will not allow anyone to come here and say there is no God. No, sir, not while I am in the school-house."

Mr. Selde laid the matter before the school board. They promised to investigate and let him know their decision, but failed to do so. Most unfortunately Mr. Selde and some members of his family were taken down with La Grippe. He could not leave home for several weeks. As soon as able to do so he waited on one of the school board and was informed the school board had decided to sustain the teacher.

The case only came to my knowledge about the middle of January, and before I could get particulars so as to lodge a properly attested statement of the facts before the state superintendent of public instruction, Bryan, so much time had elapsed that he writes me, "The case has passed out of my jurisdiction, as you will see by the school law, and there is now no resource but through the courts." But as I had laid a full report of the case before Mr. H. M. Martin, the able and efficient county superintendent of schools for Kittitas county, a gentleman of sound common sense and Liberal views, he will electrify the fossils on the school board, and the fanatical despot they appointed as teacher, by enforcing on their attention the fact that Art. I, Sec. 11, of the state constitution is of binding force and effect and must be obeyed. It reads: "Absolute freedom of conscience in all matters of religious sentiment, belief and worship shall be guaranteed to every individual." "Every individual" includes the scholars in our public schools, and neither teacher nor school board are authorized to act as Grand Inquisitors and punish or expel children from our public schools because they or their parent's religious sentiments are not in harmony with those of the teacher.

Every such case and all violations of the law in regard to religious exercises, or stealing the fuel and oil of the school district for the use of religious meetings, should be promptly reported to the school board, and if wrong-doing is not immediately stopped a full statement of the case should be immediately forwarded to the secretary of the Washington Secular Union, that he may lay the matter before the board of directors and take the necessary legal measures to secure justice through the courts.

At Roslyn, Kittitas county, February 28th, 29th, and March 2d, I delivered lectures to large and enthusiastic audiences. The Sunday fanatics, led by the Women's Christian Temperance Union, are making desperate and determined efforts to enforce rigid Sunday observance, and try to draw away attention from their puritanical folly and blind the eyes of the people to the gross injustice of their bigoted intolerance by making loud clamor, declaring it is all done for the sacred cause of temperance and love of the poor workingman.

Despite the utmost efforts of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the church leaders to keep people from the lectures, the hall was crowded at every lecture with intelligent, appreciativ, and deeply interested hearers; and this notwithstanding the hard times and the charge of twenty-five cents for reserved chairs, which occupied over the half of the hall.

Although defeated in every case appealed to the superior court, the Sunday law fanatics persist in futil persecutions of those who venture to ignore their religious notions. Arrests hav been made at Roslyn for keeping places of business open on holy Sunday, and the local Dogberry, confused by W. Laird Hill's complicated muddle of the code, and fearing the wrath of the fanatical element, found the arrested parties guilty. Appeal has been made to the superior court. There need be no fears of the result.

The territorial law of Jan. 27, 1888, classed Sunday with Decoration day and the Fourth of July, and repealed all acts in conflict therewith. All laws claiming Sunday as anything other than a mere legal holiday, or more sacred than the Fourth of July, were abrogated.

Our state constitution guarantees absolute freedom of religious sentiment, belief, and worship to every individual. Therefore the legislature has no power to declare Saturday or Sunday a holy or religious day.

In the revision of the criminal code, drafted by W. Laird Hill, he consolidates into one section Sections 2067 and 2068 of the code of 1881. These sections are part of an act entitled "An Act to close business houses and prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday." Hill's code is in violation of the well-established rule that no statute shall contain more than one subject, and is therefore void and of none effect.

But even if otherwise valid, it is in plain violation of the bill of rights, which provides that no privileges or immunities shall be granted to any citizen which shall not equally belong to all citizens.

This statute givs livery-stable-keepers the privilege to keep open their places of business all day Sunday. They can rent a buggy, carriage, or saddle-horse to any person, even one of known intemperate habits, for the avowed object of riding beyond the precinct where fanaticism rules, procure liquor, become intoxicated, and create more noise and disturbance than a dozen respectably conducted places of business.

Any act lawful and right on any one day of the week must be equally lawful and right on any other day of the week. Every act is right or wrong per se. How absurd to assert that an act is perfectly right and proper at five minutes to 12 but the same act would be a crime at five minutes past 12.

Should the case by any perversion of law and justice be decided against the victim of fanaticism, it will be appealed to the supreme court; perhaps this is a "consummation devoutly to be wished," for until the matter is decided by the supreme court the Sunday fanatics will retain the power to harass and persecute those against whom they entertain pique or spite.

The following extract from the Post Intelligencer, the leading newspaper of the Puget sound country, that only two years ago was the goody-goody religious advocate, in its leading article of Sunday, March 13th, givs grand evidence of its evolution. It is right to the point, and is evidence that "she do move:"

The state can determin that there shall be a Sunday, but it cannot effectivly prescribe how that Sunday shall be observed.

The effort to secure national Prohibition, enact a federal Sabbath, banish wine from state dinners and forbid a federal ball, rests on the same kind of absurd philosophy which has led one sect or another at various times to impose its own peculiar forms of worship on all the rest of mankind. The greatest thinkers and writers, and the greatest statesmen, hav all pointed out the fatal error of prohibition, that it does not respect the imperial right of every free man to decide for himself what he will eat, drink, wear, and use as well as worship. If it is proper for the state to say, Because it is not good for some men to drink wine, therefore no man shall hav a legal opportunity to buy wine at all, then it is equally proper to say, It is not good for you to stay at home Sundays; therefore you shall go to church twice a day. "It is as proper to name the church you shall attend. It is as proper to forbid the people to dance at all, on the plea that there are low places in great cities where indecent dancing is carried on, as it is to forbid them to drink at all because a great many people drink to excess; or to forbid a rich man to will his money to his son because, as a rule, rich men's sons become spendthrifts."

The annual convention and election of officers of the Washington Secular Union will, in accordance with the resolution of the board of directors, be held at the Fremont Opera House, Seattle, on June 4th, and 6th. Let all take due notice and govern themselvs accordingly. C. B. REYNOLDS,
Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

Lectures and Meetings.

AT 104 East 66th street, in the Educational Gymnasium, March 27th, "The Evolution of Mind;" April 3d, Helen H. Gardener, "One Law of Heredity" (a story).

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Calvert,	" ..March27,28	Chicago.....	" 24
Austin,	" .. April 2, 3	Massillon, O.....	May 1
Waco, Convention of Texas Liberal Association.....	" 8,9,10	New York.....	" 6
		Boston.....	" 8
		Montreal.....	" 15
New Orleans.....	" 13,14	Boulder City, Col....	June 5
Brookhaven, Miss.	" 16,17

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

J. E. REMSBURG has returned from his Eastern tour. He delivered sixty lectures in sixty days, as follows: Highland, Ill., January 8th and 10th; Grant Fork, Ill., 9th; Raymond, Ill., 11th, 12th, and 13th; Springfield, Ill., 15th; Elwood, Ill., 16th and 17th; Angola, Ind., 18th; Ft. Wayne, Ind., 19th; Clyde, O., 20th and 21st; Orangeville, O., 22d; Russell, Pa., 23d and 24th; Knoxville, Pa., 26th and 27th; Ithaca, N. Y., 28th; Constantia, N. Y., 29th; Weedsport, N. Y., 30th; Boston, Mass., 31st; Lancaster, N. H., February 2d; Portland, Me., 3d; Saratoga Springs, N. Y., 4th; New York city, 5th; Newmanstown, Pa., 6th; Butler, Pa., 8th; Alliance, O., 9th; McConnelsville, O., 10th; Lexington, O., 11th and 12th; Rardew, O., 13th and 14th; Portsmouth, O., 14th; Huntington, W. Va., 15th; Dillsboro, Ind., 16th; Vevay, Ind., 17th; Henderson, Ky., 18th and 19th; Olney, Ill., 20th; Du Quoin, Ill., 21st; Centralia, Ill., 21st; Strasburg, Ill., 22d; Gillespie, Ill., 23d, 24th, and 25th; Virden, Ill., 26th; Springfield, Ill., 27th; Arrowsmith, Ill., 28th; Scircleville, Ind, 29th, and March 1st; Canton, Ill., 3d; Loraine, Ill., 5th; Rock Island, Ill., 7th, and Muscatine, Ia., 8th.

News and Notes.

The weather at present is perfectly delightful. The skies are almost cloudless, and the air is warm and golden. The beautiful green fields are everywhere seen, and the mountains are of a radiant blue. California is in its glory. The gentle rains hav descended and moistened the earth so that there is promis of a mighty harvest. The blooming trees with variegated colors enrich the vast prospects from sea to the hills.

Escondido is one of the lovely portions of California. It is a place of magnificent distances. The village seems to spread over an area of several square miles. It is like an immense bowl. The rolling plain is encircled on every side and is dotted with hundreds of homes.

The Methodist college towers on its eminence and givs an orthodox appearance to the place, with six churches scattered here and there on different sides of the town. It was not expected that the Freethought lecturer would ever come into these sacred precincts, but he has come, and come to stay. The Liberal element is growing.

When I was here before there were quite breezy discussions at the lectures, but this time the orthodox kept a profound silence. I was sorry they did not come to the front.

However, the audiences were larger than before, and we do not hav to depend on any excitement to fill the hall. I gave the "Religious Conspiracy" Sunday afternoon, and this was to some a revelation. In the evening I discoursed on "Spiritualism, Theosophy, and Infidelity," and I endeavored to show our common ground in the world of philosophy. I think my effort was accepted by the most of my hearers, but at the close when an opportunity was given for questions, a Theosophist arose and made an attack on Spiritualism, and then a Spiritualist replied, and supporting his views, gave a few blows at the Theosophistical faith. I do not see why the Theosophists and Spiritualists are so at odds with one another. Evidently if not in the same boat they are going in the same direction. I guess the Materialist will hav to be a reconciler between the "spiritual affinities" and express the harmony that exists in all the advance thought of the day. The Materialist has this advantage—that he does not hav to argue in favor of his postulate. That is agreed to anyway on all sides. The Materialist can afford to "labor and to wait," for his "eternal substance" is not denied even by the theologian. Every other substance is denied, but matter is not denied. I am quite satisfied with the "solidity" of my position. We can ignore God, but who can ignore a brickbat?

Friends at Escondido made my stay very pleasant. At the Cottage Hotel Mr. and Mrs. Hinman gave cordial welcome. B. B. Rockwood keeps at the front. The Stevenson Brothers make things lively. W. B. Blake is on the roll of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Other comrades help to furnish the "sinews of war." The look ahead is bright.

On Monday morning, March 7th, I leave Escondido. I go by sail to Oceanside where the Pacific flashes on the long and winding shore. From Oceanside I go by stage to Fallbrook. It is a magnificent drive. You can look a hundred miles away on sea and shore. We pass by the St. Louis Rey mission, one of the most splendid ruins in southern California. It was built one hundred and twenty years ago. It presents a majestic appearance, as from the brow of the hill it gleams white in the afternoon sun, like a vast cathedral. Along the St. Louis Rey river we creep into the heart of the hills, and in the golden evening light come to Fallbrook, one of the prettiest villages in California, nestling in a beautiful valley five hundred feet above the sea. This is a fine orange and fruit country, and has great promis. With its lovely sceneries and lovely climate it is as near to paradise as one can get in this world.

A. F. Cate was the first one to meet me here. He arranged for the lectures. He was once a comrade with Wm. Cline, Marion county, Oregon, and I guess Cline had something to do with making Cate a stanch Freethinker. I guess Cline will remember his fellow-workman when he reads these notes.

I am directed to Naples Hotel, an imposing residence which cost about $30,000 when the boom was here. It is a fine building. It is now both a hotel and sanitarium, under charge of Dr. A. J. C. Clark and his wife, Mrs. Nannie C. Clark, M.D. It is a good place to stay, if one wants good cooking and a good bed to sleep in. Dr. Clark is an old-time reformer, somewhat orthodox in his ideas, but Liberal. He still banks on a God, and believes in spirits, and thinks the Bible and Christianity of some service. Mrs. Clark is a Baptist, but as genial as a summer's day itself. This hotel is called "The Naples." The scenery about it is charming—a flower-garden in front, the village just below, and beyond the stately hills adorned with orchards and groves. I would like to linger here for a month, dream in the splendor of the sunshine, and think my way into the heart of nature.

I lecture in the evening and we hav a rattling time. Dr. Clark is chairman. I giv my views on "Evolution and Creation." Discussion is invited by Dr. Clark. One inquires why the lower animals are protected and hav such an easy time getting a living, as compared with man, who has to make his bread and butter in the sweat of his face. I answered that the lower animals are not protected; that millions of them perish every year, and they hav to "rustle" like man for something to eat, or die. The reason why man has to rustle more is because he has more wants. Dr. Clark then took up the debate and combated several of my positions. By this time the Baptist minister summoned up courage enough to ask a few questions. On the whole there was quite an interesting dispute pro and con. This made people think, and on the next night there was a much larger audience. I gave "The Bible and Modern Thought," but not a single word of reply could I get from any clergyman. Dr. Clark was obliged to defend the faithful. He did this with a good deal of vim and ingenuity. He challenged me to debate at some future time. Perhaps I will, for the doctor has some orthodox kinks in him which I think had better be taken out. The doctor is a transcendentalist, and he ably supports his side of the question. He is a fair and square debater. It would be profitable, I think, to place our opposit philosophies in popular conflict before the people. However, we cannot do this at present. The doctor and myself are busy until next winter, but some time perhaps we may cross swords.

I enjoyed the Fallbrook campaign, and hope to renew it. There are only about fifty houses at Fallbrook, and of these three are churches—three clergymen to about two hundred people. This is rather hard, I think. However, there are Liberals here besides my friend Mr. Cate. Mr. Cate built the first house in Fallbrook, and has been with the place in its varying fortunes. Mrs. Cate is a Liberal, and there are other ladies who are not afraid to stand up by their colors. Fallbrook makes a bright mark in my memory.

Wednesday morning dawns with silver banners over vale and hill. Dr. Clark has decided to harness up his three-year-old Nellie and take me bag and b ggage over to Elsinore, which is about thirty-five miles away. It takes us about all day to get there, with many hills to climb. We travel through the Temecula pass, also before reaching this the Live Oak ranch, five thousand acres under cultivation. Even amidst the rugged scenes of the pass we find dwellings and green spaces of land. Sometimes the verdure of barley and wheat glitters almost to the top of the range, three hundred feet above the sea.

About noon we are through the pass, and the broad plain, and San Jacinto and San Bernardino mountains, and "Baldy," covered with snow, greet our eyes and make a picture of exceeding beauty. Through the plain we circle until we come to the somewhat foreign-looking village of Temecula. Here is where the Mexicans and the Indians "foregather"—eat and drink, and occasionally shoot one another. From Temecula we push on to Murietta and Wildermar, embosomed in thousands of acres of wheat and barley. Wildermar is a Quaker settlement and makes a neat and bright appearance.

At 6 o'clock, the sun passing in golden glory behind the multitudinous hills, beautiful Elsinore lake, the largest inland lake in California, gleams upon the view. Like a vast jewel, it glitters against the luminous darkness of the hills. It is eight miles long and four miles wide. It is lovely as a dream, still as a mirror, winding away into dim distance. Around this lake we pursue our journey, while the stars and the moon succeed the luster of the twilight. Beyond the curve of the hills the picturesque village of Elsinore is seen. Mr. F. H. Heald was the purchaser of the ranch where Elsinore and the lake now are, and he was the founder of the place and the originator of most of its improvements. He owns the lake. During the boom he sold over a million dollars' worth of property. He has a lovely home on the shores of the lake, and it was my privilege to enjoy his hospitality the short time I was in Elsinore. He is a stanch Freethinker. His daughter, equally interested in Freethought, has helped to make up the bright contributions of the "Children's Corner" in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Mr. Heald is one of the most successful business men in this country. He has given thousands of dollars' worth of property for the building of churches; but as usual the Infidel never gets any credit for this. What has the Infidel done? still cries the preacher.

I gave the first Freethought lecture in Elsinore. The audience was very good, although the churches, with a great flourish of trumpets, began a revival on that very evening. Mr. Wright and Mr. Park came in from Temescal, eight miles, and thus showed their interest in the cause. Mr. Wright is seventy-six years old, and he still keeps the flag flying. Mr. Park I met in Oregon during my campaigns there. Dr. Clark presided. I feel well satisfied with the results of this first effort. With such a generous ally as Frank H. Heald there is no doubt of the advancement of Freethought here.

Elsinore is finely situated. The lake makes an exquisit picture. There are sulphur baths here of the best quality. It is surmised that a railroad will be built directly through Elsinore from the Temescal mines to San Diego in a year or two. In spite of present quiet times Elsinore looks ahead from its romantic surroundings.

I am up at 5 o'clock the next day, and off for Colton, where I must take the evening train for Tempe and Phœnix, Ariz. I lecture at Tempe to-morrow, Friday, night. From Phœnix, where I lecture Sunday, I go to Tucson, where I lecture Monday evening. Then I go on to Texas for a month's work, and thence to New Orleans and Mississippi. Those who wish to communicate with me for lectures will please direct to 492 West Madison street, Chicago, care of E. A. Stevens.

Dr. Clark and Frank H. Heald take the train with me Thursday morn as far as Riverside and Colton. I am sorry to bid farewell to such pleasant companions. I hope that we shall join forces again.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

At Colton, March 10, 1892.

The World's Fair.

The World's Fair is still an unsettled affair in the Empire state—whether it shall be a World's Fair, open every day to all who choose to attend, or an American sectarian affair gotten up in the interest of the aristocracy and closed to the common people by a money-making clergy, who are anti-Jewish Sabbatarians. These, ignoring the seventh-day-scriptural Sabbath, substitute therefor the Constantine first day, called Sunday, because it was devoted to the worship of the sun. These anti-Jewish, anti-scriptural, and anti-Christian clergy, with the marvelous egotism and unbounded impudence of a Talmage inquisitor, propose, by unconstitutional "religious legislation," to levy a tribute of one-seventh of the time upon the religious and the non-religious people of the whole world who are invited to assemble at the World's Fair; the object being to fill their sectarian steeple-houses with the thousands of visitors, to be taxed, or else go to saloons duly provided, in which to spend their idle time and money.

Every day in the week is a Sabbath day to some of the nations invited to be at the World's Fair.

Jews keep the scriptural "seventh day;" Greeks, Monday; Persians, Tuesday; Assyrians, Wednesday; Egyptians, Thursday; Turks, Friday; Catholic and Protestant anti-Christians, Sunday; and the Shakers keep the "Sabbath of the Lord," the Sabbath that ages ago the spirit said "remained for the people of God;" that day is constituted of all the days upon which it is wrong to do wrong. In the Shaker Sabbath poverty has no more place than it had in the "church of the wilderness" of the Jews, when the God of Israel brought them up out of Egypt, the house of bondage. The land, like the air and water, was free to all alike; for forty years there was no land monopoly. Each person could gather their "daily bread"—"bread from heaven." Their shoes wore not out, and their clothes did not wax old; having food and raiment they were there with content, except when their Egyptian appetites lusted after flesh meat, because their souls loathed the manna as being light food. They were cured of all "diseases of the Egyptians of which they were sore afraid." No one said, "I am sick." Their God "took all sickness away from the midst of them." Like Shakers, they had no class non-producers, such as capitalists, doctors, lawyers, or military, no aristocracy. Count Tolstoi, getting a glimpse of Christianity, has gone to work like a common laborer or a Shaker preacher.

The Shaker order is unique, and is not numbered with the nations—with the sects of Babylon. It "dwells alone." It came into existence during the Revolution contemporary with the secular government of the United States. It is emphatically an American church, but separate from the state, like the sun from the moon. It is not of this world, and therefore its members "will not fight." Ann Lee forewarned her people that the "Whore of Babylon would hav one more sup of the blood of the saints." Does it not look like it?

Closing the World's Fair on a heathen Sun-god day, it looks like it. By unconstitutional "religious legislation," the Protestants hav killed King, of Tennessee, for working on their Sabbath day, after having kept his own seventh day—the true Sabbath. That is only the beginning of the end. If the wicked church-and-state priests, with the women—whom they hav so long deprived of their rights that, like the emancipated slaves, they are spoiled and hav become "silly women"—succeed in closing the Fair, other religions will be compelled to keep two Sabbaths every week. In this the Catholic and Protestant will unite, like Pilate and Herod. They will work together to put God and Christ into the Constitution and to destroy the American civil secular government—the republic of the human race.

State and church will be united as in Germany, and as in Russia, who is driving out into the wide world five millions of Jews, who are given the alternativ of joining the Greek national church or banishment from their nativ country, which means utter ruination. The next step will be a religious war between Catholics on one hand, and the Protestants, skeptics, and all other classes united, as they were in the civil war, on the other.

The Catholics will say to the Protestants: "Take your own medicin. You unsheath the sword, so will we unsheath it. You hav the 'mark of the beast on your hands as we hav it on our foreheads.' We both believe in war, and that war, by the Inquisition in its various modes of applicatio , can be used here to save souls from an eternal hell hereafter. In other words, the holy church can convince you of truth by tortures as your Protestant Calvin convinced Servetus, and as our Holy Inquisitors convinced Galileo that the earth was flat and that it does not turn things upside down every twenty-four hours. Is not a short period of torture here preferable to endless torture in fire and brimstone hereafter? Being thus convicted against your will, we shall be together in paradise. Can Ingersoll object to such logical conclusions?"

The founders of our government were skeptics, Freethinkers, Infidels to a bloody Christianity. The author and fifty-six signers of the Declaration of Independence were all Infidels except six. Will not Thomas Paine be materialized, and like Jesus make a "second appearance" to teach the people "common sense," and that they themselvs, and not the fighting God of Israel, nor yet Jesus Christ, are the rulers of the American republic? And that women being half of the population, "common sense" would secure to them the same "rights of man" that men possess, and which they exercise in such a bungling manner that the earth is turned to blood, and Christendom—Babylon—is a great war-camp.

The common people in Russia hav been taxed until discouraged, and they must eat the seed of 1893 in 1892, or die of starvation. That is the end that all church-and-state governments come to, and they will pass, like the extinct nations, out of existence.

The orthodox "death and hell will deliver up the dead which were in them, to be judged every man and woman according to their works," "and death and hell" (not immortal human souls), being myths, will be cast into a mythical "lake of fire and brimstone." F. W. EVANS.

Mount Lebanon, N. Y.

Relation of Mind to Matter.

Down to almost the present time few exceptions were taken to the general notion that man is a dual being; that his conscious life is a something distinct from his material body; that in vagaries, dreams, and fevers this conscious life or soul leaves the body and makes excursions far and near, returning in due time to join again and rouse it. Hence the apparently plausible theory that, on the dissolution of the body, the soul-part leaves it for good, or that it will return at some distant resurrection day to reanimate or spiritualize the same old body and forever after remain with it. It was believed by some Christians in the Dark Ages that there is somewhere in the human body a bone that will not decay, and that this bone will be the nucleus around which to gather the disintegrated particles at the resurrection. The American Indian entertains the notion that after the death of the body his dual self will return sooner or later hungry and unarmed. Hence food and weapons are placed in the grave to meet their wants.

This idea of duality in man is evidently the ground of his belief in immortality. When the so-called soul-part in dreams and visions sees and hears things it cannot see and hear when wide awake with the body, it is taken as evidence that the disembodied spirit has greatly increased powers. So we hear the remark in the presence of the dying, "He will soon know all."

The bungling compiler of the discordant fables of the creation of man in the book of Genesis givs some warrant to the dual theory. Adam is first made physically complete from dust of the earth; after which the Lord breathes into his nostrils and he becomes a living soul. As Eve was not favored in like manner, some of God's peculiar people hav held that females do not hav souls.

This account of the creation is not unreasonable as respects the order given. After water comes land; then grass, herb, and tree; then fish and fowl; then beast and cattle; and lastly, man. It would hav been foolish to create man before a light was struck, or to bring cattle on earth before grass grew. But why a tree of knowledge was placed right under Adam's nose, and he forbidden on pain of death to taste of its luscious fruit, is a question no sane person can answer.

In this order of creation we hav land, vegetation, lower animals, higher animals on up to man. But for the statement as to how Adam got his breath, this natural order might be argued in support of the evolution theory. With it, however, most persons who know more about their God than they do of themselvs, claim that he creates things out of nothing and completes the job in no time.

But within the last two or three generations students in geology, botany, zoölogy, comparativ anatomy, etc., hav found abundant evidence to prove that conscious life on this earth has been progressiv from a lower organism to a higher one; in other words, that the higher organism is evoluted from a lower one: thus demonstrating the legendary theory of a special, fixed creation to be erroneous. Not only does each variety of animal form a link in the family chain to which it belongs, but the first link of many a chain may be found in the vegetable kingdom; for there are numerous plant-animals (sea anemones, coral polyps, sponge-animals with power of locomotion, etc.) possessing one or more organs of animal life. The botanist is unable to find a point where animal life begins. While it is very likely that fishes hav evoluted from plant-animals, it is probable that all land animals sprung remotely from the soil—that is, through spontaneous generation. Earth substances contain germs of vegetable life; why not of animal life also?

Much has been said for and against this theory. Its opponents do not fully consider the fact that earth-mold, when composed of decayed vegetation mixed with suitable mineral substances, contains germs of animal life; so that, when these ingredients are united in due proportion and moisture and heat present in quantity and degree to make the conditions favorable, animal life will be generated. Dead matter strives to liv again in some form. It projects new life in great variety according to climatic and other conditions. The lowest form of animal life consists of a single cell. Infusoria life abounds in both fresh and salt water, and some of them are so diminutiv that thirty thousand hav been counted in a half ounce of sand. Even a diseased body, animal or vegetable, will generate parasitic life, as lice, itch, etc., in the former, and bugs, worms, etc., in the latter. It is the unhealthy vine that generates the worm, not the worm that brings sickness to the vine.

Many different lines of animal life hav been generated and nursed by our mother earth. Long ages ago some germ-cells evolved, through peculiar conditions and environments, the so-called saurian family; other germ cells, under different conditions, evolved, through a long chain of intermediates with many variations, the bovine family; and so with other families. Undoubtedly myriads of life-chains, before many links were formed, perished in the struggle for existence.

A high authority records that "Gaudry found the intermediate stages by which civets passed into hyenas; that Filholl disinterred still more remote ancestral carnivores; while Marsh obtained a complete series of forms intermediate between the horse and the simplest five-toed ungulates."

The zoölogist tells us that, as between the highest and the lowest types of men, a greater difference exists than does between the Papuan islanders and the gorilla. The anatomist shows us that the physical structure of the orang is almost identical with that of man; that his brain is formed of like ganglia and convolutions; and that he is subject to similar diseases. Now, will the theologian please show us just where immortality begins?

Geology furnishes unmistakable proof that lower animals were numerous on the earth ages before anything like the present highest type of man appeared. And all modern authorities now declare him to be the last link of the mammalia family chain; and that the anthropoid apes, with their still lower progenitors, are links of the same chain. But, were the claims made for a certain Jesus well founded, man himself would now be a connecting link between a lower one and a higher evolved something.

Now is suggested the interesting question, When and how does mind begin? The power of choice and the sentiment of affection are qualities of mind. Can we imagin a vertebrate animal to be without them? Certainly all animals belonging to the mammalia family possess strong maternal affection. And can it be said of the mastiff, who repeatedly, when he secures game, carries a portion to a neighboring lame spaniel, that he has no mind? Does the farmer, when his cattle get into the corn-field, think they hav no choice of food?

Animals possess humor, pride, ambition. Look at the antics of the playful kitten; how it enjoys life! And it is not afflicted with rum, revenge, or religion. The rooster will fight his rival as bravely and with the same object as man does. And whence the breath that impels the war-horse when he sniffs the battle from afar?

Man is ofttimes more brutish than the brute. Throw a piece of meat into a cage containing two tigers; both spring for it, but the successful one is allowed to retain it without a quarrel; while man often robs and sometimes murders his neighbor. The individual who says that "the heart [mind] of man is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked," givs his inspired opinion. Another inspired individual who recommends us to worship some Lord with all our heart, and with all our soul, and with all our mind, and with all our strength, seems to be in doubt as to where and what is conscious life.

But it is now generally conceded that the seat of thought is in the brain, and that this mind-organ, by long and increased exercise, increases in volume and strength just as any other organ improves by use.

The seven-year-old girl, blind, deaf, and dumb from one and a half years of age, probably retains some impression of sight and sound; and should she hereafter, with no religious instruction (by way of experiment), evince a vague sense of some force beyond her ken, a lot of priests will flatter themselvs that they hav discovered a little much-needed light in their dark profession. That the girl thinks at all is proof only that she has brain.

The dog or Indian who thinks his spirit-part in a dream is absent from the body, always finds it present on awaking. But no such phenomenon takes place on the death of the body.

If a diseased brain affects the mind, then, logically, when there is no brain, there is no mind. Brain is Nature's soil from which springs thought or mind. We can no more imagin mind without brain than we can a hurricane without air. Yet conceited man tries to fancy his mind to be an immortal something independent of matter. His own scripture, affirming that man hath no preëminence above the beast, might be quoted; but this authority is no longer infallible.

Let folks enjoy the idea of immortality if they can do so without robbing unbelievers here and threatening them with a hell hereafter.

If man is blessed or curst with an eternal life after he is done with the present one, he will hav a long time to reflect on or without matter. But the obscurity enveloping this question is dense enough to cause even the priest, were his brain not disordered, to confine himself to the struggle for life in this world. Mind clings to its nativ matter; and the mind of the Christian, in spite of his assumption of a future life of far greater happiness, is never quite ready to exchange the bosom of his family for the bosom of Abraham. L. G. REED.

Our London Letter.

The reverend individual who a short time since publicly declared that Atheists were systematically cruel to children has never, though called upon to do so, given a single instance to bear out his statement, and must join the ranks of the convicted clerical liars, of whom there are many. Although convictions for the grossest brutality to the little ones are of such frequent occurrence as to pass almost without notice, the brutes are invariably persons of strong religious opinions, and are by no means confined to the lower classes. Many cases of extreme fiendishness can be cited as emanating from those moving in what is termed the "higher circles," the latest being that of a magistrate's wife in Ireland, who confessedly treated her infant girl in such a fashion that caused its death, and has also continually ill-treated her other children. Being a recent convert to Roman Catholicism, she has been assured of the feeling of deepest sympathy from her parish priest in her "deep misfortune;" he thinks she ought not to be called to account for her evil deeds, and attributes the prosecution to the malevolence of the Protestant party. No doubt she will get off easily enough. The magistrates before whom she was examined, though she was indicted on a charge of willful murder, evidently consider the charge of little moment, as she is admitted to bail in quite a small amount, bail in any amount being never allowed in a murder charge. But it is a good thing to be a wealthy Christian, as the Rev. Mr. McKenzie will say, for he has on a second conviction for indecent conduct been sentenced to a short term of imprisonment as a first-class misdemeanant, which is no punishment whatever. Possibly his judge sympathizes with him. "A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind."

The pious De Cobain, member for East Belfast, has been expelled from the House of Commons, not for his immorality, but because he has absented himself from his duties without permission. What a corrupting influence this plan appears to be, so many of the members being tarred with the same brush; if common report were legal proof, the benches would be very empty.

The children of God meet with many trials in this world; the greatest and best-loved one, according to his own account, the present emperor of Germany, is meeting with sore crosses. His obstinate people will not see that he is a heaven-sent messenger to lead them to bliss, and show he must be possessed of great Christian patience to put up with such a stiff-necked generation. They never think that he may be taken from them, when they would be left, a flock without a shepherd, following their own evil devices, and casting away from them, to their utter and eternal loss, the spiritual for the material bread.

The godly czar of Russia is also sorely distressed and burdened with the cares of a worldly crown, and an ungrateful people who will persist in depriving themselvs of food in the midst of abundance to bring their "little father" into disrepute with outside barbarians and scoffers at the Holy Greek church. Those who truly love and serve "Him" hav indeed many and sore trials to their faith, but great will be their reward. What a pity they cannot be persuaded to take it at once!

The great Baxter is once more to the front, assisted by five minor prophets. He is holding forth on the millennium, which, according to the dogmatic Daniel, will take place positivly on 11th April, 1901. Next year is to take place the greatest war on record, and the appearance of another Napoleon—as king of Greece this time—a general massacre of Christians, and the ascension of one hundred and forty-four thousand who hav managed to escape the persecution. As these little events hav been promised so many times since 1867, no one seems greatly perturbed by the latest prediction.

With that large-hearted liberality so common amongst Christians, certain evangelists in the East End of London are strongly opposing two candidates for the county council solely because they are in favor of making Sunday a little less burdensome than it now is to the toiling masses. It is admitted that they are in all other respects the best candidates in the field; but, being opposed to Sunday drunkenness and consequent misery, and in favor of elevating the masses, they must be cast into outer darkness. These wretched evangelists do not wish the poor to improve their minds and circumstances, but do their utmost to keep them in their misery, hoping thereby to make them as hypocritical and mean as themselvs. There is no person so contemptible as a full-fledged Christian. J. D.

My Lecture Trip.

In my last letter I forgot to mention Marius Heighton and Joseph Heighton, whom I had the pleasure of meeting in Kent. The former had arranged my course of lectures as secretary to the society, while the latter made the meetings more attractiv by rendering selections of music upon the violin. Leaving Kent by an early train on Monday morning, I went on again to Middlefield, where a lecture had been arranged for me by B. O. Fenton, of Bundysburg, a little village situated about five miles from the former place. This was the first time in the history of this little burg that an "Infidel" lecture had been delivered. At the first considerable excitement prevailed, and many came to listen merely from curiosity; others came with a desire to learn something; and again, others were there just to "catch on to" what was going on, so that, as is usual in such cases, I had an exceedingly mixed audience to deal with. Just how far each and every individual desire was gratified it is impossible for me to say, but by far the greater number appeared to indorse what I said, and frequently showed their appreciation thereof. I met with no opposition, except, perhaps, a little questioning at the close of the meeting, by the principal from the local school, the same not having courage to question me publicly. Scarcely sufficient notice had been given of the lecture, consequently there was not such an audience as our friends had anticipated. Nevertheless, the city hall was more than half full, and many ladies could be seen among the rest, which I thought was an extremely good showing for such a small place. The snow-storms had been pretty general, and Middlefield, which is a few miles below Lake Erie, had received perhaps more than its share. I was pleased to meet here such stalwart Liberals as B. O. Fenton and family, whose name has appeared in the Liberal papers from time to time, and whose guest I remained during my stay here, also Ezra Ohl, and several others.

From Middlefield I resumed my travels again, this time to Farmdale, where I gave two lectures. Thanks to the efforts of T. D. Root, Farmdale is an extremely Liberal town. In fact, it is regarded as a town of Infidels by a neighboring rival town, and the inhabitants do not seem to resent the name, and thrive just as well as and perhaps better than their jealous rival. My first lecture drew an exceedingly large audience, many friends coming from quite a distance in the country; for though the weather had assumed a severity in its temperature, still sleighing was good, and our friends were willing to face the cold in order to hear the lecture. Considerable satisfaction was expressed by all present at this, my first lecture in Farmdale. The next day being the 28th of January, one day preceding the anniversary of the death of Thomas Paine, it was agreed that a Paine celebration should be held. The musicians, who had enlivened our meetings by some fine selections of music, consented to favor us with their presence again, and so the next evening immediately after I had given them an address upon the "Author-Hero of the American Revolution," a sociable and dance took place, whereat the festivities ran high until a late hour, when the gathering dispersed. All seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselvs, old and young alike, and expressed a desire that Paine celebrations could occur every week. While here I was the honored guest of Mr. and Mrs. Root. Their kindness to me and the pleasant hours I spent with them at their home will form another of those tender memories the recollections of which can never fade.

On again, the next morning I started en route for Pittsburgh, where I had been engaged to deliver an oration on Thomas Paine. This is January 29th, the one hundred and fifty-fifth anniversary of the natal day of that devoted champion of religious and political liberty. Elaborate preparations had been made by the Pittsburgh Secular Society to celebrate the occasion. Flags and bunting were lavishly displayed; around the hall had been painted the names of nearly one hundred of the world's greatest reformers, scientists, and patriots of every age and clime, living and dead; the platform was handsomely decorated with evergreens and flowers. On the platform, to the left of the audience, stood a large and beautiful full-length portrait of Thomas Paine, in a massiv gilt frame. The picture represented our hero standing with both feet upon and crushing down "Superstitious Creeds," "Discarded Theories of the Past," and "Priestcraft." In his left he holds the opened pages of his "Age of Reason," a book that has converted thousands of Christians to Freethought, while, with the index-finger of his right hand, he is pointing toward a sunburst, representing "Truth" and "Liberty." To the right of the audience stood a beautiful picture of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll which drew forth a burst of applause when hung up by Harry Hoover.

A magnificent literary and musical program had been arranged, interspersed with songs, readings, and recitations. In the middle of this program had been placed my address, and as my surroundings had put me in an exceedingly good humor, I fell to and strained every nerve to make my part in this celebration harmonize with the rest. The greatest enthusiasm was displayed throughout the entire proceedings, and I can safely say that never was an anniversary of the birthday of Thomas Paine celebrated with greater éclat than in Pittsburgh on January 29th last. Fully from seven to eight hundred people were present, and the spirit of enthusiasm which seemed to pervade the whole assembly thrilled each heart with joy, all of which speaks out in plain and unmistakable terms the place that Thomas Paine is destined to hold in the hearts of the American people. At the conclusion of the miscellaneous program a very interesting and happy episode took place, being nothing less than the consummation of a secular marriage between Miss Louisa Barker, the eldest daughter of our esteemed friend and co-worker, Anthony Barker, of Pittsburgh, and Joseph Murray, a rising young farmer and citizen of Colorado. The ceremony was performed upon the platform by Alderman Beinhauer, after a few appropriate introductory remarks by our old compatriot, Harry Hoover. At the conclusion of the marriage ceremony a large engraving of the picture of Thomas Paine, previously mentioned, surrounded by a handsome gilt frame, was presented to the bride by Mr. J. Peirce, the president of the society. While the bride and bridegroom were receiving the congratulations of friends, the room was cleared for dancing, and all present danced long and merrily to beautiful strains of music rendered by the United States orchestra.

On the Sunday following I gave another lecture under the auspices of th society before a large and crowded audience. A good and lively discussion followed the lecture, which was participated in by a Unitarian minister, a Rev. Mr. St. John. Another preacher also was present, the Rev. Mr. Andrews, of the Universalist "perswashun," but who abstained from taking part in the discussion, which was open to all, although, as I hav been advised later, he thought fit to denounce me with the most scurrilous abuse before his own congregation, some twenty persons, and of course after I had gone, which to my mind was an exhibition of exceeding bad taste, and a sad deficiency of that moral courage we hav a right to expect in such discussions. I was very pleased indeed to meet once more our friends in Pittsburgh—Harry Hoover, Roman Staley, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Barker and family, Joseph Peirce, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Van Meirop, Mrs. Hughes, Miss Grant, Mr. Schade and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Paff.

Before leaving Pittsburgh, the Secular Society presented to me a beautiful large photograph of the picture of Thomas Paine, and Mrs. Paff presented me with a handsomely bound volume of Shelley's works, for which I tender to them my most heartfelt thanks. With best wishes from all, and promising to visit them again in the near future, I took my departure from the Smoky City—for home.

Ere this is in print I shall be again in the lecture field on my way to Columbus, O., in order to arrange for the meeting of Freethinkers in that city on the 3d of April next, and friends desiring lectures in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan during the latter end of April, May, and June will please address me in care of J. B. Cochran, 112 West Maple street, Columbus, O.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

The Conspiracy of Silence.

The conspiracy of silence has won its way to the front, and demands recognition, inasmuch as it is the final argument upon which modern Christianity scores a victory. Its theological lore and its so-claimed historical achievements during the controversies of centuries, are rendered null and void in the presence of this new factor contained in the conspiracy of silence, although it is in itself the most contemptible of all of the appliances which hypocrisy has yet invented. But with its barefaced hypocrisy it is made to do service in the interest of Christian duplicity. Its main function is to hide from the world the true inward rottenness of the church of the Christ so-called. The devotee of the Christian religion must take lessons at this shrine of speechlessness, and thus learn to doom every honest conviction to silence. What a disgraceful reflection, though, it is upon the intellectual and moral development of the people. But when people, claiming to be decent, will associate for the conceded purpose to form a conspiracy to prevent or defeat the statement of an honest conviction, we must deny that they hav ever been emancipated from the nightmare of religious superstition. But this attempt on the part of the church is as bold as it is treacherous; but ignorance and cunning are fully competent to play the role of trickery and boldness because of the large excess of numbers they control, which often makes knowledge and wisdom timid, and they stand confounded, while duplicity and craft formulate the method, and it is enforced by numerical strength. But it will strike one as a strange paradox that knowledge and wisdom are rendered comparativly powerless by formulated ignorance, and that among a people emancipated from political and religious despotism. Why should it not be safe for such a people to utter their honest opinion, not instead be compelled by silence to testify to a lie?

That such a state of things exists is one of the saddest facts in civilization, and one which portends a serious check to the progress which our civilization is striving to secure. This state of things is largely due to the despotic social structures which Christianity has created through conspiracy of silence. The intent is to check, as far as possible, the secular progress which the achievements of this inventiv age emphasize so emphatically.

The religion of silence having failed in all that it once claimed as divine, having invalidated its claim to truth and trustworthiness by its oft-repeated attempts to correct its divine creeds and its God-given inspired Bible, now seeks by its malicious criminal conduct to overthrow the legitimate result of its defeat, which defeat contains a promis of its destruction. Seeing this, it is prompted to use means and measures within its own social forces to regain the influence which it compromised in the loss of its creeds and Bible. The method is that the blameworthy social forces are conducted so directly and with such skillful concealment that the very elect are deceived. In the enforcement of its measures it persistently ignores everything, all speech and conduct, which has any positiv religious conviction. It makes no condition in its new creed in relation to belief—no heaven or damnation, no trinity nor incarnation. Its favors are denied to none, its communions are open to all who may feel inclined to come into the social compact with the only one proviso—that of silence. Hold your tongue, ask no questions, remember that you are under a conspiracy of silence. Your moral status will be in proportion to that humble, teachable spirit which is willing to go it blind. No hight of excellency will be denied to you if you hav learned the art of religious concealment and will not allow yourself to entertain any convictions that are honest and truthful. Let all your deliverance be in harmony with this speechless conspiracy, and in the event that any rational thoughts of inquiry should arise in consciousness you must bid the same to depart with the assurance that all such rational thinking comes from the devil.

You will promptly say with virtuous indignation, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

Of course position and money are weighty considerations and render recognition more pronounced when admission is sought for. These weighty factors are highly praiseworthy within this compact, and will cause a multitude of sins. It is true that the creed in the long ago did exclude this pronounced recognition, but that was before this conspiracy of silence had a beginning. Poverty was once that potent factor which opened heaven's gates, but this was before the gates of the New Jerusalem were put to swing on golden hinges. This was when it was "easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." Of course the poor in the conspiracy are not excluded by any formulated terms within the compact, but the door is quite well guarded by eyes, noses, and shoulder gestures, so that the most part of this objectionable class will be kept out.

It is quite an important feature in this conspiracy of silence to shun on all occasions any discussion having a religious tendency, and thus avoid all possible antagonism. Religions are learned from the pulpit, and are to be kept strictly within-doors, only to be seen or heard from within the dedicated walls of the house of the God. Silence is the foundation of the new redemption. The world must not know you from the sinners. You will hav no badge that will giv you away. You hav, then, the same rights, such as other people hav. You can dance like a sinner, smoke, eat, and sleep like a sinner, play cards, flirt, and hav a good time; but remember that you are a child of redemption, washed in the blood of Christ. But keep mum, do not speak of it; remember that you are to keep good faith with the conspiracy of silence. You can invite your acquaintances to come with you into this new church of the Christ, assuring them that all the demands which will be made upon them will be charity funds, and silence. Do not say anything about religion, and then the people will not know what you believe. Whether you believe in one God, no God, or a dozen of them, it is all the same, if you only hold your tongue. The highest praiseworthy testimony which you can giv is that of silence. Such really is very near the true condition of the city churches of to-day. Faith is no longer a condition of communion; social position, especially accompanied with wealth, cuts off all questions of faith which hav any meaning, even to the exclusion of the supernatural, but it seeks to find compensation to make up this loss through the social forces in the social structures which it largely controls. This control is secured by a practical renunciation of all that was once the practical side of Christianity. Christianity is the most worldly of all religions in this wide world. It is well equipped to enter the field of competition in fashionable sins of all sorts, and of all grades, in fact, with any other people in this world. The devil's children hav invented no sinful practice which the church has not appropriated; and hence it is that the modern church of Christ has in almost everything copied the ways of the world. This world and the love of the world, which at one time was considered soul-destroying, is no longer thus considered. There are no people who love the world and the things that are in the world more than do the saints. You may be well assured that they deny themselvs no good thing—nothing that lends a zest to the enjoyments of life. No objects of desire do they deny themselvs of when the same is attainable. We blame them not for those things, though thereby they crucify their Christ and put him to an open shame. They are better than they used to be; so in this age it comes to pass that a decent saint is nearly as good as a decent sinner. Take out the hypocrisy which the saint necessarily possesses, and then we are ready to say that he is as good as a sinner. But nowadays they do not hav to make any pretenses. They only need to keep still, say nothing, and their salvation is near.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Oaks From Acorns.

A TRIPLET OF SONNETS.

A tiny seed—a germ infinitesimal,
  Borne thither by one of the winged flock,
  Or borne by winds, found crevice in a rock,
A gloomy chamber, dark and foul and dismal.
But the sun's rays and the warm rain's baptismal
  Nurtured and coaxed it upward to the day,
  Till over mossy walls it felt its way
To meet the morning from its death abysmal.
Its slender stem a child might then hav spanned;
  But from accretions caught from storm and dew,
    It found its bounds too narrow and begun
To feel its barrier with a firmer hand;
  Till Titan-like its silent forces threw
    The bowlders down and rose to greet the sun.

Within the cleft of a king's scepter fell
  The germ of Freedom. Long in darkness shrouded,
  Oppression, Fear, and Death around it crowded;
But Love's and Virtue's tears—a living well—
Bedewed the tender shoot. Beyond its cell
  It caught the glimmer of a freer sky,
  All rosy with the dawn of liberty,
And clambered upward from its crumbling shell.
On blood of freemen's hearts its tendrils fed;
  It drank new life from every patriot's tears;
    It gathered force from every martyr's groan;
It caught the spirit of the chainless dead,
  And feeling for Oppression's bloody piers,
    Hurled down the hated tyrant from his throne.

Within a fissure of the human heart
  A germ of doubt engendered. None might say
  Its origin, and none foretell its way;
But it took root and grew to be apart,
And added color with a subtle art
  Unto the web of thought. It loathed the mire
  Of myth and superstition, looking higher
For truth and knowledge. Science gave it start,
And it ascended past the barren rocks
  Of faiths and forms and creeds, and saw the face
    Of mighty Nature, and revealed her law.
It gave to miracles and fables knocks
  That crumbled their foundations: in their place
    It reared Truth's temple, firm, without a flaw.

St. Paul, Minn. DAVID WILLIAM MCCOURT.

Worse Or Better?

The world is getting wiser, it is true, but is getting much worse, it is too true: that is my experience and opinion. The people are getting more extravagant year after year.

Thus writes one of the kindest and most benevolent of men. Pitiful and generous, grand and free-hearted, but I think mistaken in his estimate of our kind. It is very true there is crime, inhumanity, and extravagance, and far, far too much of it. But if we take into consideration the fact that every petty crime or wrong that occurs now is published and republished far and wide, told in glowing colors and made capital out of in the interest of newspaper patronage, we shall begin to see that the devil is not as black as he is painted. Then too, as laws multiply and increase, thousands of things that once occurred as a matter of course are now unlawful and criminal-producing, thus running the statistics of crime away up yonder, while the very same things done in former days were no offense to government. For instance, in the present time our court-days are largely devoted to liquor cases, which in the "good old times" had no existence, for all were free to make, drink, or sell alcoholic beverages. Just so in regard to mailing physiological or sexual works, and the old classics. Once they could go freely, and public opinion was the only censor. Now there are few of them that are not liable to be found criminal by an ignorant jury of "twelv good men and true," and our best saviors thus made criminals by law.

Once children were tortured, whipped, and subjected to all manner of indignities in our public schools, and the other pupils enjoyed looking on and seeing the misery of their mates. Now children are treated like little ladies and gentlemen, and many are so sensitiv they would faint away at sights their ancestors delighted in. Horses were then tamed (!) by brute force, while now we hav Bands of Mercy innumerable and the whip is banished not only from the house, but the stable and cowyard. Our jails, prisons, and insane asylums are under improved humane regulations. Everywhere love, charity, and kindness are increasing, and cruelty, brutality, and revenge are playing out.

Hell is frozen over, and all punishment is slowly but surely being eliminated from our social and moral code.

As to extravagance, go back and read of the extravagance of olden times, and see if we exceed it. Even in costly buildings can we rival Solomon's temple or the Hanging Gardens, the pyramids, the great reservoir "nine miles in circumference"—dissolving pearls and drinking them, and numerous other extravagances with which we are all familiar? Heliogabalus showers his guests with roses till some are actually smothered to death in sweetness, while our modern hosts are many of them content to hire floral decorations from salesmen and return them when the party is over. It seems to me there is more and more economy, thrift, and industry as years roll by, and intelligence and experience teach the utilization of much that our ancestors wasted. My verdict is that the world is not growing worse, but better.

To-morrow will come with a brighter light
  Than yesterday ever knew;
For a pleasure unknown and a new delight
  Will gladden it through and through.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

Political Methodism.

The recent Kansas 'general conference" of Methodis s resolved itself into a howling, screeching hot-house political convention. It was a regular messiah craze, Indian ghost-dance, the exciting theme being the achievement of national Prohibition, evangelical rule, and universal righteousness. The most bitter and inflammatory harangs were made, threatening the Republican party with annihilation in case it backslid from its allegiance to the Methodist church and eliminated the Prohibition plank from its platform as it bravely talks of doing.

The big chiefs and the little chiefs, the old Sitting Bulls and the young Sitting Bulls, with the reddest war-paint on their faces, snorted and cavorted and whetted their scalping-knives and flourished their tomahawks in eager anticipation of the approaching massacre. Prohibition was declared a failure with the ungodly in power, and Harrison's administration was denounced as being in cahoot with the whisky ring.

The Methodist church is eighty thousand strong in Kansas. It is thoroughly organized. Every member is a servil jumping-jack and every preacher is a politician. It is a machine, a Jesuitical Inquisition. It has just ground to powder Rev. A. H. Tevis, D.D., of Kansas City, for disrespect to an upstart superior officer, Presiding Elder Gill. Tevis says: "While in the Kansas conference there has been a maliciousness and vindictivness shown me that would hav honored the Dark Ages—the spirit of the Inquisition. My trial was an unparalleled outrage—a mockery o justice." That is good testimony. Tevis ought to know what mean devils the Methodist preachers are. He has felt their fangs.

With the Presbyterian, Congregational, and Baptist churches acting as a tail to its kite, the Methodist church has run the politics of Kansas to suit itself. Governor Humphrey's first term was a sickening exhibition of Methodist dirt-eating. As a sample—he once sent an embassador to Leavenworth to crawl upon his belly and lick the dust in the presence of his augest majesty, the jack-leg Methodist preacher "in charge," and beg of him to name the men whom the governor should appoint police commissioners. Had a Democratic governor deferred thus to a Catholic priest the whole Republican and Protestant world would hav set up a howl, and justly so. It makes a heap of difference whose ox is gored. The platform adopted by this Methodist convention has planks against theaters, dancing, race-courses, cards, and "many other forms of amusements permitted in some localities," Sunday railroad trains, street-cars, World's Fair, etc.

In publishing the proceedings of the conference the ungodly pagans of the Kansas City Times printed the Bible quotation, "mint, anis, and cumin," as "mist, arnica, and cinnamon." A decided improvement on the old version, but it failed to please the preachers. They actually got mad about it.

The Methodist church is nothing if not ambitious and aggressiv. It is working hard to secure control of the government and it wants all the Prohibition "Liberals" it can get to help it do so.

S. R. SHEPHERD.

Little Blasphemies.

Why is a bald head like heaven? Because there is no dyeing or parting there.

Preacher: "De Lawd made Adam out of clay and put 'im 'gin de fence to dry."

Uncle Rufus: "Hold on dar, Mr. Preacher. Who made dat fence?"

Preacher: "Go long dar, you fool nigger, don't be asking dem Infidel questions."

Letters of Friends.

The Work of Pictures.

DANBURY, NEB., Feb. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed is $1 for the new Bible Picture Book. We hav the other picture book, and it is going the rounds. Everybody is crazy to see it. It is making lots of converts, for very many people will look at pictures that you could not hire to listen to or read a lecture.

Respectfully, EMMA J. PLUMB.

A Devoted Sister.

FORESTVILLE, N. Y., Feb. 23, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: My eighty-first birthday has passed, for I, Harriet Amidon, was born in Granville, Washington county, N. Y., in 1811, and though I am getting too old to take an activ part in the good work of Freethought, I am still able to enjoy THE TRUTH SEEKER, and find it one of my chief pleasures.

Your friend and well-wisher,

MRS. J. W. BENNETT.

The Pictures Produce Smiles of Doubt.

TACOMA, WASH., Feb. 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $1 for the new Bible Picture Book. Please send it by mail. I do not see how any thinking person can object to the pictures that THE TRUTH SEEKER has each week. Each one is a sermon. By studying them three minutes one gets a better idea of the foolishness and absurdity of the holy Bible than by reading an hour. They add fifty per cent to the paper. Many who do not dare read a word in the paper view the pictures, and though at first angry soon get so they look at them carefully, read the accompanying text, and soon smile, which is the dawn of a doubt. EBEN PIERCE.

Think and Read.

VERMONT, IND., March 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1 for pamphlets enumerated on slip. Your Picture Book, Bible Pictures, was received, and I am much pleased with it. It is "just rich."

This hot-bed of religion and superstition is receiving a shaking-up as never before. All that is necessary to shatter superstition is to get people to think and read the right kind of literature. I hav quite a number of pamphlets—"Age of Reason," "Orthodoxy," "Bible Morals," "False Claims," etc., all of which are doing missionary work in a way that is shocking to the old orthodox people.

Yours for justice and liberty vs. superstition, M. S. TROYER, P.M.

A Truth Seeker's Passing Awa .

NESHOBA CO., MISS., Jan. 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As Mr. Baker is dead, I feel it my duty to let you know of his death. He died on the 10th of this month. He died partly from a fall and partly from kidney affection. He was sick about three weeks, suffered a great deal, but died without a struggle. He died as he lived, a lover of truth and opposed to the orthodox creed. He was eighty-three years old, a workman by trade. He was a great admirer of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and called it his Bible. Mr. W. Le Baker was my father-in-law, and was living with me at the time of his death. Myself and wife admire THE TRUTH SEEKER, and as the time is out we will renew for six months. We also wish Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason." C. F. TINGLE.

A Courageous Lady.

WESTMINSTER, CAL., Feb. 19, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $3 for renewal of subscription of my husband, L. W. Gallup, deceased. Mr. Gallup was a stanch friend of Freethought and THE TRUTH SEEKER, and has long been on your list of yearly subscribers. Although I am now a widow with three little children dependent on me for support, I hav at last saved enough to pay up another year's subscription.

In future, please send the paper to Mrs. Augusta Gallup instead of to Luke Wm. Gallup.

Westminster and vicinity is a very hot-bed of superstition and orthodoxy, and the Sunday-school people think I hav one foot in hades and am just stepping in with the other and "dragging my children to perdition." But I am happy to say that this is a free country and we can raise our children up in truth if we want to, and not be compelled by fanatics to giv them weekly doses of filthy Bible stuff.

Long liv THE TRUTH SEEKER and Mr. Heston. The pictures are something the children can comprehend and something the old people can enjoy.

Let the good work go on.

Your friend, AUGUSTA GALLUP.

Hav a Genuin Anti-Theological Society.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 12, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $3.75, $3 of which is for renewal, the remainder for the books named. Send a few printed letters to Congressmen for remaining twenty cents.

I hope, Mr. Editor, something will soon be done to organize a real live national Secular society with anti-theological objects. Money is too hard for honest Freethinkers to get to throw it away in propagating Unitarianism. I see from this week's TRUTH SEEKER that our new president is about as pious as our last one. Let Freethinkers withhold their subscriptions and spend their little money in a more useful way, and let their numerous pious allies, of which Miss Craddock boasts so much, pay their salaries. THOMAS HINDLE.

Tried To Believe the Bible But Failed.

PORTLAND, ARK., March 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Being a new subscriber, I must say the noble TRUTH SEEKER was received in due time, and I want you to be punctual in sending it regularly, because I value it highly and do not want to miss a single copy. Most of my neighbors around here need it badly to enlighten them, but they being so much under the influence of religion and the ministers, it is totally useless to show it to them. I would hav been one of your subscribers long ago, but knew nothing about THE TRUTH SEEKER, and stumbled on it by accident. I hav been a "doubting Thomas" all the days of my life, but at intervals I hav tried to believe in the Bible; hav done my best to swallow it, anyhow; but failed, and now I return to reason and common sense, placing myself under the banner of the good old TRUTH SEEKER. I am,

For mental freedom,

CHARLIE DEAN, the Infidel.

As Likely to See the Fair as Infidels to Enter Heaven.

CROOKSTON, MINN., Feb. 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $2.55, for which send me the herein-named books.

I like THE TRUTH SEEKER very well. It comes to me Sunday mornings, and I read it all with great satisfaction. I like to follow the discussions on finance. I favor W. P. Brooks's ideas in that respect. I like Ingersoll's ideas on all subjects except his ideas of money. He, however, may be right, and I wrong. I should like to hear him tackle the subject more thoroughly than he has of late.

I am glad to see that the State Liberal Union of San Francisco, Cal., hav resolved to giv aid and encouragement to organization of farmers in their struggle against monopolies. I trust that Liberals in all cities hav the same policy, and that they will take up the matter in due time. I can assure you that amongst the organizations of farmers you will find the most activ workers are Liberals or Freethinkers. I believe the Farmers' Alliance is in favor of opening the World's Fair on Sunday. It is, however, a matter that does not enter the thoughts of our ordinary farmer, as there is about as much chance for him to come to the World's Fair as there is for an Infidel to enter the kingdom of heaven.

Wishing THE TRUTH SEEKER and the "Secular pilgrims" success, I am,

Yours very truly, ELIAS STEENERSON.

Terse Tariff Talk.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., March 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Some of those long tariff articles were an infliction. One was replete with gross errors as to facts, the result of ignorance or partisan insanity. Both sides are right—both wrong. In the abstract, free trade is right, unquestionably, but impracticable at the present time. Reciprocity is fair play. Nations are like families. If Jones refuses to patronize me I do not want any of my family to buy a thing of him. Keep the balance even. The silver rule is good enough. Open ports and unrestricted free entry to everything and to every nation would be unwise. But after all it makes little difference how revenue is raised. Tariff is tax and tax is tariff—direct and indirect; waste in collection about equal—difference not worth fighting about. I would prefer direct, "progressiv" taxation—$1,000, exemption; next $2,000, one mill; $4,000, two mills; $50,000, twenty-five mills; $100,000, fifty mills, and so on, one mill added for every $2,000. All apparent wrongs and inequalities of tariff tax are soon corrected by the readjusting and compensating forces at work in the laws of trade. It is the eternal changing, tinkering, and uncertainty that causes the harm. Tariff, like the shield gold on one side and silver on the other, is a good bone of contention. But "protection" is a gauzy delusion. It is a bull-ring that demagogs put in the noses of unphilosophical, unreasoning men. It is a scarecrow erected by political priests to frighten timorous souls into paying tithes and worshiping at their shrine. S. R. SHEPHERD.

Two Devoted Friends of Their Race.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $4, which is for my wife's TRUTH SEEKER subscription, and $1 for the benefit of the paper. You will please send some free sample pages of the "Pictorial Text-Book" and anything you think proper that will aid in getting subscribers for the paper. If you hav any copies you can spare, my wife will giv them away. She sends her paper away as soon as done with to different parts of the country. About eighteen months since I was stricken with paralysis, losing entirely the use of my left side and limbs. My wife, who is rather feeble, has very little time to visit anywhere or go out to try to get subscribers. I am a deal better than I was a year ago, but scarcely expect ever to walk again. I can go from room to room by means of a chair our son fitted up for the purpose, and can go out in fine weather by means of it, but am a close prisoner from October until about the 1st of May. As we are both in our seventy-ninth year, it is not likely we can liv a great while longer.

Wishing the prosperity of the paper and the cause of truth, my wife joining in the same, I am, Yours sincerely,

FRANCIS S. BRETTELL.

P.S.—We would like to know if you hav any blank petitions in favor of opening the World's Fair at Chicago on Sunday. Please send us one. We think we can get a number of signatures to it.

Recollections of Old-Time Clergy.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Feb. 12, 292 E.M.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith I hand you post-office money order for the Pictorial Book.

The St. Joseph daily Herald is growing more Liberal every week. It has published a large number of Colonel Ingersoll's speeches, lectures, and his side of the correspondence between the clergy (grasshoppers, lying pirates) and himself on his Christmas Sermon.

I remember well when I was a little boy and first began to read and observe what was going on in society, the course pursued by the preachers toward those who differed from them, and whom they took great delight in denouncing as Infidels and criminals, and whom it was pleasing to their God, and worthy of all praise, for good Christians to boycott and crush out by all manner of means possible. It was almost impossible to procure a hall or any public or private building for Liberals to hold meetings in for lectures on any subject, scientific, on labor problems, homesteads on the public lands, on slavery, or on any other subject not in accordance with the ideas of the rascally priests. Then it was impossible to get a notice in any newspaper anywhere west of Cincinnati, O., for any Infidel lecture. The pirates had everything under their control, and they used the power without justice or mercy. Mercy! justice!! a regard for the rights of others!!! why, you might with as much propriety apply to a lion or a tiger for justice, mercy, or a fair hearing on the injustice of devouring an ox which he had in his power. I am often called upon in lodges and other places to speak, and I never let an opportunity pass without hauling them over the record which they hav made, but which they are ashamed of and would most gladly blot out if they could. P. V. WISE.

Lofty Incitements.

VERNAL, UTAH, Feb. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am only a poor editor in a stronghold of the Mormon faith, but though necessity excludes religion from the paper, I am always outspoken in my own sentiments, and tolerant and patient with those who think differently. I believe Utah is ripe for Infidelity. The growing generation is throwing off the shackles of superstition. And let all of us try and inculcate the principles with which we supplant the scriptural ethics, thus showing the world what a country of Infidels can be. We must not be content with pulling down, but we must be examples of honor and justice to those emerging into the light. I never before felt such a responsibility for every action as I hav since becoming a Deist. It is so grand and noble and elevating—this religion, of whom Paine was the great expounder. It is a peace born of the solid rock to which it is anchored.

The Mormon people do not differ materially from the rest of the race. They are kind friends and good neighbors, and feel all the joys and sorrows of their orthodox brothers.

I wish every Liberal in Utah who reads this would write to me, so that we may exchange ideas on the regeneration of the people among whom we liv. I believe what we need is more Secular papers. Every state and territory in the Union should hav a paper, devoid of crankism, devoted to the moral, intellectual, and physical improvement of its people. Remember, dear friends, that the freedom from superstitions imposes new obligations. Take away the weapon of the church, that Infidelity is immorality, and show what the religion of humanity means.

W. M. SCHICK.

The Thieves Feel the Halter Draw.

FORT MCDOWELL, ARIZ., Feb. 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav not written to or heard from the brave old TRUTH SEEKER for more than a month. I hav just received a letter from my wife, however, at Hartford, Kan., and she informs me that an article of mine published in THE TRUTH SEEKER for January 16th, which I hav not seen, caused as much consternation among the Christians of Hartford as though a bombshell had exploded in the congregation. There happens to be a little animosity among the sects there, and the rival churches are using my article as capital with which to turn the laugh on the Campbellites. The dear "sistern" and a few toughs recently converted are evidently hot; but wife says: "The M. E.'s are rejoicing. They say it is the truth, and they will stand by you." Farther on she says: "Our reputation is not injured very much in Hartford on account of your article in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Old Mr. Holt says: 'Just let them touch Al Darrow if they dare. I hav got the money to back him and I will tear that church all to picces.' [Holt used to be a Campbellite preacher.] And Josh Collins told Carrie Boyd last night that it had only raised you in the estimation of the best people in Hartford, because it showed there was one man here brave enough to giv his honest opinion." Nevertheless, there are some whose righteous indignation and pious fervor, she tells me, would not stop short of a lively rumpus if their caterwauling could be made to reach my ears. I hav just had my hair cut short in anticipation of a visit from the dear sisters, but I do not expect to be honored with anything worse than a billingsgate letter stopping far short of Catiline's "burst of ocean in the earthquake, rolling back in swift and mountainous ruin."

Well, Mr. Editor, the weather is lovely here, just like spring and early summer in the East, and has been so during the month that I hav been here. I am sitting out of doors on a bench writing, and the air is as balmy as the balmiest you ever experienced in New York. When we get our canal system completed we are going to transform this wilderness into a paradise, and

Make the desert waste rejoice
And blossom as the rose.

More anon, when I get the back numbers. A. H. DARROW.

Priests Overthrown on the Sunday Question.

KENT, O., Feb. 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Not long ago, I was at work in my orchard hoeing my potatoes in the month of June, and it was a most lovely morning, when some one cried, "Hello there, my dear sir, did you know that this was the Sabbath day?" "No, indeed," said I. And two priests drove up to the fence with a fine horse and carriage. "I thought this was Sunday." Priests: "So it is." Heighton: "Then by what authority do you call this the Sabbath?" P.: "By common consent those that believe in God's word worship on this day and keep it holy." H.: "By common consent the people of this country keep the Fourth of July; is that evidence that it is wrong to work on that day? And how is it with the Jews and the Seventh Day Baptists?" P.: "We do not wish to get into a discussion." And they started the horse with a touch of the whip. But I quickly caught the horse by the bridle. "Hold on," said I. "You claim to be Christians; hav you any evidence that Jesus ever observed the Sabbath or ever commanded anyone to keep the Sabbath?" P.: "It is enough for us to know that God created this earth and all that there is in it in six days and then rested, and blessed it, and commanded us to keep it." H.: "In plain talk, he got tuckered or he was bushed by that time. Jesus says, 'My father worketh hitherto and I work.' Then he did not rest and has not rested, according to Jesus (John v, 17); and which is the best authority, Jesus or the writer of the book of Genesis? And was not he frequently called to account for breaking the Sabbath, and by the same class of persons that hav called to me to-day for doing the same thing?" P.: "No, sir; it was the old Jews that condemned Jesus, they were so full of prejudice. But the writers of the New Testament nowhere admit that Jesus was a Sabbath-breaker or that he broke the Sabbath." H.: "My dear sirs, just read John v, 18: Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also that God was his father." P.: "What is your name?" H.: "No matter. What do you think of this writer?" P.: "We must go, for we hav to fill our appointments in Ravenna." H.: "Do you not know there is no command either in the Old or New Testament to observe this day, and that the word Sunday is not in either, and there is no command in the New Testament to keep any day? And that all you hav said about us being taught to keep the Sabbath in the New Testament is simply untrue, and contrary to the teachings of Jesus and his early followers? And when you tell me that I ought not to work on this day, I will simply quote from Paul: 'Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath-day,' or in other words, my friends, it is none of your business. And again, the Bible nowhere says, Thou shalt not hoe potatoes on the Sabbath day, but it does say, 'Thou shalt kindle no fire through your habitations on the Sabbath day,' and I will venture to assert that you both of you had fires kindled in your houses this very day. Hypocrisy! humbug! priestcraft! bigotry! and superstition!" JOSEPH HEIGHTON.

Truth, Exact and Decisiv.

SAMOTH, ILL., Feb. 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I read in numerous papers the attacks of preachers and other Christians challenging Col. R. G. Ingersoll to show any instance or place where Infidelity has ever benefited science.

Those religious cranks should claim that writing was invented by a man who talked with God, and that God showed him how to form the letters. They should claim that astronomy, chemistry, mathematics, philosophy, and all the arts and sciences were discovered and invented by the prophets mentioned in the Old Testament of the Bible—men who talked with God—and that God instructed them in the arts and sciences.

The fact is that there would hav never been a Bible in the world if the art of writing had not been invented by men who were called heathens by the Bible writers.

Astronomy, chemistry, mathematics, philosophy, and all the useful arts and sciences were discovered by people who were called by writers of the Bible, heathens or pagans.

Not one useful art or science was invented or discovered by the race who call themselvs "God's chosen people."

When Solomon wanted to build his great temple he had to send to a pagan nation for architects and skilled workmen.

Moses first enslaved the Hebrews when he induced them to leave Egypt, and it was his policy and the policy of all the rulers and priests after him to keep the mass of the Hebrews in gross ignorance, so that they could be the more easily kept in abject bondage. What a splendid opportunity Moses had to educate the Hebrews during the forty years they were in the wilderness, but he did nothing of the kind. There was never a school established for the education of the common people. It was all the poor enslaved people could do to support in luxury their rulers and priests. They had no opportunity to learn anything except obedience to their masters. There is not one passage in the Christian's Bible which encourages the education of the masses of the people. There would never hav been any sciences or fine arts if Moses and his followers could hav controled the whole human race. Astronomy and some other sciences were discovered before the time of Moses, but if he and Joshua and other inhuman tyrants like them could hav had the power they would hav destroyed all learning except what little they had themselvs.

Now that the arts and sciences hav progressed so far, the Christian church wants to appropriate all the honor, and claim that the arts and sciences hav always been encouraged, protected, and taught by the church. Well, that is not surprising. Ever after Moses taught the Hebrews to steal by borrowing all the gold and silver jewelry that they could from the Egyptians, the Hebrews lived off the labors of others. They continually robbed and murdered nations who were weaker than themselvs. So the Christian church which opposed the march of science as long as it could, now that science has triumphed in spite of the oppression of the church, wants to arrogate to herself all the triumphs of science. Priests and preachers in former times would not allow the common people to learn anything or to believe anything only as they (the priests and preachers) permitted. And at this time priests and preachers deny that the people hav the right to think for themselvs in matters of religion. And if they (the priests and preachers) had it in their power they would immediately destroy all free thought. But thanks to the intelligence of this age, and especially of this country, those tyrants are losing their grip. ARCHIBALD B. AGNEW, M.D.

Excellent Letter on Sunday and the Fair.

BELVIDERE, ILL., Feb. 19, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: When this nation was first founded those who had a hand in forming its Constitution wisely concluded that it was not best to allow any form of religion to be established in it by law. They observed that whenever in any country any religion, no matter how good it was, got any kind of a grip on the reins of government, it was a curse to that nation, and hung like a millstone on the neck of its progress. So they wisely determined not to establish any form of religion. At the same time, all religions were tolerated, none persecuted, and none favored. This government by the people formed on this purely secular basis has in consequence prospered and progressed beyond any known precedent.

The framers of the Constitution did not, indeed, do this because they were utterly opposed to the union of church and state. Probably many of them were in favor of such a union; that is, each of them was willing to hav his own favorit religion established, but there being so many kinds, it became evident that to attempt to establish any particular one would certainly engender strife and civil war, so they saw that the only way to do was to form a purely secular government.

Yet notwithstanding the grand results obtained by this happy accident, it still is evident that there is a great number of people to-day who are still bent on uniting church and state, but which they cannot accomplish because they cannot unite their forces. If they could unite, it is to be feared that liberty would hav a fearful struggle for existence. To show the good reason we hav for this opinion, it is only necessary to take notice that the only point on which nearly all of the religious sects happen to agree, is the very point that they insist on being enforced by the aid of the law. This point on which they unfortunately happen to agree is the belief that one certain space of time is more holy than another; in other words, that the day called Sunday is more holy than the other days of the week. Now, any intelligent mind can easily see that this belief is just as much a religious dogma as the belief in the trinity, or the infallibility of the pope.

Notwithstanding this self-evident fact, and in spite of and contrary to the spirit of the Constitution, compulsory Sunday laws are constantly insisted on in order to compel everyone to recognize the dogma that one portion of time is more holy than another. This is equivalent to saying that a certain portion of space is also more holy than another, for it is a known fact that when it is Saturday in one particular portion of space on this earth it is then Sunday in another, and also when it is still Sunday in one place it is then Monday in another. Yet in spite of this absurdity, it is still insisted on that this or that portion of time and shifting space is more holy than some other portion of time and space.

Now, the only way to avoid this absurdity is for some great man like Talmage to arise and command (not the sun, for that is too big a job) this earth to stand still. If the command is obeyed, then the Sunday question is settled; but if not, and the world will still move on in spite of all the old fogies can do, then the question still remains in statu quo, and the problem of reconciling the existing state of things with the divine commands is still unsolved. We should hav said the Roman Catholic church's commands, for the divine commands, if they are divine, certainly designate the seventh day, or Saturday.

Now, there can be no objection to any man believing and obeying this dogma, for he has a constitutional right to do so. The grave objection is where he seeks to compel his fellow-man to obey this dogma whether he believes it or not. This is where the wrong comes in. This is where our constitutional rights are violated. Now, some will say, "We do not wish to compel any to observe the Sabbath in any kind of a religious sense; all we wish is to compel everyone to observe it as a day of rest, that all labor on that day shall cease and that all evil places of amusements shall be closed." This idea is not a bad one, if the compulsion part of it is left out. Indeed, it would be a good idea to improve on it, and hav two days every week instead of one. That is, let every Saturday be the great market-day of the nation. Let all factories close that day that can possibly do so. Let everybody try and so arrange his work that he can devote that day to the business of buying and selling, etc. Then let Sunday be devoted to leisure, pleasure, rest, and devotion, as each one may see fit. And let bad places be closed and bad deeds frowned on by the law exactly with the same severity on Sunday as on any other day of the week, and no more. Yes, let everything that is of such an evil nature that for the public good it needs suppression on week-days, be forbidden on Sunday for the very same reason, and no other. No difference should be made at all on account of the day, for it is evident to men of common sense that the day cannot make any deed that is bad on one day good on another. Therefore let everything that is considered innocent and beneficial on week-days and permitted by law—on that account let those very things be also permitted on Sunday.

Now, this class of people who would, if they could, reunite church and state; who would, if they could, by that means destroy this glorious republic; who would, if they could, revive the old Blue laws; who would, if they could, compel everyone to go to church and support the same; who would insist that everyone must only walk on the Sabbath day, but if he is obliged to run must do so reverently—that is, if he has to chase his hat let him do so reverently, and if the cars are obliged to run on Sunday let them do so reverently—now, this class of people who would do those things, if they could, are the very ones who would close the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday. There are, of course, some other people who would like to close the gates on Sunday. Yes, all the saloonkeepers would like to do so; the keepers of every den of infamy would like to do so; so would the keepers of every gambling-hell and sink of vice and debauchery in the city. These people, every one of them, would like to close the gates on Sunday, for the reason that they would reap a rich harvest from the hundreds of thousands of visitors, who being shut out of the Fair would hav no other place to go to. While the people who wish the gates to be open are ninety-nine out of every hundred of the visitors who on account of the distance are obliged to stay there over Sunday; also the great body of laboring and business men, whose almost only chance is to go there on Saturday night, stay there all day Sunday, and come back that evening. In fact, every person whose time and money are limited wants the Fair open on Sunday. But if the Fair managers find it necessary to close for a short time so as to slick up a little, well, then Monday forenoon is the very time, for the Fair would then hav the slimmest attendance, for so many persons would be only on the way there. Now, whom should the Fair managers listen to? Will they listen to a lot of old fogies and narrow-brained bigots who would, if they could, arrest every grand scheme calculated to elevate and develop the nation; who would, if they could, dethrone the goddess of Liberty and put Uncle Sam in the stocks for kissing her on Sunday? Will the Fair managers listen to those old fogies; listen to those gamblers, strumpets, and saloonkeepers, who, with the parsons, hav a selfish interest in closing the Fair on Sunday? If they do, then they may expect that the most disastrous financial failure on record will be the World's Fair at Chicago. If they would make it a success then they must listen to the vast multitude of visitors and to no one else, for they are the only ones that hav an interest in its success, and they are the only ones that the Fair will hav to depend on for that success. Now, those who would close the gates on Sunday would try and make people believe that a terrible amount of wickedness and crime would result if the gates were open. Great Cæsar! just imagin some hundreds of thousands of strangers turned loose in the streets of Chicago all day Sunday, with no place but saloons and other hells to resort to, for all the stores would be closed and steamboat and railway excursions forbidden for the same reason that the Fair gates must be closed! How can any body of police take care of such a crowd, filled more or less with Chicago whisky? Why, Anarchy would prevail, and Chicagoites would be in the greatest peril in both their lives and property. No, sir, it will not do. But let the gates be open and peace and order will prevail. Everybody will go to the Fair as usual, or visit the various churches, or go on steamboat or railway excursions if they prefer. In short, there is great reason to believe that if the Fair is closed there will be tenfold more immorality and crime committed than if the Fair remained open that day.

I am, Yours for success to the Fair,

ROBERT SWAIL.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Death of Madam Roland.

Nobly resolved to die—
To giv her life for love—
With a firm step and fearless eye
Proudly she passed her judges by
To the guillotin above.

Not an eyelid's faintest quiver
To fear or doubt her cause;
With a proud heart, calm as ever,
She pleaded for purer laws.

So, content to die in the right,
For life nor pleasure sighed;
With beautiful large eyes bright
With devotion's glorious light,
Thus Madam Roland died.

And there was a daughter far away
Who wept for the mother that night;
Shuddered and sobbed as alone she lay,
Longing, she knew not why, for day,
If but to forget she might.

Tragic ending of a beautiful life,
A life spent only in good;
A cruel incident of war and strife
'Mongst a Christian brotherhood.

Buffalo, N. Y. IDA A. BALLOU.

Grandfather's Dead.

When young I would sit on my grandfather's knee
And listen to stories he'd tell unto me.
"But now he is dead!" But the stories he told
I will never forget, though I liv to be old.

I well recollect what an interest he took
In trying to hav me study my book;
But I was a child and so full of glee
That books were not very charming to me.

It was running and racing from morning till night
That seemed to giv me the greatest delight,
While grandpa would sit by the fireplace and scold,
Because I would ride downhill in the cold.

But grandpa grew older and ceased to complain,
For he found that all he could say was in vain;
So he gave up his idol, and let me run wild,
And now I am left here, a poor, ignorant child.

And when I look back on the scenes gone by,
I think it far better for children to try
To keep out of trouble and trials ahead,
By trying to do as their grandfather said.

So now, children, take my advice as a friend,
And what little time that you hav to spend,
Devote to the course your grandfather said,
And reap your reward although he is dead.

G. W. SMITH.

Legend.—Continued.

The raven and lone children remained in the snow for weeks, freezing and starving, with no help from Christians, who took pains to pass on the other side of the street, saying that they had no time to call, but when the weather became warm and pleasant, they came in crowds to the dwellings of the poor, remarking that they had no money or provisions, no clothing, for them, but hoped they were doing well (true). A noble gentleman, who was persecuted by most of the churches, handed Jane $3, which was all that saved the lone party from misery and death. Then they were all attacked by the grip, and the raven, being only a bird, remained cold and sick in his nest. But Seth climbed the tree and placed something warm around this chilly retreat, which the poor raven received with tears of gratitude. "Dear Christians, we must make some show with what we giv, so much is expected of us," said Mrs. Murdoc.

Jane was resting with the doll in her arms, when she told her in a furious manner to put this toy in a box, for order was heaven's first law. She then commenced lashing the child with a leather strap (true). Seth forgot his illness, and led this brutal woman into a mass of strong vines belonging to Ravy, which chained her fast for a while, when he drove her from the place. Pious Mrs. Murdoc! Ravy visited the sick constantly, who kept the clergymen in staterooms praying for them, which no bishop has forbidden. Do the great archbishops care for their sufferings? "O Ravy," said Seth, "how awful is ignorance! The morning air is sweet, yet some mistaken physicians prefer that of noon, laden as it is with reptils hidden from the naked eye. How the sun draws them from every filthy corner! I hav seen them magnified on a canvas. You inhale them and they crowd your lungs and blood, and bore through your bones for food. Behold their wings, their talons, their awful jaws, tractors, and saws. Sharks and devil-fishes, who hav just commenced their career, are plentiful among them." "I hear a great deal about female suffrage," said Seth. "But I am sure that none but Freethought ladies are competent to vote. Religious women hav no statesmanlike gifts; they are governed by their feelings—ambition, envy, and jealousy. I hav seen them treat a clergyman badly, who had fine talents for business, and governed the parish with justice and mercy. These women behaved like fiends, because they were purse-proud, and wished to rule the church themselvs. They accomplished this, drove off the clergymen, and left the poor in misery. These very clergymen were secretly Freethinkers." ALHAZA.

Lexington, Ky., March 1, 1892.

Labor.

We are apt to think labor is troublesome toil, only to be endured for the sake of its profit.

But while in the main this is true, yet labor in itself is a blessing.

To hav nothing to do is one of the worst of troubles. We need work to make life useful and pleasant. To work in the house and prepare food, clothes, and a cleanly, cheerful home, is one kind of labor, and very satisfactory too, if well and cheerfully done.

To make a garden, and hav borders of flowers to beautify it, is another kind of labor.

To plow the field, sow the grain, and hoe the plants, is another division of labor.

To build houses, barns, and fences is labor.

To make machines, railroads, and ships is labor.

To write books, to gather up news for the papers, and get it all printed, is labor.

To study and fill the mind full of knowledge is labor.

So you see the word has many shades of meaning. One person chooses one kind of labor, and another enjoys something of a different sort. But all help to make the world precisely what it is.

AUNT ELMINA.

Correspondence.

ROCKVILLE, IDA., Feb. 28, 1892.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: There hav been prayer-meetings on the creek. I went tonight and had to stop on account of a very bad cold.

They converted ten of the people of the creek. They tried to get me to go to the "mourner's bench," but I would not take the Bible as the word of "God." I like to read THE TRUTH SEEKER very much. I hav learned that piece of poetry of "Two Judgments," and am going to speak it at the next meeting, for we are going to hav the other side of the question. I wish some of the boys of the Corner would write to me. My address is Rockville, Owyhee county, Ida.

I will close for this time.

Yours truly, W. A. CARLTON.

NORTH HURON, N. Y., March 6, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: We hav had a very pleasant winter and hav had fine sleighing. I was at Clyde a few days ago and a friend of mine gave me a spaniel pup, and I named him after Bruno, who was burnt at the stake February 17th, in the year 1600, because he was a Freethinker. We hav a good many Freethinkers living around here. Mr. J. M. Cosad is the oldest; he is over eighty years old. He was the founder of the first Freethought grove-meeting held in this country. It was in the year 1877. He is a strong Freethinker and donates liberally for the cause of Freethought. North Huron is a small place; it has two churches. I go with my aunt occasionally, as she belongs to the church, and the preacher calls and plays the violin for us frequently. I would like to see you very much, and perhaps we will meet at the Chicago Exposition, and then we will hav a good visit. I will send on some verses that grandpa composed for me to put in the Children's Corner if you see fit. I will close. From your friend,

BERTHA E. WEED.

[We shall be delighted to meet Bertha at the great Exposition, as well as many other good friends.—ED. C. C.]

BIRDSVIEW, WASH., Feb. 23, 1892.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: I again take the pleasure of writing to the Corner. I like it all very much, but my favorit part is the Corner Gospel. I like George Remsburg's letters, because they are always interesting. When he writes he says something, and that something is always something interesting. I believe that when we get "our paper" he will work with the greatest effort to make it interesting; and all of the Cornerites, at least I for one, will try to reward him for it. Not long ago there was a little poem by him in the Corner, entitled "The Dewdrops." It was lovely, and, as some people say, it took the cake.

My papa has hired two men to clear an acre of land. We can now see Mount Baker and Mount Sherman. To go back of the house you can see Mount Sherman; and if you go down to the beach you can see Mount Baker.

Papa bought a cow of a Mr. Roughton, one of our neighbors.

The river is very low now and very beautiful. We can cross without any trouble. Some days ago, papa, mamma, one Mr. Crider, and myself, went across, and had a good hunt for agates.

The Corner is improving rapidly, I think, and some day I hope to see it not only a little Corner, but a grand, big paper. I said I thought George Remsburg would help our coming paper, and I forgot to say that we would join in too. I hav a little kitten, named Nedrich. Mamma says he has a winning way, and wins everybody's heart. He went out in the clearing yesterday, and one of the men chopped a tree down, and it frightened the little scamp so that he ran away in the wood and got lost. In the evening papa went out to hunt for him, and as he was coming back he met the little smut-nose coming home too. He would hav come home all right, we think. We hav some maple-trees on our ranch, and are making a little syrup.

Wishing you success in all your undertakings, I remain,

Your sincere friend, LORA R. FLICK.

BUFFALO, March 6, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: To-day is Sunday, and as I hav not any particularly important engagement to fulfill, and, for once, my number of personal correspondents is singularly small, instead of going to church (!) I thought I would write to Miss Wixon and the children of the Corner.

Spring is coming! The early sunny mornings and bare earth with its dreary old grass, through which the tiny sprouts of new grass are peeping, and the trees with a faint tinge of green in their brown branches, and early spring sparrows, all proclaim the joyful news. I think if ever "tidings of great joy" come to this earth it is in the springtime, when

"The firefly shows his signal light, the partridge beats his drum,
And all the world givs promis of something sweet to come!"

You see, I hav more opportunity to observe the tokens of spring than before, as we hav moved from our former home out to the end of the city limits. We are still in the city and also in the country, for it is like the country, with the exception of the paved streets. A few months ago I too could hav ranked among those begging to be excused from the country in the winter time, as Miss Wixon mentioned in her interesting article in last week's issue—March 5th—entitled "A Sunday in the Country." But now I can vouch, if necessary, as to the truth of our editor's remark about the country in the winter. I was agreeably surprised. I expected to see nothing but snow, snow everywhere. Well, it was pretty deep, but not enough so to make it disagreeable, and as to being lonesome, it was almost impossible, for we could hear the merry jingle, jingle of the sleigh-bells all day, especially on Sunday. And then, too, it is so much different when one is at home, or if they are visiting. I think all little "homesick" Cornerites will agree with me upon that point.

I hav just commenced the study of political economy, and if Miss Wixon is willing I will giv you the benefit of my thought. I hope you will not think that I am trying to monopolize the Corner, or take advantage of Miss Wixon's kindness, but whenever I commence a new study I like to write my thoughts, and at the same time allow the Cornerites to obtain all the possible knowledge that they can from the articles. But I fear that I hav already trespassed enough upon the valuable space of the Corner, so I will bring my lengthy letter to a close. With love and best wishes, From your friend,

IDA A. BALLOU.

P.S.—Inclosed you will find a little poem that I wrote upon Madam Roland. I think the Cornerites are all acquainted with the now popular exclamation she made before a statue of Liberty, while mounting the steps to the guillotin: "O Liberty, Liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name!" If it meets with your approbation, Miss Wixon, you may publish it. If not, gently but firmly consign it to the wastebasket. I. A. B.

[Yes, we shall be happy to hav some little notes in the interesting study of political economy, and we thank our friend for her kindness and interest in the Corner.—ED. C. C.]

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF

THE ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth $1.00.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

News of the Week.

THE Jesuits are about to elect a new general. Their order numbers 13,000.

THE Russian government is rapidly closing the non-orthodox churches of Poland.

REV. MR. SCOTHILL'S chapel in China has been attacked by a mob, and general Anti-christian riots are apprehended.

THE overrunning of New England by Catholics from Canada continues. Lewiston, Me., has 12,000 Catholics out of 20,000 population.

ONE of the latest public remarks of Elbridge Gerry is this preposterous one: "Religion is the great and only cure for the disease of crime."

AT Hartford, Conn., eight workmen transferring on Sunday telegraph wires which are in use every other day, hav been arrested under a Blue law.

AT Racco, Peru, recently, a mob headed by the local magistrate attempted to burn an aged foreigner for heresy. He had pasted an almanac leaf over a saint's picture on his wall.

IN Chili clericals are hotly assailing President Montt for withholding the political predominance which they expected as reward for their aid in overthrowing the Freethinking Balmaceda.

IN 1888 the Orthodox or Greek Catholic church in Russia made proselytes: from the Lutheran church, 1,660; Roman Catholics, 981; Jewish, 797; Mohammedans, 3,113. With various others, these amounted to 15,668.

CATHOLICS complain that the speaking of the Spanish language and practice of the Catholic religion in New Mexico causes refusal of statehood to that territory. It exceeds in population other territories which hav been admitted.

THE pope has written to the World's Fair special commissioner to Italy his approval of the Fair and admiration of Columbus, who "could neither be deterred by dangers nor wearied by labors"—not mentioning, however, that one of the greatest of those dangers was the opposition of the church.

Two Jewish grocers of Bayonne, N. J., arrested for doing business on Sunday, the 6th, hav been discharged. They defended themselvs on constitutional grounds, and pleaded that as Sunday is recognized by their race only as an ordinary week-day they were entitled to trade on it. Recorder Beshor assented, but remarked that as Jews recognize Saturday as their Sabbath they can be prevented from working or trading on that day.

CATHOLICS report that Benj. Butterworth contemplates resigning as World's Fair commissioner in consequence of their opposition. He is, they insist, "an unfit man to direct an enterprise to honor a Catholic navigator and discoverer." They keep alive the memory of his offensiv words: "If I owned Italy, I'd hold an auction and invite all America, and I'd sell ten thousand crucifixes and ten thousand madonnas and one thousand churches, and I'd establish schools in their stead."

THE attempt of Emperor William, backed by the Catholic party, to force through the German parliament the bill placing the schools under clerical control, is causing violent agitation. Chancellor Caprivi, who had vowed to stand or fall with the bill, has resigned in consequence of his failure to carry it. The emperor's indignation at the opposition which he meets is said to hav aggravated his nervous excitability and vehemence—which his enemies regard as semi-insanity. The hottest opposition is to the provisions for clerical control of school examinations and allied functions, and for compelling families not holding a religion recognized by the state to submit their children to the state's religious instructors.

MULTITUDES of Russian peasants wish to emigrate, but either are too poor or are forbidden. The government has refused the peasants the seed for spring planting for which they hav petitioned, saying that they would eat it and then want more. In Jelatomsk nearly all the cattle hav died, so that no crops can be tilled. In the Volga region eighty-five per cent of the cattle and thirty per cent of the horses hav starved to death. The city of Omsk has become a vast hospital for typhus patients, who are dying there wholesale without physicians or nurses. Relief committees in various nations say that embezzlement of supplies by Russian officials is of daily occurrence. Bales of supplies are often received containing only straw, tow, and stones. Attempts to publish some of these misdeeds hav been checked by the censor of the press, who said that the frequency of such things in Russia had already injured that country's reputation abroad to a limit which it would be dangerous to pass.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 916 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

The Gods. A beautiful pamphlet of forty pages, with likeness of Ingersoll. Price, 20 cents. Eight copies for $1.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF Millionaires Against Miners;
—OR—
THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's
Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By F. R. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

HUMANITY'S SPREADING CURSE

is not the Church alone. There is another and worse culprit. Read the book with the above title. Price, 35 cents, through NEW YORK NEWS Co., Newsdealers, or E. H. ANDRAE, Dallas, Texas.

7t8

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

Henry D. Thoreau's Works.

The rising generation should be favored with an introduction to an author who is but little read, even by the generation passing away; but nevertheless an author who will in time become a pastoral and philosophical classic. No writer has firmer friends than Henry D. Thoreau, although when he first printed his books none had fewer. It is told of him that the first edition of his first book lay for years upon his own shelvs, except the few copies given to his personal friends; but a first edition of his second book now fetches a premium from bibliophiles.

Thoreau was one of the original "cranks," and Anarchist Tucker but imitated him when he went to jail rather than swell the tax-exchequer of hypocritical old Massachusetts. Thoreau was the friend of all the revolters against established social economics; of the Brook Farm and the Fruitlands experiments; of Alcott and Margaret Fuller and Emerson; of the Abolitionists of all grades; and he was the crankiest one of them all—so cranky, indeed, that Emerson sketched his biography, from which we may draw for the information of our young readers, though his sketch, which is a picture of the man's character more than a biography, must be supplemented by details found in Channing's more extended biography.

Henry Daniel Thoreau was the last male descendant of a Frenchman who came to this country from the Isle of Guernsey. He was born in Concord, Mass., July 12, 1817; graduated without any literary distinction from Harvard in 1837. He died in Concord May 6, 1862. He had as many trades as he had fingers, as he tells us, but refused to labor at any of them more than was necessary to supply his extremely limited wants. His greatest skill, he says, was to want but little; and it was his ambition rather to reduce his few wants than to multiply means of meeting others. From 1837 to 1840 he taught school, but found that his expenses "were in proportion, or rather out of proportion," with his income, for he "was obliged to train and dress, not to say think and believe, accordingly;" and so teaching for a livelihood, for him, was a failure. He had a natural genius for mechanical pursuits and for mathematics, and was so proficient a land surveyor that he could, says Emerson, "pace sixteen rods more accurately than another man could measure them with rod and chain. He could estimate the measure of a tree with his eyes; he could estimate the weight of a calf or a pig like a dealer." His father was a pencilmaker, and Henry followed the trade until he made a better article than was then in use in this country, when he refused to continue the business; for why should he, he asked, "do again what I hav done once?" He resumed his study of natural history, and lived with nature, with which he was in love. In 1845 he built a house on the shore of Walden pond, ten feet wide by fifteen feet long, with eight-foot posts, which he hewed from the young pine-trees around him, a window on each side, a door, and a brick fireplace. The boards of the house were from an Irishman's shanty, which he bought for four dollars and twenty-five cents. His cellar he dug in a sand-bank. Here he lived two years. The structure was built with his own hands, at a cost of twenty-eight dollars, twelve and a half cents, and his food for a period of eight months cost him eight dollars and seventy-four cents. His outgoes for one year at Walden, including the cost of the house, were one-third of a cent less than sixty-two dollars, which he earned by day labor, surveying, and by selling produce from his bean-field. His diet was chiefly rice and rye and Indian meals, and in the experiment, he tells us, he learned that it would cost incredibly little trouble to obtain one's necessary food even in this latitude. "I hav made," he says, "a satisfactory dinner, satisfactory on several accounts, simply off a dish of purslane which I gathered in my cornfield, boiled, and salted. And pray, what more can a reasonable man desire, in peaceful times, in ordinary noons, than a sufficient number of ears of sweet green corn, boiled, with the addition of salt?" To the unbelievers who asked him if he thought he could liv on vegetable food alone he answered that he could "liv on board nails;" and it is an index to the character of his literary work when he adds that "if they cannot understand that, they cannot understand much I hav to say." In his housekeeping he used but the simplest and most useful articles. Luxuries to him were not worth their cost, and life too short to do unnecessary work. While he lived at Walden a lady presented him with a door-mat, but he threw it away because it required time to clean it. "It is best," he remarks, "to avoid the beginning of evil;" and thereafter he used the grass by the doorside to clean his boots upon.

In thought he was an idealist, a poet; and the mystical literature of India was to him an inspiration. He felt it and lived it; through it became a hermit and stoic because he "wished to liv deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life," to see if he "could not learn what it had to teach, and not, when he came to die, discover that he had not lived." "I wanted," he writes, "to liv deep and suck out all the marrow of life, to liv so sturdily and Spartan-like as to put to rout all that was not life, to cut a broad swath and shave close, to drive life into a corner and reduce it to its lowest terms, and if it proved to be mean, why then to get the whole and genuin meanness of it, and publish its meanness to the world; or, if it were sublime, to know it by experience, and be able to giv a true account of it in my next excursion. For most men, it appears to me, are in a strange uncertainty about it, whether it is of the devil or of God, and hav somewhat hastily concluded that it is the chief end of man here to 'glorify God and enjoy him forever.'" Such was his esoteric reason for his hermit life; another was his worshipful love of nature; and perhaps a third mav be found in an expression in one of his later works, that he "would rather keep house in hell than go to board in heaven."

At heart, Thoreau was no hermit. He liked travel, but for the new ideas it brought him rather than for the new sights it showed him. With a knapsack on his back he would walk thirty miles a day, and from the country as from the men he met, he would get the fruit and flower. He had learned that the swiftest traveler is he who goes afoot, if one would see the country; and that a man could travel fast enough and earn his living on the road. But "the cheapest way to travel and the way to travel the farthest in the shortest distance, is to go afoot, carrying a spoon, a dipper, and a fish-line, some Indian meal, some salt, and some sugar. When you come to a brook or pond, you can catch fish and cook them; or you can boil a hasty-pudding; or you can buy a loaf of bread at a farmer's house for four pence, moisten it in the next brook that crosses the road, and dip it into your sugar. This alone will last you a whole day; or if you are accustomed to heartier living, you can buy a quart of milk for two cents, crumb your bread or cold pudding into it, and eat it with your own spoon out of your own dish. Any one of these things, I mean, not all together. I hav traveled thus some hundreds of miles without taking any meal in a house, sleeping on the ground when convenient, and found it cheaper and in many respects more profitable than staying at home."

It was in this way that Thoreau became so intimately acquainted with nature. He knew the flora of Massachusetts as he knew the spelling-book. To the fields, hills, and waters of his nativ town he dedicated his genius, says Emerson, with such entire love that he made them known and interesting to all reading Americans and to people over the sea. "The river on whose banks he was born and died he knew from its springs to its confluence with the Merrimack. Every fact which occurs in the bed, on the banks, or in the air over it; the fishes and their spawning and nests, their manners, their food; the shad-flies which fill the air on a certain evening once a year, and which are snapped at by the fishes so ravenously that many of these die of repletion; the conical heaps of small stones on the river-shallows, one of which heaps will sometimes fill a cart—these heaps the huge nests of small fishes; the birds which frequent the stream, heron, duck, shelldrake, loon, osprey; the snake, musk-rat, otter, wood-chuck, and fox, on the banks; the turtle, frog, hyla, and cricket, which make the banks vocal, were all known to him, and, as it were, townsmen and fellow-creatures, so that he felt an absurdity or violence in any narrativ of one of these by itself apart, and still more of its dimensions on an inch-rule, or in the exhibition of its skeleton, or the specimen of a squirrel or bird in brandy. He liked to speak of the manners of the river, as itself a lawful creature, yet with exactness, and always to an observed fact."

And as of his own nativ place, so of all the places he visited. He made several excursions to Maine, going up its rivers in a canoe and up its mountains afoot, living in a little tent, sleeping on spruce twigs. It was probably this exposure in the damp woods, and his constant excursions around Concord in snow and rain, that inoculated him with the germs of consumption, of which he died. But at the time he was the most hardy and experienced of all the party except the Indian guide, whom he studied with the same care that he did the forests and animals. He loved Indians and confessed that he sometimes felt like a hound or a panther, and if born among them would hav been a fell hunter. But restrained by his Massachusetts culture, says Emerson, he played out the game in the mild form of botany and ichthyology. He saw and heard all that happened in the woods, and his intimacy with animals suggested what Thomas Fuller records of Butler the apiologist, that "either he had told the bees things or the bees had told him." "Snakes coiled round his legs, the fishes swam into his hand, and he took them out of the water; he pulled the woodchuck out of its hole by the tail, and took the foxes under his protection from the hunters." When in Maine he watched the manufacture of the bark canoe, but expresses the desire in his account of the trip to know more of it by going into the woods and making one complete, to return to civilization in at last. Not until he had done that would his inquisitivness be fully satisfied.

Thoreau's love of nature was equaled by his love of the philosophy of India. He was a mystic, an idealist, a transcendentalist, but never a Christian. He was better acquainted with the scriptures of the Hindoos, the Chinese, and the Persians than with that of the Hebrews. The New Testament he regarded as an "invaluable book" when he had overcome the prejudices against it impressed upon him in his early days "by the church and Sunday-school." But it was almost spoiled for him by being "edited by Christians." It was then "a sort of castle in the air" which he was permitted to dream. To him it was strange and heretical. To Christians no less than Greeks and Jews, he wrote, it is foolishness and a stumbling-block. There are, indeed, severe things in it which no man should read aloud more than once. "Seek first the kingdom of heaven."—"Lay not up for yourselvs treasures on earth."—"If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and giv to the poor, and thou shalt hav treasure in heaven."—"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man giv in exchange for his soul?" Think of this, Yankees! exclaims Thoreau, indignant at New England hypocrisy which repeats long prayers and hangs witches. "Verily, I say unto you, if ye hav faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you."—"Think," he bursts forth again, "of repeating these things to a New England audience! thirdly, fourthly, fifteenthly, till there are three barrels of sermons! Who, without cant, can read them aloud? Who, without cant, can hear them and not go out of the meeting-house? They never were read, they never were heard. Let but one of these sentences be rightly read, from any pulpit in the land, and there would not be left one stone of that meeting-house upon another."

Christ to Thoreau was a sublime actor on the stage of the world, as were all the so-called saviors. But Thoreau knew the Bagavad Geetha as well as he did the New Testament, and found more congenial teachings in it. A healthy man, he said, with steady employment, as wood-chopping at fifty cents a cord, and a camp in the woods, will not be a good subject for Christianity. The greatest of Infidelity, to him, was that which prays, and keeps the Sabbath, and rebuilds the churches. He thought the church to be a sort of hospital for men's souls, and as full of quackery as the hospital for their bodies. "Those who are taken into it liv like pensioners in their Retreat or Sailor's Snug Harbor, where you may see a row of religious cripples sitting outside in sunny weather." Yet he was the most sincere of seekers for truth, and, when reproved by a minister "who was driving a poor beast to some meeting-house horse-sheds" among the hills of New Hampshire because he was bending his steps to a mountain-top instead of a church on Sunday, indignantly writes that he would hav gone farther than the preacher to hear a true word spoken on that or any day! Churches to him deformed the landscape, and the preacher, shouting like a boatswain in a gale of wind, profaned the quiet atmosphere of the day.

Thoreau was one of the most delicate of literary workmen. His was a rare genius. He was a poet, but his verses show too plainly the influence of Eastern style upon him to be generally pleasing, though his prose is beauty itself, as our readers know from the many extracts we hav printed heretofore. And not only are his works beautiful in the moral sentiments and philosophy, but are useful. His "Cape Cod" is almost a guide-book to-day. "Walden," "A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers," and "In the Maine Woods" are books for every New England boy who camps and fishes among her hills, as well as for the philosopher and the idealist. He was, perhaps, the original New England philosophical Anarchist. He desired nothing of government. He wanted to be let alone, and he refused to pay a tax to be protected. He was the first to defend John Brown. He lectured and wrote against slavery, and was a free trader as well. Had his great genius not been bounded by a lack of ambition he would hav been a national instead of a local celebrity. Wanting this ambition, says Emerson, "instead of engineering for all America he was the captain of a huckleberry party."

The charm of his works is now making him popular. They are full of sententious expressions, epigrams, and common sense, with some *un*common sense and narrow reflections. But, as he himself said of the New Testament, "the book has never been written which is to be accepted without any allowance," and the good in his works, unlike the volume he referred to, far outweighs the provincial contraction of some of his views of life.

His first work was "A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers," an account of a journey in a row-boat, built by himself and brother, who accompanied him, from Concord to the head of the Merrimack river and back, the minute narrativ, as in all his works, being supplemented by botanical observations, short treatises in natural and general history, descriptions of scenery, and transcendental musings. His second book was "Walden; or Life in the Woods." In this is told how he lived, and why he lived that way. Volumes from his manuscript published after his death are, Excursions in Field and Forest, The Maine Woods, Cape Cod, Letters to Various Persons, A Yankee in Canada, with Anti-Slavery and Reform Papers, and three volumes, Spring, Summer, and Winter, taken from the daily observations he jotted down in his journal.

There is no one of the volumes but has its own peculiar charm, but New England naturalists will best like his Maine Woods, Excursions in Field and Forest, and the three volumes on Spring, Summer, and Winter. The Yankee in Canada is a view through his eyes of Montreal, St. Anne, Quebec, and the St. Lawrence. The Anti-Slavery and Reform Papers in the volume are his political creed. Those who read equally for study and to be interested will probably make Walden and A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers their favorits.

A new edition of these books has recently been brought out by Houghton, Mifflin and Co., at a dollar and a half per volume.

THE SYMBOLICAL LANGUAGE OF ANCIENT ART AND MYTHOLOGY. An Inquiry. By Richard Payne Knight, author of "Worship of Priapus." A new edition with Introduction, Notes translated into English, and a new and complete Index. By Alexander Wilder, M.D. With 348 illustrations (many full-page) from ancient gems, coins, medals, bronzes, sculpture, Egyptian figures, antique statues, monuments, etc. 1 vol., royal 8vo.

The scope and purport of the book before us is clearly expressed by its title-page. It gives a very clear and concise statement of the worships and customs peculiar to the Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, ancient Assyrians, and contemporary nations; and the intelligent reader will hav little difficulty in tracing their parentage in the doctrins, religious ceremonies, and social practices extant in Christendom. Mr. Knight devotes his attention, however, to unfolding the relations of worship and mythology to the symbolism employed in ancient art and in the various rites, with the intent to exhibit the reason which led to each peculiar emblem or custom. In this he has admirably succeeded. Writers who hav followed him hav swerved but little from the course which he had indicated, and hav seldom failed to verify his statements more conclusivly.

This work first appeared in the Pamphleteer in London in the early years of the present century. It was reprinted for more general circulation. The present publisher brought it out in a new, more elegant and recherché form; after undergoing a thorough redaction, the translation of the Greek and Latin notes, and the addition of a copious index which is virtually a digest of the whole work. He has now added 348 illustrations selected and prepared by Professor Rawson, which add to the attractions of the work, besides enabling the reader to obtain a more just conception of the meaning of the text.

The student of comparativ religion, as well as the amateur of art, needs this work to enable him to acquire just ideas of the subject. Even the dark expressions of the Bible, where allusions are made to foreign practices in a way not easy to comprehend intelligently, are here made plain to the common understanding. We learn the origin of many curious symbols, such as the fish on the steeple, the serpent or streamer on standards and canes, the peculiar hat or cap of ecclesiastics, the import of amulets like the cross, the beetle, the skull, the cross, etc. Modern civilization copied from ancient deification the egg, now as anciently a female Easter symbol, the kteis or triangle. A key is also given to the secret rites from which modern Masonry and even sacerdotal orders originated. We can easily perceive that in all these things, ornaments of the body, charms, amulets, periodical festivities fixed each season by reference to the position of the sun and moon, peculiar doctrins, religious worship itself, "there is nothing new under the sun." Opinions, customs, civilization itself, all go in circles, and while there may be advancement among peoples, there is no progress anywhere in a straight line.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—THE STRAIGHT; so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—THE JUST.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

CONTENTS:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Co-operation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Prometheus, A Poem. "It is crammed with life, thought, and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary beauty."—[Dr. Henry W. Bellows. Price, $1.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price. - - - - - 10 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian [illegible].

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

in the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles."

By
M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY, No. 84 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

DOWN THEY GO!

Best make American Stemwind Watches. 17 jewels, adjusted, pat. regulator, in silverine case, only $11; in 3 ounce coin silver, $16; 4 ounce, $15 (a few years ago $60). In best 14 kt. filled gold cases, open face, $20; hunting, $23 to $28; 14 kt. solid gold, $40 to $100; same, not adjusted, $2 less; 11 jwls. $3.50, and 7 jwls. $5 less (lower grade watches, $5, $4, and $2.50).

THE PERFECTED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH, much finer than above, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position 16 jwls. and all modern improvements, nickel movement, cased as above, $8 more, gilt mov't. $6 more. No one else in the world sends out so good a watch at the price.

LADIES' GOLD HUNTING AMERICAN WATCHES, latest styles, best filled, 7 jwls. $17; 11 jwls. $18.50; 15 jwls. $25; 14 kt. solid gold, $10 to $100 more. All sent prepaid, kept in order one year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

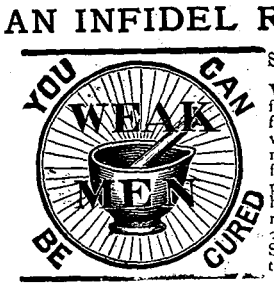
DIAMONDS: in rings, pins, drops, studs, etc., $10; $15; $25; $50; $100 to $1,000 per set. Cash refunded, if not 20 per cent below regular price, any time within one year.

WEDDING RINGS: Plain, chased, with pearls, emeralds, rubies, moonstones, opals, garnets, turquoise, solitaires or combinations, a specialty.

SUNDRIES: Rogers Bros.' triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; tea spoons, $1.80; tables, $3.49; best spects. in the world, $1; pebbles, $2; 14 kt. gold, $5 more (send line of finest print you can read without glasses 14 inches from eyes); gold-headed canes, $8; $10; $15; $20. Best razor—a luxury—$2. Solid silver spoons, $1.70 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, silver, $1.25 to $2. Tea sets, $20 to $40; everything in the line of fancy table silver, novelties, plush, and art goods, gold pens, etc. All sent prepaid (except cutlery) subject to exchange or cash back.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,
Established 1857. Rochelle, Ill.

Send for price lists, beautiful cards in colors and gold of my Freethought badges (large and small), tracts, etc. Free.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

AN INFIDEL REMEDY.

SEND 10 CENTS TO Dr. FELLOWS, VINELAND, N. J. for his book on youthful errors, early decay, wasting weakness, lost manhood &c. It sets forth an External Application—a reliable home cure, with full directions for use. Its a certainty, no failure. State where you saw this advertisement.

A patient writing from Davenport, Wash., says: "Your remedy is marvelous, and will accomplish what is said it will do. The value of which is untold."

THE MAN AFTER GOD'S OWN HEART PRAYETH.—Psalms cix.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1 Address this Office.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.

The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1 50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

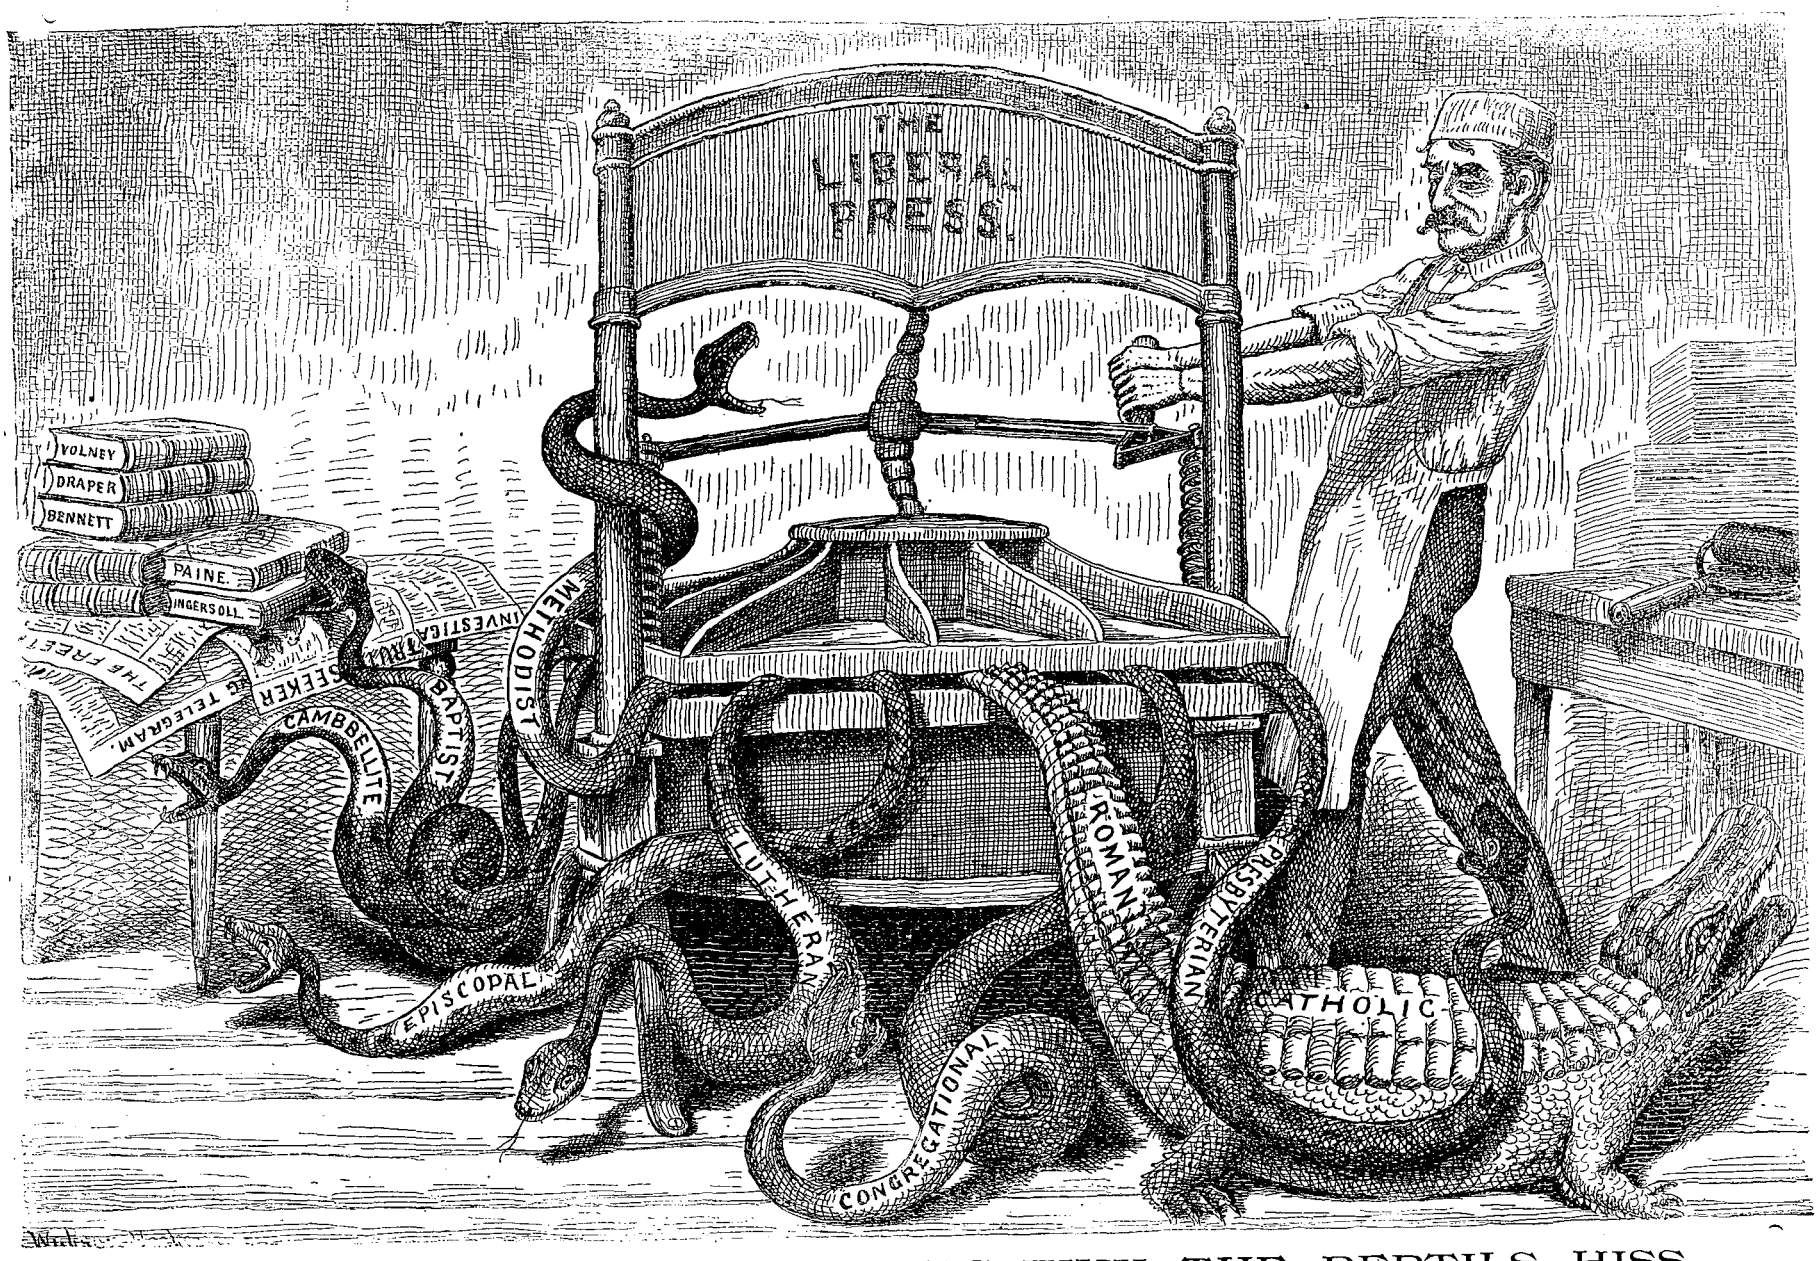
Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞Catalogues Free.☜



By mail on receipt of price.

Address* THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 14. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 2, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE PRESSURE OF THE PRESS—WHY THE REPTILS HISS.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - - $1.50.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents: cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF

THE ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

in the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles."

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 14. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 2, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 2, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Bible Picture Book.

WINSLOW, ARIZ., March 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR, Dear Sir: The Bible Picture Book arrived the other day, and it created quite a stir, I can tell you. It is the best thing to fight superstition with that it has been my good fortune to run across in all my life. All but the most bigoted laugh very heartily when they see it. Adam's plow in the picture is grand. Heston should be made a saint right away. He certainly deserves it. I hav sold four of the books. I think I can get some new members to your family with the Picture Book to work with.

J. T. MUNCEY.

ROCKFORD, ILL., March 18, 1892.

EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: Your Holy Bible Illustrated is simply immense. It will "take the cake" in any market. The high-priced illustrated Bible is nowhere compared with yours. It ought to hav a circulation quite as large as the Authorized version; and "Bible Societies" should be formed to place it in every family. The historiographer has equaled the artist in faithful presentation of grand events in the lives of the patriarchs, and the reader will get a very fair view of the original without the labor of reading the detailed stories as told in King James's translation.

Faithfully yours, G. W. BROWN, M.D.

The Sexes Should Be Equal.

A woman living in Puget City writes to know if Freethinkers, or Infidels, "believe in the equalization of sexes."

We believe they do—that is, about ninety per cent of them do; and a woman suffrage, or equalization, plank, has been a part of all Freethought organizations' platforms. The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER has written some of those planks himself, and thoroughly believes in all he writes.

There is no reason on earth why women should be treated as children, or regarded as inferior to men. They may not be equal in ability in all things, but in other things they are more than equal, and so the general equilibrium is preserved. Women should be regarded as individuals, responsible for their own conduct and their own living and willing to take the consequences thereof just like a man. There is no reason why they should not hav as loud a voice in public affairs, why they should not vote, hold office, electioneer, propose marriage, get fat public contracts, chew tobacco, drink whisky, bribe officials and be bribed, when in office, just like men—that is, no reason in their sex. Most of them would not do these things, for as a rule they are quite as honest and a good deal more decent than men; and because they would not do them is one good reason why they should be urged to take a position alongside man. Of course, there are various things to be considered in thus equalizing the sexes, but if women want to do these things they hav precisely the same right as hav men.

There is one formula which settles all such questions: Every human being has a right to do as he or she pleases, provided no one is injured thereby, and every human being has every right possessed by any other human being. That equalizes things at the start, and the advantage strength takes of weakness is a usurpation and injustice. Man has taken advantage of woman, and, though the fault is greatly her own, because she has been willing to be a clinging vine instead of a self-sustaining tree, still man is very much to blame; and the priests most of all—though that's another story; for if woman had exercised her reason for herself she would not hav allowed the priests to fool her so.

But these reflections are all aside from the question. It may be set down that Freethinkers do believe in the equalization of sexes. And we recommend those who do not know why such a condition is not at present prevailing to read Helen Gardener's "Men, Women, and Gods."

An Answer Which Does Not Answer.

A reception was recently given to Fred Douglas at Cooper Union, this city. Mr. Douglas, Mr. Ingersoll, and a Mr. Depew, a railroad president, were the speakers. "He is one of the men," said Colonel Ingersoll, pointing to Mr. Douglas, "who has done as much as any man living to civilize the people of the United States. I am a believer—a believer, not in God, but in men. I believe in all the rights of the human heart and human brain. No man is civilized who is not willing to giv, and who does not giv, to every other man the same right that he claims for himself. The same with races. Any race claiming to be superior should show it by acts of justice and kindness. No man is ever superior to the man he has robbed. I believe that every race may rise in the scale of civilization until it has reached the highest rung in the ladder, and it will reach that point by development of heart and brain. One case alone is sufficient to show what hight a race may attain, and we hav such an instance of the negro race here to-night. You hav done as well as any race would hav done under the circumstances," Colonel Ingersoll continued. "You had not only patience, but the supreme virtue of forgivness. You would hav been justified in using the knife and torch to right your injuries; and yet we do not hear of a single instance where revenge was taken. I do not feel that I occupy a sufficient moral hight to advise such people. I feel that you hav done infinitly better than I would hav done. The South has blossomed under your hands. You hav raised everything in that country except hell. But there's one thing I want to say. I want the colored people to think for themselvs. I do not want you to take, without thinking, even the white man's religion, nor to follow his God or any God who had permitted slavery in the world."

More in this vein the colonel said, which aroused the railroad president who aspires to be a president of another sort, and he replied. He had, he said, heard Colonel Ingersoll on many occasions, but rarely had he listened to him when he was so eloquent as upon the present occasion. He begged, however, to differ from Colonel Ingersoll on one point, and in so doing would call the attention of the colored people, in their search for truth, to the fact that slavery was universal in the world when Christ appeared upon the earth, and just so far as the true spirit of Christianity had extended slavery had disappeared. He desired, also, to call the attention of the colored man in his studies of the progress of the emancipation of the race to another fact, namely, that the conscience of the North was roused to the point at which it brought the war of the Rebellion and emancipated the slave mainly by the teachings of the Northern Christian pulpit.

It seems to us that if Mr. Depew cared less to be president and more to be right he would never hav said that Christ's religion had anything to do with emancipating the slaves of the world, particularly those of the United States. For it is a matter of history that the Christians of the South upheld the institution of slavery as divine—and proved it by the Bible—that the Christians of the North fought and rotten-egged the Abolitionists, denying them their pulpit to speak in; that those Christian ministers who became Abolitionists were opposed by their churches; that Christians who advocated abolition were looked upon as heretics, and that the leaders of the abolition movement were heretics.

Mr. Depew should confine himself to speaking after-dinner platitudes and witticisms. Speaking seriously on serious subjects is beyond his capacity.

The Pilgrims and the Mormons.

President Eliot of Harvard College is out West at present, and naturally makes speeches. One of these, telegraphed back, has unnecessarily excited the good Christians, descendants of the good Puritans, of Cambridge. President Eliot is reported to hav said this: "As I came over the plains I thought of that early journey when the first colonists marched across them under the guidance of a Christian church, and this reminded me of another pilgrimage, though across the water. I refer to the Pilgrim Fathers. They, too, went a long way to escape persecution. They, too, suffered hardships for a principle. They, too, were fired with religious enthusiasm, and sought freedom also to worship God. In planting a colony, it is the women who hav the harder part. They died faster than the men in Massachusetts. The great successful colonies of this world are founded on religious enthusiasm. Here you founded a colony that you might worship God according to the dictates of your consciences. Here in this valley has risen the question of religious liberty. In Massachusetts all churches are equal before the law. There is no reason why this religious liberty may not be enjoyed in all the other states and territories as well as in Massachusetts. Let us devote ourselvs to this liberty, civil and religious, for associations of every sort and for the individual also. If I could do something to unite the elements in this territory and bring them to seek religious liberty as it is known in other parts of the country, it would be to me a great reward."

A leading professor of Cambridge, upon reading this, exclaimed: "It would hav been well for President Eliot if he never had crossed the plains. Why, it is an outrage to compare the beastly Mormons to the Pilgrim Fathers. The great successful colonies of the world may be founded on religious enthusiasm, but religion is only used as a cloak by the Mormons. Does Mr. Eliot forget the massacres by the Danites! Does he forget that through the Mormons many honest Americans are out on the plains in unmarked graves, men that were cruelly butchered? Those men in unknown graves are a monument to the cruelties, the butcheries, and the persecutions of the Mormons. To-day, when Massachusetts hears the sentiment inspired by the speech made by the president of Harvard University, she bows her head in shame. Even if President Eliot does hold those views, he should remember his position and keep them to himself instead of making his state and Harvard College the laughing-stock of the world."

We fail to see why the leading professor should hav allowed himself to become so excited. President Eliot was about right. The Mormons are as genuin Christians as the Puritans, and more, because the latter did not openly liv out their Bible teachings. The Mormons suffered as the Pilgrims did—as all pioneers must—and the reason they went across the continent was the same that forced the Pilgrims across the sea—namely, persecution by other Christian sects. The Mormons too wanted, like the Pilgrims, to worship God in the manner they pleased, and also, like the Pilgrims, to make others do the same. And as with the Pilgrim women so with the Mormon women, theirs was the harder part—but made infinitly harder by the disgusting divine institution of polygamy, the beastliest and basest of all the doctrins drawn from that obscene book, the Old Testament.

As in the Pilgrim colony, too, the question of religious liberty has arisen in Utah, and the other Christian sects hav despoiled the Mormons as the Congregationalists used to despoil the inhabitants of Massachusetts. And no doubt religious liberty will come to Utah as it finally came to the old slave-trading commonwealth, by persistent efforts on the part of the people. A great many decades, even a few centuries, were required before Massachusetts was religiously fit to liv in, and its religious liberty even now needs enlarging.

The leading professor should remember that the Mormons hav as much right to be regarded as si - cere as ever any Puritan, and their works show it. They are not such hypocrits as the pious ones of Massachusetts. They acknowledge their women and support their children. They depend on the Bible for their justification, and get it. As to their cruelties, was the massacre by the Danites—biblical characters!—worse than the massacres by the Puritans? Are there not many unmarked graves of Quakers banished into the wilderness by the Puritans? Those Quakers and witches "in unknown graves are a monument to the cruelties, the butcheries, and the persecutions of the"—Mormons? No; Puritans of Massachusetts!

On the whole, we think President Eliot's comparison of the Mormons and Pilgrims was pretty near right, and those who revile him put themselvs in the position of the man who complained that a neighbor had said he was not fit to transport intestins to an ursus horribilis, and that the neighbor must take it back. "Well," said the neighbor, after considering the matter, "I will take it back. You are fit to—just fit." The Massachusetts Pilgrims and the Mormons make a very pretty team when yoked together as President Eliot has yoked them.

The Freedom of Worship Bill.

Last Tuesday week the Assembly Judiciary Committee, to which was referred the "Freedom of Worship" bill, heard arguments thereon, and among them of course was the Freethinkers' side of the question. There were a lot of Protestants on hand, though they might better hav kept still. James M. King, of New York city, represented the National League for the Protection of American Institutions, and opposed the bill on the ground that it tended to mix the state and the church by giving state officials power over religious exercises. "The whole spirit of the bill is antagonistic to freedom of worship," he said. "The measure is misnamed and is inconsistent."

Ezra M. Kingsley, of New York city, represented the New York Juvenile Asylum, and entered his protest against the passage of the bill. He said the organization of the Juvenile Asylum embraced nine different sects: Baptist, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Congregationalist, Methodist, Dutch Reformed, Unitarian, Friends, and Spiritualists, and was thus an anti-sectarian institution, and was conducted as such. In fifty years there had never been a remonstrance against its method of regulating worship.

The Rev. Dr. Battershall, of St. Peter's Episcopal church of Albany, read a memorial against the bill. He said he was a champion of religious liberty. He thought something more was meant than to allow freedom of worship. The words "provide for" he considered to mean that the state was to pay some emoluments to the several sects. General Husted suggested that it might mean the setting up of the Talmud and a synagog or the purchase of wine and bread for communion service.

The Rev. Dr. Battershall also objected to the bill because it placed the attorney-general on the Commission and would mingle religion in elections. He favored the state board of charities in place of the commission of state officials.

The Rev. Dr. Elder, of Albany, thought that too many risks were incurred. It would result in an ecclesiastical pandemonium.

The Rev. Dr. James McLeod, of the first Congregational church of Albany, said: "We believe it to be the duty of the state to protect its citizens and that all stand on an equality before the law. That any sect should ask a privilege that would giv it an advantage over any other sect is repugnant to our American ideas. This bill asks this very thing and should be killed. It asks that sectarian teachers may hav an opportunity to teach sectarian doctrins in state institutions. The cry for freedom of worship does not come from within the institutions but from without, and these clamorers actually ask the state to pay them for doing their sectarian work."

It remained, however, for the Freethinker to talk sense. Mr. J. J. McCabe was there and he scattered the dominies and gave the committee some new ideas. His arguments were such that they desired to consider them, and declined to pass on the bill until he could get his brief printed. This he has done, and next week we shall lay it before the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER in extenso. Mr. McCabe deserves the thanks of all Freethinkers for his efforts in behalf of reason and secular government.

How Sunday Became the Sabbath.

Some friend of the American Sentinel has elicited from the head of the Romish church in this country the following:

"CARDINAL'S RESIDENCE, BALTIMORE,
"Feb. 25, 1892.

"JNO. R. ASHLEY, ESQ., Dear Sir: In answer to your first question, directed by the cardinal to reply to your letter, I will say: 'Who changed the Sabbath?' Answer: The holy Catholic church. 2. 'Are Protestants following the Bible or the holy Catholic church in keeping Sunday?' Answer: The Protestants are following the custom introduced by the holy Catholic church. 3. The Protestants do contradict themselvs by keeping the Sunday and at the same time professing to be guided by the Bible only. I am, Faithfully yours, C. F. THOMAS,
"Chancellor."

In the same issue of the Sentinel C. P. Bolman has an article dealing with the question how and when the "Sabbath" was changed. The question, as he rightly says, is by no means vital, nor is it even "pertinent," to the discussion of the right of the civil power to require cessation of all secular business on Sunday, or any other day. But as a matter of evangelical as well as Romish admissions that Christ or his apostles had nothing to do with the change, the quotations he makes are of interest. Thus Neander, considered by McClintock and Strong's Cyclopedia to be the greatest of ecclesiastical historians:

"The festival of Sunday, like all other festivals, was always only a human ordinance, and it was far from the intentions of the apostles to establish a divine command in this respect; far from them and from the apostolic church to transfer the laws of the Sabbath to Sunday. Perhaps at the end of the second century a false application of this kind had begun to take place; for men appear by that time to hav considered working on Sunday a sin."

The Rev. Mr. James, in addressing the university at Oxford, explained:

"When the practice of keeping Saturday Sabbaths, which had become so general at the close of this [the third] century, was evidently gaining ground in the Eastern church, a decree was passed in the council held at Laodicea [A.D. 364] 'that members of the church should not rest from work on the Sabbath, like Jews, but should labor on that day; and preferring in honor the Lord's day, then if it be in their power should rest from work as Christians.'"

William Prynne, famous in the history of English Puritanism, also says:

"It is certain that Christ himself, his apostles, and the primitiv Christians for some good space of time did constantly observe the seventh-day Sabbath, . . . the evangelists and St. Luke in the Acts ever styling it the Sabbath day, . . . and making mention of its . . . solemnization by the apostles and other Christians, . . . it being still solemnized by many Christians after the apostles' times, even till the council of Laodicea [A.D. 364], as ecclesiastical writers and the twenty-ninth canon of that council testify, which runs thus: 'Because Christians ought not to Judaize, and to rest in the Sabbath, but to work in that day [which many did refuse at that time to do]. But preferring in honor the Lord's day [there being then a great controversy among Christians which of these two days should hav the precedency]; if they desired to rest they should do this as Christians. Wherefore if they shall be found to Judaize, let them be accursed from Christ.' . . . The seventh-day Sabbath was . . . solemnized by Christ, the apostles, and primitiv Christians, till the Laodicean council did in a manner quite abolish the observance of it. . . . The council of Laodicea . . . first settled the observation of the Lord's day, and prohibited . . . the keeping of the Jewish Sabbath under an anathema."

Of the effects of the decree of this council, John Ley, another old English writer, speaks thus:

"From the apostles' time to the council of Laodicea, which was about the year 364, the holy observation of the Jews' Sabbath continued, as may be proved out of many authors; yea, notwithstanding the decree of that council against it."

About the year 468 or 469 A.D. Pope Leo issued the following decree:

"WE ORDAIN, according to the true meaning of the Holy Ghost, and of the apostles as thereby directed, that on the sacred day [Sunday], wherein our own integrity was restored, all do rest and cease from labor."

The Christian at Work says:

"We hear less than we used to about the apostolic origin of the present Sunday observance, and for the reason that while the Sabbath and Sabbath rest is woven into the warp and woof of scripture, it is now seen, as it is admitted, that we must go to later than apostolic times for the establishment of Sunday observance."

Just how Sunday observance was introduced is thus explained by the same paper, Jan. 8, 1885:

"The selection of Sunday, thus changing the particular day designated in the fourth Commandment, was brought about by the gradual concurrence of the early Christian church; and on this basis, and on none other, does the Christian Sabbath, the first day of the week, rest."

It was thus, concludes Mr. Bolman, that the voluntary custom of a portion of the church was made universal and enforced upon the whole church; and thus it was that what Neander calls a transfer of the laws of the Sabbath to Sunday was made, and a "divine command" for its observance established.

We should like to see some Puritanical Sabbatarians try to get around these facts.

About "The Story Hour."

NIMROD, ARK., March 20, 1892.

I saw a short time ago a book published by you, called "The Story Hour," which I think is the finest literature for children I ever saw. G. A. HUFFAKEN.

The terse TRUTH SEEKER has the effrontery to spell Jehovah over a cigar shop that has David's Indian in front of it, as a sign—"G. Hovah & Levy & Co." Wonder whether the editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER is not afraid of Comstock? That he does not fear the Lord worth a cent, we know full well.—San Francisco Public Opinion.

Afraid of Comstock, Mr. Choyinski? Not a bit. He can go to any place you may select for him.

The Anti-Opium News of Hongkong reports that the English church bishop of that place says: "I hav been again and again stopped while preaching with the question, 'Are you an Englishman? Is not that the country that opium comes from? Go back and stop it, and then we will talk about Christianity.'" The idea, comments the Hongkong Telegraph, of an indignant celestial rising in his place at the cathedral (which of course is crowded every day with Chinamen seeking after truth) and peremptorily ordering Bishop Burden to dry up and listen, is really too sweet for any use.

In his speech at the Fred Douglas reception the other day, Chauncey Depew said that Mr. Douglas suggested to Abraham Lincoln the issuance of an emancipation proclamation. This is rather conflicting with the claim made in a certain Spiritualistic publication that the spirits helped Mr. Lincoln to the thought, and Mr. Depew should be cautious. Perhaps Mr. Bundy will sue him for ten thousand dollars.

A friend in Newark, Mr. George W. Gorum, writes concerning the lecture by Helen H. Gardener which we printed a few weeks since: "It was my privilege to hear it, and was highly delighted with the eloquence and beauty of the discourse, and felt very much like expressing my admiration of it in a Shaksperian illustrativ quotation, slightly altered:

"'And tell me of woman's tongue;
. . . That when she speaks,
The air, a chartered libertin, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal her sweet and honeyed sentences.'"

Our readers will be pleased to learn that the lecture will be put in pamphlet form, selling for ten cents.

The efforts of the saloon-keepers in this state to amend the Sunday law so that they might open their places Sunday afternoon—"after church hours"—hav proved abortiv. This bill has been defeated by the opposition of the police, who worked through Boss Croker of Tammany Hall, who controls the legislation of the present session. The saloon-keepers are said to be angry at Croker and the police and to threaten reprisal on election day. Meanwhile their side-doors will be open every Sunday as usual. But why should the police object to the amendment of a law they pretend they cannot enforce? It looks as though Dr. Parkhurst's charges were true, that the well-known sympathy and affinity of the police with houses of ill repute, gambling dens, and liquor stores are purchased, and that a Sunday law is handy to hav in making the bargain with saloon-keepers.

The Catholic Review is not remarkable for the accuracy of its statements. In its last issue is this: "The Irish immigrants, who hav done so much toward improving both the morals and the manners of the city of New York, who hav done so much to raise that city within forty years from the condition of a dirty, disorderly provincial town, such as Dickens and other foreigners saw and described it, to a splendid and well-ordered metropolis, gradually pushed the 'Bowery b-hoy' and his brutal ways out of town." As a matter of fact, the Bowery boys, meaning the "toughs," are all Irish, and they are more numerous and worse than ever before. It is the Irish who hav debauched the politics of the city, and who furnish the criminals, the juvenil offenders, the paupers, and largely the fallen women. Our police are also principally Irish, as well as the mayor and the street-sweepers who do not sweep. In fact, Ireland at present runs the town, and it is pretty badly mismanaged. Other statements in the same editorial in the Review are that Mark Twain is a Calvinist and that Robert G. Ingersoll's audiences are all blackguards! The Review is a very intelligent journal.

In February, J. E. Remsburg, while at Huntington, W. Va., sent a brief business letter relativ to lecturing to a Liberal in Kansas. The postmaster handed it to another man of the same name, evidently a clergyman, who replied as follows:

"PRINCETON, KAN., March 6, 1892.

"J. E. REMSBURG: In reply would say that I am not a Liberal, and hav no use for your infernal dogma. You may call the Bible a legendary tale, Jesus Christ an impostor, hell a myth, and say there is no God; but you won't snuff the sulphurous smoke of hell ten minutes until you will admit the truth of the Bible, the divinity of Jesus Christ, the existence and omnipotence of God, and the reality of hell. Yours in hope,

"JOHN P. MARTIN."

Mr. Remsburg acknowledged the receipt of the above courteous epistle in the following note:

"OAK MILLS, KAN., March 25, 1892.

"Dear Sir: Should this note be delivered to the person who received my letter of February 15th, I desire to state that said letter was not intended for him, but for a gentleman of the same name, who resides, or did reside, near Princeton.

"I am obliged to you, however, for the trouble you hav taken to reply. When we shuffle off this mortal coil, should your theological speculations concerning 'the reality of hell,' etc., prove true, I will not be as unkind to you as Abraham was to Dives. If you get thirsty call on me and I'll send Lazarus down with a gallon.

"Yours in charity, J. E. REMSBURG."

Recently we reminded the editor of the Christian Leader, who objected to one of our cartoons representing the grist of children going through the Sunday-school mill and coming out into jails and other bad places as untrue, that the statistics of crime showed the Sunday-school and church to be no restraint upon immoral tendencies. What the lawyers would call cumulativ evidence is a paragraph from the London Chronicle, and some Canadian statistics. The Chronicle says: "It would hav been hardly credible had not a bishop vouched for the statement, that as many as seventy-five per cent of the convicts in Pentonville prison had at one time been Sunday-school scholars. The number was 757 out of 1,000. A similar state of things is exhibited at Leeds, where the chaplain of the borough jail reports 280 out of 282 prisoners as having passed through Sunday-school. Their average time of attendance was three years. But the bishop of Dover, to whom we are indebted for these startling figures, has himself witnessed still more terrible experience. He tried to trace 100 of his children who in the last few years had passed out of school. He could only trace 77, and of these two only were attending church regularly, and 39 were confirmed drunkards." There must be something extremely dangerous about Sunday-school methods if this statement be not a libel. It was made with all the bishop's gravity of conviction at the conference of the Canterbury Diocesan Sunday-School Teacher's Association." The Canadian statistics are from the Report for 1891 of the Ontario inspector of prisons. The total commitments for the year were 10,423, made up as follows: Roman Catholics, 3,744; Church of England, 3,134; Presbyterian, 1,368; Methodist, 1,413; other denominations, 770; how large a proportion of Atheists, Secularists, etc., are included in that 770 may be judged by the return of the Central Prison. Of 674 commitments in 1891 there were: Church of England, 229; Roman Catholic, 216; Methodist, 106; Presbyterian, 86; Baptist, 20; Lutheran, 10; Congregational, 5; Hebrew, 1; Salvation Army, 1; Atheists, 0.

THE
Ohio State Secular Union
POSTPONED.

The mass meeting called for the 3d and 4th of April, at which the above organization will be effected, has been postponed for two weeks, until the 17th and 18th of April.

This step has been taken in order to secure the privilege of reduced railroad rates, to enable our friends to visit Columbus from all points in the state.

Reduced rates will be obtained at the rate of one and one-third to return on the certificate plan. Friends will please take notice to apply for a delegate's certificate upon purchasing their ticket, for which they will pay full fare one way; the said certificate, when duly countersigned by me, will then enable them to purchase return tickets at one-third of the regular fare.

The convention will be held at Wirthwein's Hall, 335 South High street, Columbus.

An organization has already been formed in this city, and is now activly at work to assist us in the work we hav before us, with F. S. Montgomery as president, J. H. White secretary, and Dr. J. B. Schueller treasurer. The Freethinkers of Columbus are in earnest about this movement, also many of our friends in the country districts; and if the Freethinkers throughout the entire state will only rally to our support, success is certain.

Freethinkers, one and all, let me repeat my earnest request that you will seize this opportunity of establishing an organization within your own state whose chief concern will be to preserve the traditional liberties of American institutions:

To prevent our public schools from being turned into gigantic ecclesiastical institutions, wherein our children shall be taught the dogmatic creeds of sacerdotalism, and be made the helpless victims of sectarian strife;

To prevent the clergy as a class from interfering with our political life, seeking thereby to usurp political prestige for their protegés, in order to secure the assistance and guarantees of the government for their institutions;

To prevent the undesirable alliance between the priests and the politicians, for the people by an awe-inspired dread of the former hav been subdued and blindly led into the cruel machinations of the latter.

I know that many Freethinkers suppose themselvs entirely free from the influence of the church, and therefore there is no need of working in this direction. But this is a fallacy. Moreover, it is not so, for none of us are entirely free from its influences. It meets us at every town, and we are still bound down by obnoxious Sunday laws, and which we must make it our stringent duty to obliterate from our statute-books.

Freethinkers, will you help us in this undertaking, for upon your support now, at this moment, depends our success? One man can do nothing, nor even twenty, but with one grand, united effort from every Freethinker within the state of Ohio vast good can be accomplished. Friends, do not hesitate in this matter; show your true colors; do not be ashamed of doing your duty for fear of being branded with the name of Infidel.

All that we request now is but one determined move, and you will be surprised indeed at your own strength.

Anyone desiring further information or wishing to help us, financially or otherwise, will please address me in care of John B. Cochran, 112 W. Maple street, Columbus, O.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

P.S.—Those friends with whom I hav already been in communication will please address me as above, and not at the Davidson Hotel.

Lectures and Meetings.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market. Sunday afternoon, April 3d, at 3 o'clock, Hugh O. Pentecost, of New York, will lecture.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Waco, Convention of Texas Liberal Association	Apr. 8, 9, 10	Massillon, O.	May 1
New Orleans	" 13, 14	New York	" 6
Brookhaven, Miss.	" 16, 17	Boston	" 8
Chicago	" 24	Montreal	" 15
		Boulder City, Col.	June 5

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club lectures for April are as follows. The club meets at 220 East 15th street:

April 1st, "Rams' Horn and Lucifer Matches," Oliver H. G. Leigh;
April 8th, "Religious Lunacy," Hugh O. Pentecost;
April 15th, "Solitude of Self," Elizabeth Cady Stanton;
April 22d, "Religion and Morality," Henry Rowley;
April 29th, "Lunacy Real and Factitious, and Its Treatment," Albert Bach.
Business meeting and election of officers after lecture, on April 29th.

THE theology developed out of our sacred literature in relation to the cure of disease was mainly twofold: first, there was a new and strong evolution of the old idea that physical disease is produced by the wrath of God or the malice of Satan, or by a combination of both, which theology was especially called in to explain; secondly, there was evolved theories of miraculous methods of cure, based upon modes of staying the divine anger, or of thwarting Satanic malice. Along both these streams of influence, one arising in the life of Jesus, and the other in the reasonings of theologians, legends of miracles grew luxuriantly.—Ex-President White of Cornell University.

English Notes.

DEAR TRUTH SEEKERS: It seems so long since I had the opportunity to write that I am ashamed to take up my pen again. However, the interval has been spent in heavy Freethought work, occasioned by a specially energetic Christian mission in Manchester by a well-known negro preacher, Mr. S. J. Celestine Edwards. At the request of my new parishioners I hav danced attendance on him almost nightly, in order to occupy the half hour he allows his critics to put his hearers in possession of the other side of the question. For a month past Mr. Edwards has robbed the churches of their congregations and collections, and has opened the way for more thorough Freethought work in this city, if only the members of our branch of the National Secular Society will show themselvs equal to the occasion.

Before I say aught else let me congratulate THE TRUTH SEEKER on its new dress. The ever-welcome paper is now more welcome than ever. One can feel proud of it; and the capital idea of treating the illustrated portion as a separate and detachable part enhances its value. The only pity is that so few English folk see it; for it is an admirable supplement to our insular Freethought literature.

One reason why our party's journals sell so badly here is the paucity of shop-keepers who hav pluck to exhibit the papers in their windows. A week or two back I observed one placed on the outside of a shop-window and well to the front. The result was that quite a number of people stopped to read as much of this paraded Freethinker as they could get at without purchasing the copy. Probably they found their way inside and completed the deal. Anyhow it proves that if the Freethought journals could be brought more prominently before the public there would be no lack of interest to adequately support them.

You will be sorry to hear that our beloved and trusted president is down with bronchitis and congested lungs. On Thursday I saw him playing with the children at the Freethinker's children's party; but even then he complained of being a bit out of sorts. On Friday I spent the evening with him to chat over business and to discuss a quiet supper, when he was glad to get early to bed. On Saturday he was confined to his bed and on Sunday was too ill to lecture at the Hall of Science; so in the morning I filled his place and Robert Forder took the more important evening meeting. Mr. Foote is a fairly strong man, full of energy, and a hard worker in the cause. Last week he held a two nights' debate in Bristol with a Rev. Logan on the resurrection, and after becoming heated in the closely packed hall he sustained a chill, which has put him temporarily on the sick list. At the time of posting this epistle I learn that although Mr. Foote is very unwell, he is not confined to his bed, though unable to leave his room. No greater disaster could happen to the Freethought movement in its present crisis than that Mr. Foote should be laid on one side.

Few of our Freethought gatherings are as interesting as the annual treat to the little ones, already referred to. The London Secular Federation undertakes the responsibility of seeing it through and contrives to find abundant joy for the rising generation of Secularists. All sorts of games were provided, including a short theatrical sketch in costume, the small things being actors under the management of that gracious lady, Miss Edith Vance, who also drilled a Maypole squad with great success. Mrs. Cookney was, as of old, the general "boss," and Mrs. Foote distributed toys to all the winners in contests and other babes. As an experiment a sumptuous tea was provided for all.

To giv more life yet to the movement the London Secular Federation is indulging in a monthly dance and smoking concert at the Hall of Science. These little festivities are keenly relished and are another evidence of Mr. Foote's practical government of our party. Some Freethinkers hav lectures on the brain and think that they are the all-in-all of Secularism. Lectures alone are hell; but when they are taken moderately with the mirthful dance and cheerful song and a wee drop of gleesome beverage, they are heaven itself. In Manchester we hav a weekly "hop" and a monthly concert, and contrive to work a picnic during the summer months. These things get the people together and do a world of good.

I notice with regret that you Americans are troubled over the organization question. You are right to be troubled. Freethinkers are funny cattle. You cannot do as you like with them; and everybody wants to go his own gait. Well, that is very nice in theory; but it will not do in practice. You need a severe disciplin rather than a tax; you are in face of a bitter, cruel, relentless foe with a history written in blood and fire; and if you do not mean to fight hard and well you had better continue to wear the Christian yoke servilly.

For some considerable time past there hav been differences of opinion between the Socialists and the police with respect to the right of the people to hold open-air meetings at an open space in London known as "The World's End." An important deputation waited upon the home secretary with reference to the right of holding such meetings, "with a view to procure a reasonable arrangement, consistent at once with the maintenance of such right and with the preservation of order, pending the transfer of the control of the police and the regulation of such meetings to the county or district council." As president of the London Liberal and Radical Union, Mr. John Morley introduced the deputation. From Mr. Matthews's reply it seems that there are fifty places in London where open-air meetings may be held, and he has promised to furnish a list of them for general use. In addition to those there are four hundred and fifty-five different places in the streets at which, for years past, every week no less than five hundred and forty meetings hav been habitually held without the slightest interference on the part of the police. Mr. Matthews then informed the deputation that neither he nor the police lowered themselvs to ask the nature of the subjects discoursed upon, but only dealt with the matter of obstruction; and that the only reason for interfering with the World's End meetings was that a noisy rivalry had increased the meetings to an enormous extent on that particular place; that they attracted vast numbers of rough men to the spot and that police interference had become necessary for the preservation of peace, but that meetings could be resumed if they were of the original size and kind.

There is but one cause of regret for Mr. Matthews's decision. It is a recognized virtue in some of Christ's gentle lambs to raise a din at our al fresco lectures. They place their stand within a yard or two of ours; and as the Christian Evidence lecturers appear to be chosen for strength of lungs rather than any conceivable Christian grace or learning, they are easily able to shout down our more gentlemanly speakers. In some cases this is avowedly done to break up our meetings and to encourage police interference; so that in making the stipulation, the home secretary has unconsciously put into the hands of the bigots a weapon they will not be slow to use against us.

Another sign of the times is to be found in the Anti-Infidel, a miserable rag issued by a miserable editor, the all-unworthy brother of that great and noble chieftain, Charles Bradlaugh. After laying down the law concerning Atheistic lectures on Sundays, he coolly suggests that it would be a good thing on a given Sunday, by preconcerted arrangement, to charge all the Freethought lecturers under the act of Parliament, to show that they can not, without punishment, desecrate the Sabbath as they do at present. I only hope they will put their threat into action. It would not only stimulate Secularism, but it would be a splendid whip with which to flog the so-called "Christians according to the Christianity of Christ"—whatever they mean by all that. We are ready if they are.

Yours fraternally, SAM STANDRING.

My Lecture Trip.

Leaving Pittsburgh on Monday evening, I reached the great metropolis of New York city about 2:30 P.M. the next day. It was not a very pleasant reception that I received upon my return home, for the rain fell down in torrents, and what with the jostling crowds rushing for cars, the multitudes of umbrellas, whose drippings fell down the back of my neck, combined with the cold, chilly contact of waterproof overgarments, my arrival was not calculated to produce very pleasant impressions.

There is, however, always something cheering to return home under any circumstances, so, despite the unpleasant atmospheric conditions, I looked with joy upon the array of huge, massiv buildings for which the city is noted, as I crossed the Hudson river from Jersey City.

There was never yet a storm without a calm. Thus the next morning opened out bright and clear, the clouds had changed their dull, leaden hue and showed the silver lining. The sun shone brightly upon the busy, hustling New Yorkers; and taking advantage of this pleasant change, I at once repaired to THE TRUTH SEEKER office, where I spent a few pleasant hours with its Editor and the management. Here I found a communication awaiting me from Ernest Mendum, of the old Boston Investigator, calling me to that city to lecture on the following Sunday; and in accordance with the invitation I went. The lecture was given in the Paine Memorial Hall, before the Ingersoll Secular Society. The meeting was indeed a magnificent one. A large and enthusiastic audience greeted me upon this, the occasion of my second visit to Boston. Mrs. Ernest Mendum rendered two songs, one preceding the lecture, and one at the close, which drew forth well-merited applause. Mrs. Mendum has undoubtedly a splendid and well-trained voice, and which she well knows how to use with splendid effects. I must confess that I enjoyed Mrs. Mendum's part of the ceremonies even better than my own lecture. Our Boston friends gave me a hearty welcome, and I was pleased indeed to meet them once more.

Owing to the necessity of a speedy return to New York to attend to business matters, I was very reluctantly compelled to decline the invitation of L. K. Washburn, the genial editor of the Investigator, to spend a day with him at his home; so immediately after the lecture I repaired to the depot and boarded the first train for New York city.

While in New York I delivered a lecture before the well-known Manhattan Liberal Club to a crowded and attentiv audience, where I received the congratulations of many friends upon the success of my first lecture tour through the United States.

On Sunday, February 28th, I lectured again before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, where I was once more favored with a large and appreciativ audience.

I had not long to remain in the city, for on the following Sunday I commenced a return trip to the central states, during which I shall organize the State Secular Union of Ohio. I doubt not that I shall experience considerable difficulty in effecting this, for I hav received information from an authentic source that a vice-president of the American Secular Union has made it his special business to travel the state of Ohio and try to prejudice the Freethinkers against the movement. This is certainly to be regretted, for such actions can only end in disruption and strife. But despite the false and frivolous assertions of this supposed friend of Freethought, I shall carry out the scheme of state organizations to the fullest possible conclusion. They hav yet to learn that I never turn back in any undertaking of this description. However, I hav no wish to quarrel with the present administration of the Union—we hav had enough of that with the last—for my only desire is to see our party successfully organized for the promulgation of our principles, and this I mean to carry out—come what may.

After a month's sojourn among my old friends and associates, I took an affectionate farewell on Saturday, the 5th of March, and started once more to the West. I commenced this trip at Philadelphia, where I gave two lectures before the Friendship Liberal League.

Friends will please address me in care of John B. Cochran, 112 W. Maple street, Columbus, O.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

It seems as though people in Germany are waking up. A petition signed by eleven thousand persons asks abolishment of the blasphemy laws, and another petition with 12,204 signers asks for a law making cremation compulsory.

The Swedish Freethinker, Knut Wicksell, Ph.D., has been awarded a prize of five hundred francs by the French academy for a work on the question of population. A few years ago, says Fritänkaren, he was prohibited to speak on this subject in Jönköping and Linköping.

We mentioned some time ago that the Swedish Freethinkers intended to visit in body the different churches in succession. The scheme is working all right. A few weeks ago two hundred Freethinkers came in a body to the St. John's church in Stockholm. The next day the sermon was discussed in the Freethinker's hall for a full hour. These visits are to be kept up, and no doubt will be conduciv of much good.

In Venice, Italy, they hav plenty of influenza microbes and plenty of fools. The latter, to combat the former, are daily visiting in great numbers Madonna "Del Carmelo," in the Carmine church, expecting that she, as thanks for a new white dress embroidered with gold and the burning of two thousand candles, will act the part of a physician of the faith-cure school. As is to be expected, numbers of the ignorant pietists die.

The shutting down of manufacturing industries and the consignment to enforced idleness and famin in Vienna are opening the eyes of many to the fallacy of the "God loves us all" theory. People begin to reason, and the result is, as our friend Dr. Ed. Schwella writes to us, "that faith is shaken, and the superiority of common sense proven." The Freethinkers of Vienna never had so great an audience at their meetings as at present, and on the occasion of the New Year's celebration the large hall could not accommodate all who wished to hear a common-sense sermon.

Under the title of "Une Mèrge Vierge" our friend C. Cilwa, editor of La Vénité, has translated into French G. W. Foote's "Virgin Mother." Mr. C. Cilwa, whose biography we will giv in our next Items, is one of the most activ French Freethinkers, and has both in his paper and in separate pamphlets translated into French the best articles and lectures of American authors. We are pleased to see that his paper has again found us, and hope to receive it regularly, that we may inform our readers of the doings of brethren in France.

In France the anticlerical agitation is spreading among all classes. It is especially interesting to note that the agricultural population are waking up. Among the bills lately introduced into the House of Representativs we note particularly that by Paul Lafargue. He proposes that the fifty-mill francs which yearly are given as salaries to the clergy shall be used to increase the wages of teachers in the public schools, and furnish the children of poor parents with books and clothes, and that the real estate of the church shall be confiscated and the income of the same used to found a national pension fund for aged and invalid workingmen.

In the February number of De Dageraad is a very instructiv article dealing with the church census as taken from official reports, and the doctored accounts of the same as found in daily papers and religious journals. According to Catholic accounts, over half of the population is Catholic; according to Protestant estimates over three-fourths of the population is of that faith; and both parties agree that the Dutch Reformed church's (state church) membership is a good deal less than half of the population, and that the number of non-church-goers is but small. Hence both these parties, except the Dutch Reformed, clamor for abolition of the state church. As for the statement that the number of non-church-goers is but a handful, the Dageraad reproduces from the official census the figures relating to the city of Drommels, which has a population of 82,366 inhabitants:

Presbyterian	286	Methodist	11
Episcopal	596	Hernhutter	254
Knox church	128	Unitarian	16
German Evangelical	858	Greek Catholic	37
Apostolic	1,486	Mormon	164
Evangelic	1,469	Mohammedan	47
Free Evangelic	1,157	Faith unknown	5,474
Free Protestant	2,611	Do not belong to any church	66,085
Darbister	55
Baptist	1,632

We leave to our readers to draw the moral from these figures.

The Calculations of An Architect.

In this age of progress and enlightenment, when new scientific discoveries are the order of the day, it seems quite absurd that there are people who claim to be intelligent investigators who, in their ambition to correct the inspired word of God, doubt the story of the deluge. One of the main objections which I hav seen advanced to disprove the story of the ark is that the capacity of the same was unequal, not only for the animals and their food, but for their food only. Such objections shrivel and shrink into utter nothingness in the presence of the real facts. The great trouble with these objectors is that they hav never sat down and quietly figured out the facts as I hav; and as I wish to giv the world, especially the Agnostic world, the benefit of my researches, I herewith append a few corrections for the particular benefit of that class of objectors who read only to find fault. In my defense of the ark story, I shall be governed not only by the word of almighty God, but I shall also avail myself of the discoveries of later years—of modern physical geography, etc.

And when I shall hav started my ark afloat on that shoreless sea, you, Mr. Editor, will please acknowledge that there was "room and to spare." But to my figures:

It is admitted by both Infidels and Christians that the ark, if there ever was one—and of course there was, for the holy Bible says so—must hav been built and floated from near the western boundary of what is now Asia; for at that time the population of the world had not played a very important part in the development of Egypt and Greece. And we are told, Gen. vii, 19, 20: "And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high hills that were under the whole heaven were covered. Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered."

If the flood was universal, and it must hav been, because God's holy word says so, it must hav covered the highest, as well as "the mountains." If the highest were covered, then Mt. Everest, whose white-robed summit greets the morning sun 29,100 feet above the sea, must hav been covered also. Now, if the waters rose 15 cubits and covered the highest mountains, then as often as 15 is contained in 29,100 will be the length of one cubit—1,940 feet. Hence if the ark was 300 cubits long and 1 cubit is 1,940 feet, then the ark was 111 miles long. It was 50 cubits, or 18 miles, wide. It was 30 cubits, or 11 miles, high; and the one window, which has been often referred to as a very poor means of ventilation, was, I think, entirely capable of supplying air to a much larger building, for it was 1 cubit, or 1,940 feet, square! Now, also, the door which the Lord God shut on Noah's embarkation was, if we may believe that God would hav the same proportionate to the window, about 600 yards wide by 850 yards high.

How, in the face of these correct figures, in the face of these scientific and biblical deductions, can any sane man or woman ever again deny the carrying capacity of Noah's ark? Then, too, we may suppose that God knew what he was about when he caused Noah to build the ark eleven miles high: Would not the polar bear, the condor, the Eskimo and his dog, want quarters somewhat removed from the oppressiv heat of the ground floor? Also all birds, so that they might still float and fly in the bright free air above? The animals of the temperate zones occupied the cabins or middle quarters, and those from the torrid zones, the lower deck. The offices and dining-room were to the right of the door as you entered the ark, as on all great ocean ships.

Doubt, ye skeptics; attempt to refute, ye Agnostics; appeal to myth and fable for your salvation, as evidence for your belief; but who ever saw afloat upon the shoreless ocean of mythology a ship of these dimensions? This relation is reasonable; it is true. You may try to refute it now, but the day is coming when you will acknowledge the truth; when you will believe in the authenticity of God's holy word. Oh, Infidel, believe! You may recall some of these words in your dying hour. Believe and be saved. ROBERT C. GASTON.

The Battle of the Gods.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, Esteemed Friend: I hav been reading the Telegram containing the Ingersoll controversy. You hav done nobly—grandly. You hav stated facts and kept your temper. Some of your clerical friends hav misstated facts—lied—slandered, scoffed, raved, having lost their temper. In no instance, as I can see, hav you been personally abusiv.

While denouncing Christianity and showing up its horrible cruelties upon mankind, its crusades and Inquisitions, you hav compelled your opponents to admit the historical truth of your statements and charges, and to save themselvs from a disastrous defeat by assuming and admitting that, although your charges are true, that to which they apply "is not Christianity at all," but is what the Shaker writers declare it to be—Antichrist—church-and-state combinations; that Christendom is Babylon, the Catholic church being the great whore of Babylon, the mother of harlots and of the abominations of the earth; that Protestant sects are her harlot daughters, being, like their mother, church-and-state organizations.

All of these are enemies of the American secular government, and they are now making a tremendous united effort to subvert it by unconstitutional "religious legislation." If they succeed in closing the World's Fair on one day out of seven, the rest will soon follow.

Perhaps, friend Ingersoll, you yourself will perceive that there are two kinds of Christianity—a true, and a false or adulterated, Christianity. Yet whether true Christianity is intrinsically good or bad would be another question.

Shakers are true Christians. But if celibacy were universally adopted, you see and say, the race would become extinct. Would not that be better than what now is?

You think the hell of the orthodox better than their heaven, and annihilation better than either. I do not disagree with you. If, when men die, they do not liv again, and hav no opportunity in that world to right their wrongs of this world, better stop being born.

I hope you will yet be president of the United States. Christian men are dangerous men. I am afraid of them. I should not be afraid of you as a successor of Jefferson and Lincoln and friend of Saint Thomas Paine. "God put it into their hearts to do his will." Were they not then saints, in hating the whore of Babylon and her daughters, in stripping them naked, just what you are doing, and tormenting them with the fire of truth?

It will not be strange if you skeptics should hold the balance of power in politics, as I told you at Chautauqua. Then will be your time.

You hav opened a new epoch. Authority and Reason stand face to face in open court, and the people are judges. Authority would boycott you—kill you. Reason is killing authority—burning it up. It is the battle of giants and the battle of the Gods. Are not the orthodox heavens passing away with a great noise? Love to you.

F. W. EVANS.

Mount Lebanon, March 20, 1892.

A Revival Sermon.

As there has been a Campbellite Protestant meeting here for a while, I thought I would go up Sunday and hear the sermon. I had not been to church in so long that it seemed like being at some of the old heathen ceremonials—the singing, the kneeling, the rising and sitting down, and especially the bread-and-wine farce at the close. The sermon proved—from the Bible—that Christ was divine, was the creator of all things and one with God, and was God. The preacher was a real Talmage for swallowing the Bible literally and all. Take away the book and his whole sermon would hav evaporated into nothingness. I thought while I listened to the quotation of text after text, that one could as well prove the existence and peculiarities of "Jack the Giant-killer" from that book as of Christ from the Bible, for is there not now and then a giant at the present day, and are there not beanstalks and Jacks now, and does not every child love the story of Jack and his wonderful doings?

The one difference is, that we hav always been taught that Jack and the giant were myths, while Jesus and his Virgin mother and godly father were realities, holy and divine. There was one part of the church-going that I liked; that is the meeting with old friends whom I had not seen in a twelvemonth, and this is what keeps the church alive—the gathering together of the people; the friendly, cordial companionship; the having something in common with neighbor and friend.

Of course most of the congregation believe more or less of the fables they hav been taught from early childhood, and which they hear repeated two hundred and ninety-three times a week, and see indorsed by a majority of books and papers, and even almanacs, which are upheld by law, custom, and public opinion.

They are like sheep, ready to follow a leader without reasoning, whether he is right or wrong, so long as he is a recommended pastor of their special church.

All religions hav had their uses, and one by one they pass away to giv birth to grander and better things. Just so will Christianity fade and die and be no more forever:

I see the religious dances old and new,
I hear the sound of the Hebrew lyre,
I see the crusaders marching bearing the cross on high
To the martial clang of cymbals,
I hear the dervishes monotonously chanting,
Interspersed with frantic shouts,
As they spin around turning always toward Mecca,
I see the rapt religious dancers of the Persians, the Arabs,
Again, at Eluesis, home of Ceres, I see the modern Greeks dancing,
I hear them clapping their hands as they bend their bodies,
I hear the metrical shuffling of their feet,

and then turn back and see the ceremonies of our Snowville church and wonder whi h is the greatest su erstition. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

Taking a Rest.

After my long and wearisome trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean I am now enjoying the luxury of a glorious rest.

We are having our wet season, and, so to speak, I hav come in out of the rain, and am staying in; occasionally working on some new lecture that I shall ring out during the coming year.

We Liberals out here feel the loss of Freethought. It is gone, and we mourn as one who has lost a beloved child.

When it came to us weekly we did not appreciate its periodic visits, but now that it is no more we appreciate our former want of appreciation. We miss it for its local news, and for our local work.

I find all those who hav recently begun to read THE TRUTH SEEKER speak highly of it, and well they may, especially since it has been dressed up in its Sunday best; for it is now more than ever a thing of beauty and a joy forever to the one who reads it—and pays up his subscription, and then it becomes a joy also to the publishers. W. S. BELL.

Oakland, Cal.

On the Pacific Coast.

News and Notes.

From California to Arizona is the next wide sweep in my varied journey. Along the mountains and vast deserts and the new lake Salton; amidst rough rocks that seem the relics of an antique world; green fields flashing here and there, rich with alfalfa; immense bowlders ready to tumble into yawning ravines; prospects of multitudinous hills and snowy peaks bathed in purple splendor; through night, through day, with sun and moon and stars, with rattling wheel and fiery eye of burnished engin, with heart and hope of a hundred people, sleeping, dreaming, winking, tumbled into grotesque attitudes, we speed along—life's infinit variety touching with thunder and smoke and changing hues and swift music the bare monotony of the sandy wastes. On we go, proud, imperious, mighty, scorning the gloom of nature, her monstrous solitudes, her gigantic forms. We are safe. We are not toiling footsore and weary over the burning plains like the pilgrims of the olden days. We are pilgrims of the modern time. We can sit on cushioned seats; we can read poetry and philosophy: we can drowse on soft pillows; we can dream; we can gaze with impunity on nature's most awful and terrible and secret places, and fly by without a wound. This is the pilgrimage of to-day, thanks to science, which has supplanted God and given us comfort, courage, and delight while we pursue our journey round the globe.

Such is our advent into Arizona—splendid, picturesque, wild, desolate, full of interest. I opine that this is the most ancient land in North America, where the most ancient races dwelt—where, perhaps, one of the great cycles of civilization has rolled its glittering orbit; for all around are the traces of a mighty people, who lived in cities, made bridges and canals, cultivated the earth, and whose only signs of barbarism are the remains of temples and of gods. One must visit Arizona in order to behold some of the greatest peculiarities of this continent.

The weather is simply delicious when I arrive at Phœnix. It is just like heaven—if there is any such place in the blue empyrean. The skies spread over sweet and lovely as the azure dome of Italy. The air is soft, with gentle music in its breath. Green fields are about, with flowers of every hue. Wonderfully luminous is the horizon gemmed with hills, as if beyond were still more gorgeous scenes.

Phœnix is in the lap of spring just now—not the spring of the East, with its fitful storms, but a spring with only bloom and splendor in its silvery path. And Tempe—name redolent of Greece, and poetic association—I do not think in Greece one could wander through more charming landscapes. All this will sound strange to those who think that Arizona is only a barren country, where the Arizona Kicker doth flourish. But truly there is beauty in Arizona—a climate unsurpassed. There is fertility of soil; there is gold and silver; there is a liberal and progressiv people. I suppose of course God could hav spent the whole seventh day in improving Arizona, without a moment's rest. But Arizona is a big country. It is simply terrific in places. Dante could not imagin anything more dismal. It is hot—so hot in some places that the legend is that those who die and go to hell hav to send back for their overcoats. But in spite of this there are delightful spots, where almost anything can be produced; where there are elegant dwellings, gardens, orchards, vineyards; where there are three hundred and forty sunny days in the year; where for nine months there are neither the extremes of heat nor cold. It is like ethereal spring or golden autumn, and the three hot months are no worse to endure than the summer heats of New York, Boston, and Chicago. Take it all around, the climate is about the best in the world. As for the resources of the territory, besides the minerals, which are apparently inexhaustible and of infinit variety, and vast lumber districts; besides the land which is now cultivated, and which is abundantly productiv, there are millions of acres which will one day, with sparkling rivulets and reservoirs, shine like the gardens of Babylon. Irrigation is the key of this country, and the treasures which it unlocks will be simply magnificent.

I arrive at Tempe on Friday, March 11th. Arrangements are made for a lecture here, and a very good audience is present, considering that the affair was rather extempore and that at the very last moment we had to change halls. There is a Liberal element at Tempe that can be depended upon. Mr. Chas. F. Hayden, who came to this country in the early days and is one of its foremost business men, is always a generous supporter of Freethought. His wife, Mrs. Sallie Davis Hayden, is equally earnest. She was the first white woman in this country, and side by side with Mr. Hayden, on the outskirt of civilization, with woman's genius, has helped to make Arizona what it is to-day. In company with these are Colonel and Mrs. Atkinson, C. E. Rembert, R. M. Robertson, and others, who made the day's stay exceedingly pleasant. I enjoyed the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden. Carl Hayden, their son, was the first white child born in Tempe. He is about to go to California to complete his studies.

Friend Peters is on the sick-list this time. He is always ready to lend a hand. Mr. Lidington givs the free use of his hall, so the colors float bravely at Tempe. Good fellowship prevails. There is cheer for future days.

I am at Phœnix Saturday night. A fair house greets me, and larger numbers on Sunday afternoon and evening. The churches are making tremendous efforts to stop the tide of Freethought at Phœnix, and such is the pressure that it is pretty difficult for a Christian to attend our lectures unless he has considerable independence and backbone. A tent revival is now going on. All join in this as an offset to the Freethought meetings. Our friend Askern is present at the revival almost regularly, and is quite a trouble to the ministers, who would like to hav him stay away, since he will not be converted and asks too many questions. When all those who want to go to heaven are requested to arise, he keeps his seat. When the same request is made of those who wish to go to hell, he calmly sits. He prefers Arizona.

The churches relied upon a Sunday law to giv them an advantage, but it proved a boomerang. The clergy only wanted to arrest a few, but when the constable got started he was too much for the clergy. He did not stop at their dictation. About one hundred and fifty were arrested, among these prominent church-members who run livery stables, Sunday newspapers, etc. This was too much. The clergy themselvs might be arrested, for did not they work on Sundays? They beat are treat. Not a single case was brought to trial. It is hoped that this infamous Sunday law will be repealed. The people of Arizona are too Liberal to longer countenance such injustice and hypocrisy.

Sunday morning I hav a delightful drive with J. B. Lacy, manager of the gas-works of the city. We went out to the ostrich farm. Ostrich-raising has proved to be a success in Arizona. There are twenty-four on this farm now, raised from one pair in two years, and they look flourishing. They are a vigorous "bird." Their legs and thighs are perfectly naked. Their long necks seem like flexible iron. The eyes are big, round, and bright. The feathers are in profusion upon the back and breast. They press around us and apparently take great interest in our looks. Perhaps they think we might make a good breakfast.

Jas. Thalheimer, of the Central Hotel, takes excellent care of me, as "mine host." It was a pleasure to meet with his family, and around his table to enjoy the good things of life, and the philosophy of Freethought also.

J. H. W. Jenson is still our stalwart Liberal, doing his "level best." Mr. Hayden comes with me from Tempe and acts as chairman of the meeting. The veteran soldier, Thayer, is with us, and also Colonel Posten. Upton has been out prospecting. Colonel and Mrs. Hawkins are now in the far North. So we did not meet with all our former friends. Changes are constantly taking place in this live Western country. People are "on the go." Still new friends join the old, and Phœnix keeps to the front for the Liberal work.

I leave Phoenix at 4 o'clock on Monday morning, March 15th, and arrive at Tucson, Ariz., Monday afternoon. Next to St. Augustine, Fla., this is reckoned as the oldest city in this country. It has indeed a most ancient look, along with the lively appearance of a new town. Indeed it is one of the oldest places I ever struck. I guess two-thirds of the houses are adobe, and of one story. The streets most of them are narrow, as if they were originally a trail. There are wide streets, however, in the new part of the town. There are six thousand inhabitants, of which over one-half are Mexicans and Catholics. Some of the old Castilian families reside here. It is a picturesque place to the traveler. You might say that Tucson is not only the oldest city in the Union, but the oldest on the continent, and perhaps the oldest in the world—older than Rome or Babylon even, for this is the site of an ancient Aztec city, the remains of which can now be seen, and when that city first began who can tell?—but it might hav flourished with the civilization of Egypt.

Tucson thus flings its roots of life into the immemorial past. The freshness of the new mingles with the shadow and wonder of the old. Here is a point for contemplation—for thoughts that wing their way into the "far backward and abysm of time."

I hav always wanted to go to Tucson, but hav been unable to make arrangements hitherto. No Freethought lectures had ever been given here. There were some Freethinkers of long standing, subscribers of THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator, but the church element seemed to be so prevailing that it was uncertain whether any success could be made of a Liberal movement. My friend Isaac E. Crum, whom I first met at San Jacinto, Cal., and afterward at Fort Worth, Tex., is now settled here, and after becoming acquainted and looking the ground over, in council with a few stanch Liberals determined to make an effort, and so invited me to stop over for one night. I did so, and I hav not found better success or a more cordial reception anywhere along the line. The lecture was well attended by the best citizens, and there was quite a number of ladies. The Opera House was nearly full. The lecture on "The Demands of Liberalism" was in such accordance with the ideas of those present that by a unanimous vote I was requested to remain another evening, which I did, and lectured on "Freethought and Morality." This night the house was packed—"standing-room" only, as the saying is. I was surprised and delighted at the interest manifested, and so were the "Old Guard," who for so many years hav kept the flag over this post; but had never before made a general movement.

I cannot help liking Tucson. The Liberals there are so generous and enthusiastic; the unique city itself is so reminiscent of times past, and so forward-looking. I like the country about it. It is beautiful and healthful. The atmosphere is clear and bright, the skies of Italian splendor, and the scenery of plain and mountain most varied and alluring.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Will Brown takes me nine miles out of Tucson to the old mission church, said to be three hundred and fifty years old, and probably the oldest building in this country. The drive out was exceedingly interesting. Such an immense panorama was spread before the view in the glorious sunshine, the dark gray of the plain dotted here and there with the brilliant green of the alfalfa, and then in striking majesty, with tower and dome, the ancient church lifts itself upon the view, while not another building is to be seen amidst the apparent wilderness. Lonely and grand, with white walls, grotesque and stately, this temple has abided through the storms and sunshine of centuries, and still today, within its shadowy precincts, roll the anthems of the church of Rome, and the priest drones his monotonous service. I might imagin I was just coming upon some desolated ruin amidst the vast deserts of the East. As we approach there are signs of nomad life. An Indian village lies round about, and beyond an old Indian burying-ground. Here again we are plunged into a primeval world. Here sit outside the tents the wrinkled Indian dames at work molding pots and jars, grinding corn in the good old way mentioned in the Bible, while the little Indians play in the sand and sun, and the "bucks" are inside the tents sleeping and smoking. The aboriginal life is before us, side by side with the solitary emblem of Rome, and these are the worshipers at its shrine. What a curious study all this is!

They charge a dollar admission to this old church, and there is where the Yankee spirit of thrift comes in, and I realize that I am in modern times. A fat Indian opens the heavy door and grimly watches us all the time to see that we do not steal anything. As a matter of fact, the toes and fingers of the saints and the golden ornaments hav been taken away by visitors. The place was once abandoned and the Indians stabled their horses here side by side with the Virgin and the Apostles. This sacrilege is no longer permitted. Religious services are held and the Indians make up the congregation, and everything is carefully guarded. There is a kind of solemnity as one stands beneath the painted dome, and yet I never did see such an association of the sublime and ridiculous. The pictures are daubs, almost caricatures, and yet amidst the crude delineations there was a breath of romance. There was the aroma of the old faith, once so intense, but now a faded, a ghostlike belief. The life is gone. It is only a weird memory. How strangely it gleams today in this dark and ruined edifice!

On Tuesday morning I went with Mr. A. J. Davidson to the direct opposit of this lonely old relic, to the University of Arizona, an elegant building, where the new, bright world of the nineteenth century spreads its radiant colors. Professor Comstock was kind enough to show us about and point out the methods of education in this excellent institution. The objects are practical—mainly mining, engineering, agriculture, chemistry, etc. This university is for science, for humanity, and for the future. I believe there are no religious exercises in it. It is purely secular. Its corps of teachers are able and liberal. I was pleased to meet with such bright and earnest men as Professor Comstock and Professor Gully. They are well equipped for the important work in hand.

Mr. Davidson also took me to Davidson's ditch, which he projected and which will irrigate ten thousand acres of land. Mr. Davidson also holds water rights by which eventually a million acres can be reclaimed. He would like to form a Liberal colony in this part of the world. I think that would be a good plan. There is no doubt that these "desert lands" will some day be made abundantly productiv, when the vast systems of irrigation now in contemplation are completed, which of course it will take some years to do. For youth and energy this is a "land of promis." Take a long look ahead, and where is now the giant cactus, blooming gardens will appear and fruits glisten to the mountain edge.

Judge R. D. Ferguson presided at the meetings. He is a stanch Liberal, and is not afraid to let people know where he stands. His introductory addresses were finely adapted to the occasion and gave a good send-off to the speaker.

Among our other friends here—soldiers to the core of liberty and humanity—are E. H. Ferris, who was the first to start the campaign with a generous contribution; James Finley, who joined in also like a true comrade; John Scolari; Judge M. R. Slater; Charles Etshels; J. Landis; Aleck Ross; Samuel Hughs; W. P. Woods; W. M. Lucas; Howard Flynn; John Gardiner; W. F. Overton; Alex. Von Wendt; I. D. Johnson; Thomas J. Morris; Charles Brown; L. Mueller, and others. This makes a splendid company for Freethought. I hav had a most enjoyable time, and I shall look forward to another rushing campaign in this picturesque town. The flag has been flung to the breeze. It shall float on the bright and happy winds of this attractiv territory. A few years from now and a marvelous change will unroll itself over this wild and magnificent country.

Good-bye, Arizona—the oldest and the newest, the oddest and the brightest of places desolate and beautiful! Land of immemorial ages! Land of hope, land where scenes of loveliness extend, land of monstrous forms, lofty mountains, dark ravines, enormous canyons, rugged peaks! Land of cactus, land of flowers, land of bluest skies and hottest sands, where hell and heaven in nature's varying moods seem to unite smile and gloom in extraordinary and bewildering companionship! Good-bye and all hail, Arizona! SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

March 17, 1892.

Who Are Liars?

Let us see. "If the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I, the Lord, hav deceived that prophet" (Ezek. xiv, 9).

"God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lie, that they all might be damned" (2 Thess. ii, 12).

Jesus takes three apostles only up into a mountain apart, is transfigured before them, and then charges them to tell the vision to no man until the son of man be risen again from the dead (Matt. xvii). Deception can be the only object.

Jesus is made to speak in parables, that the common people "seeing, they might see and not perceive, and hearing they might hear, but not understand" (Mark iv).

These are a few of the many examples that gave excuse to the concoctors of the Christian hierarchy to impose their frauds of visions and miracles upon the common people; and Dr. Mosheim, chancellor of a German university, and a voluminous orthodox writer on church history, speaking of the church fathers, says: "It was an almost universally adopted maxim, that to deceive and lie is an act of virtue when the interests of the church might be promoted." Hence ecclesiastical history is stuffed with invented stories of miracles, visions, martyrdoms, persecutions, etc., that fascinated the ignorant, credulous multitude. Even the gospel stories find no corroboration outside the cloister. But the common people supposed, as they always hav, that the priest obtains interviews with some deity and gets instructions. During a period of about four hundred years, fanatical bishops and priests were engaged in writing and altering gospels and epistles —hundreds of them. But as they could not agree among themselvs, neither in their superstitious notions nor in the manner of lying, they quarreled with and persecuted one another.

Truthful, unbiased history, like Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of Rome," informs the reader that the so-called "dreadful persecutions" of the early Christians were either committed by one branch of Christians on another, or brought on themselvs by refusing to obey the equitable laws of Rome. Some modern pastors, unable to controvert Gibbon or to ignore him altogether, hav had published his history minus the chapters relating to the rise of Christianity. Suppression of facts is a method of lying which the church has always practiced.

The Protestant of to-day has little to say about the visions and miracles seen and done by early Christians, but he unites with the Catholic in exaggerating their sufferings and laying all the blame on unbelievers. To parallel the ten plagues of Egypt, Christians hav tried to figure out ten persecutions.

Down to the time of Constantine, A.D. 325, the Roman government tolerated all religions. The Egyptian, the Greek, the Jew, could worship each in his own way. Then why persecutions during that period? Because the Christians attacked the altars and emblems of other religions—carried on, in fact, a kind of divine brigandage.

There were thirty Roman emperors between Tiberius, in whose reign the alleged crucifixion took place, and Constantine; and authenticated history finds six persecutions only.

1. One in the reign of Nero; and it was not till the tenth year of his reign that he is said to hav persecuted the Christians in Rome (not elsewhere); and two years afterward he committed suicide to escape punishment for murdering his wife, mother, and others.

2. Persecution, also local and of short duration, occurred in the reign of Domitian, about A.D. 90.

3. One in the reign of Adrian, one of the "five good emperors," took place A.D. 130.

4. One in the reign of Marcus Aurelius, also one of the "good emperors, distinguished for his virtues," occurred about A.D. 170. Then followed a still longer period without benefit of persecution.

5. One in the reign of Decius, an "accomplished" monarch, about A.D. 250. Lastly, the

6. "Dreadful persecution" took place in the reign of Diocletian. His reign began A.D. 284; and this persecution not till A.D. 303—the Roman principle of toleration holding good for eighteen years of his reign. This persecution is more familiar from being called the era of martyrs. Now, this Diocletian, only two years after his first edict against the "dangerous sect," resigned the empire and retired to his farm; and afterward, when urged to resume power, he replied, "Come to Salona and see my cabbages, and you will urge me no more."

The Christians—at the time called a sect—claimed to be governed by higher laws, and disregarded Roman laws; yet six only of the thirty emperors undertook to disciplin them, and five of these six in general history command our admiration. Nero alone is bad—a murderer, perhaps insane—and Constantine takes him for a model and murders his own family.

Impartial investigation shows that out of the three hundred years covering all the time in which the alleged persecutions occurred, less than twenty-five years will measure the aggregate time of the six persecutions. Nothing having any historical foundation was ever more grossly exaggerated than these so-called dreadful persecutions. The numbers who hav suffered for heresy at the hands of their brother-followers of the lamb are as a thousand to one.

The priest loves to bring the suffering early Christians before his sympathetic flock, because, if the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church, he cannot hav too much of it. And he pictures the early Christian as all goodness and godliness, while all history proves him ignorant and fanatical. He honors Constantine, the Christian who boiled his wife. He anathematizes the emperor Julian as an apostate, while history proves that Julian never was Christian, and that he was a just emperor. He asserts that Rome was intolerant toward the early Christians, while the evidence is overwhelming that pagan Rome was tolerant of all religions, and that Christian Rome was most intolerant.

From the pulpit the priest can falsify history with impunity. No reply there. He affirms that the Christian church has always promoted human liberty; yet for many centuries, with brief exceptions, this church (as in Russia and elsewhere to-day) has been in alliance with the most oppressiv governments. He asserts that this church has always fostered learning; in face of the fact that her prisons, tortures, and fagots were ever ready to check a thought which differed from her dogmas, and that by her orders much valuable literature has been destroyed. He claims that to Christianity is due all progress in civilization; while the fact is, that by it Grecian and Roman civilization and culture were nearly destroyed, and progress in liberty and knowledge is now being made in spite of the church. In the pulpit he can claim a monopoly of all virtues, however false, and denounce every unbeliever, however unjustly. More lies hav been uttered in the pulpit than out of it. Allow that much the greater portion of priests and pastors do not know enough to know that they preach lies; as their religion is founded on dreams and pretended visions, in them is discovered the concreted Father of Lies. L. G. REED.

Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated.

This book is what its title represents it to be, only more so. The stories are told better than in the Bible, and in a way to show their true inwardness, and the illustrations faithfully picture the absurdities of the narrativs. They are more than comical. Mr. Heston has dealt the Old Testament some severe blows in these sketches. They would make the sick laugh, and the person with the least bit of sense left in him ashamed to hav ever looked upon these stories of the Bible as anything more than silly tales.

The book is divided into twenty-five chapters, as follows:—Adventures of Adam; The Origin of the Young Men's Christian Association; Sustaining a Theory; Some Giants; The Adventures and Work of Noah; A Hunting Anecdote; Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor; A Queer Family; Isaac and His "Sister;" One of Twin; Jacob and Esau; Joseph the Man of Dreams; Holy Moses; Balaam the Diviner; Bloody Joshua; The Campaign of Deborah and Barak against Jabin and Sisera; General Gideon; Jephthah and his Human Sacrifice; Samson the Strong; Ruth and Boaz; Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel; David, God's Favorit; Some Stories from the Book of Kings; Adventures of the Prophets; Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

The reading matter in the book is worth the price alone, but the pictures make it doubly valuable. It contains 400 pages, has strong covers, and is neatly printed and bound. Price, $1.—Investigator.

Moral Educability.

We wonder at the monstrous cruelties of past ages. How could they hav been possible, we ask, since "human nature has always been the same?" But human nature has not always been the same; it has always been changing; it is changing now, and it will always continue to change. And the rate of improvement is continually accelerating. Those born since the war find it difficult to comprehend the barbarities of even one short generation ago. Their children will find the barbarities of to-day equally incredible. The horrors of Siberia, of the Russian persecution of Israel, of the no less infamous sweat-shops in our own country, may relegate the latter third of the nineteenth century to the same limbo of infamy to which the ages of Nero and Simon Legree are condemned, notwithstanding the comparativly great ameliorations in the average condition of the human race. Still later generations will wonder at the possibility of inhumanity which in our day condemns the many to life-shortening and life-embittering toil that the few may consume in luxurious idleness the price of their sweat and suffering; at the travesty of justice which punishes the criminal who robs his one victim with his puny arm of flesh and bends the knee to the ruffian who despoils his thousands with his mightier brain; at the selfish greed of the titled idlers who partition the soil among themselvs and take heavy toll of the multitude of Earth's children for presuming to liv upon the bosom of their common mother; at the unspeakable cruelty of the sex which flatters and spoils with indulgence a portion of the other sex, and drives by its tyranny another portion to starvation, suicide, or infamy.—E. P. Jackson in Popular Science Monthly.

BY an inconceivable whimsicality, while in other countries the Jews were burnt to make them embrace Christianity, in France the property of such as became Christians was confiscated. This tyrannical custom had been introduced for two reasons; First, to try the faith of these new converts, as it was but too common for those of this nation to feign submission to the gospel for some personal interest, without internally changing their belief. Secondly, because as they derived their wealth chiefly from usury, the purity of Christian morals appeared to require them to make a general restitution, which was effected by confiscation. But the true reason of this custom, which the author of the "Spirit of Laws" has so well developed, was a sort of "droit d'amortissement"—a redemption, for the sovereign or the seigneurs, of the taxes which they levied on the Jews, as mortmainable serfs, whom they succeeded; for they were deprived of this benefit when the latter were converted to the Christian faith.—Voltaire.

Letters of Friends.

Condensation in Literature.

MARENGO, ILL., March 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Shepherd "struck it rich" in yours of the 5th, wherein he suggests that every article should be rewritten again and again, reducing it one-half every time. What a pity he did not set an example by applying the rule to his own literary effort—i. e., keep on rewriting it and cutting it down until nothing was left of it? H. WETTSTEIN.

May Nature—Not God—Bless Us.

ELDORA, IA., March 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $1 to pay for the new Bible Picture Book. Please forward the book as soon as practicable, and oblige me, your ever-enduring friend in the cause of Freethought and humanity. Gentlemen, producers and patrons of the glorious old TRUTH SEEKER, may the immutable laws of nature and the controling power of the universe ever work harmoniously and coincident with your welfare. Yours truly with the greatest regard, T. E. ROCKWELL.

Angr Jews.

DALLAS, ORE., Feb. 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In the cartoons I see many beautiful things like new to me, as I had not read them in the Jew-book, or if I hav, it was when as a Christian with good believing capacity. I considered all divine through fog. Heston is a genius. Our Jews are angry about it. The Jews as Christian clergy are our Sabbatarian fanatics. I read some years back in THE TRUTH SEEKER that when a Jew in one town in the South was mayor not even milk-selling on Sunday was allowed. The Jews hav the most money; they will make or circulate paper money to get all the money; and then when all the Russian scum is in, the kingdom of Judea will be proclaimed. A. W. KIENTOFF.

Suited With a Lecturer.

NEWARK, N. J., March 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav read in this week's TRUTH SEEKER that our young friend and orator, Mr. Charlesworth, is starting out on a lecture trip. I hope all friends of Freethought will engage the gentleman to deliver a few lectures. He draws good houses, and he is listened to with attention. He is like the majority of philosophers, poor in purse, but he has a storehouse of knowledge in his cranium. And his remarks are so plain and yet so witty and truthful that his friends call him our young Bob. Every Freethinker should feel proud of the young man, and I am sure they do. I can predict a successful future. I judge the tree by the fruit.

Respectfully, W. W. MORRIS.

Hear All Sides, Then Decide.

FABIUS, N. Y., Feb. 23, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed I send you $5 to continue my subscription to the grand old TRUTH SEEKER, which I hav taken from its very first number, issued at Paris, Ill. It would be lonesome work to keep house without this treasured and weekly visitor. I am glad that all shades of beliefs can find expression in our paper. Hear all sides, then judge for yourselvs, is my motto. I see that Watson Heston—whom I once visited at Carthage, Mo.—still pencils the absurdities of superstition under the guise of Christianity. That his labors are duly appreciated by a majority of your readers, is amply shown in "Letters from Friends."

I wish that my pecuniary affairs were such that I could donate more for the cause of Freethought; but still, please accept the will for the deed.

MRS. H. M. S. BILLINGS.

Eloquent Discourses.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am greatly pleased to record that the lectures of John R. Charlesworth delivered before our League on Sunday, March 6th, were a grand success. The weather was all that could be desired, and as the result, we had two splendid audiences, which must hav proved inspiring to the lecturer (as his discourses were really eloquent, as well as logical and argumentativ), it being his first visit to lecture before a public audience in Philadelphia. I regret to state Dr. Westbrook was not with us to hear these two philosophical lectures, especially the evening lecture, on "Life, Death, and Immortality." It may be that it was too radical for the doctor to come to hear, as you doubtless know that Materialism is too swinish for some believers in immortality to take stock in. Judging from the frequent applause during the lectures, the people were en rapport. At the close of the meetings, many persons remarked to me that they had never heard a better speaker in the English language on Freethought, notwithstanding they had heard Ingersoll and Watts, and others. In my judgment, leaving out the two above-named persons and T. B. Wakeman, Mr. Charlesworth has no equal in this country as an orator, and as a debater he is par excellence. To all Freethought societies that hav not heard this talented young lecturer, I say: Secure his services as soon as possible; you will never regret it, as you will find that he is an intellectual giant, and worthy the support of all lovers of mental liberty. I hav been asked by many persons that heard these lectures, "When does the lecturer intend to come this way again?" So I will conclude by saying that if Mr. Charlesworth sees this letter he will please open correspondence with me upon the matter.

Yours, GEORGE LONGFORD,
Sec. Friendship Liberal League.

The Parsons' Latest Orders On Hell.

ELKHART, IND., Feb. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: If you choose to insert them, I herewith transmit you some verses having reference to the action of the late Presbyterian assembly in New York. I remain,

Very sincerely yours, C. H. MURRAY.

NO BABIES IN HELL.

The Assembly has recently met
To fashion a doctrin to teach us,
And dish out the eternal wrath
In quantum sufficient to reach us.
In adjusting the classes to damn
They hav done exceedingly well
To credit omnipotent power
With sending no babies to hell.

The way the subject was handled
Was the most parliamentary sort;
They had a special committee
To get the devil's report.
Although the action is tardy
On the fact we will pleasingly dwell,
These dignified deacons acquaint us
That there are no babies in hell.

The kind mammas can now rest assured,
If their infants should early expire,
They'll be carried to regions above
And keep out of that horrible fire.
Aye, escape not only the broiling
But the detestable sulphuric smell,
That, all previous synods hav told us,
Plagued all the poor babies in hell.

It must be a relief to the devil
That the infants are taken away,
For now he can giv more attention
To those who are aged and gray.
Perhaps John Calvin's among them,
For Swedenborg ventured to tell
That he saw the great preacher in limbo,
Who consigned the dear babies to hell.

How that hideous, infernal doctrin
Has made many a sad mother wild,
From fearing the mercy of heaven
Too scanty to cover her child!
Go tell such to sorrow no longer,
Their gloom and dejection dispel;
For the preachers hav lately discovered
God sends no babies to hell.

C. H. MURRAY.

Has Temporarily Escaped Splitfoot.

HARMONY, IND., Feb. 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am still about, as you see. Some of my theological cranks said, when I had the grip, that Old Splitfoot was after me.

I hav a tough time of it sometimes with our Christians. On Friday at the post-office some one spoke of inheriting disease. I told them they would find it in the Ten Commandments. They said, "Which one?" Said I, "The second." Then I quoted it, when they all flew up and said it was not there. Even the postmaster said it was not. Said I, "If you hav never read your Bible, take your Bible, find the twentieth chapter of Exodus, and if you can read you will find it." I hav not seen any of them since. I told them I had the Ten Commandments committed to memory before any of them were born.

One man said to me, "Don't you believe the Bible?" Said I, "It is not what a man believes, but what he knows, that's moving the world."

I say to my Christians, "When was prayer answered? If so, why don't you pray for rain in season? Why don't you stop floods, drouths, cyclones, hailstorms, earthquakes, volcanoes, storms at sea, when everybody is on their knees praying? Why," said I, "you might just as well step out and whistle 'Dan Tucker' for all God cares." I hav to cause them to cast anchor once in a while.

There are a great many books I would like to hav, but cannot afford it at present. I think now when the weather gets more pleasant I will get round and get a subscriber, and perhaps some books or tracts. I took THE TRUTH SEEKER out of the office one day. One fellow said sneeringly, "TRUTH SEEKER!" two or three times. Said I, "This is my Bible. Scat!"

Long liv the glorious old TRUTH SEEKER! Giv it them, Heston! JESSE MAURER.

Yes, We Do What Our Name Implies.

SPOKANE, WASH., March 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of January 23d, page 58, you published an article with a quotation from the Palouse Gazette appertaining to refer to myself. I herewith inclose you an apology published by the Palouse Gazette for their article that you published, which, as you will observe, if it did refer to me, disposes of that article which you quoted.

Mr. Peter Selde, whom I insured, has no reason to be other than well pleased with his transaction with me, as he received his policy, has never communicated with me that it was unsatisfactory, nor hav I heard from or seen him since insuring.

I did not inform him that the company guaranteed him eight per cent. The four per cent which he refers to is, of course, in accordance with the New York law.

Having during the past seven years occupied a confidential and fiduciary position with the great company that I hav the honor to represent, writing for them during that period of time many millions of dollars of life insurance, involving the handling of over a million dollars in cash, having a respect for my good name—though not an English nobleman, as your article claimed, nor making on my part any claim to be one, not desiring to occupy that position—I request you to publish these the true facts, believing that your paper's desire has ever been, and is, to be synonymous with its name, i. e., a truth seeker, and trusting to your justice to right a serious wrong that this article has inflicted upon the writer, I remain,

Ever sincerely yours,
GERALD M. FENNELL.

M'CROSKEY WASN'T BILKED.

In an October issue the Gazette stated on what appeared to be reliable authority that a representativ of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York was traveling over the Palouse in his business often writing out policies under false representations. George McCroskey was named as having been one of the victims. But the Gazette has just received from Mr. McCroskey a letter which says that his policy has come to him all right, and that he believes the agent to be perfectly honorable. It appears now as if those reports were manufactured by rival agents in order to injure the gentleman representing the Mutual Life, as he has been a trusted employee for seven years.—Palouse Gazette, January 22d.

Domineering Preachers and Untaxed Churches.

SOUTH BEND, WASH., Feb. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav seen the list of the herein-ordered books in THE TRUTH SEEKER, which I get occasionally from a gentleman by the name of Crawford, who is a subscriber for it. Mr. Crawford is a nice gentleman and a strong worker for Liberalism and truth. There are very many Liberal-minded men here, but whether they belong to your flock I can not tell. It would be a nice thing if there was a Liberal society here so we could go and listen to some Liberal discussion, and I am sure you would gain many good men to your flock, and I would be the first one.

South Bend was started two years ago, and is a town of fifteen hundred inhabitants. It has five churches but only one school. It seems to me that this country is overrun with preachers. Then as soon as there is a town started they are right there to build churches. The property to build churches on they beg from the land companies, and for the buildings they go around with a subscription list and beg. Always a-begging. It looks to me as if a preacher is nothing but a beggar. But I do not believe in giving to such beggars as these, and never go near them nor go to hear their gabble. But to hear a lecture on Liberalism I would go every day in the week.

I hope that the president of the Oregon State Secular Union will do something for our end of Washington in regard to organizing Secular societies.

Further, I am a strong believer in keeping the Bible out of the public schools, in running the World's Fair on Sunday as well as any other day, and in taxing church property at full value. Here in South Bend all church property amounting to $500 or over is exempted from taxation. Just think of it—as small a place as that having five churches, and the property-owner after paying a big price for his lots has to pay the taxes for the churches, who got their property only for putting on a long face. And I strongly oppose all Sunday laws. I do not believe in being ruled by the church. With the churches it is as it is with the devil—if you giv him one finger he wants the whole hand, and if you let him in the church (church in law) he wants to get on the pulpit (preachers want to make laws).

MARTIN LANGALLIS.

Pithy Lectures.

NORSE, TEX., Feb. 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We had the pleasure of having two lectures delivered here at Norse by Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, of Portland, Ore., on last Sunday, February 7th, to—comparativly speaking—large audiences.

Mrs. Krekel delivered a lecture on the "Objects and Aims of Secularism" in the afternoon, in which she showed not only the justice of our Demands, but that these principles are essential to the perpetuity of our free institutions as a republic, and necessary for the preservation of our rights and liberties as a self-governing people. She pointed out the utter uselessness and inconsistency of employing chaplains in our Congressional halls and legislativ assemblies. She exposed the dangerous attitude and nefarious designs of the—so-called—"National Reform Association," whose aim it is to place God in the Constitution of the United States, and to acknowledge Jesus Christ as the "Ruler of the Nations," thus intending to unite church and state, and, with the aid of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the Young Men's Christian Association, and other organizations with similar ends in view, they mean to transform our republic into a theocracy. She showed how unconstitutional and dangerous to individual, civil, and political liberty was all Sabbatarian or Sunday legislation, and how subversiv of our inalienable rights and liberty of conscience were all such laws; that justice demands that all church property should be taxed; that every American citizen should be allowed the enjoyment of that perfect liberty of conscience guaranteed by the Constitution without molestation of his political rights or privileges. I shall attempt no further synopsis of this excellent lecture. Suffice it to say that the audience was very much interested. Mrs. Krekel arrays the indubitable evidence of indisputable facts in support of, and with clear and conclusiv reasoning and incontrovertible logic sustains, her positions.

On Sunday evening Mrs. Krekel delivered a lecture on "The Religion and Church of the Future." She showed in this lecture what great and wonderful progress has been made in religious ideas and conceptions. What a change and evolution of religious thoughts and conceptions has taken place, and is constantly going on, despite the most strenuous opposition and efforts of the most orthodox to stem this tide of progress. Advancement reaches even the orthodox, as evidenced by the recent revision of creeds, and of the Christian's Bible. In conclusion she portrayed, in a vivid and beautiful word-picture, her grand ideal of a Church of the Future, which I shall not mar by attempting to describe. The entire audience seemed in such enraptured attention as if entranced by the magic of her grand, eloquent, and beautiful peroration.

Mrs. Krekel's lectures must be heard to be appreciated. She is doing a grand and noble work. May success attend her efforts wherever she may go.

T. Theo. Colwick.

A Torch-Bearer.

Silver Lake, Ore., Feb. 17, 1892.

Mr. Editor: Inclosed herewith please find $5 for two more subscribers. This is five new subscribers for me since the new year began. I hope that all or the majority of Freethought subscribers hav done as well or better. January numbers of The Truth Seeker, with Colonel Ingersoll's lectures in them, are fine for missionary work.

With long life to The Truth Seeker and all of its supporters, I am,

Sincerely yours, W. C. Martin.

Atheism's Peaceful Shores.

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 20, 1892.

Mr. Editor: You will find inclosed $1.50 on one of the best papers published in the interest of mankind, which is The Truth Seeker.

Well, we had John E. Remsburg here on the 15th inst. He told his hearers why their church slandered Paine. Remsburg did nobly here, notwithstanding his voice was weak from that dreaded thing called grip, which came from orthodoxy's hotbed of ignorance. He has set the people to thinking here in this place. Well, the church people talked and wrote against our lecturer, advising the people all to stay away. They had every church door open and all inducements to the public to keep away from our lecture. We had a small audience, but a very intelligent one. He entertained us one hour and twenty minutes with some of the grandest language that ever emanated from the brain of man. Orthodoxy is very indignant at our great success. Out on the beautiful shores of Atheism I bid you adieu.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty,

Frank Evans.

Spitefully Killed the Fish.

Elk Rapids, Mich., March 11, 1892.

Mr. Editor: Inclosed find $1 for the Bible Picture Book, and a few stamps for letters to representativs in Congress.

Bible-reading ought to be encouraged, for it is important that all should know how slow to anger the God of the Christians used to be—how in his wrath he even slew fish, probably because they could not liv in water after it had been turned into blood; how he caused the growth of frogs, flies, lice, caterpillars, and such; how hail was substituted for rain; together with the smiting of the first-born. It is important to know how the father of mercy used to treat his so-called wayward children, and likewise how he treated and cared for his pets. They are said to hav been put in possession of the gold and silver of their neighbors. It is said that their ranks were so culled—don't know what was done with the culls—that there was not one feeble person among them. They had lots of good water, quail on toast, etc.; and no wonder they were glad when the land of the heathen was added to all this, together with the labor of the people. Verily it is fortunate to be the favorit of the dispenser of such gifts.

Success to Heston and the pictures.

Alex. Campbell.

All Hail to Swedish Freethought.

Animskog, Sweden, Feb. 15, 1892.

Mr. Editor: The Truth Seeker has always been a welcome guest to me, but not as welcome as now when I was in a foreign country. I, with my family, left our beautiful city of Seattle in May last and shall stay till the coming June. I hav traveled around a good deal, and to my sorrow find that the mass of the people here is hemmed in that dark cloud of superstition. I find a whole county without a scientific book in it, and if there is a man that has sense enough to seek, read, investigate, and express his thought he is scorned by all devotees and called a sinner, unbeliever, and worse than a heathen, even if he is the very best of men. The Christians are alike everywhere and in all countries. During my travels I always stand up for liberty, investigation, truth, and knowledge. I hav met with reverends, colporteurs, missionaries, and Salvationists, and always had the pleasure to compare notes with them, and to my joy did up some of them entirely. The Freethinkers here are scarce, so that they hav been rather unprepared, hence my victory. I hav often asked if they know of anyone that follows a vocation during the week for his living like any other man and preaches on Sunday for God and soul-saving, and not for money, but none can tell me of a single one. Show me one and I shall join in the chorus and say hallelujah. Where is one man among the clergy that is not an impostor, hypocrit, and a liar? I find the educated class very Liberal-minded indeed, but they do not want to speak it out for fear that they might lose some standing with the ministers, or hav some serious diminution in their business, or be called bad. Such seems to be the way at present. But it is one gratification to see that reason is stretching out beyond the relics of the old, reaching out to grasp the knowledge, the truth, the satisfaction of the human mind, the food for the soul.

I had also the pleasure to meet the Swedish martyr, Mr. Victor Lennstrand, and hear him lecture to a full house and a splendid audience. He is a Galileo, a Bruno, a Luther, a fearless, outspoken, fine-looking gentleman; an orator and a scholar. I found in his library books in many languages, including Kersey Graves's "Sixteen Crucified Saviors." I found The Truth Seeker, Investigator, and many foreign newspapers which he reads and studies, and receives weekly. He is a young but forcible man, and dares to tell the truth, it does not matter who hears him. He may some day call on you on a lecture tour through America, and will certainly open the eyes of many thousands of the Scandinavians who are still dreaming and will not go and hear a Liberal orator in their own language. That, I think, would be a blessing to the cause. The Utiliska Samfundet in Stockholm hav a fine large hall, crowded at every Liberal lecture, and as far as I can understand are doing excellently for the advancement of human right.

As soon as I return I shall send for the Picture Book and renew for The Truth Seeker. I hope to see W. Heston.

Your in stars and stripes forever,

P. Wickstrom.

A Hymn-Writer Glorifieth God.

Beebe, Ark., Jan. 30, 1892.

Mr. Editor: I want to thank, through The Truth Seeker's columns, the legion of kind friends who hav so liberally responded to my call for literature, and all may rest assured that every pamphlet and paper has been carefully read by myself—for knowledge is power—and then sent by mail, or put into appreciativ hands here in Beebe. Several here sent to me for The Truth Seeker, and you will all know how gladly I responded with the choicest I had on hand. The number containing the cartoon of the fountain filled with blood, together with my letter, gave great offense to one of the reverend gentlemen (Methodist), and he had the cartoon enlarged by a clever artist in the place and taken to his Joss-house and set up for the Christians to see "the greatest sacrilege since the crucifixion of Christ," he said. He "never speaks as we pass by" since my irreverence to the clergy. He said, "I hav been told there are Infidels on the streets of Beebe who openly preach their Infidelity!"

As I hav a little talent for rhyming, which my pious friends used to say was given me "to glorify God by writing hymns," and having spent the previous hour in reading The Truth Seeker, which has left me in a very religious frame of mind, I will inclose a hymn, so to speak, which will jingle to the tune of "The Old Oaken Bucket"—not intending any disrespect to the bucket, however.

Wishing long life to The Truth Seeker, I remain,

Mrs. Ed. Abbey.

THE HOLY BIBLE, FROM A CHRISTIAN STANDPOINT.

How dear to the heart of the Christian believer
The tales which the Bible presents to our view—
Of Adam and Eve, with the serpent deceiver
Whose promis of "life" did so strangely come true.
And, oh, with what rapture we read of God's goodness
In fixing up brimstone for man when he fell;
And we read in the Bible, the loving old Bible,
God's merciful Bible, his promis of hell.

How pure and refreshing King Solomon's antics
With numerous wives, which the Lord did allow;
How wrong was old Brigham, the Mormon fanatic,
For what was right then is rank wickedness now.
Therein we find Balaam, with his bad, bucking bronco,
And the holy "fish story," all known to be true;
And you'll find in the Bible, the loving old Bible,
There's mercy for me, and damnation for you.

How touching the story of pure Virgin Mary,
Who was cleared by an alibi sworn to by Joe,
Who declared that a ghost with the virgin did tarry,
And Mary herself to this day doesn't know.
But dare not, ye sinners, to doubt what Joe tells you,
For the Bible declareth, Be damned or believe!
And the moral old Bible, the "dacent" old Bible,
The "howly" old Bible, would never deceive.

Then turn to the story in thirty-first Numbers,
Ye mothers, and read the command from above,
Of innocent girlhood torn rudely from slumbers,
And given to soldiers by Fatherly love.
Then turn its dear pages and read in 1 Samuel
Of infancy slain on the fond mother's breast.
Then hug the dear Bible, yea, kiss the dear Bible,
And bow in submission; the "Father" knows best.

How close to its teachings the clergy are keeping
In making good David the pattern of lives,
Though oft in my heart comes a wicked doubt creeping,
The right of God's Davids to confiscate wives.
Oh, I feel I'm a sinner to question God's justice,
And if he so wills, I'll go gladly to hell.
So I'll liv by the Bible, I'll die by the Bible,
And when I am dead, ring the church's "chestnut" bell.

Lambert's Misreasonings.

Galena, Kan., Feb. 25, 1892.

Mr. Editor: Father Lambert's reply to Colonel Ingersoll is so full of misstatements and clever evasions of the point at issue that it is impossible to let it pass without protest. Let us bear in mind that in a written reply, made by the great champion of a great church, at his leisure, in the solitude of his study, with books of reference at his elbow, something like good, sound, logical argument should be expected. In the heat of a verbal controversy statements are often made which upon calm reflection one would wish withdrawn, but there is no excuse of that kind here, and that I may not be accused of quoting only a few sentences of his reply, I wish everyone would read it for themselvs. There is one portion of the argument in reply to Ingersoll's statement of "All that Christianity has added to morality is worthless, useless." Father Lambert says: "Without truths taught by Christianity there is and can be no morality. Take away the origin of moral obligation and all morality is removed with it." Then farther on: "Take away the truths taught by Christianity and you hav no morality left, because the reason of it is taken away." I should hav liked it better if the origin of the moral obligation had been more correctly defined. But I fail to see that Christianity or anything that it teaches can claim morality cannot exist without it. If the truths taught by Christianity were essential to morality, morality could not be found outside of where Christianity is, which is ridiculous. Why should Christianity be brought into this portion of the argument unless it was to show these truths which Christianity teaches are confined to Christianity alone? Ingersoll says that "All religions teach morality plus something else." This position is not disturbed by any argument Father Lambert has advanced. There is no reason in the inference that if a person does not accept some form of religion he must be like a beast guided by instinct alone. There are people who hav no form of religion, yet their conduct is governed by certain rules laid down by themselvs founded on their sense of right and wrong. This is to-day the religion of the greater portion of mankind, civilized and uncivilized. Others may accept a certain form of religion yet not understand many of its rules. These people lead a moral life, which they would very likely do anyway, and up jumps an ambitious priest and takes all the credit to himself as the teacher of the only true faith. There is also mention made of the persecutions by Christians, but these things hav been written about again and again. I will follow Father Lambert only this far: When he speaks of Christianity teaching in the words of Christ, "As ye would that men should do unto you do ye also to them likewise. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," can he explain how the rulers of the church, who taught these doctrins, could be the leaders of persecution? It is no good to tell us that Christianity teaches these things. What we want to know is this—if Christianity simply teaches these things and the Christian churches hav systematically disregarded them, what part of the Bible do they really follow? By their fruits ye shall know them. Take a simple illustration. There is a servant who knows certain orders of his master and when he is asked why he has not fulfilled these orders, is it any extenuation of his offense that he can repeat them over?

"Christianity does not advocate free thought, for the reason there is no such thing in existence." This is also something we did not know before. Well, we will accept this doctrin and what becomes of lots of things that Christianity teaches, miracles, for instance? If, as Father Lambert says, "the intellect is not free; it is chained to the data given it; it must necessarily, if it act at all, draw conclusions from the data as they are, or as it believes them to be," the argument, like Paddy's gun, shoots both ways. If data are given to me, by experience, for instance that a small loaf of bread will not satisfy a hundred hungry persons, how can I bring my mind to conceive the miracles of the loaves and fishes? All belief in the supernatural is destroyed at once. The first part of Father Lambert's assertion is true enough. "Christianity does not advocate free thought," or freedom of any kind, for that matter. It would chain the mind of its followers like a horse to a mill to follow one endless round. It is because the church is in conflict with a natural instinct implanted in the mind of man by an all-wise creator that the church has always been a clog on scientific progress. We are told that the church was the bridge whereby learning of Greece and Rome was conveyed down through ages of barbarism in Europe. If this bridge had been destroyed we should hav had the civilization of Asia to fall back upon. And when we come to consider the selfish use the priesthood made of their learning and how little they imparted to the people, we may modify the transports of our gratitude.

If anyone will take the trouble to go through the arguments of Father Lambert he will come to the conclusion that this very fluent gentleman skillfully avoids committing himself and drags in a lot of foreign matter to hide the illogical position in which he finds himself. Where he makes a direct statement he is generally wrong, as I hav shown in the few instances cited in this letter. I suppose it is the best defense he can make of a bad cause, and if there was not such a flagrant disregard of the truth I should hav allowed it to pass unnoticed.

James Forgey.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

To the Robust, Genial Inquirer.

As a lover of truth he is kind to the least,
By reason and love givs induction;
The rich and the poor come alike to the feast,
So simple and truthful his instruction.

The nobleness of kind intent,
The faintest say he'll see it;
And though poor Dives to hell was sent,
He wished no others "in it."

The narrowness of Abraham's heart,
He showed in clear conclusion
That worse than hell is heaven's part,
The bitterest of delusion.

No water there, nor e'en a tear—
Those hearts like stone were hardened,
And godly spite, demoniac fear,
Will ever go unpardoned.

While Abraham's faith in miracles
Is not so stimulating,
To Dives implies, as chestnut hulls,
By careless underrating.

In fires of hell that potent tear
Of love for one another,
Through fumes and smoke 'tis ever clear,
And purer than the other.

And kinder thought may thus be taught,
The power of love inducting,
And bring about the world throughout,
By simple truth instructing.

Then, build anew, and bring to view
Earth's pure and surest blessing,
By kindness woo, then love is true,
Real inwardness confessing. U. J.

The Boy Who Minds His Mother.

Boys, just listen for a moment
To a word I hav to say;
Manhood's gates are just before you,
Drawing nearer every day;
Bear in mind while you are passing
O'er the intervening span,
That the boy who minds his mother
Seldom makes a wicked man.

There are many slips and failures
In this world we're living in;
Those who start with prospects fairest
Oft are overcome by sin;
But I'm certain that you'll notice,
If the facts you'll closely scan,
That the boy who minds his mother
Seldom makes a wicked man.

Then be guided by her counsel;
It will never lead astray,
Rest assured she has your welfare
In her thoughts by night and day.
Don't forget that she has loved you
Since the day your life began,
Ah, the boy who minds his mother
Seldom makes a wicked man.

—Yankee Blade.

My Trip to Connecticut.

A BRIEF BIRTHDAY STORY.

Readers, young and old, to-day, March 12th, I am seventy-three. No one will giv me a dinner or make me a birthday present, so I will make you one—not one you can eat, drink, or wear, but a more valuable and lasting one. It is a brief chapter from my voluminous Book of Life, a few pictures from my crowded life's picture-gallery in my impressible brain. Here, in my lonely room, struggling to liv under many mental deprivations and inherited ailments, I talk to you awhile on paper—a slow way to forward goods from my full warehouse.

Go back with me sixty-four years, when I was nine years old, a timid, sensitiv, thoughtful, aspiring mind, with an irresistible desire for knowledge. I was ragged, with not clothes enough to keep my spare body warm, and often had to go through the deep snows with no shoes, and only cloth on my feet. I often had but a bit of frozen cake of Indian meal and water mixed, or a roasted potato and salt, for dinner or breakfast; but "hunger is the best sauce." Moreover, my head was covered with sores that made me an object of repulsion, contempt, and ridicule, that made me most unhappy and kept me from school till I was thirteen, but not from reading with great avidity every book—the Bible and hymn-book too—everything I could get; and books were few and much in them was false and misleading.

I had come, with my parents, when an infant, on a load of furniture, in my dear mother's arms, from near Middletown, Conn., where I was born, among the rocks and whortleberry bushes, to Trenton Falls, near Utica, N. Y. At that time to leave Connecticut, and go "away up to New York," where we lived, was a great undertaking, and we took ten to fifteen days to go with a load of goods, while my father, with a pack on his back, traveled it several times in a week. After nine years of such a life as I hav alluded to I was very anxious to go back to my birthplace and see and learn much, which I did.

My parents were very zealous Methodists, full of blind faith and superstition—Godism, devilism, Holy-Ghostism, revivalism, and Blue-lawism—with all their inhuman, fearful falsehoods to fill my timid and imaginativ mind with direful pictures and expected events. My father was a good scholar and doctor, but having no acquisitivness he was a very poor provider. He made no charges and so he got but little pay. He would make all tramps welcome, giv them the scanty food we children needed, and if my dear, loving, hard-working, provident mother remonstrated he would say, "Do not worry, Polly; the Lord will provide." But he never did. Oh, I am full of unutterable emotion that copious tears come to relieve, to look back to that happy, dancing, singing, buoyant mother, suddenly, at seventeen, captured and "converted" and cheated largely out of all subsequent life by renouncing and denouncing her hitherto natural life. Had she not had in her head and character dominant and towering love, sublime but perverted faith, and hope, she could not hav endured what she did for sixty years. Her faith and reverence for her God so inspired her that her frequent prayers for me at my bedside at the silent hours of night, so fervent and pathetic, would "soften the hardest heart."

Well, my readers perhaps will say, Your preface is as long as your story ought to be. I know it; and yet, perhaps, it will be just as interesting as my brief story. Perhaps I might better hav omitted all I hav said, begun my story, and made it longer.

In March, 1828, when the roads were bad, my father and I, full of enthusiasm, started for old Connecticut, two hundred and fifty miles, which took us two weeks to travel. My father had his saddle-bags with medicins, and we had two of my mother's nice bed-quilts—that she did not see again, for they were pawned to pay bills and not redeemed. We had a poor old one-horse wagon—no spring—and an old "scarecrow horse," both of which had been given to father as a Methodist exhorter. I was poorly clad, and my sore head caused me to keep my cap on all the time, to escape the mortification of my pride by contempt and ridicule. I pitied the old horse, for he needed oats, even more than I did bread; and my father gave him the gad for his nerves more than he did food for his stomach. When on the road ten miles something about the wagon broke, and it cost seventy-five cents to fix it; and my father had just that and no more. We staid the first night and most of the subsequent nights at brother Methodists', who at that time were few and far between. They had no steeples on their churches, and no ribbons on their bonnets.

When about forty miles from Albany we traveled very slowly over the rough road, some of it small logs laid down, or "corduroy road," while I slept, or tried to, in the hind part of the wagon under my mother's quilt. There were no Methodists along the road in that region. Early in the morning I was very much frightened, and cried and hallooed, to find the wagon under a tavern shed and my father gone. I was afraid some one had killed him. He went out and found a Methodist, and we had ceremonies and then breakfast, I eating by myself with my cap on. The next night he had to pawn his saddle-bags to pay six and one-fourth cents to get through the toll-gate on the turnpike. The next day, near Albany, we drove under a new hotel shed. Two young ladies who stood in the doorway of the new building called me to them and asked me to crawl under the house and get a letter that had been blown out of their hands. They gave me twelve and a half cents. How rich I felt, for I never before had had but one copper cent at once. I was thinking as we went along through Albany that I would hav raisins and candy, and many other good things. We came to the horse ferry—no steam ferries then to cross the Hudson river. When on board the ferriage must be paid. How much was it? Just what I had received from the ladies. It had to go, with an unfulfilled promis from my father to pay it back. Methodism would not pay ferriage, nor pills, nor blankets. I, poor boy, was sadly disappointed, but thought divine Providence had thus helped us across the river. We ascended to the summit of the Highlands east of Albany, one of the grandest views on the Hudson. No Methodists there, and the proud, unfeeling woman would not let me come into the house. We had to leave one of mother's nice quilts to pay for what we had, and did not see it again, although father was to pay when he came back. He came back without money, just as he went, and without his saddle-bags or the two quilts.

When within forty miles of our destination, near the line between Massachusetts and Connecticut, the climax of my experience was reached. Just at night my father heard of a Methodist right on the road several miles on. It had rained, the grass was green and tempting to the hungry and jaded horse. I was in my bed in the wagon, and went to sleep soon after dark—and it was dark—while my father got the old horse along to his Methodist friend's. The man had gone to bed and he had to get up and dress and get a lantern. The old horse got his head down to grass on the side of the road, and got several rods off from the road, and came to a steep bank. The horse being old, weak, and stiff, his feet got off from the solid earth, and in some way the wagon pushed him down the steep bank. I soon awoke amid a frog concert all around me; the rain was coming down on me in torrents; the deep darkness, with frequent flashes of lightning, with awful peals of thunder, filled me with the greatest terror and apprehension. I was in the wagon, but it did not move; and I could see it only when the lightnings played. Where was my father? I cried and called his name aloud till I could say no more from exhaustion. After a while I heard my father call me, and responded. I looked up to the top of the bank at an angle of about forty-five degrees, and there stood my father and the Methodist with a lantern. They came down the bank to find that the wagon was in a soft marsh up to the box, and the poor old horse still farther in and only his tail, backbone, and head visible.

I was helped out of the wagon and went to the house, when the kind woman fed me and soothed me. Help was called, and by means of ropes the wagon and horse were extricated from the quagmire and water and pulled up the steep ascent. I must omit further particulars, and only say that the next day the old horse dropped dead in the middle of the road; and I, a poor, barefooted boy, went the rest of the way, twenty-five miles, on foot in one day. Another old horse given to my father hauled us back, and died the day after we arrived home. The reader must fill up this outline with the details between the lines. The manuscript of my checkered life contains a more minute description, all of which, if published, and I had been some great somebody, would be interesting and instructiv. With eyes, heart, and head full I must stop and bid you all good-bye. J. H. COOK.

Columbus, Kan.

Correspondence.

TAMPA, FLA., March 14, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. I delight in reading the Corner, and in fact, THE TRUTH SEEKER all through. I like Col. R. G. Ingersoll's writings very much, and think he is a grand writer. Hurrah, Colonel Ingersoll! I am a full-blooded Infidel and Freethinker, and will stand to the last for the truth. There are a great many Freethinkers and God-haters here in our city. I do not subscribe for THE TRUTH SEEKER, but will in a few weeks. I would like to correspond with some of the Corner writers.

Yours sincerely, ALEX. I. DEXTER.

P.S.—What work would you suggest that I should read for information? I hav read many of the Christian works with no satisfaction, and now I want something more substantial, as I hav evoluted out of the Christian religion, being fed long enough on that myth. A. D.

[Read scientific works and books on Evolution. The "Modern Science Essayist," each number ten cents, as advertised in THE TRUTH SEEKER, will be helpful. Send to THE TRUTH SEEKER for catalog of books. Write again to the Corner; you will be always welcome.—ED. C. C.]

What the Little Folks Are Saying.

Mother (to baby): "It's muzzer's little ootsy tootsy; muzzer loves her little darling baby." Fanny (who has just been spanked): "Don't believe her, baby. When you [sob] grow up she'll spank you, too!"

The minister was a great hand-shaker—shutting down like a vice. One day he shook a boy's hand, and gave it an awful squeeze as he said: "My little fellow, I hope you are pretty well to-day." With tears in his eyes the boy answered: "I was till you shook hands with me."

Some shrewdness was displayed by a little girl who was to share an apple with a younger sister. When it had been divided in two she generously remarked to the little one, "Now, Katie, you may hav your choice, but Miss S. [her teacher] says it is very rude to choose the largest piece."

"Mamma, dear, did you love Toby very much?" Mamma: "Yes, dear." "Was that why you had him stuffed?" "Yes, dear." "Mamma, dear, did you love grandpa very much?" "Yes, dear." "How was it you didn't hav grandpa stuffed?"

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state; development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE

LOGIC OF DEATH,

—OR,—

Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents.

THE

LOGIC OF LIFE,

—DEDUCED FROM—

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

News of the Week.

PRESIDENT HARRISON has taken a firm stand against English intrusion on Alaskan sealing waters. A resulting war is talked of.

OF the 18,875 literary publications in Germany last year, theology was the subject of 1,763, a larger number than was appropriated to any other one class.

MARY DUDDY, of New Bedford, Mass., has died from the grip followed by typhoid fever and pneumonia. She refused a physician, using solely the prayers of cobelievers in Christian Science.

CHARLES WRIGHT, of Williamsburgh, N. Y., knelt in prayer at a revival the other night, when he found himself unable to arise, and cried for help till tumult prevailed. He had been providentially paralyzed while praying.

MRS. H. W. FITCH, wife of the vice-president of the National Bank at Spokane, Wash., died recently, and her child the next day. For seven days thereafter her husband and mother remained at the bedside of the dead praying according to Christian Science for the resuscitation of the corpses. Finally the coroner interfered and compelled burial.

ELIZABETH CANNEY, a holder of "Divine Healing and Holiness Meetings" at London, received a shallow youth of twenty-three into her family. He signed a document of adoption and made over to her property valued at £1,100. On suit being brought to recover the property Justice Kekewich demonstrated his views of that sort of thing by treating the woman as a swindler, and ordering repayment of the sum with interest.

THE messiah craze has appeared among the Pawnee and the Oteo Indians about Oklahoma. W. W. White, a Pawnee, and Buffalo Black, an Oteo, hav been telling the Indians that a messiah would come bringing with him all the Indians in the happy hunting-grounds; that the whites would be swept away and the original prairies with their game appear. The children hav been wearing war paint and feathers to school. The two leaders hav been arrested on the charge of inciting insurrection. Hostilities may follow.

THE committee sent to Russia to superintend relief reports that one hundred thousand horses hav starved to death in Voronej province alone, and asks a cargo of corn from Iowa to save the draft-animals in the stricken districts so that tillage be not made impossible. When the American steamer Indiana arrived with supplies Orthodox Greek clergymen went upon her and held a thanksgiving service, concluding with the ceremony of blessing the ship. The Russian Relief Society cries, "God save America!"

PEOPLE in Boston hav wondered at the spread among children who are carefully guarded from contagious diseases of such ailments as scarlet fever, chicken pox, whooping cough, and the like. It is now evident that the chief factor in the distribution of these troubles has been the children of the Christian Science theorists. There are a number of instances known in which persons whose children hav been afflicted with contagious diseases hav let them go unrestrictedly among their usual comrades "because, of course, there is no real disease, and there can be no such thing as contagion."

LIEUTENANT TOTTEN, U.S.A., professor of military science at Yale College, announces that March 29th was "the last day of the final year of grace," and in punishment for our unrighteousness we are now "hurrying toward scenes beyond all parallel in human history—the final act of the drama—an era of infernal wars." The seven years now commencing "will be loaded with the besom of Jehovah's judgments." He would hav the nation arm against "the ten democracies" which are soon to rise in Europe and speedily to become "anarchies like that of Robespierre's day, wild with the crash of all existing things."

WALT WHITMAN, the celebrated American poet, died on the 26th ult. at his home at Camden, N. J. Two days before his death there was read to him the last letter that he ever heard, to which he listened with a smile. It ran: "March 24, 1892.—My Dear Friend: I was pained to hear that you are suffering more and more, but was glad to know that your brave spirit has never been cowed and that in all your agony your heart keeps sound and strong. I think of you a thousand times a day and of the great good you hav done the world. You hav uttered such brave, free words that hav thrilled and ennobled the hearts and lives of millions that my admiration has deepened to obligation. Again I thank you for your courage and again I lovingly say farewell, and yet I hope to see you soon. Yours always, R. G. Ingersoll."

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.

Valuable Books on

Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free.

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland.

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 916 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Delnge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Brnno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

The Gods. A beautiful pamphlet of forty pages, with likeness of Ingersoll. Price, 20 cents. Eight copies for $1.

God in the Constitntion. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Wonld Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitntes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

AN Infidel is a man who has not been branded as the property of some one else. —Ingersoll.

VOLUMES might be composed out of all the celebrated events which hav been generally admitted, but which may be more fairly doubted.—Voltaire.

QUESTION: Why do you curse Infidels? Answer: Because I am a Christian. Question: Did not Christ say that we ought to "bless those that curse us," and that we should "love our enemies?" Answer: Yes; but he cursed the Pharisees and called them "hypocrits" and "vipers." Question: How do you account for that? Answer: It simply shows the difference between theory and practice.—Ingersoll's Talmagian Catechism.

THINKING can and must be regarded as a special mode of general natural motion, which is as characteristic of the substance of the central nervous elements as the motion of contraction is of the muscle-substance, or the motion of light is of the universal ether. Therefore understanding or thought is not a substance; it is material only in this sense, that it is the manifestation of a material substratum, just as heat, light, and electricity are inseparable from their substrata. Thinking and extension are therefore only to be regarded as two sides or phenomenal manifestations of one and the same single existence.—Büchner.

WHY what hav you thought of yourself?
Is it you then that thought yourself less?
Is it you that thought the President greater than you?
Or the rich better off than you? or the educated wiser than you?

. . . . . .

The sum of all known reverence I add up in you whoever you are,

. . . . . .

The Congress convenes every Twelfth-month for you,
Laws, courts, the forming of states, the charters of cities, the going and coming of commerce and mails, are all for you.—Walt Whitman.

OUR manners hav been corrupted by communication with the saints. Our hymn-books resound with a melodious cursing of God and enduring him forever. One would say that even the prophets and redeemers had rather consoled the fears than confirmed the hopes of man. There is nowhere recorded a simple and irrepressible satisfaction with the gift of life, any memorable praise of God. All health and success does me good, however far off and withdrawn it may appear; all disease and failure helps to make me sad and does me evil, however much sympathy it may hav with me or I with it. If, then, we would indeed restore mankind by truly Indian, botanic, magnetic, or natural means, let us first be as simple and well as nature ourselvs, dispel the clouds which hang over our own brows, and take up a little life into our pores. Do not stay to be an overseer of the poor, but endeavor to become one of the worthies of the world.—Thoreau.

O GOD, we created you. You are made in the image of man; in the image of man are you made. Long ago ye were made out of the mists of our ignorance; ye were dyed in the streams of our blood. We knew little of the expanse and glory of the subjectiv and objectiv world. But, even in our rude savagery, the stale contingencies of life were too narrow for us; and, in the incipient longings of our immortal energies, we invented you. We made you rude as the stone cairn we piled over our dead, and gory as the ax with which we did battle with our foes. You were then the best god we were capable of making. And that we had even a god like you kept alive in our hearts the vestal flame of aspiration and hope, and differentiated us from the steed that obeyed our bridle and the boar overthrown by our spear. Even you, O God, rude as we had made you, were yet the highest line on the shore to which the tide-mark of our thought had risen—the loftiest cloud whose fringe had ever been touched by the white wings of our hope. You gave a depth and meaning to the busy day and the melancholy night while we were yet strangers to the march of thought and the disciplin of schools. The lightning was the gleam of your sword. the thunder was the battle-cry of God. You are not framed, O Jehovah. for the age when the steam-engin rushes through the glens and crashes through the bowels of the everlasting hills; when, on the wings of the lightning, we speed our messages over the nations of the continents and under the billows of the oceans; and when the press lays at the feet of the humblest the mind-wealth of the world. Such an era needs not, and never would hav framed, a god like you. We are parting company with you, Jehovah, impelled to do so by the civilization of mankind rising to loftier levels.—Saladin in God and His Book.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29. 1884. Price, 10 cents.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—THE STRAIGHT; so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—THE JUST.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

CONTENTS:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Co-operation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

ASTHMA—DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE CURED never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS. Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Prometheus, A Poem. "It is crammed with life, thought, and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary beauty."—Dr. Henry W. Bellows. Price, $1.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE NEW SPELLING.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HUMANITY'S SPREADING CURSE

is not the Church alone. There is another and worse culprit. Read the book with the above title. Price, 35 cents, through NEW YORK NEWS Co., Newsdealers, or E. H. ANDRAE, Dallas, Texas.
7t8

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

DOWN THEY GO!

Best make American Stemwind Watches. 17 jewels, adjusted, pat. regulator, in silverine case, only $11; in 3 ounce coin silver, $16; 4 ounce, $15 (a few years ago $60). In best 14 kt. filled gold cases, open face, $20; hunting, $23 to $28; 14 kt. solid gold, $40 to $100; same, not adjusted, $2 less; 11 jwls. $3.50, and 7 jwls. $5 less (lower grade watches, $5, $4, and $2.50).

THE PERFECTED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH, much finer than above, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position 16 jwls. and all modern improvements, nickel movement, cased as above, $8 more, gilt mov't. $6 more. No one else in the world sends out so good a watch at the price.

LADIES' GOLD HUNTING AMERICAN WATCHES, latest styles, best filled, 7 jwls. $17; 11 jwls. $18.50; 15 jwls. $25; 14 kt. solid gold, $10 to $100 more. All sent prepaid, kept in order one year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

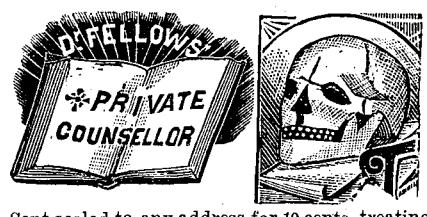
DIAMONDS: in rings, pins, drops, studs, etc., $10; $15; $25; $50; $100 to $1,000 per set. Cash refunded, if not 20 per cent below regular price, any time within one year.

WEDDING RINGS: Plain, chased, with pearls, emeralds, rubies, moonstones, opals, garnets, turquoise, solitaires or combinations, a specialty.

SUNDRIES: Rogers Bros.' triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; tea spoons, $1.80; tables, $3.49; best spects. in the world, $1; pebbles, $2; 14 kt. gold, $5 more (send line of finest print you can read without glasses 14 inches from eyes); gold-headed canes, $8; $10; $15; $20. Best razor—a luxury—$2. Solid silver spoons, $1.70 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, silver, $1.25 to $2. Tea sets, $20 to $40; everything in the line of fancy table silver, novelties, plush, and art goods, gold pens, etc. All sent prepaid (except cutlery) subject to exchange or cash back.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,
Established 1857. Rochelle, Ill.

Send for price lists, beautiful cards in colors and gold of my Freethought badges (large and small), tracts, etc. Free.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A BIBLICAL MYSTERY—HOW KING DAVID WROTE PSALM CXXXVII.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - - - - - 40 cents.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.

The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.
8	"	Thanksgiving.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.
14	"	Children and the Church.
10	"	Woman and the Church.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.
2	"	The Bible and Science.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.
2	"	Prayer.
10	"	The Creeds.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.
2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	"	Missionaries.
1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	"	The Church and Slavery.
2	"	Priests and Politics.
4	"	Ireland and the Church.
2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
12	"	Some Allegories.
3	"	Heaven.
6	"	Hell.
7	"	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - - 50 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 15. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 9, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A QUEER TRIO—JOHN WESLEY, DR. BUCKLEY, AND WITCHCRAFT.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

Burgess-Underwood Debate ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF

ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1 50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D Price 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2 50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles."

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 15. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 9, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 9, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

A Queer and Spicy Book.

From the Denison, Texas, Sunday Gazetteer.

The Gazetteer is in receipt of a queer book, from The Truth Seeker Publishing Company, of New York city, entitled, "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." It is a volume of 400 pages, one half full-page illustrations, and the other Old Testament narrativs which the facing engraving is intended to illustrate. It commences with the making of Adam and ends with the wonderful experience of Jonah. For instance, the adventures of the "first man" are presented in six engravings, including an illustration of "the voice of the Lord walking in the garden," which has always been a puzzle to Sunday-school children. It requires seven pictures to present the exploits of Noah and his family in connection with the flood. Of course spicy incidents in the life of Abraham, Jacob, David, Samson, Solomon, et al, are not overlooked, and the marvelous wonders enacted in connection with the life of Moses are graphically presented. Some persons, no doubt, would consider the pictures wicked, while others will recognize them as serviceable in awakening a taste for searching the scriptures, so sadly lacking even in pious families these latter days. But whatever may be thought of this original method of illustrating the strange narrativs presented in this ancient Jewish record, so widely circulated, and so little studied, it is very doubtful if the most devout believer in its miraculous origin can look through this picture book without laughing; yes, and picking up some new ideas besides. It is the cheapest illustrated book of Bible stories we know of—400 pages, 6½ by 8½ inches—in boards, $1; muslin, with gilt side title, $1.50. Sent postpaid by the publishers, at those prices.

Rationalism Lengthening Our Lives.

One of the answers to the question, "What has Infidelity given us in place of Christianity?" is, that it has given us longer lives. This fact is not so well known as it should be. It has been known at all only about fifty years. The few who hav learned it in that period are statisticians and a few circles of scientific readers. The old-time and the religious books that a large part of the population read do not mention it. The clergy of course will be the last to promulgate it. All channels of communication under ecclesiastical influence will be backward in transmitting it. But the spread of scientific interests will erelong hav diffused this glorious, this inestimable intelligence. There is now full recognition of it among all scientific observers and statisticians. When it has been made equally evident to the masses they will begin to realize the infinit gain of our substitution of Rationalism for ecclesiasticism.

Attention was first drawn to the lengthening of our life-term by the managers of the government annuities in England. These annuities were a device of the government for raising money in times of necessity. In return for a lump sum paid by a private person the government made him a certain payment annually for a term of years. This term of years the receiver of the annuity would calculate to extend to the utmost year of his life that he could possibly reach. Or the annuity might be stipulated to be a life one at the beginning. The government had derived much profit from these speculations. But in the first half of this century it discovered itself to be losing money. An investigation revealed the disagreeable fact that the annuitants had ungratefully taken up the custom of living too long. There was no more profit to be made on them. As they could not be persuaded out of their new fashion, which seemed to be enjoyed by them as much as it was disrelished by the annuity officials, these latter had nothing to do but go over their annuity tables and change them altogether to meet this contingency. They found that the length of life in 1725 as compared with that in 1825 was as 3 to 4.

Then men turned their attention to some vital statistics of Geneva, Switzerland, that had been instituted in 1551. It was found that a death-rate of 40 in the thousand before 1600 had sunk before 1800 to 29 in the thousand. This decrease has continued, and fifty years ago the average life in that city was reckoned at forty-five years.

This forty-five years was compared with Roman statistics of 500 B.C., which made the mean life thirty years, and a gain of one-half appeared.

It was found in France that while the deaths in 1781 had been one in 29, in each of the five years preceding 1829 they were one in 39. In the city of Paris they had been in the fourteenth century one in 16, and in the seventeenth century one in 26; in 1824 one in 32.

At the ascertainment of these good effects of sanitation in place of prayer, of medicin instead of miracle, England and France redoubled their efforts. The other countries, into whose gloom of ecclesiasticism few rays of science had penetrated, lagged behind, or remained motionless. But in England and France vast benefits were immediately felt. It was even declared by Sir Edwin Chadwick, "the father of sanitation," that there is in man a potential longevity of one hundred years and death before this age is premature. There is reason to believe that his opinion will before long be verified by experience.

Numerous statisticians affirm that our life-term has lengthened nine years since the beginning of the present century.

Let us now survey some of the causes of this, the greatest possible benefit to the race of man.

In the first place, we hav far more abundant food. This is obtained in part through the application of agricultural chemistry. It is now better known than formerly what constituents are in certain soils, what in certain crops, and what in certain manures and fertilizers, and these are brought together with a reference to the needs of the case that givs largely improved results. And of the mineral fertilizers we are able to obtain great quantities, against almost none procurable in older ages. Our increased supply of food is also obtained in part through the use of steam and other like forces. Another cause is the multitude of agricultural machines. These, without resting or eating, do the work of armies of laborers. We will add as another factor in our ampler food-supply, our wonderful means of transportation. In Europe of old it often occurred that food was plentiful in one part while but a very short distance away the people were starving. At present, deficiency in one neighborhood or nation is promptly supplied from other ones. The great famins which used to destroy millions, and by depleting the strength of the survivors prepare them for the dreadful pestilences, are now unknown. The only exception to this at present is in the land of Russia, still cursed by science-hating ecclesiasticism. A statistical writer of Queen Elizabeth's time was pleased to be able to say that the deaths from starvation in London were not over 1 in a thousand. But at that rate the deaths in London at present would be 1,250 a year, while as a fact there are none but from suicidal mania, or refusal to ask food at the provided places of relief.

Another element of the prolongation of life is the invention of machinery for the manufacture of clothing. By means of this the common laborer now wears more abundant clothing, and makes many times more changes of underwear in a year, than the nobleman of old. The toil of a country full of spinners at their old spinning-wheels is now equaled by that of a girl at one machine. By the plentiful outer clothing we are protected from cold, and by the frequent change of underwear fever-producing impurities are banished.

Drainage of land may be noticed next. This has been usually executed to enhance the agricultural value of the land. As it has been found to diminish the prevalence of fever-and-ague and all malarias, and consumption, it has of late been instituted not unfrequently to abate disease. In Birmingham, England, an investigator found that despite many deleterious manufactories the deaths were but one in 40, owing to good drainage; while in Liverpool deficient drainage overbalanced many sanitary advantages so as to bring the deaths up to one in 31. Bay Ridge district in Long Island, N. Y., not only was changed by drainage from malarious swamps into excellent cornfields, but was so altered in salubrity that the druggists' sales of quinine fell off three-fourths and the physicians proclaimed a cessation of chills and fever and all species of intermittent or remittent fever.

The supply of pure water to communities is to be reckoned next. Whether the water is conveyed from a pure source on the surface of the earth or drawn from a depth by artesian processes, its superior effect as compared with that of impure supplies is invariably shown in the diminution of diarrheal and typhoid diseases.

The knowledge and practice of ventilation is not the least among the sanitary reforms of late years. Says one writer on this subject: "The need of pure air—air that has not previously been breathed by another person—is by no means as well understood as could be wished, but enlightenment is surely making its way, and ancient evils are vanishing before it. Typhus, or ship fever, a disease most easily and directly communicable from person to person, is now known, when it arises spontaneously, to be the fruit of rebreathed air. It formed the 'plagues' of the earlier centuries; there are still spots in London—infected houses—from which typhus is never absent, and in 1839 five per cent of the tailors of London died of it; it is to get rid of it, in large measure, that the wholesale demolition of London 'rookeries' is at this moment going on. When men ceased to weave in their own unventilated hovels, and were gathered together in high, airy, light factory rooms, it was very soon seen that the number of consumptivs, hunchbacks, and bow-legged diminished—an unanswerable testimony to the value of light and air in saving and prolonging lives. When it was shown that the annual death-rate from preventable typhus, which attacked persons in the vigor of life, was double that of the allied armies at Waterloo, England began to suspect that there was a commercial value to a man's life, and enacted laws for its protection; indeed, public sentiment on this matter has become so educated that no employer would dare to crowd eighty workmen into a space where the 'cubic feet of air' to each was less than one hundred feet—less than one-tenth of that required for healthful breathing. The reduction of the deaths of children in a single hospital, by having it well ventilated, from 2,944 out of a total of 7,650 down to 279, convinced the most stolid conservativ that 'there was something in it.' It seems to an intelligent person of to-day as if everybody, everywhere, and all the time had understood the importance of pure air; but when it is remembered that the constitution of the atmosphere has been known only a little more than a hundred years, and the vital relations of oxygen to the human blood for a much shorter period, it will be seen that the idea is wide of the fact."

Intelligent house-drainage, by properly constructed plumbing, has done its part in reducing the death-rate. Boston, at a time when her water-supply and sewers were satisfactory, instituted a reform in this point which brought down her rate of mortality from 28 to 13. Croydon, England, in the same way produced a falling-off from 28 to 13. Improved construction of tenement-houses has vastly lowered the mortality of every city. In the one-room mud hovels of Ireland the average life-term was only twenty-six and a half years, but in the model homes for London laborers lately built it is fifty and over. Houses in the worst localities of Glasgow were found to produce a death-rate of 42 in the thousand, but sanitation has reduced it to 28. In similar neighborhoods in London the rate has been lowered to 17 or 18.

By improved methods of mining coal, and equally improved means of transporting it, our houses are kept warm equably and continuously.

Just what benefit we hav received from abandoning burial of the dead within the precincts of cities is not known. Consideration of the porosity of the soil, and the deadliness of putrefied matter, and especially of the new-discovered fact that many diseases are propagated by bacteria—consideration of these things leads one to estimate the immunity derived as considerable.

When we come now to the medical means of combating disease which we hav lately obtained, we find them too numerous to recount. Antiseptic surgery, or surgery accompanied by the use of chemicals excluding blood-poisoning, has alone saved countless lives. There die now but a moderate percentage of the patients who formerly perished under surgical operations. Myriad lives are saved in our handsomely appointed hospitals which would hav been lost in the wretched and unenlightened homes of the past. The opportunities for studying disease in these institutions are such as to hav given physicians an understanding of and control over many maladies. Contagious diseases as soon as discovered in any neighborhood are limited by isolation and disinfection. Vaccination, if we accept what its defenders say of it against the anti-vaccinationists, has saved even more lives than any of the foregoing processes. Macaulay says that in London two centuries ago an unpitted face was the exception, while the numbers made blind, deaf, or unsightly were pitiful to think of. But in that city in 1890 there was but one death from small-pox.

One cause of our lengthened lives is the decrease in the consumption of alcoholic liquors. Notwithstanding the declarations of certain exaggerators to the contrary, intemperance is on the decline, and has been for nearly a century. Public opinion is setting in more and more strongly against it. The "three-bottle," "two-bottle," and "one-bottle" men of former England hav gone out of fashion. Three or four generations ago gentlemen at a banquet were thought disgraced if they did not get drunk; now they may lose the title of gentleman if they do. One important means of weaning the workingmen from the saloon has been Sunday opening of art galleries and museums.

The saving of lives through the lighting of our streets and a well-organized police deserves notice. "When the evening closed in," says the historian Macaulay in describing old-time England, "the difficulty and danger of walking about London became serious indeed. The garret windows were opened, and pails were emptied, with little regard to those who were passing below. Falls, bruises, and broken bones were of constant occurrence. For, till the last year of the reign of Charles the Second, most of the streets were left in profound darkness. Thieves and robbers plied their trade with impunity; yet they were hardly so terrible to peaceable citizens as another class of ruffians. It was a favorit amusement of dissolute young gentlemen to swagger at night about the town, breaking windows, upsetting sedans, beating quiet men, and offering rude caresses to pretty women. Several dynasties of these tyrants had, since the Restoration, domineered over the streets. The Muns and Tityre Tus had given place to the Hectors, and the Hectors had been recently succeeded by the Scourers. At a later period arose the Nicker, the Hawcubite, and the yet more dreaded name of Mohawk. The machinery for keeping the peace was utterly contemptible. There was an Act of Common Council which provided that more than a thousand watchmen should be constantly on the alert in the city, from sunset to sunrise, and that every inhabitant should take his turn of duty. But this act was negligently executed. Few of those who were summoned left their homes; and those few generally found it more agreeable to tipple in alehouses than to pace the streets. . . . The street which now affords to the artisan, during the whole night, a secure, a convenient, and a brilliantly lighted walk was, a hundred and sixty years ago, so dark after sunset that he would not hav been able to see his hand, so ill paved that he would hav run constant risk of breaking his neck, and so ill watched that he would hav been in imminent danger of being knocked down and plundered of his small earnings." John Graunt, a writer of Queen Elizabeth's time, is proud that in London not more than 1 in two thousand was murdered yearly. At this rate the murders now would be 2,500 for the whole city. But there are on the average only 12 for the whole population—which is five million, equal to that of all England in Elizabeth's day.

Remodeled ventilation and plumbing in our schools preserve numberless children every year.

The army and the navy afford us valuable opportunities of demonstrating the value of our modern hygiene and medicin. In 1858, says a writer in the valuable Popular Science Monthly, "public attention was directed to what had been called the 'British Juggernaut in India.' It was shown that without war or famin a regiment of a thousand men dissolved away at the rate of one hundred and twenty-five a year, so that in eight years not a man of the original thousand remained. A sanitary commission was appointed, and they investigated among other things a series of distinguished preventiv sanitary works in the town of Bonfaric, in Algeria. It was found that the death-rates had been reduced among the military from 80 to 13 in the thousand; while the children, of whom it had been believed, as in India, that a third generation could not be raised on account of the deadly nature of the climate, were as healthy as those in the most healthy towns of France. Of course, sanitation under military authority can be very efficiently carried out, and every fruitful idea, whether from France or America, was acted on, with the result of reducing the death-rate for the decade preceding 1878 to less than twenty in the Indian army and twelve in the home army. In the entire British army—home, colonial, and Indian—the saving of lives in the decade under consideration was more than forty thousand."

In the navy the production of pure distilled water has done much. Dampness, one of man's deadliest foes, is when aggravated by heat far worse, and the damp heat between decks in the tropics has ravaged crews till lately; when by a less frequent washing down of decks, and a drying of the vessel with artificial heat, the old-time fevers hav been made comparativly rare. When the first emigrant ships went to Australia one-third of the passengers died; but upon sanitarians forcing an alteration of the terms so that the shippers were paid only for the passengers landed alive, the death-rate was brought below that of the same classes ashore.

To conclude, we repeat that all these benefits hav been produced by the superseding of ecclesiasticism by secularism, of Christianity by Infidelity, of theology by science, of other-worldliness by this-worldliness. The Christian church retarded these advances as long as it had the power. The clergy did this partly out of belief that investigations into nature were of Satan and perilous, and partly out of trade jealousy of any other class and method than their own. They persecuted investigators, execrated their researches, turned public attention the opposit way, and taught cure by supernatural means and foisted off pretended remedies of prayer, relic, pilgrimage, and miracle. They not only forbid the curing of diseases, but took means to produce them. They preached that the neglect of the mortal body contributed to the advancement of the immortal soul—that God loved best him who treated his sinful body worst—and under this belief multitudes eschewed bathing, famished and weakened their constitutions, and stifled in unventilated cells. Scrofula and consumption reached a pitch of devastating power which we are but now beginning to abate. In the ages when the clergy ruled, the human life was miserably short; as their power has diminished our lives hav lengthened to the extent recounted; what life-term we may attain under the all-conferring reign of Science need not be conjectured here, but we assuredly may look to the future with hope. Christianity promised, but failed to giv, life—immortal life. Science promised, and has given, life. Immortal life? This is much. Some, to be sure, reply: Yes, Science can giv us immortal life; what she has done to some degree she can do more; to her nothing is impossible. But others doubt this; logicians affirm that finites however lengthened are still not infinits, and physicists also pronounce antagonistic axioms. Be that as it may, the human race can at least, as we hav said, look to the future with warmest encouragement and brightest hope.

Little Sophy Bettandorff, of Wagner, Oregon, writes this little letter to the little Sunday-School Advocate, which contains a picture of a girl angel holding up a trumpet made out of a badly bent trombone: "I am a little girl eleven years old. I hav two sisters older than I am, and three brothers younger. We used to hav church here, but the preacher stopped coming because there were too many Infidels; and our superintendent left. She was a Christian lady fourteen years of age. I went every Sunday I could. So we hav to do without Sunday-school now. We hav no saloon in this county." It's too bad, Sophy, too bad; but Wagner must be a good place to liv in—no Sunday-school and no saloon.

Before adjourning last week the Methodist conference in Kansas City made the customary declaration that the theater, the ball-room, the race-course, and the card-table were "the positiv foes of vital godliness," and were contrary to "moral uplifting." Why dancing and play-going should be coupled with horse-racing and gambling is one of those things that no fellow that does not sport a white choker can find out, says the Dramatic Mirror, but it does seem to the man of mildly reflectiv habit, however, that the periodical condemnation of the stage by the authorities of the orthodox religious denominations, in view of the practically universal custom of theater-going observed by all classes of American citizens, is a waste of words and a spectacle of misdirected energy. But this is a free country, and if the dominies find Christian satisfaction in traducing the theater giv them their heads. No one can object seriously, for the rare old pastime harms no one.

World's Fair Commissioner Ezra Meeker, of Washington, has written the following reply to the protest of the committee of the Seattle Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor against the opening of the World's Fair on Sundays: "I am in receipt of your favor of February 5, containing your 'protest against the opening of any part of the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893 on that day' [Sunday], and request that 'the authorities having charge of the exhibit from the state of Washington to take action to the effect that the exhibit from this state shall not in any wise be opened on the Sabbath day.' Believing as I do that the welfare of the church, or the state, or the 'rights and interests of the workingmen,' as alleged in your preamble and resolutions, do not require that the Exposition or any part of it should be closed on Sundays, I cannot comply with your request. Innocent recreation, a study of the works of art, a thoughtful contemplation of the results of the world's wonderful progress, to my mind perpetuate the 'sacredness of the Sabbath' better than that strict construction that would require absolute rest or only the observance of religious rites. I believe that 'for the physical welfare of humanity and especially for the rights and interests of the workingmen' it will better promote these 'rights and interests' that the workingman and his family should hav their day—even if it be Sunday—at the Exposition if they so elect. Many and many of such must needs visit the Exposition on Sunday or not at all, or at least but seldom, except on Sunday."

The readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know of Henry V. Berghell, who was imprisoned and finally exiled from Sweden because of his heretical notions. He was taken to Finland, and to escape banishment to Siberia went to Norway. Some months ago he arrived in New York in pretty straitened circumstances. He was helped, by the man the Universalists say never makes sacrifices, to get to Chicago, where there were people with whom he could converse, as he spoke no English. We see by a Western paper that he is now in Minneapolis, lecturer for the Swedish Unitarian Society. A Western paper says: "Mr. Berghell is a man of fine education. He is a graduate of the celebrated University of Dorpat, speaks eight languages, and is an excellent scholar, especially in chemistry, natural sciences, and history of religion and civilization. He has made a trip around the world, having visited China, Japan, Australia, and India. During the Russian-Turkish war he took part in the campaign and was severely wounded in the battle of Plevna. This incident, as he calls it, entitles him to wear three Russian badges of honor on his breast. Mr. Berghell has met with splendid success in Minneapolis. He is a brilliant speaker, and has a great deal of personal magnetism. He speaks every Sunday to a crowded house of about five hundred or six hundred people. He says that a number of new members hav joined, and the outlook for the Unitarian Society seems to be a bright one. He thinks that the time is not far distant when the society will hav its new church."

News and Notes.

I could not hav hit upon a better place for the opening of the campaign in Texas than Flatonia. There is not only plenty of Liberals here but plenty of music, and music that makes the heart beat high with hope. The Flatonia orchestra is always ready to lend a hand with martial and joyous notes. Professor Voiteck, F. P. Yeager, H. W. Yeager, Sr., H. W. Yeager, Jr., Henry Luck, Bernard Yeager, John Mikuleuka, these are the jolly allies of our work in the "Lone Star state." The blizzards might blow, but these merry companions would drive all care away.

The blizzard did blow when in the early morning I arrived at El Paso, and all day long the biting winds are at us from the cold north. Moreover, a bridge is burnt down and we hav to wait all night long at Saunderson. The train is two days late at San Antonio, and I hav no chance to stop over and see friends as I expected to do. I hav to rush on to Flatonia. I am at Flatonia Saturday and Sunday, March 12th and 13th, and good audiences greet me. Our stanch comrade Dr. Briston is always ready to keep things on the move. Mr. and Mrs. John Sloma are at the front. H. W. Yeager, Sr., "reads the stars" for human hope and progress. The Faires brothers, Julius Laux, and many others whose names would lengthen the roll beyond our present limits, are with us, be it sunshine or storm.

Dr. F. W. Kaiser—on THE TRUTH SEEKER list—makes a good quartermaster of our Liberal forces in gathering together the supplies, so that we can keep "marching on." I lecture at the court-house. It is well filled, and before and after the lecture the beautiful strains of music vibrate on the air, and the orthodox as they pass by on the other side wonder why Liberals can hav so happy a time on the holy Sabbath day.

I was pleased to meet H. Shaeffer and wife, of Shulenburg. I mean to try Shulenburg next time, and also La Grange, the county-seat. With headquarters at Flatonia quite a movement could be carried on in this part of Texas.

Monday morning I had a very pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Tyner, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Eidelbock. Mr. Tyner, on account of sickness, was unable to be present at the lectures. These are our Spiritualist allies, and they unite with us earnestly in the great battle for human rights. They accepted the philosophy of the lecture which I gave on Sunday night, "Spiritualism, Theosophy, and Infidelity."

This is rather a hard year for Texas. Cotton is only five and six cents a pound, and it is calculated that it costs about eight cents to raise it. It is the main crop, and I understand that there is a surplus of two million bales on hand. Perhaps this is a blessing in disguise, for the soil of Texas is capable of producing a great variety of fruits and vegetables, and undoubtedly the future prosperity of Texas lies in developing these varied resources and not in putting all into cotton, as hitherto.

Texas is full of "politics" at the present time. The whole state seems to be boiling over. Evidently something is the matter. The people are not satisfied. But I do not think "politics" will do so much for Texas as skillful farming and manufacturing.

The clouds roll heavily on Monday when I leave Flatonia and it seems that my experience of last year is to be repeated as I come to Bellville and Nelsonville. Last year it rained so hard that I could not stop at all. I was determined to stop this time anyway. It was pouring down when I arrived at Bellville. Tuesday morning I was met at the station by Joseph Matejka, who kindly arranged for a series of lectures here. I was introduced to several of the leading citizens. No Freethought lecture had ever been given in Bellville. The majority of the people, however, are outside the churches. I spoke Tuesday evening in the court-house. Quite a number of men were present, but no ladies. It was announced that I should speak again on Thursday evening.

Wednesday it kept on raining, but I went with Matejka to Nelsonville, nine miles from Bellville, in the country—a village with about a dozen houses in it. It is in one of the best farming sections of Texas. The land is very fertil. It is a good deal like the black soil of Illinois, and the mud is like Illinois mud—it is deep and it sticks. It was a melancholy outlook when I arrived at the neat little home of Matejka, with the flowers about it. The skies were weeping with all their might. I looked in vain for a sparkle of sunshine. However, I found good company here—Dr. W. R. P. Thompson and others, and the afternoon passed pleasantly away. The evening was dark, but it did not rain, and I had a fair audience of men and one lady, Mrs. Matejka. If the evening had been pleasant the hall would hav been crowded, for they would gather from miles about, especially as it was decided to hav music and dancing after the lecture. This latter program was omitted because the fair sex could not weather the storm.

The hall, which is quite a stately building, and can be seen for miles around from the eminence on which it is built, was erected by Mr. Matejka, and is an ornament to the village. It is used also for school purposes. It is a fine place for a Freethought lecture provided the weather is good. I shall try my fortune again some time. As it was, the meeting made a fair beginning. The audience was appreciativ. Mr. Manly and Mr. Saynor came about four miles to attend. Mr. Saynor is an old English Radical, and was in the ranks with Owen fifty years ago. He shows his faith by his works yet. Dr. Thompson and Meisner are on the roll of THE TRUTH SEEKER. There are enough Liberals here to keep our flag flying over these green fields for many a day to come.

Dr. Thompson takes me to Bellville on Thursday. By the time we reach the place the sun is shining out brilliantly. A fine audience is present in the evening. This time the ladies grace the hall of justice with their presence. James H. Shelburne introduces me, and I speak on "Freethought and Morality," and I find most attentiv listeners. I shall certainly come to Bellville again. In every respect I hav a cordial welcome.

I must express my thanks to James H. Shelburne, Mr. W. Frickman, and others for generous assistance and delightful social hours with music and good cheer all along the line.

From Bellville I passed to Calvert. I am obliged to stay the afternoon in Brenham, where Sam Jones is holding forth with his fantastic tricks before high heaven. I went to the tabernacle and looked upon the motley crew assembling—a wonderful combination, for it is clear that the larger number come as they would to a circus. They want to see the clown.

He did not preach this afternoon, and I missed the "show." A Rev. Stewart occupied the platform—a somewhat lively speaker—and he gave a regular hell-fire discourse. It was quite horrible in some of its details. It was calculated to scare—but it didn't scare a bit. At the close the preacher made a call for those who wanted the prayers of Christians to save them from this awful hell. After some difficulty only three arose. He then desired the Christians to stand up. About a fourth of the congregation stood. So it seems that about three-fourths of the congregation did not believe in Jesus, and did not want any insurance on the hereafter. They would take their chances on hell. A pretty sensible congregation after all. They like to hear Sam Jones tell stories and joke, but they do not care a snap for his religion.

I am at Calvert Saturday and Sunday, March 19th and 20th, and here also I find a Liberal people. This is one of the best points in the state. It is a good business point, and it is a fine field for Freethought. I giv three lectures in the Opera House. On Sunday evening, besides the excellent audience which I hav inside, there is an extra one on the sidewalk composed of church-members who linger on their way home from the religious meeting and hav a chance to gather a few Freethought ideas. Well, I am glad to reach these at long range. Undoubtedly if the clergymen had known that I should hav such a large sidewalk attendance they would hav prolonged their sermons and prayers and kept the faithful from listening even at such a distance. I believe there is one clergyman here who wanted to debate, but his people came to the conclusion that it would not do. I am sorry for that; but I presume the people knew the caliber of their minister.

I am sorry to find Mr. Wallace, a stanch Liberal, on the sick-list. We all hope earnestly for his recovery. He is now at Ft. Worth.

My friend Bainum is of Presbyterian stock, his father being a prominent clergyman in Illinois, but he has not preserved the faith. He is Freethought all over. L. A. Bergeron, J. H. Gibson, Henry Altschul, and W. R. Lloyd are among our generous supporters. They never fail to giv a splendid welcome. Capt. D. A. Orvis puts himself on THE TRUTH SEEKER roll. Oscar, of the Grand Central, givs me a cordial invitation to stay at his elegant hotel free of cost. Mr. Oscar is one of the main founders of this bright city of Calvert.

Calvert has a fair future before it, and I hope every year to visit its prosperous streets. It is a picture to look upon. Saturday afternoon the streets are filled to overflowing, especially with negroes. This is their holiday. They will not work Saturdays for love or money. They flock to the city, men, women, and children, and a jolly time they hav.

I like Texas. The people are Liberal, and are growing more so. The churches are powerful, and in many places rule with a rod of iron. But Texas is a big state. There is plenty of room for change, development, and advance. There is a breezy atmosphere over its broad plains.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Calvert, Tex., March 2, 1892.

Little Blasphemies.

Why should a man with squeaking boots go to church? Because his soul needs attention.

Tanks: "Dr. Thirdly told Bumso that if he didn't change his ways he would go to the bad place." Banks: "What reply did the reprobate make?" Tanks: "He said if he did he wouldn't be guilty of any Dives breaks by calling for water."

Real Freedom of Worship.

A NOTABLE PLEA FOR SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

JOHN J. M'CABE, OF ALBANY, IN BEHALF OF LIBERAL SENTIMENT OPPOSES THE SO-CALLED "FREEDOM OF WORSHIP" BILL BEFORE THE ASSEMBLY JUDICIARY COMMITTEE—THE TEXT OF MR. M'CABE'S REMARKS.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I shall begin with the assertion that the Freedom of Worship bill is not Democratic, that it is not Republican, and that the idea on which it is framed does not accord with the genius of our principles of government, as it contains the elements of the principle of "church and state."

Believing, Mr. Chairman, that this bill is in all essential respects a political measure, and having been affiliated with the party that proposes it from my earliest years up to 1887, I shall try to convince you that the principle embodied in the bill is incompatible with the teachings of the founder of the Republican-Democratic party, and also, that it is in opposition to the doctrins that hav been incorporated in the national platforms of the Democratic party. The inscription on Jefferson's tombstone was composed by himself. It read as follows: "Here lies Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and the father of the University of Virginia." The glory that he had achieved as governor of the state of Virginia, as member of Congress, as secretary of state, as vice-president and president of the United States, and as a great political leader whose individuality controled the domestic and foreign policy of the young republic for a period that extended through a whole generation, was matter of little concern to him in his declining years; but the civil liberty proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence; the abolition of the ties that had bound the state and church together from time immemorial, in all nations ancient and modern, which was wrought by his Virginia statute for religious freedom, and the establishment of an educational institution which was based on complete civil liberty and religious freedom, were instrumentalities which he considered of such paramount importance to humanity, that he was willing that all his other life-work might be forgotten, so that his name might go down to posterity to be forever connected with those priceless boons which outshine in philosophic glory all other works of the human mind.

As the statutes providing for religious freedom incorporated in the constitutions of the several states, even the one embodied in the Constitution of the United States, were originally suggested by the Virginia statute, I will quote a few lines from that statute for the purpose of showing the object they aimed at:

"No man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place, or ministry whatsoever, nor shall any man be enforced, restrained, molested, or burthened in his body or goods, or otherwise suffer on account of his religious opinions or belief, but all men shall be free to profess, and by argument to maintain their opinion on all matters of religion; and the same shall in no wise affect, diminish, or enlarge their civil capacities."

I must remark here that it is the insidious, persistent, eternally aggressiv schemes of ecclesiasticism, that those who are intrusted with the power of framing our law should ever guard against. This fact is illustrated by an incident that occurred at the constitutional convention of 1777, during the Revolutionary period, when men were honest enough, and brave enough, to rebuke the selfish design of clericalism at home, even while engaged in a life-or-death struggle with the most powerful military nation on the face of the earth. There was one clerical delegate at that convention—and I hav no doubt that he posed as a special representativ of the religious sentiment of the state—who was incessant in his demands that the convention should do something for the church. As the delegates had been called to the city of New York for the purpose of framing a state constitution, and not for the purpose of looking after church affairs, the reverend gentleman's appeals soon became burdensome, and finally, John Jay, General Ganse-voort, and Governor Morris proposed the following article, which was adopted almost unanimously:

"No minister of the gospel, or priest of any denomination whatever, shall at any time hereafter, under any pretense or description whatever, be eligible to or capable of holding any civil or military office within this state."

As the reverend gentleman had no further business to transact, he adjourned and started for home immediately.

Although this provision had been a part of the organic law of the state of New York, yet it was violated by state legislatures, state officials, officers of state institutions, and even the people themselvs in some localities. Look for instance at the action of the present legislature in the selection of a bishop as a regent of the state university. Even if the bishop did not solicit this appointment his selection is an exhibition of the unhealthy influences that hav been at work here in Albany for some time. Incidents like this indicate that there are politicians who are willing to barter and divide the powers of the state with the church. It would not surprise me if Francis Kernan and Bishop Doane would be able to spread the wings of the New York state University so as to cover all the Roman Catholic and Episcopal parochial schools in the state. This so-called "Freedom of Worship" bill is another link in the chain. While the bill has some good features, behind it lies the infallible doctrin of the universal sovereignty of the Roman pontiff—the doctrin of force, which would revolutionize the very principle on which all religious freedom rests. The state constitution provides that "the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or molestation, shall forever be allowed in this state to all mankind." To all the freedom guaranteed by this liberal provision we will say amen. It is evident, however, that the proposed law would not permit what Section 3, Article I, of the state constitution guarantees. It would practically giv to so-called guardians, the president of the board of charities, the superintendent of the state prison, and the attorney-general, the power not only of deciding what religious worship should be observed by certain persons, but to force them to attend such religious worship. On the surface it looks as though the Socialistic idea of dividing things up were intended, but the state can make no provision to force people to attend religious worship, even if this were the honest intention of the framers of the bill. But who are the guardians referred to in the bill? Is this a wooden horse? Archbishop Corrigan will claim guardianship over all the children of New York city who hav received priestly baptism. And here is one of the queer anomalies of the Catholic church. A child of seven years of age is supposed to know the difference between right and wrong, and it is held personally responsible for its conduct, but if the child happens to lose its liberty through any cause, and is placed in any public institution, the archbishop will assert his claim of guardianship over him as long as he is a minor. And as a natural consequence, under one section of this bill he would compel the state, through its officers, to recognize his authority in these matters, thereby practically establishing the principle of church and state in the management of the affairs of our public institutions. If anybody doubts what I hav said on this part of the subject, let him read the history of the Mortara case. Edgar Mortara, a child of Jewish parents, was surreptitiously baptized into the Catholic church by a Roman Catholic maid-servant, after which it was seized by order of Father Feletti, inquisitor-in-chief, and immediately put under the guardianship of the pope. This was not done during the Middle Ages, but during the pontificate of Pius IX., in 1858. The child's parents were wealthy and influential, and through their efforts immense pressure was brought to bear on the Roman court, with the expectation of having the child restored to his parents, but the pope would not relinquish his claim of guardianship.

As temporal sovereign of the States of the Church, he denied the application of natural law to the case, and he spurned with contempt the appeal of the human sentiment of the civilized for the child's liberation. Now let us come to our own country. Shortly after the election of John Quincy Adams, when Jefferson was confined within the walls of his mountain home in Virginia by old age and feebleness, a clerical society was organized the object of which was to hav the federal Constitution amended so that Christ should be acknowledged as king de facto, as the people of England and Scotland did in the seventeenth century. The headquarters of this association was here in Albany. This society grew very rapidly, and it performed work of the most aggressiv character. Its influence was such that many of the leading politicians began to trim their sails in so far as to admit that they believed in the orthodox Christian religion. The following is a part of the program they proposed to carry out: Sunday was to be acknowledged as a legal constitutional Sabbath. All Sunday traffic was to be suppressed, even the carrying of the United States mail. No vessel was to weigh anchor for sea on Sunday. All public ferries were to stop running on Sunday. All public avenues to and from the city were to be closed on Sunday. And, finally, to cap the climax, a man's religious belief and punctual attendance at church services were to be a test of his fitness for office. About this time Frances Wright and Robert Owen opened their Hall of Science in New York city, and organized a Free-thought Association and published a paper called the Free Inquirer. Miss Wright and Robert Owen were able and forcible orators and writers, and they visited all the chief cities in the United States, carrying on an energetic war of words with the clergy. Finally, through their influence, a reaction in favor of Liberalism set in, and the conspiracy that had been hatched to overthrow religious freedom was bottled up. About twenty-five years later, Archbishop Hughes, of New York city, began to agitate the school question. He demanded a division of the money that was raised for educational purposes. His bold aggressivness as a champion of his church provoked a spirit of religious controversy that spread over the whole country. Protestant and Catholic clergymen and editors of newspapers opened their theological and historical batteries, and the battle became, to say the least, very animated, and this continued without abatement up to 1860. On the strength of this discussion a party was organized in 1856 as the American party. Millard Fillmore was the presidential candidate of the party, and in the election he received 874,534 votes, nearly one-fourth of the whole number of votes cast for president. The platform contained, among other things, the following: "We humbly acknowledge the supreme being. Americans must rule America. No person shall be selected for official station who recognizes any allegiance to any foreign power [meaning the pope]. Opposition to church and state." The division of the school money demanded by Bishop Hughes was the feature of church and state referred to. We all know that the American party could never be successful, as the organizers of it bent their political bow so far that it broke. They feared that the Constitution was too liberal. During General Grant's administration, the number of Roman Catholic institutions that were in operation throughout the country began to attract public attention, as very many of them were receiving large appropriations from municipal governments. Attention was called also to the number of institutions and associations that were distinctly Protestant in character that were receiving appropriations from state and county governments. The bad policy of taxing the public for the support of sectarian associations and institutions became a general theme in the newspapers; and when the Democratic national convention met in 1876, which nominated Samuel J. Tilden for president, the following plank was inserted in its platform: "The total separation of church and state for the sake alike of civil and religious freedom." In 1880 a similar plank was incorporated in the Democratic platform. After the election of Mr. Cleveland as governor of this state in 1882 these questions were all on their feet, and the governor took a decided stand in relation to them. It seems that when the public schools system was established in this state the Protestant clergy got indirect control over most of them. Prayers, the singing of hymns, and the reading of passages from the Protestant Bible in the schools was a part of the regular order of business.

I might mention also that the reading-books used in the schools were decidedly sectarian in character. The Catholics, Jews, and Freethinkers had objected to this condition of things to no purpose. Those who held the fort held that it was an old established usage and that they were going to maintain it. Finally, public sentiment, particularly in the cities, caused the abandonment of the sectarian practices in many of the schools. But I am sorry to hav to say that in some places, as here in Albany, the schools hav been shut up during certain days in Lent on the demand, I suppose, of the Catholic and Episcopal church authorities. As the Protestant clergy only yielded to the demands of justice in localities where they were actually compelled to, there continued to be much dissatisfaction in respect to the management of the public schools on sectarian principles in many parts of the state. In order to make school-teachers conform to the spirit of the state constitution, Superintendent Ruggles, acting, as many supposed, on the advice of Governor Cleveland, issued an order forbidding all kinds of religious services in the public schools of the state. There is a large number of people living in this state who do not go to any church, and quite a large number who do go to church, who believe that the property of religious societies should bear some of the burdens of taxation on account of the protection it receives. There was also quite a large amount of real estate owned by clergymen that the tax-gatherer skipped. These things were brought to the attention of the governor, and in time Attorney-General O'Brien issued a paper which was regarded as an order to assessors and collectors of taxes to let no guilty clergyman escape. Many people thought that clergymen used all their surplus money for charitable purposes, but the event showed that there was a clerical march to the city of Albany from all parts of the state, and a bill was run through the legislature which exempted from taxation $1,500 worth of real estate owned by poor clergymen. The legislature, as had been customary, passed a large number of bills appropriating money to sectarian institutions, and among these was the Catholic protectory bill. Well, Governor Cleveland vetoed a whole batch of them. You see that Mr. Cleveland kept right on pursuing a Jeffersonian policy. The cry was raised now by some of the Roman Catholic church authorities that the public schools were godless and that they were too hopelessly bad for any decent Catholic to send his children to any of them. By some means or other there was a bill passed by the legislature appropriating $2,000,000 for public school purposes for New York city, and the governor signed the bill. Principally, I suppose, on account of these acts, there was a large number of men who had formerly affiliated with the Republican party who declared they would vote for Mr. Cleveland if he were nominated for president. Among these were the editors of some very influential Republican newspapers. And in consequence of these acts there were some Democrats who strongly opposed his nomination, and when the election took place they voted for some other fellow. Notwithstanding that I had formerly trained with the Tammany contingent here in Albany during its crusade against Governor Robinson, yet I ardently espoused the cause of Mr. Cleveland before and after his nomination. This was not, however, on account of the enemies he had made, but on account of the principles his mind seemed to be in harmony with. This brings us down to the year 1884. Late in the spring of that year the present pope issued his famous encyclical in which he anathematized our public school system, declaring, ex cathedra, that the fundamental principles of our government were heretical, and that the doctrin of church and state was a divine institution. It has been stated on pretty good authority that it was Mr. Cleveland's action as governor in relation to sectarian institutions, together with the seeming probability that he would receive the Democratic nomination for president, that induced the pope to issue that encyclical letter, hoping to prevent his nomination and to impress the Democratic party with the necessity of omitting anything about church and state in its national platform. Well, Governor Cleveland was nominated, and the platform contained a declaration against church and state, another in favor of the American school system, and one fully indorsing the rights of man and the principles of self-government. Thus it will be seen that the Democratic platform of that year repudiated all the so-called infallible doctrins of the head of the Roman Catholic church in his encyclical letter. The idea of church and state is very unpopular, and consequently no man would propose a bill whose title would come under that head. A provision containing the pernicious principle involved in the doctrin of church and state could, however, be smuggled into a bill with a title as fair and lovely as the one under consideration. At the present moment this is a vital question throughout the civilized world. In fact, its vitality has been growing stronger ever since 1884.

It makes no difference how sophistical and eloquent the plea may be that is made in favor of this bill on constitutional grounds, the provision in the federal Constitution which says that "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof," should ever be the key to legislation in the great state of New York. Every state in the Union that has failed to grant to each individual citizen within its borders the rights guaranteed in Article I of the first Amendment to the Constitution of the United States has forfeited its right to claim that its government is truly republican. And every state constitution which does not contain a provision indorsing Article I of the Bill of Rights is un-American, as the only things that exist that are peculiarly American are the Declaration of American Independence and the Constitution of the United States. I was pleased to note that our present governor made this discovery shortly after he was elected to Congress. Virginia was once the paradise of American gentlemen, warriors, presidents, and statesmen, but she is now of much less importance in many respects than any of the new states in the "wild West." Yes, her glory has departed, and the Democratic statesmen of our commonwealth anxiously desire that the Empire state should rival the ancient glory of Virginia —that we should breed all the presidents, harbor all the statesmen, and fill every office in the gift of the national administration with our ambitious and illustrious sons.

This is a laudable ambition, but in order to be worthy to occupy the proud position that was once held in the sisterhood of states by Virginia, we must make that which constituted the glory of the Old Dominion the object of our ambition—liberty, justice, integrity, and wisdom. The first practical act of the Revolution was the Virginia legislativ act abolishing the institution of church and state. Under a fair and impartial interpretation of Article I of the Bill of Rights every dollar that is voted by any legislativ body in any locality in the United States to any institution that is under the control of any religious association, the very act of making such an appropriation is an act of usurpation of power not granted to any state or municipality, but impliedly prohibited by the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. What is usurpation?

Jefferson says that it is "the exercise of unjust powers." The majority in any legislativ body can ride over all law in the same manner that a mob can deprive a man of every privilege guaranteed to citizens of the country, life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness, and all other privileges.

The last census taken under the supervision of government officials shows that a large majority of the people are not connected with any church organization. Why then should the majority be taxed to support the sectarian notions of the minority, even in the management of our penal or reformatory institutions? This is not Democratic doctrin, neither is it Republican doctrin. What doctrin is it then? Why, it is church doctrin, sectarian doctrin, ecclesiastical doctrin. Excepting the Unitarian and a few other liberal denominations, every other school of Christian clergymen seems to be actuated by the spirit and maxim of Marie Antoinette, namely, "After us the flood." They don't seem to care anything about the example they set or the precedents they establish. As organizations, wherever any one of them is in the ascendency, it will lose no opportunity to enforce the idea that its own interests are the only ones that are worthy of respectful consideration. Of course, there are honorable individual exceptions to the rule. I often smile and invariably think of those lines of the poet Burns:

> Would that God the gift would gie us,
> To see ourselvs as others see us,

when I read the un-American expressions of Christian clergymen when they attempt to deal with questions in which are embraced the individual rights of American citizens.

While these gentlemen hold that the spirit of Christ prevails, and that the almighty holds the universe in the hollow of his hand and rules it with a rod of iron, they act and talk as if the spirit of the devil prevailed and were it not for the effectual power and force of the Christian ministry the world would become chaotic and pass under the dominion of his satanic majesty.

The present law, which provides that when persons are committed they shall be sent to institutions which are under the control of sectarian associations, is plainly un-American, as it permits the appropriation of money for church purposes, for religious purposes, and for sectarian purposes. And it givs power to judges to turn juvenil offenders or criminals over to the church authorities, not to be burnt alive as of old, but to make them strong and perfect Christians and soldiers of—some sectarian denomination. I think that the term that was applied to the Constitution by some of the Abolitionists in consequence of its recognition of the institution of slavery might be applied to this law with a good deal of propriety—that is, from the theological standpoint.

It is desirable that children should be educated, whether they be in orphan asylums or reformatory institutions, but no man's money should be taken from him in the form of a tax of any kind and put into a fund that will be used to enrich any church, or that will help that church to propagate theological doctrins which that man abhors. If priests or ministers desire to establish institutions that will benefit themselvs or their denominations, let them do it at their own expense. No one will object to that. I hav my own religious views, but I would not ask the state, the county, the municipality, or any person who did not believe as I do to contribute money to help me to propagate my views, notwithstanding that I believe they are the most truthful and therefore the best that could be adopted by the human family.

If minors who are deprived of their liberty and placed in public institutions must be taught something that is not included in the ordinary curriculum used in public schools, are not the simple laws of morality, which are older than the oldest system of religion in the world, good enough?

Christianity has no system of morality that it can lay any special claim to. There never was a Christian that was more virtuous than Epicurus, and he taught a system of morality in which there was no recognition of God or the devil. His system was too elaborate, however, to be used in a reformatory institution in New York state.

But there is nothing pure or chaste in Christian teaching that he did not inculcate three hundred years before Christianity was born. We hear a good deal about moral training, but it is not moral training that these people are so much interested in, it is sectarian training.

We hav heard also that where the officers of reformatory institutions hav allowed the Catholic church to permanently establish its altars and other ceremonial paraphernalia on public property, everything works like a charm. By what authority has any officer of the state, or even the legislature, power to grant to any religious denomination the privilege of erecting a church on any property belonging to the people?

If the Catholic church should ask the privilege of celebrating mass at proper intervals in some of our institutions, the priest carrying with him the utensils and materials used on such occasions, there might not possibly be so much objection, but the demand is made on constitutional grounds that the property of the people should be turned over to a church for it to erect its altars thereon, and that certain officers who are not in the employ of the church should be compelled to force certain persons to attend religious worship. Bad as the present law is, the proposed law would be worse.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I would say that I am a Jefferson Republican.

Jefferson was so tenacious regarding any artnership between the church and the state that he denied the right of the government to patronize religion in any way whatever. So do I. Therefore, I offer the following substitute for the "Freedom of Worship Bill:"

An act to provide for the complete separation of church and state in the management of the affairs of all institutions which are under state control, and also of all institutions, associations, and societies which receive state aid.

Section 1. It shall not be lawful for any officer of the state to pay to any incorporated institution, society, or association, nor to the managers, agents or officers thereof, any moneys of the state to be used for the purpose of founding, maintaining or aiding, or aiding by appropriation, payment for services, expenses or otherwise, any church or religious denomination, or any institution, society or undertaking which is either wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control.

Section 2. No officer of any incorporated institution, society, or association, the expenses of which are paid wholly or in part out of any fund which is raised by a tax on any kind of property, or by fees of any kind, shall permit the teaching of any special or general system of theology or religion, by any priest, minister or other teacher, in any such institution, or on any property belonging to the state.

Walt Whitman.

The funeral of Walt Whitman, whose death occurred on the 26th ult., took place on Wednesday, the 30th, in Harleigh cemetery, three miles from Camden, N. J., where the poet had passed the last few years of his life. A tent was erected, and thousands came to fill it.

About 11 o'clock in the morning the shabby little frame house in Mickle street, where the poet lived, was opened to the public. A never-failing line of people passed in around the casket until 1½ o'clock in the afternoon. When the doors were shut and the crowd had departed it was found that many had dropped small sprigs of violets and other blossoms on the casket. Just at this moment Col. R. G. Ingersoll came hurrying in. Night and day he had been speeding across the country from Canada in order to be present and speak the promised word above the friend with whom he had disagreed religiously and otherwise in such friendly fashion.

Whitman, with his flowing white beard, was an impressiv sight in the oak coffin heaped with flowers. He wore a light gray homespun suit and a broadly flowing collar. Shortly after 2 o'clock the procession went to the grave, preceded and followed by scores of carriages. A special train was run to the cemetery.

When the funeral cortége reached the cemetery close on 3 o'clock it found the little dell where the tomb is set packed with people. There were at least three thousand there.

Talcott Williams began the services by reading Whitman's poem entitled "Praise to the Fathomless Universe." Then Thomas B. Harned spoke for the citizens of Camden. Mr. Williams read selections from the scriptures, including the Sermon on the Mount, and after an address by Dr. Daniel G. Brinton, read selections from the Koran. Dr. Brinton said: "No idler was he; no dallier with the golden hours; but arduous, contentious, undissuadable, and infinitly loving. He came bearing the burden of a gospel—the gospel of the individual man. He came teaching that the soul is not more than the body and that the body is not more than the soul, and that nothing, not God himself, is greater to one than one's self is.

"He asked no man to accept his teachings or to become his disciple or to call him master. His strong voice resounded above the heads of all high men, and above the roofs of the world. It challenged alike wealth and power and want and death, proclaiming that man, the one man, the individual, every individual, has all rights and all powers, is the autocrat of the world, sole ruler of the universe—let him only enforce his claims and make good his title."

Dr. Bucke, of London, Whitman's biographer, then spoke with deep feeling regarding his friend.

There was intense silence when Colonel Ingersoll arose and, in those glowing periods for which he is world-famous, scattered flowers of speech over the ashes of his friend. He said:

"Again, we, in the mystery of Life, are brought face to face with the mystery of Death. A great man, a great American, the most eminent citizen of this Republic, lies dead before us, and we have met to pay a tribute to his greatness and to his worth.

"I know he needs no words of mine. His fame is secure. He laid the foundations of it deep in the human heart and brain. He was, above all I have known, the poet of humanity, of sympathy. He was so great that he rose above the greatest that he met without arrogance, and so great that he stooped to the lowest without conscious condescension. He never claimed to be lower or greater than any of the sons of men.

"He came into our generation a free, untrammeled spirit, with sympathy for all. His arm was beneath the form of the sick. He sympathized with the imprisoned and despised, and even on the brow of crime he was great enough to place the kiss of human sympathy.

"One of the greatest lines in our literature is his, and the line is great enough to do honor to the greatest genius that has ever lived. He said, speaking of an outcast: 'Not until the sun excludes you will I exclude you.'

"His charity was as wide as the sky, and wherever there was human suffering, human misfortune, the sympathy of Whitman bent above it as the firmament bends above the earth.

"He was built on a broad and splendid plan—ample, without appearing to have limitations—passing easily for a brother of mountains and seas and constellations; caring nothing for the little maps and charts with which timid pilots hug the shore, but giving himself freely with the recklessness of genius to winds and waves and tides; caring for nothing as long as the stars were above him. He walked among men, among writers, among verbal varnishers and veneerers, among literary milliners and tailors, with the unconscious majesty of an antique god.

"He was the poet of that divine democracy which gives equal rights to all the sons and daughters of men. He uttered the great American voice; uttered a song worthy of the great Republic. No man has ever said more for the rights of humanity, more in favor of real democracy, of real justice. He neither scorned nor cringed; was neither tyrant nor slave. He asked only to stand the equal of his fellows beneath the great flag of nature, the blue and stars.

"He was the poet of life. It was a joy simply to breathe. He loved the clouds; he enjoyed the breath of morning, the twilight, the wind, the winding streams. He loved to look at the sea when the waves burst into the whitecaps of joy. He loved the fields, the hills; he was acquainted with the trees, with birds, with all the beautiful objects of the earth. He not only saw these objects, but understood their meaning, and he used them that he might exhibit his heart to his fellow-men.

"He was the poet of Love. He was not ashamed of that divine passion that has built every home in the world; that divine passion that has painted every picture and given us every real work of art; that divine passion that has made the world worth living in and has given some value to human life.

"He was the poet of the natural, and taught men not to be ashamed of that which is natural. He was not only the poet of democracy, not only the poet of the great Republic, but he was the poet of the human race. He was not confined to the limits of this country, but his sympathy went out over the seas to all the nations of the earth.

"He stretched out his hand and felt himself the equal of all kings and of all princes, and the brother of all men, no matter how high, no matter how low.

"He has uttered more supreme words than any writer of our century, possibly of almost any other. He was, above all things, a man, and above genius, above all the snow-capped peaks of intelligence, above all art, rises the true man. Greater than all is the true man, and he walked among his fellow-men as such.

"He was the poet of Death. He accepted all life and all death, and he justified all. He had the courage to meet all, and was great enough and splendid enough to harmonize all and to accept all there is of life as a divine melody.

"You know better than I what his life has been, but let me say one thing: Knowing, as he did, what others can know and what they cannot, he accepted and absorbed all theories, all creeds, all religions, and believed in none. His philosophy was a sky that embraced all clouds and accounted for all clouds. He had a philosophy and religion of his own, broader, as he believed—and as I believe—than others. He accepted all, he understood all, and he was above all.

"He was absolutely true to himself. He had frankness and courage, and he was as candid as light. He was willing that all the sons of men should be absolutely acquainted with his heart and brain. He had nothing to conceal. Frank, candid, pure, serene, noble, and yet for years and years he was maligned and slandered, simply because he had the candor of nature. He will be understood yet, and that for which he was condemned—his frankness, his candor—will add to the glory and greatness of his fame.

"He wrote a liturgy for mankind; he wrote a great and splendid psalm of life, and he gave to us the gospel of humanity—the greatest gospel that can be preached.

"He was not afraid to live; not afraid to die. For many years he and death lived near neighbors. He was always willing and ready to meet and greet this king called death, and for many months he sat in the deepening twilight waiting for the night; waiting for the light.

"He never lost his hope. When the mists filled the valleys, he looked upon the mountain tops, and when the mountains in darkness disappeared, he fixed his gaze upon the stars.

"In his brain were the blessed memories of the day, and in his heart were mingled the dawn and dusk of life.

"He was not afraid; he was cheerful every moment. The laughing nymphs of day did not desert him. They remained that they might clasp the hands and greet with smiles the veiled and silent sisters of the night. And when they did come, Walt Whitman stretched his hand to them. On one side were the nymphs of day, and on the other the silent sisters of the night, and so, hand in hand, between smiles and tears, he reached his journey's end.

"From the frontier of life, from the western wave-kissed shore, he sent us messages of content and hope, and these messages seem now like strains of music blown by the 'Mystic Trumpeter' from Death's pale realm.

"To-day we give back to Mother Nature, to her clasp and kiss, one of the bravest, sweetest souls that ever lived in human clay.

"Charitable as the air and generous as Nature, he was negligent of all except to do and say what he believed he should do and should say.

"And I to-day thank him, not only for you but for myself, for all the brave words he has uttered. I thank him for all the great and splendid words he has said in favor of liberty, in favor of man and woman, in favor of motherhood, in favor of fathers, in favor of children, and I thank him for the brave words that he has said of death.

"He has lived, he has died, and death is less terrible than it was before. Thousands and millions will walk down into the 'dark valley of the shadow' holding Walt Whitman by the hand. Long after we are dead the brave words he has spoken will sound like trumpets to the dying.

"And so I lay this little wreath upon this great man's tomb. I loved him living, and I love him still."

After this address the coffin was placed in the tomb. Among the pallbearers were John Burroughs, Horace Howard, Moncure D. Conway, F. J. Johnson, Lincoln L. Eyre, Ex-Senator Cattell, Francis Howard, Talcott Williams, William J. Stoddard, Thomas B. Harned, Horace Traubel, Dr. Bucke, J. H. Clifford, Dr. Daniel J. Brinton, Harrison S. Morris, Julius Chambers, Henry Walsh, William Ingram, Thomas Donaldson, and Sloan Kennedy. Among the many who sent wreaths and flowers were T. B. Aldrich, Mrs. Fairchild, of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, and some English friends.

SKETCH OF WALT WHITMAN'S LIFE.

Walt Whitman was born in the village of West Hills, on Long Island, May 31, 1819. When Walt was four years old the family went to Brooklyn to liv. When he reached his teens the position of printer's "devil" was procured for him in the office of the Long Island Star, and after working there for two years he apprenticed himself to the proprietor of the Long Island Patriot, published in Brooklyn. Although he served out his time in the latter office it is not recorded that he ever was a hard-working printer. He had as long ago as that learned to "loaf and invite his soul." The little education that Whitman received in the regular way was at the public schools. But this ended by the time he was thirteen. His self-education, however, continued long after this, so that by the time he reached the age of seventeen he entered upon the duties of district school-teacher in Queens and Suffolk counties, on Long Island, and "boarded round" among the farmers' families, as is still the custom in some country places. At the age of nineteen he came to New York and worked as a printer and writer, "with an occasional shy at poetry," as he expresses it. In 1838 he established and edited the Long Islander at Huntington, L. I. Then he returned again to New York, and added his name to the list of young writers who eked out a precarious livelihood by contributing all sorts and kinds of writing to such papers as would pay for their work. The Democratic Review, a once famous monthly, was among the first to employ Whitman's pen.

LITERARY LABORS.

The sketches he wrote for that periodical attracted wide attention. At the same time he was a contributor to the Sunday Times. His short stories were so very successful that he determined to write a novel of city life. This he did, and it was published under the title of "Frank Evans" and bound in yellow covers. This ambitious attempt met with little encouragement, and the yellow-covered volume was consigned to oblivion and is now out of print. In politics Whitman was a Democrat, and made some effectiv speeches for Van Buren and later for Polk, both in New York and in the little towns of Long Island. He enjoyed the exercise as much as anything else.

In 1846 Whitman became editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, a position he held for two years. At this time he was quite intimate with William Cullen Bryant, who, after passing the day in his editorial sanctum at the Post office, would cross over to Brooklyn and take long tramps into the country with Whitman. Whitman has said that he learned more of classical history, of Europe, and of poetry in these walks and talks with Bryant than ever before or since. After the publication of "Leaves of Grass" their intimacy ceased, Bryant not being of a disposition to countenance the freedom of thought or speech to be found in that volume. After severing his connection with the Eagle Whitman established a paper in Brooklyn in the interest of free soilers, called the Freeman, which he edited until the close of 1849. One night, while sitting in the pit of the Bowery Theater to see Forrest in one of his famous roles, he was introduced by a friend to the proprietor of the New Orleans Crescent, who took an instant fancy to Whitman and made him an offer of $100 per week to edit his paper. The offer was at once accepted, and he started for the South. He had not been long in his new position when news reached him of the illness of his brother Jeff, who was threatened with consumption. Whitman laid down his editorial pen and the comfortable salary attached to it, and coming North after his brother, took him on a tour of the Western states. He explored the Illinois river and the towns along its banks, and wandered through Wisconsin and along the shores of the great lakes, and was also at Niagara and in Canada, and received the inspiration for some of his best poetry. On his return to Brooklyn after his trip he went into business as a carpenter and builder, and worked with his own hands.

In 1856 Whitman personally printed and put forth the first edition, consisting of one thousand copies, of "Leaves of Grass." Not ten copies were sold, and even some of the presentation copies sent out were returned without thanks. The book bore the stamp of A. H. Rome, publisher; and is now out of print. It contained but ninety-five pages. In 1860 a new and enlarged edition was printed in Boston by Eldridge & Co., which sold very well in this country and was reprinted in London by the Messrs. Longmans and edited by Rossetti. Soon after the breaking out of the war Whitman went down to the field of battle and made himself invaluable in nursing the wounded, among whom was his brother, Lieut.-Col. George W. Whitman, of the Fifty-first New York Volunteers, who was hit in the face by a piece of shell at Fredericksburg. Whitman supported himself for two or three years by writing letters to Northern newspapers from the field and hospital. No more vivid pictures of the war were ever printed.

WAR SERVICE.

The winter of 1863-4 he spent with the army at Brandy Station and Culpeper, Va. The following summer found him with the army in the Wilderness, where he worked with such unflagging energy that he became himself prostrated. He was ordered North by the physicians. An illness of six months followed, the first sickness of his life. In 1865 he received an appointment to a clerkship in the department of the interior. He performed his clerical duties zealously and was soon promoted. The hospitals in Washington were filled with soldiers, among whom Whitman resumed his self-imposed labors. When his friend and biographer, John Burroughs, first met him he was living in an attic in Sixth street, where he prepared his own meals and ate sparingly, so that he might hav more money to buy delicacies for the suffering soldiers. It is needless to say that he was looked upon as a good angel in the hospital wards, where many a brave fellow's dying bed was made softer by his care. It was at this time the new secretary, Harlan, removed Whitman from his clerkship, having discovered that he was the author of "Leaves of Grass." Attorney-General Ashton remonstrated with Secretary Harlan upon his conduct, but received for a reply that "if the president of the United States ordered the author of 'Leaves of Grass' reinstated in my department I would resign rather than do it." General Ashton then gave Whitman a position in his own office, which he filled until 1873, when he was stricken down with paralysis. During the same year he lost by death his sister Martha and his mother, whom he speaks of as "the two best women I hav ever seen or known or ever expect to see." When incapacitated for work Whitman removed to the house of his brother in Camden, N. J., which he made his home. Though not poor his brother was far from being well off, and the addition of another member to his family was somewhat of a strain upon his purse.

In March, 1876, Robert Buchanan published a letter in the London Daily News calling attention to Whitman's unfortunate circumstances and upbraiding the American public for allowing such a genius to suffer for the comforts of life in his old age. He strengthened his appeal by heading a subscription list with $100 for his benefit. This letter naturally enough excited a great deal of comment both here and in England, and resulted in some substantial relief to the "good gray poet." A few months ago Colonel Ingersoll gave a lecture in Philadelphia for his benefit, the proceeds of which—about $900—hav supported him since. The lecture was printed by the Truth Seeker Company under the title of "Liberty in Literature," and the quotations from Whitman were revised by the poet himself.

Mr. Whitman nobly met the ruthless advance of age and loss of physical vigor. Though partial paralysis rendered him nearly helpless, and though wholly destitute of resources which could secure comfort without further labor, he still worked to the extent of his strength and accepted his fate in a manly fashion, which won admiring sympathy. To the last he was tenderly cared for by his nieces and many friendships cheered his declining years. Quite lately he was busy on his new volume of poems, which was issued last autumn under the title of "November Boughs."

The Ohio State Secular Union Convention.

The preparations are being rapidly pushed forward for the Convention of the Freethinkers of Ohio, and present indications point toward success. But nevertheless I would still urge upon our friends the absolute necessity of not being too overconfident. Many causes hav gone to the wall through just such circumstances as these; and it would be well for our friends to carefully guard themselvs against it.

Let each and all consider it a part of his or her duty to do what they can in this movement of state organization; for this is undoubtedly the only plan upon which Freethinkers can successfully organize for effectiv political work. Each individual state has its own independent work; it has its own independent political issues. Each state has different laws upon its statute-books, some of which affect us more or less as Freethinkers, and each of us is enabled only to participate in this struggle within the jurisdiction of our own particular state. Hence, we must hav an organization within the state if we wish to grapple with them successfully.

A trusted and valued friend of our cause—W. J. Dutton, of Kilmer, O.—wrote me last week, from whose letter I cull the following extract:

> Five thousand voters in the state of Ohio, pledged to support a measure, can if properly organized gain their point in a very short time. As soon as government support is withheld from Christianity their cause is lost.

The above expression exactly voices the sentiments of thousands of Freethinkers in this and every other state, and especially so the sentiments of the promoters of this state organization for Ohio. Recognizing that this is the only method by which five thousand voters in any individual state can be properly organized, and as all organizations, to be successful, must hav their foundations in the people, we propose to build this organization from the people, and for the people; whose principles shall be to promote the freest of free thought, and which shall dare to discuss topics held by the superstitious and ignorant as sacred and unapproachable; for we declare that there is no subject too sacred but that it shall be investigated, that there is no being too holy but that his conduct shall be criticised.

We fully recognize the impediments we shall hav to contend with, the greatest of which will be: That intense prejudice interwoven into the very nature of man, the result of religious training and religious ignorance. We hav to struggle against the self-interest of a class of men whose very existence is bound up with the prevalence of certain ideas, and whose very lives are perpetuated upon the fruits of the providence of others. We hav to do with the bitter antagonism of a received public opinion, which has usurped a fictitious dignity over less popular ideas.

But we are not afraid of the conflict; we are determined to enter the arena and to take our part, our share, in this battle for mental liberty. And we crave for support in this movement from those whose desire it may be to see it successfully maintained.

The history of Freethought is rich in noble specimens of self-sacrifice of men who hav given up all that is valuable in life, who hav sacrificed wealth, reputation, and life in the service of Freedom, everywhere destroying error and propagating views they deemed to be true and useful to mankind. These were the pioneers of progress, who nobly placed themselvs in the forefront of the battle, and fought valiantly for the liberties we enjoy to-day.

Friends, this warfare is not yet ended, the battle has yet to be won; aggressiv propagandism is yet a necessity; our principles must be kept before the public; and this can only be done by the combined exertions of the friends of Freethought.

Freethought propaganda is not a commercial speculation; it is not a mere calculation of profit and loss, and must never be allowed to become such. It is instead a matter of stern and unrelenting duty imposing sacrifices upon all who engage therein. This duty should not be left to individuals, it belongs to the whole party whose convictions lead them to join it; the same to hav a right of supervision over all proceedings taken in their name.

Independent and irresponsible leadership may suit a guerilla warfare; but it is only by union, order, regulation, and disciplin, that desultory attack can be converted into a concerted and systematic operation.

When this can be effected there will be an army of progress, but meanwhile those who take a leading part must get what help they can and carry on the work as they are able.

Friends, you can help us. Will you help us? For remember it is only by your help that our views will ever gain publicity. I am sure you do not ask for martyrs, and I know you require no sacrifices in which you are not prepared to share.

Rally round the standard of Freedom, and ere long the face of society will be changed.

Do not forget, the convention will be held in Wirthwein's Hall, South High street, Columbus, O., on Sunday, April 17th, at 10 A.M. Reduced rates hav been secured on the certificate plan at the rate of one and one-third return. All communications are to be addressed to me in care of John B. Cochran, 112 West Maple street.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

On the Rounds.

Last Sunday I went to Cincinnati. I was met at the depot by Hon. George Light, who is a giant in the cause of Liberalism and who is known in the community where he resides as "The Deacon." By him I was escorted to the Palace Hotel, where the "finest" was extended to me. In the evening I addressed the Ohio Liberal Society, a splendid organization with a big membership and plenty of backbone. No society in the country is doing as great and as grand a work as that now being done by the Ohio Liberal Society. To show the interest that is being taken in what they do, it is but necessary to state that twice hav they been compelled to seek larger quarters; and they are going to move once more on account of the increased attendance. Their present meeting-place is Douglass Hall, and here it was that I addressed them. Every seat and most of the standing-room was occupied, thus giving me an audience of between seven and eight hundred people. I was billed to talk on "Christianity and Civilization," but by request I delivered my lecture entitled, "Church and State." The same was well received and thoroughly criticised pro and con. The main critic for the church was Ex-Senator Nolan, of Hamilton county. He being a Catholic and presenting an argument in line with the teachings of that church, I had no trouble in getting the laugh on him; in other words, he fell an easy mark.

The finest feature of the Ohio Liberal Society is its lady brigade. Fully three-fifths of its members are ladies. Just think of it! An army of women battling in our ranks! Purity and virtue for once enlisted against their avowed enemies and oppressors! When I looked upon and beheld that scene my heart beat a pit-a-pat for joy, and the old flag of Freethought seemed brighter and prettier than ever before. Hallelujah! Let us rejoice! Among those brave women I found Mrs. E. P. Foster, of the Golden Rule, and Mrs. M. L. Geffs, of the Herald, two women who for profund thought and brilliancy surpass all the adherents of orthodoxy; that is to say, all those who at them hurl the pointed, poisoned arrows of malice and jealousy.

Among the men of the society are to be found Prof. Edgar Beal, the greatest phrenologist of the Western clime, whose works and writings far excel the entire lot of theological teachings; Frank Moore, who in labor's ranks fights a good fight; Dr. E. P. Wilson, whose medical sense outshines that of the so-called great Jehovah; Andrew Hogg, the most wonderful anti-theological hustler on earth, and a host of others, each one of whom is a walking encyclopedia of information and intelligence.

Next Saturday night, April 9th, I address the people of Rarden, O. The pusher in this little city is Lafayette Taylor, Esq. He is a wide-awake, outspoken Liberal. He is doing a world of good for the cause in his section of the country.

Saturday, April 16th, I expect to lecture at Auguste, Ky., and the following Saturday at Huntington, W.Va. I am on the rounds to stay and I want the Liberals to keep me busy.

Yours always, WILL S. ANDRES.

Creeds Not a Guarantee of Character.

Many of our oldest readers, says the Progressiv Thinker, will remember the noted revivalist, Elder Knapp, who was so prominently before the country from twenty-five to fifty years ago. His fiery denunciations of Infidels and Infidelity yet ring in the ears of those who listened to his erratic methods for saving souls. Talmage in our day, with his terrible pictures of the yawning gulf, never approached Elder Knapp in his word-pictures of the miseries of the damned.

At the close of life the elder was a resident of Winnebago county, Ill. He had a fine farm, and large possessions, the accumulation of years of faithful labor in damning souls. He recognized the fact that the end of life was near, and wishing to dispose of his earthly possessions according to his own notions, he called in a scrivener, a learned Christian gentleman, to write his will. Disposition had been made of all his large estate, and the point was reached for naming the executor.

"Whom shall I insert as executor of your will, elder?" inquired the scrivener.

"George Tullock, please."

"George Tullock is an Infidel!"

"George Tullock is an honest man, and I want an honest man to administrate on my estate."

Tullock was duly appointed. He faithfully discharged his trust to the entire satisfaction of the heirs and legatees, and yet livs, and can be addressed at Rockford, Ill., in full confirmation of this statement. The deduction from this simple narrativ is: Creeds and beliefs in themselvs do not supply those absolute requirements of honesty, integrity, and genuin morality which make good citizens, and the clergy are not ignorant of that fact.

Lectures and Meetings.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, April 10th, at 3 o'clock, Theodore J. Werner, of Newark, will lecture. Subject—"Public Revenues—How Raised Now, and How They Should Be Raised."

THE Society of Human Progress meets Sunday evenings during April at Union Square Hall, 8 Union square: for social greeting at 7:30, concert at 8:15, and lecture from 9 to 9:45. Liberals are invited to come and test this program.—E. B. Foote, Jr., Treasurer.

W. S. BELL is arranging to lecture in Oregon during the coming summer, at the following-named places: Ashland, Talent, Grant's Pass, Coos county, Eugene, Silverton, Woodburn, Canby, New Era, Oregon City, Forest City, North Yamhill, Corvallis, and Portland. His address is No. 1121 Railroad avenue, Oakland, Cal.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club lectures for April are as follows. The club meets at 220 East 15th street:

April 8th, "Religious Lunacy," Hugh O. Pentecost;
April 15th, "Solitude of Self," Elizabeth Cady Stanton;
April 22d, "Religion and Morality," Henry Rowley;
April 29th, "Lunacy Real and Factitious, and Its Treatment," Albert Bach.

Business meeting and election of officers after lecture, on April 29th.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Waco, Convention of Texas Liberal Association	Apr. 9,10	Massillon, O.	May 1
New Orleans	" 13,14	New York	" 6
Brookhaven, Miss.	" 16,17	Boston	" 8
Chicago	" 24	Montreal	" 15
		Boulder City, Col.	June 5

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

MIRACULOUS cures were not ascribed to persons merely. Another growth, mainly from germs in our sacred books developed by the early church, took shape in miracles wrought by streams, by pools of water, and especially by relics. Here, too, the old types persisted, and just as we find holy and healing wells, pools, and streams in all other ancient religions, so we find in the evolution of our own such examples as Naaman the Syrian cured of leprosy by bathing in the river Jordan, the blind man restored to sight by washing in the pool of Siloam, and the healing of those who touched the bones of Elisha, the shadow of St. Peter, or the handkerchief of St. Paul. St. Cyril, St. Ambrose, St. Augustine, and other great fathers of the early church sanctioned the belief that similar efficacy was to be found in the relics of the saints of their time; hence, St. Ambrose declared that "the precepts of medicin are contrary to celestial science, watching, and prayer;" and we find this statement reiterated from time to time throughout the Middle Ages. From this idea was evolved that fetichism which we shall see for ages standing in the way of medical science. —Ex-President White of Cornell University.

Letters of Friends.

He Keeps Himself Armed.

VISCHER'S FERRY, N. Y., Feb. 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1.50 for the Bible Picture Book, in cloth. I want it to show to my pious friends. I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER ever since D. M. Bennett was in the Albany penitentiary. That and Heston's pictures make me pretty well posted, so that the clergy dare not tackle me. Yours very truly, ABRAHAM BEST.

Christianity a Curse.

CHICAGO, ILL., March 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please giv Mr. Heston my compliments. I was so well pleased with his "Praying Machine" that I had it framed with the sample prayer, and hav it hung up in the library. I am going to hav a lot of his pictures framed. I think Christianity is a curse to the progress and welfare of civilization. E. W. BROWN.

Likes To See the Humanitarians.

BALTIMORE, MD., March 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I think you hav made a decided improvement in THE TRUTH SEEKER, particularly so by placing the likenesses of prominent men in the cause of reform in your various columns. It givs the reader a proper impression as to the appearance of those working in the cause of humanity. Yours truly,

CHARLES MEHLGARTEN.

Convert the Rising Generation.

PRAIRIE CITY, IA., March 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose herein for the funny Picture Book $1.50. I want the best, as I desire to leave it as a legacy to my children. The pious old fossils will not look at the pictures, but the children will, and they are the ones we wish to influence. Heston is doing a good work. Long may he continue to wave.

Yours truly, IRA E. DRAPER.

Object-Lessons in Ecclesiasticism.

WINSLOW, ARIZ., March 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Send me some of the letters to Congress in regard to closing the World's Fair on Sunday. I see some Christians are talking of having an exhibit. Well, if they will, and hav all the instruments of torture used by them for Christ's sake, I will giv $10 to help it along.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty,

J. T. MUNCEY.

Good To Disillusionize Christians.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., March 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The Nine Demands and a copy of "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" hav been duly received, with many thanks. I think the Bible Pictures just the thing to disgust the pious Christian with his inspired book. I shall try and sell this one and hav one bound in cloth. Yours for truth,

W. F. PORTER.

When They Ask for Bread, He Will Not Giv Garbage.

NEW YORK, March 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I enjoy THE TRUTH SEEKER exceedingly. I admire its ability and courage in dealing with those who are still striving to stuff our mental stomachs with old decaying theological garbage And I like your plan of circulating free Liberal literature. To put a small sum where it will perhaps do the most good, please add the inclosed $3 to your Literature Fund. Yours fraternally,

L. C. REED.

Christians Made to Laugh at Their Religion.

AUBURN, N. Y., March 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The book has been received, also the letter containing the donation. I must say the book has been a great comfort. I hav enjoyed reading it, and also hav been amused to see the expression upon the faces of those who hav seen it. The comical illustrations hav caused them to laugh not a little, although they professed to be very much disgusted. The book, though comically illustrated, proves to be a great educator. MARY J. JONES.

A Worker.

CHEMAWA, ORE., Feb. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1, for which please send Bible Pictures. I hav tried very hard to get subscribers to your valuable paper, but I find the majority of people, though enjoying the reading very much, are afraid of losing caste if they should take it. Still, although I am getting old, I sow the seed and distribute my papers, and the people are coming up and in time will see the light. I learned from THE TRUTH SEEKER years ago, when D. M. Bennett, the martyr, was at the helm, and am proud to see it so ably managed. I could not suggest any improvement, unless Brother Heston makes more pictures. Long may he wave! J. W. BEATY.

Our Roman Catholic Masters.

ONEIDA, KAN., March 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $2, for which you may send me by mail your Roman Catholic "Pictorial Text-Book," and oblige—this being the 17th, which seems to be becoming our American Fourth of July so rapidly. I notice a mayor of a large city in his proclamation givs the pope's followers a half-holiday to-day. So you see it is becoming "'alf and 'alf," as the Englishman would put it, already. I see that in a city in Michigan the offices are all filled by Roman Catholics but fifteen per cent, and the Catholics do not pay quite ten per cent of the tax; but the eighty-five per cent of the offices in this city absorb as fees or salaries $71,500 of the moneys from the treasury. This ought to be an eye-opener to all American citizens, saying nothing about the Captain Pratt episode at Carlyle, Pa., in which Congress voted down his salary because he told the truth. CYRUS SHINN.

Some One Will Hav To Go To Hell For This.

CLINTON, IA., March 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The book and papers came safe. Inclosed find $5, and send me four Bible Picture Books. I hav buyers for two, and probably will be able to sell the other two soon. I think when we get a month or two of good working time more will want them. But for a month or two in winter we do not do very much here, and finances get low. Send me also another dollar's worth of Telegrams with the "Christmas Sermon," etc. Also slip in one of the small tracts, "Ingersoll Catechised," with his poem on Robert Burns's birthplace on the last page. A friend, a Latter Day Saint, saw the one I hav and would like to possess one. The yeast is working. Somebody will hav to go to hell for the way the thing is working. O for a hundred Ingersolls! It is so amusing to see how one can make the whole orthodox world squirm. May his shadow increase! JAS. A. GREENHILL.

When Slavery Shall Be Abolished.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., March 6, E.M. 292.

MR. EDITOR: Herewith I hand you thirty cents to pay for three copies of the New York Telegram containing Col. R. G. Ingersoll's Christmas Sermon, the attack of the pirates upon him, and his broadsides upon them in defense of the freedom of speech and a free press. The great humanitarian, Thomas Paine, did more for the welfare of humanity than any man who had lived upon the earth prior to his day, and our "Colonel Bob" is to-day the foremost man of all the world.

He is to the piratical priestly crew as an iron-clad ram in a naval battle with an old wooden ship.

If his life and vigor continue for ten years longer, he will clear our land of these thieving buccaneers, and, the curses of African and religious slavery removed, we shall hav a free country to liv in. I am getting along well in years, when the continuation of the thread of life is very uncertain, but I do hope to liv to see the day when there will not be a religious priest n r his ignorant dupe in all our fair land. Yours, P. V. WISE.

We Put the Church in Its Right Light.

GRAFTON, N. D., March 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Receive my sincere thanks for the good work you are doing with your valuable paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER. It is a welcome guest every Monday. I was the first here to take the paper, and I wish I had many subscriptions to send you, but as the most of the people here belong to the church superstition, we cannot do much, only a little missionary work. A good many of them like to read THE TRUTH SEEKER if only they can do it in secret, so my papers are actually worn out every week. Here in reality is a broad field for Secularism if only we had a good lecturer. A good many, myself included, are entirely astonished over the good pictures of Watson Heston. If he is not a genius I do not know who is. I hope he will liv long, to the benefit of Secularism, so the old church humbug can be exposed in its right light. If you hav any copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER I can make good use of them here, as people now commence to think a little for themselvs and not let the clergy do all the thinking for them. Please find inclosed $3.25, for which send me three copies of the Bible Picture Book and one "The Strike of a Sex," and if you send some extra copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER I can make good use of them to the benefit of my fellow-men. My best wishes for THE TRUTH SEEKER and Watson Heston.

Respectfully, JOHN ILDSTAD.

Of Interest to Mariners.

CRESCO, IA., March 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: A correspondent in THE TRUTH SEEKER of the 19th inst. requests that some one giv dimensions of Noah's ark. The following figures were taken from a religious book (I hav forgotten its title):

300 cubits long (450 feet).
50 " broad (75 ").
30 " high (45 ").

For the purpose of comparison I add dimensions of the Great Eastern (Conklin's "Manual"):

680 feet long.
82½ feet broad—118 feet inclusiv paddleboxes.
58 feet high—70 feet inclusiv bulwarks.
11,000 horse-power.

The old Jews' book tells us in one place that two of each kind, in another that seven—by implication fourteen—of each kind of living thing had found barnroom in that unventilated ark. Now, I believe that the hides only of all the larger animals in the world—the smaller living things to be put in stuffing and all—would make quite a cargo for even the much larger Great Eastern.

What silly things credulous people do believe. F. L. DAUBERSMITH.

A Montana Auto-da-fe.

MANHATTAN, MONT., March 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find express order in payment for the following articles—paper and books: Renewal of THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year, $3; "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," $1; "The Story Hour," by Susan Wixon, in boards, $1; letters for our representativ, 50 cents, and some stationery stamped with the Flag Above the Cross, 50 cents. I must hav THE TRUTH SEEKER; cannot get along without it. We hav two Catholic families here—one Irish, the other French. The first was brought up in New York state, and the other in this country. There are two young ladies in each family, and between them they burnt up two copies of the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book," also a year's file of THE TRUTH SEEKERS. You see ignorance is not confined to any one part of the United States. If they had sense enough to look at Heston's pictures, and read Ingersoll's lectures, with Helen H. Gardener's, and others, they might know better some time. Let us hope for the better.

Yours, as ever, for free thought, free speech, and equal rights, J. O. CLARK.

Political Parties Shooting Arrows at the Heart of Liberty.

HOLDEN, MO., March 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Missouri has sold out to the church. The Democracy of the South is married to the church. It seems that they want slavery back again. The two words "slavery" and "democracy" are as wide apart as the polls. This shows there is nothing in names. There are exceptions to all rules. I find many Democratic Freethinkers in Missouri, but it is to be deplored that they are generally poorly informed on the subject. Woe! woe! to any party that will sacrifice principle for power! Both the old parties hav done it. Both deserve death. Yea, death! for they are continually shooting poisoned arrows at the heart of Liberty.

I am still of the opinion that Freethought is working on the wrong plan. It seems to me that those who planned the campaign were not aiming at success, but simply notoriety. Some people are very much afraid of the word religion. Well, when viewed as a system of faith it is a bad thing, but when viewed as a system of principle it is a glorious thing. It means nothing more or less to my mind than a person's honest convictions as to what is right, just, true, and honorable, and a strict conformity in practice to those convictions. I am still of the opinion that Mr. Parton's suggestion to supplant one church with another points at the only available plan. WM. L. WORLEY.

Competition Among Long-Eared Animals.

GRASS LAKE, MICH., March 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please send two copies of Telegram containing "The Ingersollian Controversy"—one to lend and one to keep for visitors. The Telegram may, perhaps, go where THE TRUTH SEEKER would not be welcome.

How now? Is Rev. Mr. Dixon jealous of the ancient long-eared animal since the colonel's explanation of the spook story? Didn't he make a great mistake in assuming one of the attributes of the animal (stubbornness) by refusing to retract? Better stuck to his trade of prophet (profit?) where proof is uncalled for.

It seems almost superfluous to mention the recent improvements in the general appearance of THE TRUTH SEEKER, they are so apparent to all. And the contents—well, your readers hav been peculiarly favored with good reading this year, though mostly good before. No need to particularize—one cannot miss it now.

The former belligerent attitude of Materialists and Spiritualists seems to hav died out. Glad to see it, as it has seemed very unprofitable—too liable to descend to personalities.

Please note the following: Gnostic—knowing. Agnostic—not knowing. How is it—A-gnos-tic, or Ag-nos-tic? G. W.

Obituary.

DUBLIN, IND., March 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Milton Thornburgh was born in Guilford county, N. C., July 4, 1812, and died at his home in Mount Auburn, January 22d, aged 79 years 7 months and 20 days.

When he was two years old his father moved to Warren county, O. In 1822 they moved to a farm in Posey township, Fayette county, this state. Here Milton spent the greater portion of his life in clearing and breaking the heavily timbered farm into cultivation. In 1833 his father brought the first short-horn cattle from Kentucky to this portion of the country, and the same kind of cattle hav been kept on the farm ever since.

Mr. Thornburgh was married to Sarah, daughter of John Charles, of Richmond, in 1835. To this union there were six children born, all of whom hav died except Oliver, the youngest, who has two children. There is one other grandson, Charles Thornburgh, who livs on the Butler farm west of Dublin.

In 1870 Mr. Thornburgh turned over to his son the farm in Posey township, and bought the Isaac Myres homestead between Cambridge and Dublin. Here he lived a quiet, unassuming life, surrounded with peace and plenty in a comfortable home.

For many years he was connected with the First National bank in Cambridge city, and at the time of his death he was vice-president and one of the directors of the institution. KATE MARTZ.

A Good and Wise Man Gone.

LAWRENCE, KAN., Feb. 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We announce with profound sorrow the death of David Elliott, on Jan. 31, 1892. His illness was but a brief one, lasting only a half an hour. His death was caused from strangulation. He was buried February 2d, and his remains were followed to their last resting-place by his many friends. One more of our high and noble young Liberals gone, and that dreaded foe, Death, has crept into a happy and loving family. How short and uncertain is life, whose highest hopes and greatest comforts are but flickering rays of future bliss, reflected here for the consolation of the benighted wanderer, like a sunbeam shining through the crack in the dark, and then a firm hand is laid on the wanderer's shoulder and he must go to his peaceful sleep.

He will long be remembered for his kind way. It gained for him more friends than wealth and learning together. He might well be compared to a diamond with its bright and beautiful luster, for he never lost that fine polish; his life throughout was one of everlasting sunshine, scattering the rays of light into the homes of the poor and needy. We extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of sorrow, and hope that the new year will not bring forth throughout its extent any more of such painful afflictions. He

So lived, that when his summons came to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
. . . . . .
He approached his grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Written by a friend of the deceased,

BLENDA E. PALM.

It Is Time for the Farmers To Cease Praying.

NEW CAMBRIA, KAN., March 10, 292.

MR. EDITOR: A quotation from the preamble of the platform adopted at St. Louis reads thus: "Assembled in national congress, invoking upon its action the blessing and protection of almighty God, puts forth," etc. Does it not sound like grim mockery for the same parties that engrafted the above, having been presumably continually "invoking the protection and blessing of almighty God," to still call upon him? Would it not hav sounded more sensible for them to hav said, "Since almighty God and the old parties hav refused to listen to our prayers, supplications, and petitions, we put forth," etc.? Is that not the correct way of addressing unjust rulers? Would that not sound more impartial toward all that had caused their grievances? Is it not reasonable to suppose that just to the extent he is more powerful, just to that extent he is more to blame than either one of the old parties? Is it not probable that he has been "hardening Pharaoh's heart"—the old parties'? But as long as they don't hav him in the platform, there is no danger of his being foisted upon the people. Some may think there is danger of the above being the case, but I will leave it to any fair and unbiased mind that what a person imagins ought not to hav near as much weight as an actual occurrence. What has the Republican party done for Liberals? I still insist that it has passed all the laws by which Comstock, Wanamaker, Harrison, et al, work their persecution. They hav simply relaxed their hold and expect Liberals to all join hands and help elect the same administration, and then they will resume Harman's trial and as many more as they can ensnare, and send them to prison for a good long term. JOHN W. ABBOTT.

Made To Giv Where He Does Not Wish To.

NEWPORT, O., Feb. 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1 for following bill of goods. I would do better, but am short just now. You hav a large list of books that I would like, some that I am going to hav, but just at present I am too busy helping J. D. Rockefeller make presents to universities. I am not doing it willingly or peaceably, but I am doing it just the same. Through the manipulation of the perjured officers of this corrupted legalized banditti that we are accustomed to call government, I am compelled to giv money to support institutions that I do not believe in, and to render service to this conglomeration that we call the "grandest government on earth"—service that ought rightly to be rendered by some ecclesiastical tramp or beggar. I will clip out this little item I find in the Pittsburgh Dispatch of Friday, February 26th:

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—The University of Chicago to-day had another gift of $1,000,000 added to its endowment. A letter was received by the trustees from John D. Rockefeller, tendering that sum in five per cent gold bonds to be handed over to the trustees with accrued interest March 1st.

The giver reserves the right to designate the expenses to which the income shall be applied. The letter concludes as follows: "I make this gift as a special thank-offering to almighty God for returning health."

If I should be so fortunate as to meet with a paper that contains the letter in full I will mail you the paper. I suppose this $1,000,000 will pay a great many preachers for walking into their pulpits Sundays and telling their superstitious flocks to be contented in the position in which God—J. D. Rockefeller—has placed them. Great scheme, is it not? Great scheme for robbing the ignorant rabble, with perfect safety to the robber.

Yours in the truth, E. P. BLY.

More Work Like This Wanted.

ELMIRA, N. Y., March 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I want to thank you for the notice you published in THE TRUTH SEEKER of my essay, "Church and Civilization." Many hav already sent in for copies, inclosing stamps, from all directions. All orders hav been promptly filled. Also I thank you for publishing my letter accompanying the copies of the essay sent you.

With pleasure I would with much appreciation mention the generosity manifested by Mr. N. Griswold (my namesake), of Meriden, Conn. I mailed him a copy of the essay, and in a few days I received a very good letter from him saying how very much pleased, etc., he was to receive it, and to my great surprise a draft for $10. The $10 was inclosed as "a token of appreciation." Was not this a good, generous act of Mr. Griswold? Undoubtedly Mr. Griswold thought I had been to much work and expense in carrying on the discussion, especially in publishing the essay in neat pamphlet form, and concluded to contribute generously toward Freethought propaganda work. If all Liberals were so commensurately generous as Mr. Griswold is, and has been for many years, the cause of Freethought would be a mighty power for good.

I hav also received a good letter of thanks from Elmina Drake Slenker, Susan H. Wixon, and very many other stanch Liberals too very numerous to mention, all of whom are highly esteemed by the writer, and are very welcome indeed to the pamphlet gratuitously sent them. The pamphlet was not published for pecuniary purposes, but absolutely for gratuitous propaganda work, although gotten up with considerable work and expense.

The first lot of pamphlets is nearly exhausted, and I now contemplate publishing a second edition.

L. DE WITT GRISWOLD.

Would That We Could Elect Such a Presidential Ticket.

SAN JOSÉ, CAL., Feb. 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please place the inclosed $10 to my credit and send book and leaflets as per list.

I hav just found out what that G in Col. Robert G. Ingersoll's name stands for. Written on a bulletin-board in front of the Liberal News-stand in this city are the names of Thomas Paine, Voltaire, Robert G. Ingersoll, and other noted authors. An English man and woman halt in front of it. The man on reading over the names says, "I wonder what that G in Hingersoll's name stands for." Woman says, "Why, Gehova, of course." "That will do," says the man; "come along."

Now, Mr. Editor, as the American Secular Union appears to be floundering around for something to do, what is the matter with calling a national convention of Liberals and organizing a great Liberal political party, taking the Nine Demands of Liberalism (justice) as a basis, for a platform? Such an array of talent as could be brought together in a convention of this kind would astonish old orthodoxy. And as everyone has a right to a preference for presidential candidates, I might as well name mine now: For president, Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, of New York; for vice-president, George E. Macdonald, of Snohomish, Wash. Just think of a great Liberal political party with these two fearless advocates of liberty marching to the front, proudly bearing aloft the banners of the free, every star shining with renewed luster, every stripe gracefully curling in liberty's breeze! Oh, how the eagle would scream! Her melodious voice could be heard at the Vatican. The pope, with a broad grin, would throw up his three-story hat—a caper he hasn't cut since the unveiling of the Bruno monument. All the horny-handed sons of toil would vote for them. All the free and independent women would work for them. The clergy would go for them, because those reverend gentleman very well know that those brave and manly men would not go sky-larking and neglect the political wants of the nation, as has been done by the weak-kneed half-Infidel policy pilots who hav been monkeying at the helm of the old ship of state for the last several years. Stir 'em up, Mr. Editor! Giv us a free vote and fair count. Organize a great political party and at the next turn of the presidential wheel we shall witness the prettiest and liveliest presidential jig ever danced on Columbia's green.

L. R. TITUS.

Thinks Them Necessary Evils.

LEXINGTON, KY., Feb. 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The powerful depend upon some kind of servitude to advance their plans. Witness the Sandwich islands and the empire of the czar. With regard to the feudal system, we learn from the history of France that the disorder attending the movements and manners of a nation just emerging from barbarism is called anarchy, by candid and discriminating writers, which remark would also apply to those who are retrograding in civilization. The cure for their absence of order is found in the feudal system. Mild and benevolent rulers, such as Louis IX., called St. Louis, attempt to mitigate the horrors of this state of society, and are able to accomplish their end only by strengthening the kingly power, at the expense of that of the people. Secular and religious tyranny introduce themselvs naturally at such a period.

The golden mean is only found by nations when those who constitute the commonwealth, and bear some share in its power and responsibility, find that justice alone promotes their best interests, driving away all fear of violence and revenge.

If individual improvement and private interests are not sustained, society loses mind and intellectual character, and becomes a hopeless drudge or machine, which can secure its daily bread and a pillow on which to repose.

Governments are necessary evils, which secure us from intrusion, and giv us breathing-time sufficient to effect something which makes our life superior to that of the most abject slaves. Much can be done by individual activity and benevolence which should endeavor to rescue those who possess some remarkable talent from hideous and suffering poverty. Camoens, the poet, was abandoned by intimate friends, who were themselvs immensely wealthy.

But thus speculating, we are interrupted by the din of Mr. Harris, a Jew, who depreciates Ingersoll, and who observes, in the vague old way—which we recoil from as we would from the plague—that we need more reverence. Some churches kneel to the bedpost, a method "of keeping their zeal in motion." Cushions to kneel upon could then be more salable than materials used in science for useful experiments or for the collection of facts.

It would be bad for people to get too topheavy. Some imagin that walking on all fours would be conduciv to health, although a sense of propriety, combined with elegance of manner, has been thought a distinguishing mark of civilization. I suppose we ought to hav some reverence for the deductions of reason, which is not a necessary evil, but which informs us that the great point at issue—the battle to fight—is not to increase the credulity of the mass of mankind, teaching them to "lean on God to obtain imaginary salvation." Unquestioning quiet would resemble life when sealed up in a can, like any other preserve, for the fair at the New Jerusalem. The only tremendous question is, are Christians, are we, making heavier the descending scale, loaded with ignorance, poverty, impurity, luxury? Do Infidels receive the sacrament, stained with genteel devices, as they fill the state prisons with culprits, sending them to heaven when the earth is loathsome with their presence?

The Rev. Mr. Crosbie, in the Eclectic for January, certainly must consider God as a necessary evil, entangled in the meshes of an evolution, which theory no one can comprehend, casting the question of growth and progress into Egyptian darkness, where the brain, without sustenance, would soon be no aid to thought or sensation.

Are tariffs necessary evils? If they were removed, would not the sea soon be white with vessels loaded with cheap goods and manufactured articles, our streets lined with cheap stores? Does competition always improve trade?

But to digress, Mrs. C. Lacey's letter was excellent. The Methodist "I am," I suppose prospers. We hav another. John Adams said, "I AM" for the resolution, sink or swim, which will endure when the elements melt with fervent heat. Eusebius cooled that fire when he said the epistle of Peter was spurious. ALHAZA.

Arguments With Christians.

ADRIAN, MINN., Jan. 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I knock for admittance to your friendly letter department.

I hav received the books, and will soon hav them all sold. Even Christians say, "These are the greatest pictures I ever saw."

I question them in this way: "Do you think there is anything about me because I am not a Christian that I should be eternally damned hereafter, and you or any of your family be rewarded with a better place?" They say, "No, I do not know as there is." Now, that is pretty fair. Most Christians are good-hearted and reasonable beings, but some are "like owls, they close their eyes when they come in the light." It seems there is a struggle between the heart and mind.

Yet in spite of their hellish belief against us in their ignorance, we are in duty bound to respect them. But here is one, quite a Liberal yet bound to be a Christian, who tells me that "preaching hell has nothing to do with the heart." And another goes on to say that "so far as hell is concerned, God passed the eternal sentence, not man, and Christians hav a right to teach that as one of the principles laid down by our savior." 'Now," I said, "who is the best-hearted?—Supposing two persons are brought up together. One falls in the way of the church, and the other does not. Otherwise they are just alike, except in belief. One says, 'You are going to hell to be forever miserable, and I am going to heaven to be forever happy.' The other answers, 'When they nailed Christ to the cross, he said, "God, forgiv these men; they know not what they do." Now, I do not ask God to forgiv you. I forgiv you myself. You know not what you say or believe.'" And right here my Christian says, "That has nothing to do with the heart." "Well, then, if Christianity is heartless, and there is no brain about it, what in the world is it then?" And now he falls back on that last and reckless argument by saying that Christians hav a mighty advantage over Infidels—that if the Christian religion is not true he is just as well off as the Infidel, and if it is true he is decidedly better off, according to the gospel. "Well, then, my Christian friend, it is to the Bible you retreat. We'll go with you to the lion's den, and whom will the lion eat?" He now asked me if I take the Boston Investigator. I said, "Yes, seven or eight years." "You read too much Infidel stuff." "Well, I read a good many Christian sermons. I read the Bible." He gave a look, something like a surprise, with a laugh.

Mr. Editor, what more do they want? Can it be possible that they want us to stop thinking and go to church?

I hav sold all the books. Inclosed you will find money-order for $10.

W. KNIPS.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Common Good.

BY SUSAN H. WIXON.

While others sing in highest praise
Of rare and costly gems,
And tune their harps to graceful lays
Of sparkling diadems;
I turn in contemplation, free
From care or busy strife,
And chant the glory that I see
In common things of life.

I lay my head upon thy breast,
O earth, so sweet and fair;
Thy pulsing breath givs joy and zest,
With which naught can compare;
Thou yieldest strength and all good gifts,
With beauty thou art rife;
Thy royal grace for aye uplifts
The common things of life.

The air I breathe is mine and thine,
And millions share the same;
What boundless love to thus entwine
All hearts within one name!
No rich, no poor, no robber bold,
No peer of lofty birth,
More than he needs can take or hold
Of common air of earth.

I drink the water from the spring—
No nectar like to this
Ere touched the lips of crowned kings
With pure and honeyed kiss.
The rippling stream runs full and free,
From vale and mountain wall;
Runs round the world from sea to sea,
A common gift for all.

The glorious sun gilds cottage low,
The same as lofty tower,
Givs joyous life and healthful glow
Alike to man and flower.
All lavishly, exquisit grace
Adorns the fields above;
For thee and me the star-gemmed space
Is bright with hope and love.

And thus the things we daily use,
By all who liv, possessed,
Are those we did not seek or choose,
Yet are to us the best.
Like loving hearts they palpitate
With truth and honest worth;
They make for all a high estate—
These common things of earth.

Buttonwood Trees.

"The great old tree before the door" of my childhood was a buttonwood. It was planted there in 1718 by my great-grandfather, who brought it on his shoulder from off the bottom land on the south branch of the Nashua river and planted it in his door-yard. Supposing it to hav been about five years old at that time, it was one hundred and thirty-two years old at the time of my having it cut down, in the winter of 1845. The buttonwood grew very rapidly and large on the alluvial soil of the river land, for which it seemed adapted. The special tree we are writing about was twenty-seven feet in circumference and measured nine feet across the stump, which measure held good twenty feet from the ground, from whence three branches forked out in diverse directions, from which no branches issued again until reaching ten feet farther. Then it became a network of interminable branches, densely covered with foliage, which the sun could not penetrate. The leaves of the buttonwood were about as large as a common dinner-plate, fastened to the branch by a stem some four inches long. It also produced a ball with which the tree would be covered, as large as the crab-apple. This ball, on ripening, would be scattered by the winds like feathers.

We hav been thus particular in describing the tree, that you may better understand what we wish to convey to you. The buttonwood tree died out in 1843 in New England, up to which time it had been the most flourishing tree in the Eastern states. The cause of the simultaneous extinction of these trees has never been accounted for to my knowledge. There was many a moist eye in the family when this tree fell on the hard, frozen ground in December, the limbs snapping like pipestems as they struck the ground; indeed, we hardly think we would hav cut the tree, as disagreeable as it appeared in summer, when all other trees were dressed in their green foliage, but the high winds would break off limbs a foot in diameter as it became brittle, endangering the buildings.

The buttonwood would shed its bark annually in June, which would roll up as it came to the ground, looking like cinnamon. The limbs of the tree then would remain white until September, a beautiful contrast to the green leaves. A winding stair was built around this tree up thirty feet from the ground, where a platform was built that could seat thirty persons. It was upon this platform where my brothers and sisters, with our neighbors' children, would meet to hold amateur schools, religious meetings, and other diversions; but our favorit play was "keeping store." To our infant minds the village store contained everything to be desired in the world, and the "store-keeper" in his "store clothes" was our ideal of the "perfect man." We would hav a general assortment of mullein leaves for broadcloth, buttonwood leaves for cotton cloth, the bark for cinnamon, mud cakes for gingerbread, dried leaves of different varieties for mixed tea, acorns for coffee—all of which our amateur "store-keeper" would assure us with much gravity he sold at less than cost, while we would haggle about the price as we had seen the farmers do; for in those days the merchant would hav his asking and taking price. This is now happily done away with.

The hangbird would build his nest in this tree, which was a nice woven bag of grass and strings, with a small hole in the top, which he hung on the end of a small twig, always swinging to and fro, his little head peeping out just enough to tantalize us with an anxiety to get hold of it. Well, children, these days hav gone from me, but they will come and go from you as they did from us. You will try and learn from all the incidents of your life as you pass on your journey to the end. After all, I think men and women are but grown-up children, and each generation learns from the past. Good-bye, darlings.

OLD MAN PAXTON.

[We are obliged to our friend for his interesting communications. He is always welcome in this Corner.—ED. C. C.]

I'd Be a Man.

Some years ago a young man was seated in his employer's drawing-room teasing his little daughter. He was then only a clerk in her father's store. At last she grew tired of his teasing and exclaimed impatiently, "If I wore as big clothes as you I'd be a man!" Her mother overheard her remark and called her little daughter to her and reprimanded her for being so naughty. The little girl left her mother's presence with tears in her eyes and went to her own room and after having a good cry, brushed away her tears and the little incident was soon forgotten by her. The young man meantime left his employer and went to another city.

A few years later this little girl, now grown to be a beautiful young lady, was returning from college to her home for a vacation and while riding on the train she was obliged to change cars. While waiting, she went to a hotel, and while there a prominent and rising young lawyer called to see her and said he wished to thank her for the favor she had done him. She said she did not remember doing him any favor. She said, "I remember you only as a clerk in my father's store some years ago, but if I ever did you a favor I do not remember it."

Upon this he referred her to the impatient remark made by her in her father's drawing-room when he was a clerk in her father's store. He told her that when any mean, low-down, or dirty trick tempted him he thought of the impatient remark made by her when a little girl in her father's drawing-room, "If I wore as big clothes as you I'd be a man!"

Coaling, Ala. WALTER R. WARD.

[Very good.—ED. C. C.]

She Talked Back at Bishop Brooks.

The only criticism that is made upon Phillips Brooks, the most talked-of man in the American pulpit, is that he speaks so rapidly that it is difficult for many people to follow him and take all his meaning. A little baby girl in his audience one Sunday expressed her opinion of his delivery. She was standing upon the seat by her mother's side, watching the parson in his pulpit robes, her blue eyes fastened on his countenance; suddenly her face wreathed itself with smiles—that rapid flow of consonants was a feat for her entertainment, and she was not to be outdone by Phillips Brooks. Clapping her little hands and striking out her little chin toward him, she shouted forth in her tiny voice, "Peter Pepper picked a peck of prickly pears," when her mother caught her down and hushed her, and the rector of Trinity preached on, unconscious of the stricture passed upon his style by his small parishioner.

Punctuation.

It is strange that the use of points for punctuation should be such a comparativly modern invention. Of the four generally used points only the period (.) dates earlier than the fifteenth century. The colon (:) is said to hav first been introduced about 1485, the comma (,) some thirty-five years later, and the semicolon (;) about 1570. It is difficult to understand how the literary world dispensed for so many centuries with the useful points, and their lack must hav added to the toil of the decipherer of written documents. When we remember what various inversions of meaning may be caused by the misplacing of a comma, we marvel how early authors contrived to escape strange misreadings of their works, in which no points guided the students.

Correspondence.

MCMINNVILLE, ORE., March 4, 1892.

MISS WIXON, Dear Friend: It is with pleasure that I write you another letter, as it has been so long since I hav written to the Corner. We received a TRUTH SEEKER last night, and there were some very nice letters in the Corner. Our school closed January 22d, and our teacher has gone to Port Townsend, Wash. Her name was Ethel Ballinger. The school will start again in April, and our teacher's name is Nettie Guild. She taught our school last summer. I am very glad they hav hired her again. Well, my birthday will soon be here and I will be ten years old. It is the 22d of March. I hope you will excuse me for writing this letter with a lead pencil.

Well, I will close my letter, hoping it will escape the waste-basket.

Your little Freethinker friend,
ELIZA A. FARMER.

TURNER, ORE., March 18, 1892.

MISS WIXON AND LITTLE FRIENDS: I thought I would write to the Corner and tell about the Presbyterian church festival here. They had declamations by little folks, singing, tableaux, supper, etc.

One tableau was a young school-marm "clinging to the cross." She tried to look pious, but only looked foolish; I suppose it did just as well. There were sixteen of the little school-girls said their prayers. It looked somewhat funny as they knelt in a semicircle in their white dresses. There has never been but one Freethought lecture in Turner that I know of.

There are many wild flowers in Oregon. Miss Wixon, I send you a piece of the Port Orfort cedar that we hav in our yard. It does not grow anywhere only on the coast of Oregon. The flower is bright pink and the cones a lovely brown.

Well, my letter is too long now, so I will quit. KATIE D. MATTESON.

[Thanks, Katie, for the fragrant cedar. We shall exhibit it next week at the meeting of our class in botany. We will tell the members that it came from a dear little girl named Katie who livs away off in Oregon.—ED. C. C.]

COALING, ALA., March 24, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Kind Friend: With pleasure I take my pen to write a few lines to the Corner, as it has been some time since I last wrote. Winter is fast passing away here, and spring is taking its place. Soon the trees will hav a new dress of green, and the whole earth will be covered in green too. We hav not had any winter here hardly. I hav not seen any snow in four years to cover the ground. I had rather liv down South where it is warm than up North where it is so cold.

We liv three miles from Coaling, a small village which had two churches until Feb. 9, 1891, when the Lord saw fit to blow one of them down, I suppose because they were teaching school in it. My brother was going to school there when it was blown down, but he did not get hurt. I suppose the Lord saw fit to save that one Infidel. But what I intended to tell was that some time back while the Rev. Mr. Jones, the Methodist preacher of Coaling, was off tending to some of the Lord's most urgent business, his little child was fatally burnt and has since died. I think if I had been the Lord I would hav taken care of his child while he was tending to my business.

I saw Mr. Jones two days after his child's death, but he did not seem to care for it. I suppose he thought it was in heaven in Abraham's bosom, and that it was better off there than here on earth. Well, I will close for fear of making my letter too long.

Yours for Freethought,
WALTER R. WARD.

MCMINNVILLE, ORE., March 4, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON, My Dear Friend: I suppose you think I hav forgotten the Corner, but no, indeed, I hav not, and never, never can.

The winter in this part of Oregon has been very pleasant indeed.

We had two small snows; one fell in December and the other in January, both of about three inches. But the sun has shone every day for over six weeks.

In the last TRUTH SEEKER I see some very nice letters. I like to read the children's letters.

A few weeks ago I received a letter from Laura Carlton, of Idaho. I answered her letter, although I never saw her.

I am glad to see that the children still keep up courage in their writing. The reason that I hav not written to the Corner in so long is, I hav been sick for about four weeks until a week or so ago.

However, I will write the oftener now.

Well, I shall hav to close for want of something to say.

Wishing you success in your good work, I remain, Yours in love forever,
LOU VINA FARMER.

[We are glad to hear from our friends, the Farmer girls, again. We were afraid they had forgotten the Corner.—ED. C. C.]

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6 50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ONLY 2 CENTS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

There has just been published for general circulation a most interesting pamphlet, containing a good likeness of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll and articles from the following well-known writers: R. G Ingersoll, Thaddeus B. Wakeman, B. F. Underwood, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Helen H. Gardener Rev. Henry Frank, Nelly Booth Simmons, A. B. Bradford, Parker Pillsbury, Lucy N. Colman, Capt. R. C. Adams, Prof. A. L. Rawson, Lyman C. Howe, Susan H. Wixon, Allen Pringle, Wm. Emmette Coleman, Harry Hoover, Mrs. M. A. Freeman, Sara Underwood, Rev. J. C. Grumbine, J. J. McCabe, Lydia R. Chase, Henry M. Taber, J. C. Watkins, Dr. Edward Montgomery, Emma Rood Tuttle, Dr. Juliet Severance, Hudson Tuttle, E. C. Walker, Judge C. B. Waite, Dyer D. Lum, Voltairine de Cleyre, Lewis G. Janes and Dr. Richard Hodgson.

The publication will be forwarded to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of an American two-cent postage stamp.

Address FREETHINKERS' MAGAZINE, Buffalo, N. Y.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

THE

LOGIC OF DEATH,

—OR,—

Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents.

THE

LOGIC OF LIFE,

—DEDUCED FROM—

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

News of the Week.

IN Russia the committee to relieve starving children is finding them often too feeble to walk to the places of distribution of soup. This drives them to eat rags and earth.

IN Alabama the Simsites, or followers of the new religion that was attempted to be established by the Sims brothers, are shooting at the regular preachers, whom they style agents of the devil.

ON the 31st ult. a tornado devastated southwestern Kansas. At Towanda, Lorena, Rose Hill, Eureka, Florence, Lewisville, and other places lives were lost. The village of De Graft was annihilated.

A LATE steamship brings news of the murder by James Bedell, of Auckland, New Zealand, of his wife and three children, under the influence of religious mania. He had for several days been talking of offering a sacrifice to the Most High.

TWENTY-FIVE thousand German Lutheran voters of Illinois hav demanded, through their representativs in convention at Chicago, the repeal of the compulsory education laws. They will make it their main campaign issue in 1892. They wish to substitute denominational for secular schools.

A RELIGIOUS maniac named Puschke, in Bulaek, Prussia, recently committed self-crucifixion. He bound his legs together, drove nails through his feet into the ground, and then, lying stretched out on his back, nailed his left hand to the ground, after which he stabbed himself repeatedly in the chest with his right hand.

A WEEK ago Mrs. Jennie Nichols, of Chicago, was taken ill. She and her sister, Miss Winnifred Jones, were believers in Christian Science, and would admit no doctor but Mrs. E. L. Stebbins, a leading and financially successful Faith Curer. Finally friends notified the police, and Dr. Van Pelt with two officers forced their way in, but the lady died a few minutes thereafter. Mrs. Stebbins has been arrested.

THE emperor of Germany has been intimidated by the resistance to his bill for denominational schools, and it has been withdrawn. This act was greeted by the clerical members of the Prussian parliament with a storm of hisses, and within twenty-four hours they combined with other members influenced by economical considerations to reject an appropriation for a new cruiser whose construction the kaiser is known to desire.

THE autopsy on Walt Whitman showed diseases which must hav killed him long ago had he not possessed exceptional vitality. His left lung was entirely gone, while of the right there was but a breathing spot left. The heart was surrounded by many small abscesses and about two and a half quarts of water. The pain in the left side that had been diagnosed as due to cancer was found to hav been caused by peritonitis. The brain was abnormally large.

IN Boston incidents like this are frequently occurring among the Faith Cure believers: A lady of this sect, of wealth and standing, took into a horsecar that contained several children her daughter suffering with scarlatina. A physician who lived near and thus knew the facts said: "Mrs. Blank, you cannot bring that child into this car. She has the scarlatina and should not be out. You shall not expose the other children here, if you do not choose to take proper care of your own child." She would not leave till forced. A health officer quickly called at her house and established quarantine.

THE Salvation Army at Eastbourne, Eng., getting a local act repealed under which the authorities and the mob were able to persecute them, has called attention to the fact that Roman Catholics are still forbidden in English law to go in procession outside their churches with robed priests, crucifixes, or other emblems. Catholic priests appearing in their robes beyond the church door or outside a private house where they are celebrating mass are liable to imprisonment. This survival from the days of Catholic penal laws has been brought to the attention of Parliament, but it is unlikely that there will be any strenuous demand to abolish it.

DURING the last two weeks several dynamite explosions hav occurred in houses in Paris. The authors are supposed to be Anarchists. One of the men whose houses hav been blown up is the public prosecutor, but others belong to various classes, having in common only the quality of being well to do. The only motiv ascribable seems to be a determination to make life unendurable on the part of those whom the Anarchists denounce as the drones and leeches of the social organism. This end may be attained, as many wealthy men hav left Paris, and persons connected with the administration of justice hav become so unpopular with landlords that they can hardly retain lodgings.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW. WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.

Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP.
DARWINISM.
DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION.
JESUS NOT PERFECT.
UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.

Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.

Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.

Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.

Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.

Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.

Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.

God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.

Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.

Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.

Is Spiritualism True? 10c.

Man's True Saviors. 10c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.

Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.

Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.

Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.

Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.

Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.

What Is Right? 10c.

What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.

Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.

Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.

J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.

T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.

J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.

Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.

A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.

Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.

J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Lonisiana.

Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.

N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.

Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.

S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.

Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.

John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.

Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.

John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland.

Oregon.

B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.

H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.

Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.

L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 346 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.

John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.

Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.

Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.

W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.

A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Brnno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Brnno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

The Gods. A beautiful pamphlet of forty pages, with likeness of Ingersoll. Price, 20 cents. Eight copies for $1.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J. D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

MAN does not stand outside nor above nature, but wholly and thoroughly in her midst, and the great and mischievous error that all nature was created for his sake and for his use and enjoyment must be looked upon as exploded, just the same as science has forever done away with the antiquated notion of the importance of our little earth as the center of the universe.—Büchner.

LET us settle ourselves, and work and wedge our feet downward through the mud and slush of opinion, and prejudice, and tradition, and delusion, and appearance, that alluvion which covers the globe, through Paris and London, through New York and Boston and Concord, through church and state, through poetry and philosophy and religion, till we come to a hard bottom and rocks in place, which we can call reality, and say, This is, and no mistake.—Thoreau.

ITALY, with its popes and bandits, with its superstition and ignorance, with its sanctified beggars, is a Christian nation; but in a little while—in a few days—when according to the prophecy of Garibaldi, priests with spades in their hands will dig ditches to drain the Pontine marshes; in a little while, when the pope leaves the Vatican, and seeks the protection of a nation he has denounced—asking alms of intended victims; when the nuns shall marry, and the monasteries shall become factories, and the whirl of wheels shall take the place of drowsy prayers—then, and not until then, will Italy be—not a Christian nation, but great, prosperous, and free.—Ingersoll.

PEOPLE who never think, frequently inquire of those who do think, what has been the use of philosophy? To destroy in England the religious rage which brought Charles I. to the scaffold; to deprive an archbishop in Sweden of the power, with a papal bull in his hand, of shedding the blood of the nobility; to preserve in Germany religious peace, by holding up theological disputes to ridicule; finally, to extinguish in Spain the hideous and devouring flames of the Inquisition. Priests of Rome! it compels you to suppress your bull "In cœna domini," that monument of impudence and stupidity. Nations! it humanizes your manners. Kings, it gives you instruction!—Voltaire.

At the very best, only a handful of Protestants thoroughly believe in your Book, O Lord. I hav shown you that the Papists, while professing considerable admiration for yourself, regard the traditions of their Church as far more important than your Book, and that papal anathema after anathema has been launched at the British and Foreign Bible Society and all such organizations for the dissemination of the Scriptures among the people. Even your own chosen race, the Jews, did not by any means consider your literary merits of the highest order. They cadged you about in a shittimwood box, and when you and they got up in the world their Solomon (a monarch very fond of you and the girls) built you a temple—not by any means one of the biggest or grandest temples on the globe, but a gorgeous and stupendous edifice for a place like Jerusalem and for a God like you. But even the Jews themselvs did not venture to claim for you the foremost place as author and hagiographist Their Talmudic Mishna and Gemera they considered better than your Law and superior to your prophets; and "The Bible is like water, the Mishna is like wine, and the Gemera is like spiced wine," was an apothegm among their Rabbis.—Saladin in God and His Book.

Now, it is absolutely certain that portions of the Bible, and those important portions relating to the creation of the world and of man, are not true, and, therefore, not inspired. It is certain that the sun, moon, stars, and earth were not created as the author of Genesis supposed them to hav been created, and that the first man, whose paleolithic implements are found in caves and river gravel of immense antiquity, was a very different being from the Adam placed in the Garden of Eden. It is certain that no universal deluge ever took place since man existed, and that the animal life existing in the world, and shown by fossil remains to hav existed for untold ages, could by no possibility hav originated from pairs of animals living together for forty days in the ark, and radiating from a mountain in Armenia. Another test of inspiration is afforded by the presence of contradictions. If one writer says that certain events occurred in Galilee, while another says that they took place in Jerusalem, they cannot both be inspired. They may both be reminiscences of real events, but they are obviously imperfect and not inspired reminiscences, and require to be tested by the same process of reasoning as we should apply in endeavoring to unravel the truth from the confused and contradictory evidences of conflicting historians.—Samuel Laing.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—THE STRAIGHT; so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—THE JUST.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

CONTENTS:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Co-operation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial
Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

44 VICK'S SEEDS.

NOVELTIES

"Brilliant" Poppy, packet ..... 15c.
Roses, Waban and DeGraw, both for 50c.
6 Rare Chrysanthemums, each 50c.; set $2.50
6 Choice Geraniums, each 25c.; set 1.00
Sweet Corn "Golden Nugget," packet 15c.
Garden Pea "Charmer," packet 15c
Potato "American Wonder," per lb., 30c.
Pansies, our superb strain, look almost human packet ..... 50c.
Pansy, Extra choice, packet 25c

Any one not now a subscriber can have VICK'S MAGAZINE one year free, who orders $1 worth from us before May 1st.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE, 1892. One writer says: "Stands at head of all charmer catalogues." Every person interested in Plants, Flowers or Vegetables, should have one. Price only ten cents, which may be deducted from first order.

A packet of 40-lb. Oat FREE with each order when desired.

44 JAMES VICK'S SONS, Rochester, N.Y.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism. R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

DOWN THEY GO!

Best make American Stemwind Watches. 17 jewels, adjusted, pat. regulator, in silverine case, only $11; in 3 ounce coin silver, $16; 4 ounce, $15 (a few years ago $60). In best 14 kt. filled gold cases, open face, $20; hunting, $23 to $28; 14 kt. solid gold, $40 to $100; same, not adjusted, $2 less; 11 jwls. $3.50, and 7 jwls. $5 less (lower grade watches, $5, $4, and $2.50).

THE PERFECTED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH, much finer than above, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position 16 jwls. and all modern improvements, nickel movement, cased as above, $8 more, gilt mov't. $6 more. No one else in the world sends out so good a watch at the price.

LADIES' GOLD HUNTING AMERICAN WATCHES, latest styles, best filled, 7 jwls. $17; 11 jwls. $18.50; 15 jwls. $25; 14 kt. solid gold, $10 to $100 more. All sent prepaid, kept in order one year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.

DIAMONDS: in rings, pins, drops, studs, etc., $10; $15; $25; $50; $100 to $1,000 per set. Cash refunded, if not 20 per cent below regular price, any time within one year.

WEDDING RINGS: Plain, chased, with pearls, emeralds, rubies, moonstones, opals, garnets, turquoise, solitaires or combinations, a specialty.

SUNDRIES: Rogers Bros.' triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; tea spoons, $1.80; tables, $3 49; best 'spects. in the world, $1; pebbles, $2; 14 kt. gold, $5 more (send line of finest print you can read without glasses 14 inches from eyes); gold-headed canes, $8; $10; $15; $20. Best razor—a luxury—$2. Solid silver spoons, $1.70 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, silver, $1.25 to $2. Tea sets, $20 to $40; everything in the line of fancy table silver, novelties, plush, and art goods, gold pens, etc. All sent prepaid (except cutlery) subject to exchange or cash back.

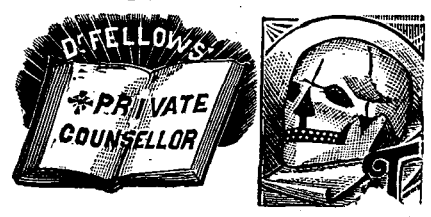
OTTO WETTSTEIN,
Established 1857. Rochelle, Ill.

Send for price lists, beautiful cards in colors and gold of my Freethought badges (large and small), tracts, etc. Free.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.



ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

DROPSY

TREATED FREE

Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A BIBLICAL WAY TO BE HAPPY.

Happy shall he be, that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones.—Psalms cxxxvii, 9.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY
BETTER THAN
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.
By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - - 10 cents.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.
3	"	Thanksgiving.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.
14	"	Children and the Church.
10	"	Woman and the Church.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.
2	"	The Bible and Science.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.
2	"	Prayer.
10	"	The Creeds.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.
2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	"	Missionaries.
1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	"	The Church and Slavery.
2	"	Priests and Politics.
4	"	Ireland and the Church.
2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
12	"	Some Allegories.
3	"	Heaven.
6	"	Hell.
7	"	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y

Pocket Theology.

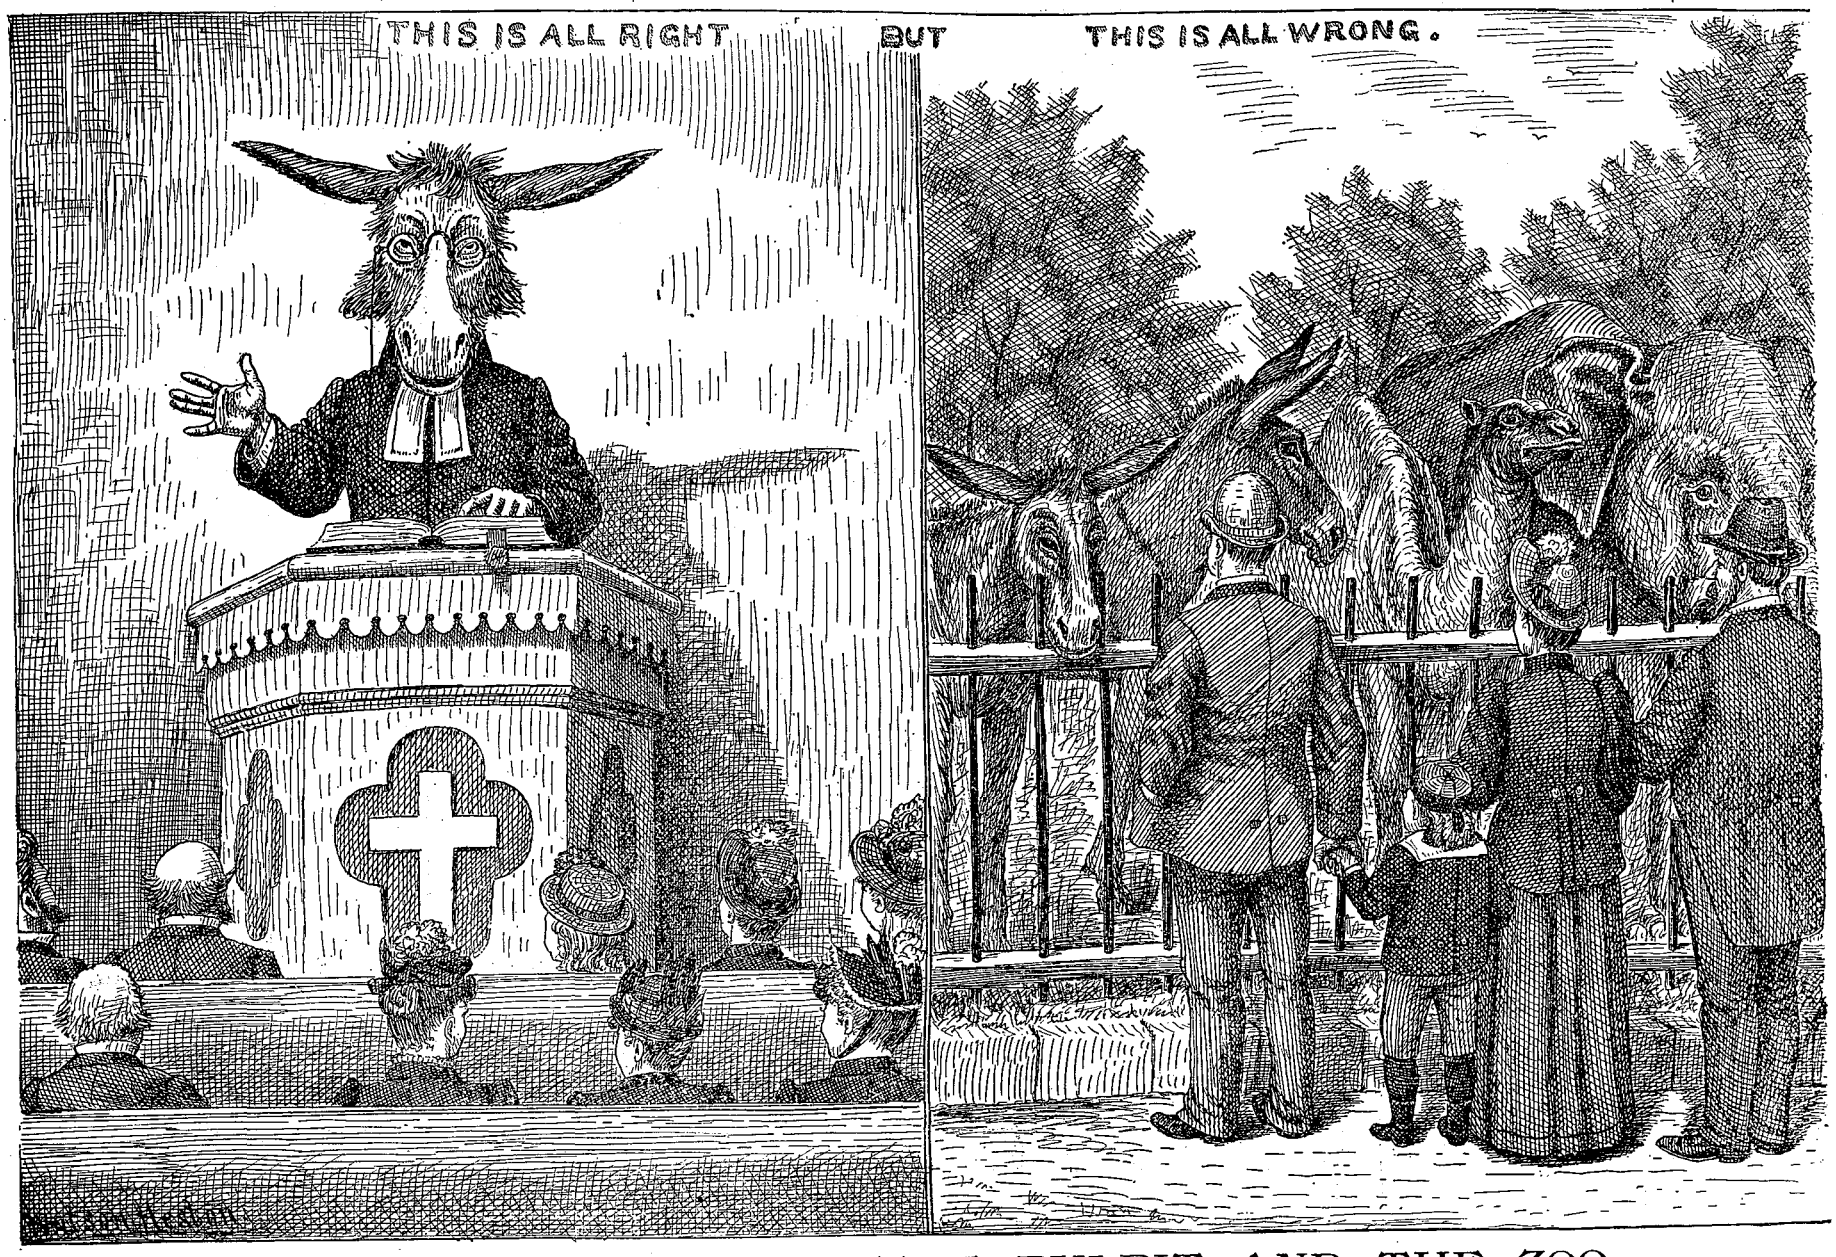
By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."



By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - - 50 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 16. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 16, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

SUNDAY AMUSEMENTS—THE PULPIT AND THE ZOO.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon: The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY —and— RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, ... 10 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., ... $1.50.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, ... 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price. 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF

ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

in the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles."

By M. F. Billings.

Price, [illegible]. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 16. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 16, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 16, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Immensely Funny and Full of Rich Lessons.

From the Better Way.

"Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," by Watson Heston, New York. The Truth Seeker Company. This is a compact, neatly bound, and well-printed volume of 394 pages profusely illustrated with cartoons, showing up the humorous side of the old Bible stories of creation, fall of man, etc., and is gotten up in Mr. Heston's own inimitable style. The story is taken from the beginning of the Genesaical account and embellished here and there by apt comparisons and conclusions; carries the reader through all the absurdities of the Pentateuch, finally ending with a full and complete exposition of the Jonah-gourd-whale combination. It is immensely funny and we hav seen nothing like it in the whole course of ridicule upon these subjects. It is safe to say that no unshelled orthodox minister could peruse this book and not laugh and be the better for it. Those who hav followed Mr. Heston's cartoon work in THE TRUTH SEEKER can hardly fail to find rich lessons in the guise of mirth and ridicule in "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." Price, cloth, $1.50; boards, $1. For sale by the Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Spiritualists.

Mr. Henry K. Carroll, one of the Independent's staff, was appointed by the superintendent of the census to collect and tabulate the church statistics for the census of 1890. His labors are not yet completed, but in his latest bulletin is this about Spiritualists:

"What is known as modern Spiritualism began with 'demonstrations' in the Fox family in Hydesville, N. Y., in March, 1848. The same phenomena had been common in Shaker communities before that date, and, indeed, in almost all ages and among many different people; but it was then that these demonstrations, generally in the form of rappings, began to be interpreted as communications from the disembodied spirits of men and women who had, in the ordinary course of nature, passed away, but whose spirits were still in a living and activ state. From this time individuals began to investigate these spirit manifestations, circles began to be formed, mediums were discovered, lecturers recognized, and a literature established.

"Spiritualists claim that the miracles of Christ are explained by the central doctrin of their belief, and they regard the demonstrations of Spiritualism as establishing by evidence the fact of a future life. They do not hold that God is a personal being, but that he exists in all things. Eternal progression is the law of the spirit world, and every individual will attain supreme wisdom and unalloyed happiness.

"A few Spiritualist societies employ permanent speakers, but usually they appoint lecturers for limited terms, varying from a week to several months. A large proportion of the lecturers are mediums, who are believed to speak under the influence or direction of the spirit who guides or controls them. They follow the scriptural injunction, 'Take no thought how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak.' When a lecturer appears before an audience, therefore, he asks that a subject be given him, and when he receives it begins to speak upon it without hesitation. Summer gatherings, or camp-meetings, which continue from one to ten weeks, hav become prominent among the Spiritualists. In 1891 twenty-two such meetings were held.

"The Spiritualists report 334 organizations, with thirty regular church edifices, not including halls, pavilions, and other places owned or occupied by them. There are 45,030 members, and the value of the property reported, which includes camp-grounds as well as church edifices, pavilions, etc., is $573,650. Not many of the halls are owned by them. There are members in thirty-six states, besides the District of Columbia and the territories of Oklahoma and Utah. Among the states Massachusetts has the greatest number, 7,345; New York stands second, with 6,351; and Pennsylvania third with 4,569.

SUMMARY BY STATES AND TERRITORIES.

States, etc.	Number of organizations.	Church edifices.	Seating capacity.	Halls, etc.	Seating capacity.	Value of church property.	Communicants or members.
Arkansas	1	1	300	....	.....	$ 1,000	25
California	20	1	250	19	4,825	19,325	1,869
Colorado	2	..	.....	2	1,000	600	275
Connecticut	19	4	1,650	15	3,800	20,810	2,354
District of Columbia	3	..	.....	3	900	.....	475
Florida	2	..	.....	2	200	750	65
Georgia	2	..	.....	2	300	.....	169
Illinois	7	1	350	6	1,955	10,500	1,314
Indiana	5	..	.....	4	800	4,850	715
Iowa	13	..	.....	12	3,250	23,075	2,613
Kansas	9	..	.....	9	1,200	.....	627
Kentucky	1	..	.....	1	400	.....	300
Louisiana	3	..	.....	3	350	400	120
Maine	21	..	.....	21	7,775	15,650	2,562
Maryland	6	..	.....	6	1,320	.....	665
Massachusetts	61	4	4,250	58	14,390	269,710	7,345
Michigan	27	1	500	25	4,625	11,500	2,565
Minnesota	3	..	.....	3	1,050	.....	500
Missouri	5	3	2,500	3	1,300	13,100	853
Montana	1	..	.....	1	.....	.....	20
Nebraska	4	..	.....	4	500	.....	290
New Hampshire	6	..	.....	6	1,500	.....	672
New Jersey	2	..	.....	2	450	.....	100
New York	34	1	1,500	32	7,240	33,250	6,351
Ohio	25	2	1,000	22	4,902	3,350	2,174
Oklahoma	1	..	.....	1	200	.....	26
Oregon	6	..	.....	6	1,040	930	751
Pennsylvania	12	7	5,650	7	1,175	58,600	4,569
Rhode Island	4	..	.....	4	400	.....	420
South Carolina	1	..	.....	1	.....	.....	20
Tennessee	6	4	2,000	4	.....	36,000	1,075
Texas	1	..	.....	1	.....	.....	29
Utah	1	..	.....	1	200	.....	80
Vermont	10	1	500	9	3,425	23,250	1,966
Virginia	1	..	.....	1	50	.....	12
Washington	4	..	.....	6	1,000	.....	565
West Virginia	1	..	.....	1	100	.....	65
Wisconsin	3	..	.....	3	900	27,000	354
Wyoming	1	..	.....	1	.....	.....	50
Total	334	30	20,450	307	72,522	$573,650	45,030

There is reason to believe that Mr. Carroll's labors are more useful and accurate when collecting church statistics than in cataloging the Spiritualists. Without doubt it is within moderate bounds to say there are nearer ten times the number of Spiritualists in the country than the number he givs. There is not a state or territory in the United States without its quota of Spiritualists, and probably there are more than forty-five thousand in New York alone.

But what is a "communicant" of Spiritualism? Does he eat ghosts?

The definition of the Spiritualistic creed is well enough for about fifty per cent of the faith, those of the effete East, but in the boundless West they take no miracles in theirs, nor do they consider Christ to hav been the boss medium; they regard him, rather, as they do Apollonius of Tyana.

We do not think that any wing of the Spiritualists will be satisfied with Mr. Carroll's enumeration and explanation.

The Freedom of Worship Bill.

The Assembly Judiciary Committee to whom was referred the Freedom of Worship bill, has reported that measure favorably, notwithstanding the arguments against it, and it nearly passed in the house. It was sent back to the committee for amendment, and may come up for a final vote any day. Asked why it was reported favorably a Catholic member of the committee replied, "We are going to put that bill through this session." It is the first time for many years that the Democrats hav had a majority in both houses, and the Democracy being under control of Tammany Hall, Archbishop Corrigan is determined to use his advantage.

The bill has been fought by both Freethinkers and Protestants, and it is notable that the arguments of the former most impressed the committee, and had they not been under the domination of Corrigan, through their subserviency to party, they might hav reported differently. They asked Mr. McCabe for his argument in print, and also for a brief, which he furnished, and of which the following are the points maintained by his argument:

The state has no right to patronize religion.

Every person's religion is his own private affair.

The state cannot be concerned about the religious opinions of any person.

The property of the people cannot be used for religious or sectarian purposes.

The state cannot provide for the propagation of religious or sectarian dogmas or ceremonies.

The state cannot appropriate money for sectarian or religious purposes. (Every religious denomination is a sect.)

The state can hav no religious wards.

The state cannot recognize religious guardianship.

Religious freedom is guaranteed to all mankind, that is, every man, woman, and child.

A law providing for the violation of any of the foregoing principles, would be the adoption of some feature of church and state.

The proposed law would provide for the violation of all of them.

This appears to hav been the only argument to which the committee gave much attention, and Mr. McCabe has laid the Freethinkers of the state under obligation to him for his efforts. He has given his time and brain in their service freely and almost alone.

Of course this is an uphill fight. But whether one or a dozen or a hundred repulses are encountered the struggle must go on until the right shall come uppermost.

A Good Christian Medico.

A fair illustration of the imbecility to which belief in Christianity and the Bible reduces a man naturally mentally deficient is Dr. J. A. Larrabee, of Louisville, Ky. The doctor recently lectured to the students of Medical College at that place, mostly Y. M. C. A. young men, on the subject of "The Bible as a Medical Book." What he said is so funny that it is worth preserving.

"The Bible is true in every particular," began the doctor, "in geology, astronomy, and the other sciences, but especially in medicin. It contains all that has been or will be known on the subject. It is not obsolete but fully abreast of the times." As examples, he said, "The Bible proclaimed the principle of anesthetics when Adam was put to sleep and his rib taken out to form Eve; the principle of the circulation of the blood when Job said, 'Out of the heart issue the streams of life;' of the principles of microbes in the verse which says, 'Where moth and dust doth corrupt.'" He then made an appeal for the Bible in the medical library, and said it was of special value to medical students because they came in contact with so much misery and suffering. In looking about through the Hospital College he had been pleased to find a Bible in every room which he entered. He attacked the prevalent idea that the medical profession tended to Materialism, saying that he believed there were more real Christian men among physicians than among almost any other class. In conclusion, he advocated the use of the Bible among the medical students as a book par excellence, a directory of all useful knowledge.

Bill Nye and Mark Twain must look to their laurels as humorous writers. Dr. Larrabee is funnier than both of them.

Sunday and the World's Fair.

The committee on the World's Fair of the House of Representativs devoted two days of last week to hearing arguments for and against closing the Fair on Sundays. The Sabbatarians were first heard. Dr. Ramsdell, of this city, requested the committee to insert in the bill making an appropriation to aid the Exposition, a provision that no part of the money appropriated shall be paid until the corporation organized under the laws of the state of Illinois, known as the World's Exposition of 1892 and the World's Columbian commission, shall stipulate in writing that the Exposition shall not be opened to the public on Sundays. This provision he supported with the usual speech. A Philadelphia minister presented the petition of seventy-two churches of Philadelphia, favoring the closing of the Fair on Sundays. Col. Elliott F. Shepard, president of the American Sabbath Union, closed the hearing in favor of closing the Fair. The Christian sentiment of the country, he said, desired to hav inserted in the bill a proviso that the Exposition should not be opened to the public on Sundays. Each Congressman, he said, who voted for Sunday closing would cover himself with glory in the eyes of the nation. A member of the committee asked if he would print the names of all those voting for the measure in his paper. Mr. Shepard replied that he would, and that their names would go broadcast all over the country and be flashed abroad by the cable.

The opponents of this Sunday closing were the Seventh Day Adventists, who spoke not for Sunday opening but against the authority of Congress to legislate in the matter. A. L. Moon, of Chicago, representing the National Religious Liberty Association, was the first speaker. He said he did not appear to urge that the Fair be kept open on Sunday, but simply to oppose such legislation by Congress. The Fair was to be held in Illinois, which had state laws and regulations governing the keeping of the Sabbath, and he denied the right of Congress to infringe upon state laws and rights. Professor McKee, of the American Sentinel, also spoke in oppositi n to having Congress take any steps concerning closing the Fair on Sundays. Mr. Fifield, of the National Religious Liberty Association, argued against the right of Congress to legislate regarding a religious matter. All who had appeared in support of Sunday closing simply presented the religious view of the question. They did not believe Wednesday a holiday, but they did believe Sunday one, and they wanted a Congressional recognition of their belief. They claimed that they represented fifty million Christians in the country, and that they could not be bought by gold. If this was true there was no need of Congress to legislate to close the Exposition, as there would be no one to go to it, and it would close of its own accord. Mr. Fifield cited the case where a circus had shown in a town on Sunday and attracted such a large number of church-goers that the ministers complained and asked for the passage of laws prohibiting such an occurrence again. The Christians, he said, were unable to stand the competition, and it was the same case in regard to the Fair. Lewis Abraham, of Washington, spoke against the closing of the Fair on Sunday and the right of Congress to so decide. The church, he said, were crying that they were unable to enforce their laws, and were asking Congress to do so by military or police power. They wanted the fourth Commandment repealed, something that was never done before. Their proposition was a stab at the Constitution and a scheme to entirely revolutionize it. In conclusion, he said that in case the Fair was closed on Sunday by Congress they should not stop there, but should close all public places the government helped to support.

During the past three months we hav sent out a great many thousands of the letters to Congressmen, and we hav evidence that a great proportion of them hav been signed and sent to the representativs at Washington. We hav also supplied each representativ with literature on the "Sabbath" question. This is important, because the voting will probably be decided by the leaning of the voter toward or against Sabbatarianism, as there will probably not be much logrolling on this Sunday amendment to the appropriation bill.

Another One!

Canada is a very fine country. That is to say, it has a very fine government. Likewise a moral government, as also a pious. And if anything offends its piety, why, then that thing is immoral. To be sure.

Mr. R. M. Morrison livs in Quamichin, B. C., and he takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. He has also paid for a Bible Picture Book, but that he doesn't take. Quite contrary. The book he knows is good, because he has seen it so asserted in THE TRUTH SEEKER by those who hav taken it, but still he won't take it, because:

"MEMORANDUM.

"To R. M. MORRISON, ESQ., "Quamichin, "B. C.	CUSTOMS, CANADA, WINNIPEG, March 10, 1892.

"Sir:

"One package containing a book, entitled 'Stories of the Old Testament,' from New York to your address, has been detained here as an 'immoral work,' and prohibited under the law from circulation. Yours truly,

"R. J. JONES,
"for Coll."

Mr. Morrison, who is an irreverent man, without proper respect for the Lord's agents, says he has asked "the holy bloke what he means by alleging immorality in the book when it is all taken from the old holy slush-pot, the Bible." But the agent of the collector has, so far, declined to say. And we are sorry to say that we know of no way to compel the delivery of the book except by appeal to the Minister of Customs at Ottawa, or hav it sent to some port of entry where the customs clerks are not fools.

Dr. Parkhurst's Terrible Fall.

In his anxiety to reform the morals of this town the Rev. Mr. Parkhurst has lowered himself to the level of Anthony Comstock. This is to be regretted, for his exposure of dishonest Tammany officials is a public service of real importance and deserving of commendation. But, unfortunately, he is the president of one of the private societies whose agents thrive by such dubious ways, and Mr. Parkhurst must pay the penalty visited upon like offenders since the day of old Dog Tray.

In a suit to dispossess a woman charged with keeping a disorderly house Mr. Parkhurst was called as a witness. He testified that he, one of the "agents" of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, and a young male member of his congregation, visited the place, drank beer three times, and paid five women fifteen dollars to exhibit their nude persons in a dance, or "circus," as Dr. Parkhurst termed it. They were in the room over an hour and the dance lasted about half that time.

This is where Dr. Parkhurst fell to the level of Comstock. In 1878 Comstock, "agent" of the rival society, hired three Greene street women for $14.50 to do the same thing. Comstock swore he saw the girls fifteen or twenty minutes. Officer Sheldon and "Agent" Britton swore they were all in the room one hour and a quarter. The notable differences in the two incidents were that wine was drunk in Greene street and beer in 27th street, and that Comstock arrested the three girls and they were tried for doing what they had been paid for doing. After hearing the evidence Judge Gildersleeve said his "court could not be used to fasten a stigma on the name of a worthy man, a captain of the police, for the purpose of carrying out any man's scheme of private vengeance." Comstock's girls were acquitted, and the woman against whom Parkhurst testified was not convicted of keeping a disorderly house, though it is pretty evident that she did.

Dr. Parkhurst as a citizen fighting the dishonest and disreputable Tammany Hall officials is entitled to the respect and aid of all good citizens. As a dirty detectiv of a private nosing society he should be scorned and shunned. The women he hired to degrade themselvs are entitled to quite as much respect as he.

The good evangelical Christians of Tennessee are not satisfied with having hounded R. M. King to his grave, but hav sworn out papers against five other Seventh Day Adventists, and the sheriff can arrest them any time he thinks best for the glory of his God.

Tammany Hall aldermen are intelligent creatures. The law of this state requires the board to meet annually on the first Monday in July to receive the tax rolls, and as the first Monday in July this year falls on Independence Day Alderman Mead yesterday offered a resolution requesting the legislature to permit the board to meet on July 1st. After several suggestions and improvements from other members President Arnold put the resolution into this shape and it was adopted without dissent:

"Resolved, That the state legislature be and is hereby respectfully requested to pass an amendment to said act, enabling the board of aldermen, whenever the first Monday of July shall fall upon a Sunday or legal holiday, to meet at noon on the following day for the purpose of receiving said assessment rolls."

When Monday falls on Sunday Tammany Hall may hav a membership which knows how to write a resolution.

Anthony Comstock appears to harbor a grudge against his old victim John A. Lant, and with the help of a woman who figures often in sensational cases, is trying to again get him into jail. Mr. Lant is publishing a local paper at Tarrytown, N. Y., and in his issue of April 1st he relates that he was arrested by Comstock and a United States marshal charged by "Minnie Irving" and her mother with having written her improper letters. The charge, Mr. Lant needlessly explains, is absolutely false. At the hearing before Commissioner Shields several of Minnie Irving's neighbors testified that they would not believe what she said, and the following self-explanatory letter corroborates them:

"UNITED STATES POST OFFICE,
"TARRYTOWN, WESTCHESTER CO., N. Y.
"March 31, 1892.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE WORLD, Sir: I notice in the World of to-day that, in an interview with a reporter, Miss Minna Irving states I advised her to commence proceedings against Mr. J. A. Lant for mailing an obscene letter. This is untrue. I never advised her to commence such proceedings against him, nor did I express an opinion as to who wrote the letter. I did not recognize it as Mr. Lant's handwriting, nor did I believe it was, nor do I now believe it. Respectfully, N. H. Odell, Ass't Postmaster."

It looks very much as though "Minnie Irving" wants more notoriety, and Comstock desires to feed the grudge he harbors against Lant.

The Congregationalists of the Park avenue church of Minneapolis hav found a way to rob infants and make it pleasant for the infants. There are one hundred and fifty of them in the Sunday-school, and this is the way they are held up: "Who has had a birthday this week?" inquires the cheery superintendent from the platform where she stands enthroned amidst charts and pictures and other devices. "Ah, it's Paul and Maud this week, they may hold the platters." The little ones mentioned march to the front and proudly hold the copper plates while the Sunday procession of little ones file by to a merry march making a jolly clatter dropping their pennies and singing:

"Hear the pennies dropping,
Listen as they fall;
Every one for Jesus,
He will get them all."

We very much doubt if Jesus gets it all, or any of it. But his priests do, which is the same thing.

In the Southwest.

News and Notes.

I found Corsicana a delightful place. It is called "The Pride of the Prairie" and "The Central City of the Lone Star State." It is the county-seat of Navarro county. It is in the midst of a fine fertil country. Cotton and corn can be raised in abundance. Peaches, apples, plums, pears, and grapes are the fruits which the land produces. It is a bright, growing city. It has handsome residences and public buildings. There are eleven churches also, and religion cannot complain but that it has a fair chance. Corsicana is a pretty fair representativ of the wealth, intelligence, and the mixed and somewhat cosmopolitan nature of the people of Texas. It has a large Liberal element, but this element is unorganized and heterogeneous. The lawyers and business men are mainly outside of the Christian pale, but as a general thing it is considered best not to say anything on the matter.

Comrade Mansfield, formerly of Louisiana, with whom I hav corresponded for the last ten years—and who is a stanch Liberal wherever he goes—wrote to me at Calvert and wanted I should try a campaign at Corsicana. I did so, and was glad to greet after so many years this splendid ally. I arrived at Corsicana on Monday and arrangements were immediately made for lectures on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at the city hall. Although the time was but short in which to advertise, the number present was much beyond my expectation. If I could hav stayed one night more I am sure I should hav had a crowded house. I am satisfied that Corsicana is one of the best points for Liberalism in the state. Ten years ago Mr. Shaw opened the way here, and since then Freethought has been on the increase.

Friend Mansfield has had to keep the flag along the frontier in a part of the South where old-fashioned orthodoxy is pretty well established. This is the first time he has had a chance to listen to a Liberal lecture. In his youth while in London he was on the point of joining the army of Garibaldi at the same time that Stevens did, but being only a boy the parental powers forbade. He had to wait until he came to this country before he could enlist under the flag of liberty.

Mr. Ed Church, cashier of the First National bank, is not afraid to be a pronounced Liberal, and his wife is equally brave and enthusiastic. I enjoyed the hospitality of their home, where the shadow of superstition lingers not, and the mind can expand in the sunshine of freedom. They were formerly devoted Christians, but science was too powerful for faith. There are five children in this family circle, and they are left to the dictates of reason and humanity. It was a pleasure to meet with such genial friends. S. D. Curtis, formerly of Toledo, O., is one of the foremost Liberals of this place. In Toledo he was in the ranks of advanced thought, and has never taken any backward step. He has been a stanch supporter of the Liberal cause in Texas. His wife is one of the brightest and most influential advocates of Secular principles, but I was unable to make her acquaintance on account of sickness.

James Garrity, president of the First National bank; the Ballew Bros., members of the bar, and others of the legal fraternity, and many business men of the city I was pleased to find in our ranks and ready to lend a hand. I was sorry that circumstances did not permit me to remain longer in this promising field. I hav received a cordial invitation to take this in on my next trip, and I certainly shall do so. I hav faith in the prosperity of Corsicana, and that with its material growth in the midst of a beautiful country the flag of Freethought will always be flying.

I leave Corsicana Thursday, March 31st, for Austin by way of Waco. I hav a couple of hours' lay-over at the latter place, and the time passes by in the genial company of J. D. Shaw, of the Independent Pulpit, who for a decade has been pushing Texas along the line of Liberal progress. This has been a hard year, but he bates no jot of heart or hope. He maintains his own, although business has not been so dull in Texas for the last fifteen years. There are better times coming, however.

I arrive at Austin, the capital, on Thursday evening. It is full of politicians. The legislature is in session. The hotels are crowded with motley groups. Here is the country member, and the city official, and the lobbyist, and the man who is trying to make his mark, his maiden speech, etc.; and here is the veteran campaigner who knows everybody in the state and shakes hands profusely; and here is the little crowd of story-tellers and jokists, and the corridors resound. It is a novel and attractiv picture. One sees a good deal of human nature in these political gatherings. In spite of humbug there is also the genuin sparkle. Rogues are here and honest men too.

Friday morning Judge J. P. Richardson finds me at the hotel and givs a warm welcome to the Secular Pilgrim. I am glad to meet this veteran, who in every way almost has been fighting the battles of freedom for the last half century. He is a Massachusetts man, first of Cambridge, and then of Boston. Long years ago he was with Seaver & Mendum, and joined in the Freethought meetings of the "Hub," where "cranks" of every sort did congregate, but where many a spark of truth was flashed forth. He was afterward in the army with Banks; later, with Sheridan in the splendid campaign of Shenandoah valley, where he received a wound from which he has never fully recovered; then was transferred to the regular army, was judge-advocate with Canby, and then judge in the civil courts of Texas. All the time he has been a thoroughgoing Infidel, and is still at the front although seventy years and more of age. He is president of the Texas Liberal Association, and proposes to work as long as he livs, for he sees the vast importance of Freethought, that it alone in the minds of the people can solve the gigantic problems of industry and social life, and save the republic from one of the bloodiest and most destructiv of revolutions. Judge Richardson is a thorough student of history and philosophy, sees the trend of things, and understands the mighty dangers that confront the liberties of the world. I hav enjoyed my intercourse with this gray campaigner, whose well-furnished mind and extensiv experience in camps and courts givs one a new insight into the demands of the time and the force of human thought.

The judge took me to the capitol, an imposing and most magnificent building at the head of Congress avenue. I hav seen nothing more superb, more symmetrical, more majestic in its hight and grandeur, than this vast and towering edifice. Congress avenue sweeps upward toward the capitol, which is on a stately elevation, and as from the busy street you look upon its imperial architecture it presents one of the most brilliant and lofty scenes that could excite the human imagination. One might dream this were, indeed, the temple of justice, as the golden sunshine touches its glorious dome and illuminates the figure of Liberty that almost seems to melt in the blue and shining air.

It is, of course, different when you come inside and look upon the men who make the laws—a nondescript assembly. You wonder how some men "got there." Still there are sharp-looking men, and clean-looking men—men who seem built to command, and who are courageous for the truth as they understand it. Among these I was pleased to shake hands with Judge Gerald, of Waco, a politician with backbone and convictions, and who is brave enough to fight the wrong single-handed if need be. He has made some of the best speeches of the session, and is recognized as a man of power. He opposed, in an effectiv address, the appointment of a chaplain, and has taken a bold stand in regard to the enactment of Sabbath laws. He is talked of as successor to Mills, and a better man could not be found in the district.

I was also pleased to meet with Mr. R. H. Waters, member of the legislature from Calvert way.

I did not hav very large audiences at Austin. I suppose there is too much politics in the air. However, I hav enjoyed myself very much with the people here. I lectured on Saturday night, Sunday morning, and Sunday evening.

Sunday afternoon friend Taylor, who has been in this country for forty years—a pioneer of Freethought all the time—took me to the big dam which is destined, they say, to be the pride and glory of Austin. It is an immense piece of masonry across the Colorado river. It is sixty feet high. By means of this bulwark a lake thirty miles long will be formed, rolling away into the fastnesses of the hills, and navigable for steamships all its length. It will create a vast water power for the benefit of the city, for electric lights, factories, etc. It will cost a million and a half dollars. It is expected to boom the city, and certainly if it is completed it will form one of the most magnificent places in the world. The scenery will be lovely all along the winding path of the waters. It will be as if a stretch of the Hudson river were transplanted into the heart of Texas.

This is not a very religious enterprise, for they not only work on Sunday, heaving the big stones into their places, but much profane language greets the eye. There is the Dam railway, the Dam Hotel, the Dam saloon, the Dam restaurant, the Dam cigar, etc. It is dam on every side. It must be quite a scandal to the pious soul.

I also went to the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, a spacious and beautiful building on the other side of the river, in which there are two hundred inmates. The view from this point of the capitol, three hundred feet high—the wooded hills around, the sweeping river, the elegant dwellings—is one of the most attractiv I hav ever witnessed. Austin is destined to be one of the handsomest capitals on the continent.

Mr. A. L. Teagarden, secretary of the Liberal Association of Texas, Mr. Graves, and many others, hav made this visit to Austin one of the pleasantest of the trip.

The Austin Liberal Society meets every Sunday morning and is doing a good work. The young men connected with the university are becoming interested in Freethought. As a center of Liberalism Austin will one day be among the foremost, if its present elements are sufficiently harmonious and constructiv. If needed anywhere Freethought is needed here beneath the shadow of this mighty capitol to make the golden star that shines over its lofty pedestal the saving light of liberty and progress.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Austin, April 3, 1892.

Lectures and Meetings.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, April 17th, at 3 o'clock, W. Robinson, of New Brunswick, will lecture. Subject, "Food and Health."

THE Society of Human Progress meets Sunday evenings at 8 Union square, for social greetings at 7:30; lecture at 8 (sharp), by Dr. Duren J. H. Ward; concert at 8:45, and sociable at 9:30. All inclined to coöperate in Liberal movements invited.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club lectures for April are as follows. The club meets at 220 East 15th street:

April 15th, "Solitude of Self," Elizabeth Cady Stanton;
April 22d, "Religion and Morality," Henry Rowley;
April 29th, "Lunacy Real and Factitious, and Its Treatment," Albert Bach.

Business meeting and election of officers after lecture, on April 29th.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Brookhaven, Miss.	Apr. 16, 17	Boston	May 8
Chicago	" 24	Montreal	" 15
Massillon, O.	May 1	Boulder City, Col.	June 5
New York	" 6

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Columbus, O.	Apr. 10–17	Angola, Ind.	May 30, 31
Cincinnati, O.	" 24	Waterloo, Ind.	June 4, 5, 6
Centralia, Ill.	" 25, 26, 27, 28, and 29.	Butler, Ind.	" 7, 8
		Columbus, O.	" 12
Strasburg, Ill.	May 1, 2	Pittsburgh, Pa.	" 19
Ottumwa, Ia.	" 15	Butler, Pa.	" 20, 21

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Manchester, Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Auburn and Philadelphia, Pa.

NOTHING in the evolution of human thought appears more inevitable than the idea of supernatural intervention in producing and curing disease. The causes of disease are so intricate that they are reached only after ages of scientific labor. In those periods when man sees everywhere miracle and nowhere law; when he attributes all things which he cannot understand to a will like his own, he naturally ascribes his diseases either to the wrath of a good being or to the malice of an evil being. This idea underlies that connection of the priestly class with the healing of diseases of which we hav survivals among the rude tribes in all parts of the world, and which is seen in nearly every ancient civilization—especially in the powers over disease claimed in Egypt by the priests of Osiris and Isis, in Greece by the priests of Esculapius, and in Judea by the priests and prophets of Jahveh.—Ex-President White of Cornell University.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

English Notes.

DEAR TRUTHSEEKERS: Freethought in England is getting a bit lively now. True, your country has blessed us with the fag-ends of your blizzards and increased the melancholy which is contingent upon an English winter; but, for all that, our truth seekers hav stuck to their guns and are making ready for the war against Christianity which always reopens with returning spring.

Here in Manchester the tussle has begun in earnest. Negro Edwards's advent was but the prelude of the contest. For five or six weeks he lectured in St. James's Hall, emptying the churches and demoralizing the members thereof; and now that he has left our city he has founded a branch of the Christian Evidence Society, whose sphere of action is commensurate with my own, being the whole county of Lancashire and its surrounding district. This is at once a splendid advertisement of our movement and a direct acknowledgment of the growth and importance of local Secularism. Nor is this all. A few years since, when Liverpool was much more activ than it is now, the Christian Evidence lecturer, Mr. George Wise, was specially retained in that city to counteract Freethought work. The latest intelligence is that Mr. Wise is now to be brought to Manchester. No better proof of the serious way in which our local Christians regard the outburst of missionary Freethought work here could be wished for. Manchester should take advantage of the situation she has thus unexpectedly created.

This new reformation is extending outside Lancashire. In Staffordshire, England's great pottery district, a new vitality has been given to Freethought. Unwilling to be behind Cottonopolis, they invited me for a Sunday's work to see what could be done to enliven the nativs. It did not take long to discover that the apparent lethargy was unnatural. With that bigotry which characterizes modern Christians, no hall whatever, beyond the small one which belongs to them, was available at any price for the purpose of my addresses. Mr. Touzeau Parris, one of our cleverest lecturers, has been able to fill large buildings in Harley until they were refused to our people. Prejudiced by this bigotry, the people declined to be drawn into the Secular hall, and his, like others', audiences hav been proportionately small. That experience was mine, and I quickly reverted to the old and time-honored remedy, the open air. In a nipping cold wind I spoke for a quarter of an hour and then led the way to our hall, followed by a good congregation, who were admitted without charge. Nothing more orderly could be desired than that audience of potters. From pushing and yelling they became convinced that the Atheists had reason on their side when the effects of Christianity on labor questions were shown them in plain language. Freethought revived in Harley like parched grass after a summer shower, and showed yet once again the inestimable value of outdoor propaganda.

Mr. G. W. Foote had a pretty severe shaking by his unfortunate illness. The Bristol debate, thanks to the noisy Christians who assisted thereat, overheated his body and he caught a severe chill. The following Sunday he had to get substitutes for the Hall of Science in London, and on the next Mr. Stanley Jones, the genial secretary of the National Secular Society, represented him in the Welsh town of Merthyr. Last Sunday Mr. Foote was due here in Manchester. He came and did his work admirably; but he was far from being his old self. The worry of the trouble about the Bradlaugh Memorial Hall scheme, the Hall of Science Company, and the largely increasing work of the National Secular Society, are beginning to tell upon him. Mr. Foote is of vigorous frame and full of energy, but he is not made of cast iron, and we shall hav to remember the untimely death of the old chieftain when we make fresh calls upon the strength of him who so nobly rules over us.

A week or so ago I spent a couple of hours with John M. Robertson, Mr. Bradlaugh's successor in the editorial chair of the National Reformer. What a terrible split this Bradlaugh Memorial is making in our ranks! The whole party is being divided. When I first mentioned the disaster I spoke of those who caused it as "enemies" and as not being "out and out Secularists." Mr. Robertson was greatly offended, and I am willing to admit that the language was stronger than I ought to hav used. If only those who first joined Mr. Robertson in this matter had sided with him there would hav been small harm done to Secularism; but the bitterness of the editorial duel has led others who can not possibly judge of the merits or demerits of the case to take up shares in the company in order to prove their believed loyalty to Charles Bradlaugh's memory. Some of us, who are not mere sentimentalists, but business men, know the value of the Hall of Science to the Freethought party, and side with Mr. Foote in his keen-sighted endeavor to secure it for a dignified memorial to our late master.

Miss Ada Campbell, the Australian lecturer, is still lecturing in Britain, now in England, now in Scotland. So far she has not set the Thames on fire; but she works out as an agreeable change to the ordinary preaching lecturers, for her style is highly dramatic and more entertaining than instructiv. At all events, thus say her critics, which are legion.

I noticed in a recent number of THE TRUTH SEEKER an admirable cartoon by Watson Heston, illustrating a recent item in one of these letters concerning the savage conditions under which the British government in India grant opium licenses to their Hindoo subjects. Since this, fresh matter has come into my hands which may interest American readers. A penny pamphlet is being largely sold at the railway bookstalls which deals with this iniquitous traffic and givs illustrations from photographs of the opium dens and their victims. However, as there is other more pressing matter to deal with now, this must stand by for to-day.

The special report of the English Land Restoration League, 1891, has come to hand, and deals with the work of their Red Van among the laborers in Suffolk, an eastern county of England. The method of the campaign is this. On arriving at a village in accordance with the announcement, early in the forenoon, the "Red Van" is stationed in as prominent a position as possible. Its color, "post-office red," which is a bright vermilion used for mail-carts, pillar boxes, and formerly for postmen's uniforms, sufficiently striking and not resembling that adopted by either political party, soon makes it the object of much curiosity, and two large cartoons representing landlordism in action, which are always displayed upon it, appeal during the whole day to even the most illiterate passer-by and bring many inquiries for further information. The next step is to enlist the help of the school-children, who hav throughout proved most willing advertising agents. A pictorial leaflet, with a red ink notice of the meeting, is distributed at noon to the children as they leave the village school, and verbal notice given of the exact spot at which the meeting will be held. During the day other leaflets are distributed to the cottagers; inquiries made as to the social condition of the village; and much quiet propagandist work carried on by means of personal interviews, the known friends of the movement in the place being specially invited. The principal text preached from the Red Van is "The Land for the People," and the downtrodden peasants hav eagerly listened to the new gospel. By means of the van one hundred and sixty-five meetings were held during the summer months, and eighty-three new branches formed. Some day, I trust, the Freethinkers will follow this admirable example.

The bishops are at loggerheads about their Revised version of the New Testament. One wants parts extracted and read in the churches in place of the present Authorized version. The bishop of Durham objects, wanting the whole work or none at all. Others, with their lower clergy, wish for "references" to be added to the Revised version and chapter headings as in the old book. They are also anxious to avoid the nonsensical headings now appended to some of the chapters. What they can not see is that the world has had enough of them and their bibles and would gladly do without them.

Yours fraternally, SAM STANDRING.

Manchester, Eng., March 16, 1892.

Open Letter to John McCabe.

RESPECTED FRIEND: Your plea for "Liberty of Conscience" published in THE TRUTH SEEKER respecting the separation of church and state, is good and timely, a word in season. It is as "apples of gold in a basin of silver." One generation goeth, another cometh. Fifty years ago, the same problems about the Sabbath, liberty of conscience, the rights of man and woman, of capital and labor, that you set forth, were propounded and discussed, that are now agitating the whole civilized world. These problems can only be settled by war. It is simply a question, Shall it be a war of monitors, guns, and swords, or a "war of ideas" as Napoleon predicted? I think there can be no doubt that the last and final war that mankind will ever wage, that will precede the millennium, will be a war of ideas, of words, of reasoning—a mental war. Washington declared that Paine did more with his pen than he had done with his sword for the ultimate success of the American Revolution. Are we ready for that kind of war? Then will come the New Earthly Order receiving the inherent, inalienable rights of man and woman; "Common Sense;" entire separation of church and state into two distinct orders in which there shall be no theology, and that will be founded in righteousness, giving to each child hereafter born a natural, rational parentage. No more come-by-chance unwelcome children, children of lust, to become victims of poverty, and material for Christian wars and murders. In America let us hav universal equal education in public industrial schools, in which each child shall hav the same privileges and opportunities with every other child. Knowledge is power—no class education, enabling one part of the people to rob the other part by making and enacting constitutions and laws without the robbed-oppressed understanding or knowing how or why it is done. Inasmuch as all people hav an inalienable right to an inheritance in all the elements of life—land, sea, air, water, light, labor, and reason—wherefore should a present living generation be burdened with paying debts contracted by their dead ancestors? Let each generation pay as they go. The dead hav no rights the living are bound to respect, as regards the earth and all there is therein. Abolish all laws for the collection of debts, private and national, and in their place substitute a code of honor. More private debts would then be paid than at present, when the lawyers get more money for collecting than comes to the creditors. That would be a new earth. And a new heaven would come into existence—a purely spiritual order, with its non-religious theology, free from politics, and perfectly separate from the state or new earth. It will be a Christian church "not of this world, and therefore its subjects would not fight," nor marry, leaving that for the children of this world. It would attach no blame to the clear Materialist, like Paine, Lincoln, and Ingersoll, as belief is a result of evidence, not of authority. Force, however applied, cannot compel belief. An inquisition is unreasonable, illogical; it is insanity, like war. If nations intend to do right all the use of fighting is to humble the belligerents so that they will be willing to reason, to arbitrate. In the millennium, Krupp's cannon, weighing one hundred and seventy thousand pounds, sending a ball four feet long, weighing three thousand six hundred pounds, together with monitors, and all the munition of Christian wars, will be kept as curiosities, as we now keep the curious instruments of torture for heretics, which the earl of Shrewsbury has bought and brought from the castle of Nuremberg to London.

In the times you refer to G. H. Evans occupied the position that Henry George is now filling so efficiently. He edited the Man, Young America, Workingman's Advocate, the Free Inquirer, and printed the Bible of Reason. I hav imperfect files of these papers. Arthur Tapping was the leading orthodox fanatic. Stopping the mails on Sunday was a favorit measure, of which you speak so wisely.

The present generation must fight these battles over again, or we shall become church and state and be ready for some new form of the Inquisition. Our own time must bring forth its own leaders as did the civil war. In the Crimean war England sent "an army of lions commanded by jackasses." As the war progressed the right men got into their right places. Will not the World's Fair do the same? The fanatical, fighting, worrying inquisition clericals will think they hav achieved a great victory in closing the Fair on their man-made anti-Christian Sabbath. In common sense, are they not braying out their own shame and proclaiming to all nations that they are not equal to the great occasion of a World's Fair? They can bray and kick, but cannot command the respect of the great army of lions who will be at the World's Fair, who hav seven days of Sabbath, one just as good as the other, and each one as sacred, and with the same right to hav their Sabbath kept by all the others as hav the misnamed Christians. F. W. EVANS.

Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.

Can Liberals Organize?

I am glad that this question is coming to the front. I hope it will continue to be agitated by our leading papers till dormant Liberals awake to its importance, and realize that unless we are able to demonstrate to the world that Liberalism is constructiv, and conduciv to a better political, social, and moral state of society than Christianity has developed, we might as well keep our mouths shut.

I hope you will giv us an opportunity to hear from the TRUTH SEEKER family on the subject. I wish that every man and woman who claims to be a Liberal could hav impressed on both heart and brain that Liberalism means simply that every rational being has an inalienable right to investigate and decide for himself all questions pertaining to his present or future welfare. This means that we must agree to disagree; but I hav often been astounded at the illiberality of many professed Liberals. Some of them might learn Liberality toward each other from orthodox Christians, for most of these hav learned by experience to agree to disagree with each other, and herein lies the secret of their success. In almost every town and village we find a number of different denominations of Christians entirely separate in their church organization, but, as a rule, all working together for the cause of Christ—not in unison but in harmony with each other. The folly of attempting to bind Catholics, Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, etc., into one organization is no longer thought of. But some of our wise leaders seem determined that all classes of Liberals, no matter how incoherent, shall be driven into one organization, or not allowed to organize at all. As soon as any particular class of Liberals attempt to organize, some of our Liberal papers and lecturers begin to cry them down as sectarians. This is about as senseless a use of language as that of the foreigner who called a man a liar because he stepped on his corn-toe. They ought to know that the term sect applies only to religionists, who believe in the infallibility of some divine book, or divine leader, and that no form of organization can make a Liberal society partake of the nature of a religious sect. They ought also to know, by this time, that calling an organization a union does not make it so; and that it is as natural for persons of like views to want to associate for the promotion of what they believe to be truth, as it is for birds of a feather to flock together; and that no organization can be permanent or of great utility which is composed of discordant elements. During the past thirty years I hav been connected with various kinds of Liberal societies, and hav very closely observed their rise and fall; and hav given much thought to the subject of Liberal organization; and I am fully convinced that the only successful plan is for the different classes of Liberals to organize separately, just as the different classes of religionists do. Then a Liberal society would not be a house divided against itself, as is now almost invariably the case. No organization can be really constructiv without having clearly defined principles and objects, and making the indorsement of these a requirement of membership.

This is practically impossible where the members of a society differ widely on fundamental points, as for instance Spiritualists and Materialists generally do. Hence they fail. Under the new plan each society can formulate its principles clearly, and choose an appropriate name, and conduct its meetings in a manner acceptable to all its members. There would be at least a fair prospect of permanency for such an organization, for under such circumstances enthusiasm would be likely to grow. There would be nothing to hinder these societies from coöperating with each other in support of the Nine Demands or other Secular measures. Most of those who oppose this plan hav probably never studied the subject much, if at all; and some apparently oppose it for fear of losing patronage of one or the other class. We hav tested the two plans pretty thoroughly in this city. For over twelve years we maintained quite harmoniously a Liberal society composed of nearly an equal number of Spiritualists and Materialistic Liberals. Our Spiritual members did not relish what they called our cold Materialism, and did not think that we manifested due interest in mediums and trance speakers. We, on the other hand, became somewhat weary of listening to discourses on "Harmonial Philosophy," and being regaled with wonderful accounts of séance experiences; so by mutual consent we agreed to disagree, as sensible Liberals should do, and amicably separated. This took place nearly four years ago; but friendship and harmony still prevail, and notwithstanding our honest differences on some points, when it comes to a question of Secular government, we stand as a unit for it, just as the different classes of Christians stand as a unit for God in the Constitution. I heartily indorse what Mrs. Katie Kehm Smith says in THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 19th in regard to orderly meetings and the employment of competent lecturers, but I am not proud of the record of the American Secular Union.

The progress of Freethought is developing a Secular political party, but when it comes to stay it will be strictly political, and will offer no prizes for manuals of morality or philosophical essays. Like other political parties it will welcome all voters regardless of their religion or irreligion or moral status. But a Liberal society having for its object the promulgation of a certain philosophy in opposition to the dogmas of orthodoxy, is another thing; and every such society which retains dishonest or immoral persons will do the cause of Liberalism harm instead of good. A. R. AYRES.

Hannibal, Mo.

Ecclesiastical Hermaphroditism.

In the leading editorial of THE TRUTH SEEKER of the 19th March you speak of the Universalists and the Unitarians as "queer people," and as belonging to "unclassified sects." Let me, very respectfully, attempt to shed a few rays of light on this subject, so as to dispel your mysticism.

About a hundred years ago, these two sects began their careers respectivly, in this country, as offshoots from the orthodox church. The Unitarian clergy, located chiefly in Massachusetts, were men of fine talents, and their people were among the best educated in the country. Jonathan Edwards had given to the churches of New England the strong tincture of what is called evangelical religion, the prolific mother of the whole system of revivalism, or experimental religion, which still exists, and shocks the common sense of all the rest of the world. Unitarianism was a recoil from this condition of things. At that time the orthodox Congregational church in Massachusetts, the headquarters of the movement, was the state religion, and they persecuted the heretics, not by fire and fagot, but in other ways just cruel enough to rouse up and develop all the nativ energies of their character, and make the sect grow. The heretics were greatly helped in countenance and heart by the immigration of Dr. Joseph Priestly and his colony of wealthy and highly educated Englishmen, who settled at the forks of the Susquehanna in Northumberland county, Pa. But the fulfillment was not equal to the promis which this new sect gave at the beginning of its history. It owed its growth entirely to the fact that it was persecuted. At Northumberland the church is nearly extinct, and, as the Evening Post, of your city, incidentally remarked some time ago, in scriptural language, the Unitarians of New England and elsewhere "are but a feeble folk," like the conies which make their houses in the rocks. With all their polish, ability, and wealth they make no headway in increasing either their prestige or their numerical strength.

Contemporaneously with the Unitarians, the Universalists arose, having New England also as their theater. They eliminated from their creed the doctrin of eternal hell-fire for the impenitent, out of which all the orthodox and propelling doctrins grew, but held on, not very tenaciously, however, to what remained. Their creed, therefore, like the famous Joseph's coat, is of many colors. As a compromise creed, it must needs be so. The idea of eternal punishment givs color and meaning to every other doctrin of the Christian religion. It is the seasoning which givs a relish to all the food upon which "faith" feeds. Universalism, from the first, was a mere local religion. The orthodox, firmly believing that their abolition of hell, as a motiv, took off all restraint from men's consciences, and invited them to commit sin, vilified them exceedingly, and this made them grow. The sect spread in the New England states, and in New York, which was mainly settled, outside of the city of New York, by emigrants from New England. It never got down into the Middle or Southern states. It makes no increase now in proportion to the increase of population. Like Unitarianism, it hardly holds its own. It had the hectic flush on its cheek in its youth, and seems to-day to be moribund.

Now, Mr. Editor, the reason why these two sects —the Universalists and the Unitarians—are in their present condition is, because they are ecclesiastical hermaphrodites. A hermaphrodite is the offspring of Mercury and Venus. It is androgynous. That is to say, it is something which, in gender, is neither he, she, nor it. It is a being which is half man and half woman; or, one who combines two sexes in one person. Nature is a frolicsome old dame, and sometimes cuts queer capers. This she does when, in a fit of intoxication, or mere glee, she produces hermaphrodites. But after she sobers down again, she feels a little ashamed of her folly, and is always careful to disqualify them from propagating their kind. The Unitarian and Universalist churches are half Infidel and half Christian. They are hermaphrodites; and this is the reason why they cannot propagate. They would giv the world if they could. The Methodists, who began in this country at the same time, now number their ministers and churches by thousands. The reason is that their creed is positiv, and not negativ and positiv blended together, like an acid and an alkali, which, when mixed, neutralize each other. The early Methodist ministers were very illiterate men, as I well remember. They generally had stentorian voices, and their lachrymal glands were always overflowing. They went among the lower classes for converts, and in their public meetings they depicted the agonies of the damned in the lake of fire, till every hearer was nearly asphyxiated with the odor of brimstone. Then, when their hearers were shaking with fear like aspen leaves, they would say: "If you want to escape from this place of torment, Come to Jesus, and join the Methodist church."

And they did so. But the idea of a Unitarian or Universalist clergyman wringing his hands, and the tears coursing down his cheeks, with grief at the lost condition of his impenitent hearers, who ever witnessed such a phenomenon? This shows that they are half Infidel, and do not believe in the meaning of the word salvation. Then, when we see them baptizing little children to cleanse them from the taint of original sin; or, when they take the sacrament of the Lord's supper, in remembrance of him, "till I come"—alluding to Christ's assurance to his disciples that some of them standing around him should not taste of death till they would see him return in the clouds of heaven to set up his visible kingdom—when, I say, we see them doing such things, it shows that they are half Christians. Is it any wonder that such sects, having no masculinity, and no positiv faith, cannot propagate as the other sects do?

The word lukewarm occurs but once in the whole Bible, and is used by the personage called the "Alpha and the Omega" in his bitter reproach of the Laodiceans, because in their character they were neither cold nor hot. He says: "I would thou wert cold, or hot. So then, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold, nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth."

Now, the twin sister sects, the Universalists and the Unitarians, are too cold and icy for any mutual and comfortable association with the fiery zealots of the evangelical church; and they are too hot yet to enjoy the cool bracing air that circulates in the groves of Academes where the Philosophers walk, and so they must await their destiny to be cascaded out of the visible church altogether.

JACOB GRIMES.

CONSIDER how little this village does for its own culture. We hav a comparativly decent system of common schools, schools for infants only; but excepting the half-starved Lyceum in the winter, and latterly the puny beginning of a library suggested by the state, no school for ourselvs. We spend more on almost any article of bodily aliment or ailment than on our mental aliment. It is time that we hav uncommon schools, that we did not leave off our education when we begin to be men and women. It is time that villages were universities, and their elder inhabitants the fellows of universities, with leisure—if they are indeed so well off—to pursue liberal studies the rest of their lives. Shall the world be confined to one Paris or one Oxford forever? Cannot students be boarded here and get a liberal education under the skies of Concord? Can we not hire some Abelard to lecture to us? Alas! what with foddering the cattle and tending the store, we are kept from school too long, and our education is sadly neglected. In this country, the village should in some respects take the place of the nobleman of Europe. It should be the patron of the fine arts. It is rich enough. It wants only the magnanimity and refinement. It can spend money enough on such things as farmers and traders value, but it is thought Utopian to propose spending money for things which more intelligent men know to be of far more worth. This town has spent seventeen thousand dollars on a town-house, thank fortune or politics, but probably it will not spend so much on living wit, the true meat to put into that shell, in a hundred years. The one hundred and twenty-five dollars annually subscribed for a Lyceum in winter is better spent than any other equal sum raised in the town. As the nobleman of cultivated taste surrounds himself with whatever conduces to his culture,—genius—learning—wit—books —paintings—statuary—music—philosophical instruments, and the like; so let the village do,—not stop short at a pedagog, a parson, a sexton, a parish library, and three selectmen, because our pilgrim forefathers got through a cold winter once on a bleak rock with these. New England can hire all the wise men in the world to come and teach her, and board them round the while, and not be provincial at all. That is the uncommon school we want. Instead of noblemen, let us hav noble villages of men. If it is necessary, omit one bridge over the river, go round a little there, and throw one arch at least over the darker gulf of ignorance which surrounds us.—Thoreau.

Little Blasphemies.

Wife: "I am ready for church now. Dear me! What are you swearing about?" Husband: "I can't find the Bible."

Criticus: "In the early days it cost something to be a scientist." Cynicus: "Yes; but in those days every scientist had a stake in the community."

The Ohio State Secular Union Convention.

Once more let me urge upon all Freethinkers the necessity of their coöperation to make this movement a success.

The committee now having charge of the arrangements hav spared neither pains nor expense to make it such, and in consideration thereof they certainly deserve the sympathy and support of every Freethinker within the state.

The following program has been arranged:

Morning session, called to order at 10 o'clock A.M.:

1. The organization of the state Union.
2. Election of officers.
3. Reading of constitution.
4. Address by J. J. Burdage, of Columbus.

Afternoon session, called to order at 2:30:

1. Reports of committees.
2. Adoption of constitution.
3. Address by John R. Charlesworth.

Evening session, called to order at 7 P.M.:

1. Chairman's address.
2. Address by B. F. Underwood.
3. Address by John R. Charlesworth.

In addition to this program, a splendid quartet has been engaged to sing, and some good music will be rendered by a fine orchestra.

Those friends who intend visiting Columbus to take part in these proceedings, will please take notice to secure their certificates from the ticket agents at the time of purchasing their tickets, otherwise they will be unable to secure the reduced rates. These rates hav been secured from all points in the state connected with the Central Traffic Association. The certificates, when duly countersigned by me, will enable them to secure return tickets at the rate of one-third the regular fare.

The convention meets at Wirthwein's Hall, 335 South High street, Columbus, O., on Sunday, April 17th.

Now that the arrangements are completed, which hav involved time, trouble, and expense, we earnestly desire to meet our friends, and all lovers of mental freedom.

Let all Freethinkers take courage from the success reached through organization by the devotees of superstition, recognizing that in union there is strength. They hav banded themselvs together, first, as a means of protection, and secondly, by force of numbers to assume a fictitious dignity over less popular ideas.

And now, as Shelley says:

> Their influence darts like subtle poison through
> The bloodless veins of a desolate society.

It is not alone that they hav their vast machinery for acting upon the grown part of our population; but the little babe a few days old; the infant, ere it can lisp its mother's sacred name; the confidence of youth, as well as the ignorance of uneducated manhood, are all taken advantage of in order to instill folly into their minds, and make the unnatural, degrading views of superstition a second nature to the poor dupes of the professors of these absurdities.

As all honorable combinations are marching hand in hand with civilization, we, as Freethinkers, must combine to assert our natural rights, to demand and obtain all rights and privileges guaranteed to the citizens of this republic.

The Union will be organized upon the principle that Secularism is a protest against the theological dogmas of the day. It deems them all incomplete and unsatisfactory, and declares that human wants, human reason, and human experience are sufficient for the guidance of the affairs of life. It seeks no religious faith, and proposes to leave the gods entirely out of its deliberations. It affirms that to mean well, and to do well, is the best security for our well-being here, and the best preparation for any future state of existence, should there be one.

We do not propose to try and unite the opposing factions of all professed Liberals. From personal experience I can vouch for the utter futility of any such attempt. Our policy is purely anti-theological, and our chief work shall be to tear the hands of the priests from the throat of the state. Our motto shall be "Our flag above the cross"—"The state before the church."

It is to be hoped that the friends of our cause will come boldly to the front on Sunday, April the 17th. Let this day be a memorable one in the history of the state of Ohio. Let this day be the beginning of a new epoch in the religious and political freedom of Ohio. Our cause is a glorious one. It must not die from inertia, and shall not if you will only place yourselvs by our side under the banner of freedom.

MY SECOND CAMPAIGN.

On Sunday, March 6th, I commenced my second campaign against orthodoxy, by the means of another lecture tour to the central states. Starting at Philadelphia, I was greeted by two of the largest audiences that I hav ever addressed in the whole of my experience at the weekly gatherings of our societies. The Friendship Liberal League of the Quaker City undoubtedly ranks foremost among the Freethought societies in the United States. It is a splendid organization, and is doing a grand work for our cause, and it certainly reflects honor and credit to those valiant heroes at its head.

Lectures or debates are given every Sunday afternoon and evening, and a good supply of Freethought pamphlets, papers, periodicals, and magazines is always on hand.

O ye gods and little fishes, with but one organization like this in every town and city throughout this continent Freethought would become a power indeed; our cause would soon be heard and felt. The Romish church would tremble on its very foundations; and old orthodoxy would soon explode and vanish like a summer's dream, leaving scarcely any traces of its very existence, except, perhaps, the shadows of its own darkness, the clouds of despair, and the cruel death-vapor with which it has stunted the growth of the young civilization, checking its onward career, and stultifying the world's thought with the ages of darkness and of faith; whilst its ruined temples would stand as landmarks of the world's progress, showing to future historians the successiv stages of its development, its gradual growth from the ignorant and barbaric past into the broad, safe harbor of Freethought.

I gave two lectures here, one in the afternoon and one in the evening. Each time the hall was well filled, and at the lowest computation my audiences would reach, in the aggregate, about fifteen hundred people. At the evening lecture the hall was crowded to excess; it was packed almost to suffocation, and as there were not seats sufficient for all, many of them had to be content with a "stand-up seat." There were a large number of ladies present, and the audience gave me the utmost attention throughout the entire proceedings; enthusiasm ran high, and at the close I congratulated myself upon the unbounded success of my first series of lectures in the ancient, time-honored city of Philadelphia.

An invitation had been extended to the late executiv of the American Secular Union, but they failed to materialize, and made themselvs conspicuous by their absence.

The lectures were thrown open for discussion and a good debate followed, which was participated in by both sexes. The audience seemed to enjoy the debate, although my lectures, radical as they were, failed to draw out anything like the criticisms I had anticipated. On the whole, however, I was elated beyond description at the overwhelming success that attended these lectures, and gave me good hopes for a successful trip. George Longford is still at the helm, and with a good, strong, ready, and willing crew to assist him, I can safely say that Freethought has come to stay in Philadelphia.

I made many friends while here, all of whom manifested the greatest satisfaction at the result of my lectures, and expressed an earnest desire that I should visit them again on my return journey to New York.

Tuesday morning, amid a drenching downpour of rain, I packed up my few belongings and started off again. With the Freethought lecturer there seems to be no continued stay—always on the move, first in one place, then to another.

A ride of twelve hours through the beautiful and picturesque state of Pennsylvania, over the Alleghany mountains—first coursing along by the side of a narrow stream, which erelong emerges into a broad river, whose waters are made sluggish by the heavy rains; now steaming over rocky pathways, and again round the famous Horseshoe Bend—finally lands me in the smoky city of Pittsburgh once more.

It was but a short time since I had left it, so I found our friends here, as it were, just in the same place that I had left them. The good old "Roman" was still hard at work among his books, and could not dispose of a sufficient number of New York Evening Telegrams to satisfy his customers. Harry Hoover was still with the old craft, dividing his attention between business matters and Freethought propaganda. Mr. W. F. Schade, Anthony Barker, and the rest of the "bhoys" were pushing along the work. I arrived here somewhat unexpectedly, but nevertheless I had anticipated a hearty welcome and I was not in the least disappointed.

I lectured the 13th of March before the Secular Society to a splendid audience. Every available seat was occupied, and a few that were not available. (This is not sarcasm.)

Mr. Preece was again in the chair, and among the audience I could plainly recognize many faces with which I am now getting somewhat familiar. At the close of my address the usual debate took place, and this time a little mild criticism was given by Mr. Bond, a Mormon elder. Evidently the reverend gentleman is not familiar with the rudiments of a Freethought debate, for his remarks were very erratic. He made several rash statements, and assuming them to be correct, he commenced to argue from these, failing in the first place to prove his position; not recognizing the one obvious fact that starting from false premises, no matter how good the logic, he would surely arrive at erroneous conclusions.

The Rev. Mr. Andrews, of whom I spoke in a previous epistle, did not put in an appearance upon this occasion, but I had not forgotten the old maxim that "He who fights and runs away livs to fight another day." Consequently I publicly challenged the reverend gentleman to an oral debate, under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Secular Society, but as yet I hav not learned that he has accepted, although he must certainly be informed of the challenge, for some of the members of his church were present and would undoubtedly convey to him the news. Ah, well, the "Lord moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform," and so do his representativs on earth.

On Monday evening, at the kind invitation of Dr. Dodge, a select party of our friends assembled at his residence on Pennsylvania avenue, and a very pleasant evening was spent. I gave them a short parlor lecture, Mrs. Hughes very ably rendered "The Maniac," other little pleasantries were indulged in, and the party broke up about midnight.

Tuesday morning I made a short trip to Butler, a distance of about forty miles, north of Pittsburgh, where I lectured again to a very good audience. The lecture had been arranged by Simeon Nixon and J. Cuthbert. These two are practically the only outspoken, activ Liberals in this orthodox little town, but they are true to their principles and willing bravers of the adversities and inconveniences of resisting a received public opinion. By their united efforts a nice and respectable audience was brought together in the Metropolitan Hall.

Simeon Nixon is well known in Butler as an ardent Freethinker, and he has, from time to time, given vent to his feelings on religious topics through the columns of the local press. The audience listened attentivly, but no one ventured to offer any criticism. One man, however, made a hasty exit when he had heard the first part of my lecture, and instantly the truth of the old saying flashed through my mind that, "those with the least heads get them filled first." The next day I returned to Pittsburgh, and on Thursday, the 17th of "Ould Oireland," I took the cars for Columbus, O. Evidently the Lord had forgotten that this was the day dedicated to his Irish saintship; and I thought it was exceedingly unkind of him to allow the best of his followers to make such elaborate preparations as had been made in Pittsburgh to celebrate the occasion and then mar the prospect of a glorious reunion of the opposing factions of Parnellites and anti-Parnellites by sending down a cold, miserable sleet. But then, "he knows best what should be, better than they."

Reaching Columbus in the evening, I at once commenced making preparations for a lecture the Sunday following, and, notwithstanding the short notice we had to giv our friends, and the limited time to make all necessary preparations, a good audience welcomed me back to the capital of the Buckeye state, and cheerfully accorded all possible assistance in the work of organizing the state Secular Union.

In consequence of being compelled to stay here to attend to the work of this movement, I shall utilize the time to the best possible advantage and lecture every Sunday during my stay. I hav done so up to the time of writing, and each time my audience has increased little by little, and now we can muster a good roll of members. The local papers gave a lengthy report of my first lecture, and pitched into me with a true "Christian feeling." The Daily Dispatch headed its lines with a reference to me in large type as a "rank disbeliever," and the State Journal called me "Charlesworth the Atheist." Probably they thought there might be something repugnant in these appellations, not knowing that I regarded them, when applied to myself, with feelings of pride, pleasure, and ambition.

I am now hard at work drawing up a constitution for the state organization, and attending to all the thousand and one little matters in connection therewith; and buoyed up with hopes of a brilliant success, I am anxiously looking forward to the 17th of April.

Immediately after the close of this meeting I shall commence the fulfillment of my lecture appointments, which will take me through Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York, and any of our friends along the route indicated desiring lectures will please write me care of John B. Cochran, 112 West Maple street, Columbus, O. JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

What Infidelity Has Done for Woman.

What was the true condition of woman hundreds of years ago? What is she to-day? From the first dawn of the Christian era until the commencement of the eventful nineteenth century, woman was a crouching slave, and in as much servil subjection to her liege lord as if she were a beast of burden. Christianity held her there. A woman had no soul, any more than a horse or a donkey. Her province was the kitchen and the nursery. Instead of being equal in any way to or with her husband, no equality was ever recognized between them. She was property, and her husband was her proprietor. She was not permitted to teach, even little children; neither was she allowed to hav a voice in any public deliberations. Old St. Paul, the illustrious exponent of Christianity, communicated mandatory directions for keeping all women in abject subordination. In 1 Cor. xi, 3, he says: "The head of the woman is the man." In 1 Cor. xiv, 34, he says: "Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law." What law? Read Gen. iii, 16: "Thy husband shall rule over thee." Servil subordination of woman runs like a chain through all the creeds, the precepts, and practices of Christianity. Mothers and daughters were never allowed to put forth any educational efforts to rise to even an equality with the opposit sex. The eminent Jonathan Edwards, a famous Presbyterian theologian, had six daughters, each of which, it was said, was six feet in stature; and one impressiv fact has been handed down to us from generation to generation, as a Presbyterian heirloom, to show to the descendants of that distinguished Christian what filial obedience those daughters manifested toward their father. No matter what they might be doing, whether they were seated at the dining-table, or entertaining friends in a social capacity, or seated and engaged in any manual operations, when their liege lord entered the room every one would drop her work or other engagement and rise up before their father—no, not father, but proprietor, as they were his property—and stand motionless until he waved his dignified hand for them to resume their accustomed duties. That was some of the practical workings of Christianity. Christianity recognizes the wife as the property of her husband. According to the old colonial laws a man's wife was just as much his property as his donkey and dog. Only one hundred years ago in New Jersey a man's wife and children were entered in the invoice of the property, as the following lines from an old invoice will show. I copy only a part of it:

My trundle-bed, cradle, and wool-spinning-wheel,
My hand-cards and hetchel, my distaff and reel,
My loom and the warping-bars, shuttles, and reeds,
Seed-'taters, seed-turnips, and all other seeds;
My oxen and wagon, my cow, calf, and hog,
My billy-goat, turkeys, my cat and my dog,
My plow, spade, and shovel, my shotgun and fife,
My horses and children, my donkey and wife.

Skeptics and stanch Infidels, during the present century, hav come to the rescue of woman. During this period skeptics and Infidels hav placed young women in the capacity of teachers, clerks, salesmen, accountants, editors, authors, lecturers, lawyers, and physicians, and hav elevated them to the realm of a higher and nobler womanhood, all in defiance of the irrepressible clamor of orthodoxy.

Now, I know what I am writing about. I was rocked in a Presbyterian cradle; christened and sprinkled at the baptismal altar of Presbyterianism. I was educated in the love of the Westminster catechism; I hav served a long apprenticeship within the pale of the church, in the capacity of stoker and porter, usher and bell-ringer, trustee, clerk and deacon, sermon-reader and Bible-expounder, precentor, and Sunday-school superintendent, for many years in succession. Hence, I know what influences were always in operation to hold women in servil subordination. Women hav risen to a higher life in spite of all that Christianity was constantly doing to keep mothers and daughters in a state of vassalage. Yet many Christians point to the condition of women to-day and say, "See what our glorious Christianity has done for woman!" Christianity has not done it. Christianity would silence every female's voice to-day if it had the power. Only a few years ago, a good woman in a church, where I was deacon, arose to tell "what the Lord had done for her soul." But before she had uttered one sentence the dominating priest arose and called her by name, and said with great authority: "Sit down, Mrs. C——. You are not allowed to speak here." I saw and heard that. Only eleven years ago, in Brooklyn, L. I., Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler, a distinguished D.D. and LL.D., the recent pastor of wealthy Lafayette street church, was hauled up before a tribunal of presbyters, on a charge of winking at insubordination in his church, by way of allowing a woman to talk about the love of Jesus in his lecture-room. The gallant and generous-hearted doctor was frightened almost out of his wits. He thought that the door of heaven would be closed forever against him if he was excommunicated from the Presbyterian church. So he saved his soul from hell (sheol now) by falling on his knees and confessing his transgression and promising never to allow another woman to talk in his parish as long as he was pastor.

Only a few years ago, women were not allowed to set type, as it was contended that they were utterly incompetent to do such work with tolerable accuracy. I hav in mind an instance in New York city, where the proprietor insisted that women should hav a fair opportunity to test their ability. A goodly number of them worked, side by side, at half the price of men, setting type. But the Presbyterian foreman found so much fault with their work, and rendered such discouraging reports to the proprietor, that he was allowed to discharge every woman, simply because the Bible and the creed of the church forbid all efforts by way of the moral, intellectual, and social elevation of women.

I well remember, when a small boy, of hearing the announcements from the pulpit, that at such a place and hour there would be a female prayer-meeting conducted by the pastor or some elder or deacon. A few women were not allowed to convene in a religious capacity, simply to offer petitions to the unknown and unknowable, unless some parson or deacon was present to keep them in subordination, and to see that all things were conducted in accordance with the requirements of the creed. But thanks to Infidelity and to Secular philosophy, and to the force of environment, time has enabled the women of the United States to cast off the oppressiv yoke of Christianity, and to rise to a higher and more glorious womanhood. Infidelity has come to the rescue of woman, by placing in her hands

A weapon that comes down as still
As snowflakes fall upon the sod,
Yet executes a freeman's will
As lightning does the will of God;
Nor from its source shall bars and locks
Prevent them—'tis the ballot-box.

Orange, N. J. SERENO E. TODD.

Our "Liberal" Churches.

There are two so-called liberal churches in America. I know both of them by experience, and want to tell something about their liberality.

Four years ago I joined the Universalist church, having been told by one of its ministers that they were liberal people. After a while, though, I discovered their liberality to consist only in the vain attempt to prove that the Bible does not teach eternal punishment. Having no special liking for such arguments, and not caring very much for what the old barbarian Jews thought about that subject, I left that church and joined the Unitarian, which was said to be more broad-minded, yea, even radical. They had no creed, but would found their beliefs on a scientific basis, it was stated. I started to form a Unitarian society among my countrymen, the Swedes in Minneapolis, and met with a remarkable success, speaking to large audiences of from two hundred to twelve hundred people. The American Unitarian Association in Boston had requested me to do all this work at my own expense, and promised me to help me out financially if I succeeded, which they also did. This was two years ago. I published five pamphlets and a paper at my own expense, and the movement seemed to prosper.

But now begins the trouble. The Western superintendent of the American Unitarian Association, Rev. O. B. Forbush, of Chicago, seemed to find my preaching altogether too liberal for the Unitarian platform; and still worse, he had found out that I favored social reforms, and was a Nationalist, which he meant could not be allowed within the Unitarian body.

It is often stated that our time and our institutions are opposed to religious persecutions, and that holds true as far as our liberal laws and statutes are concerned. But within the religious bodies, intolerance and narrow-mindedness still prevail. And thus, if a heretic is not any more placed on the rack or sent to jail, nevertheless the authorities of his church know other means of torture perhaps more effectiv than the Middle-Age machinery. I was ordered to withhold my opinions, and in order to make those orders more effectiv my salary was withheld for weeks and months. In the same time I received numerous letters threatening to withdraw it entirely unless I stopped the preaching of my dangerous doctrins of evolution and Nationalism. I refused to do so, and seeing no end of the tiresome and ridiculous persecution I at last tendered my resignation, two months ago, with the firm resolution nevermore to join any "liberal" church.

My experience is that there are not and cannot be any liberal churches, for even if they do not hav any creed, they nevertheless hav their limitations. They are opposed to honest scientific investigation, they are afraid of the result of scientific progress, and they do not favor social reforms, though Christ himself, their teacher, did so. There is no freedom of speech in any of the liberal churches, and all their talk about freedom is only a new sign outside an old store. This I say on account of my own sad experience.

But, nevertheless, the "liberal" churches help the Radical movement along. For they spur the people to independent investigation, and I know more than one honest Freethinker who started on the way to truth as a Unitarian. As a middle station between orthodoxy and Radicalism, therefore, they are of great importance, and when they hav drained the whole orthodox field and led all the water into the sea of Radicalism, then their mission is done and they will cease to exist. I hope that my countrymen in America soon will see this truth.

Leave the poor old stranded wreck
And pull for the shore.

AXEL LUNDEBERG.

University Sites.

All who leave Portland on any of the steamers running down the river are attracted by the sight of a massiv old brick structure looming up upon the high bank of the river midway between the elevators and St. John's landing. This is the university building of the Portland University, a Methodist institution.

Real estate men gave this institution a considerable quantity of land, and they hav profited greatly, as well as those who bought property soon after this tract was put on the market, by the rise in value incident upon the building of this University.

The preachers, of course, were "let in on the ground floor," and some of them hav feathered their nests quite cosily by a little "legitimate speculation" in town lots.

The Pacific Northwest is a wonderful country, is rapidly increasing in population, and is in need of educational facilities in proportion to its increasing population. The Columbia river is the great natural waterway and route of travel and traffic for this great region. There is a great deal of Freethought and Liberalism all over this country. But the churches are creeping in and getting possession of all they can lay their hands upon and are erecting educational institutions wherever they can get concessions and assistance; and much assistance has been given them because no other offer has been made.

On the Columbia river, about thirty-five miles from the ocean, on a beautiful plateau adjoining the town of Cathlamet, C. Beal, the well-known and energetic veteran in the Secular work, has laid out a town-site, and proposes to erect a Secular college. This site is the finest on the Columbia. It is where the salt breezes from the ocean are met by the fresh, cool breezes from the snow-capped peaks of the Cascade mountains. The purest of water flows in abundance from numerous springs and in crystal creeks. Soft breezes, bearing the healing qualities of fir, pine, and spruce, keep the temperature cool in summer, while the warm winds from off the "Japanese Sea Stream" render the winters delightfully mild. A more healthy, charming, and in every way suitable spot for a college could not be found.

Mr. Beal is not trying to "work a robbing scheme," but is in earnest in trying to establish a seat of learning free from the baleful influences of superstition, that those who grow up when he is dead shall hav opportunities which were denied him while alive. He has named his town, very appropriately, Athens, for he desires it to be the Athens of the Northwest.

No finer town-site or place of residence can be found in all the great Northwest than Athens, and it will be a pity, and very short-sighted of our Liberals, if Christian schemers are allowed to get possession and turn aside the aims of our dear old comrade, for such a beautiful site will not long remain unused. HENRY ADDIS.

Letters of Friends.

The Truth Being Spread.

WINSLOW, ARIZ., March 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1, for which please send me one more Bible Picture Book. They take like hot cakes.

Yours truly, J. T. MUNCEY.

When They Hear the Truth, They Call It a Burlesque.

BONAPARTE, IA., March 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I recently took along THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 27th, which contains the picture of the new automatic praying-machine, to show to the Liberal friends. I think it takes the cake. It is surely the greatest invention of the age. All that saw it agreed with me and had a hearty laugh. Hurrah for Heston! May he liv long and prosper in the good cause.

Last September, through my effort with the Liberals, we raised funds to pay J. E. Remsburg to deliver a lecture on "False Claims." It was free to all, and the Opera House was very well filled. Many were professed Christians. It raised quite a stir among them. The deacon of the Baptist church said it was a perfect burlesque. One Baptist lady wished to know where he found his proof. We told her to read her Bible and she would find it. I hav tried hard to get some subscribers for THE TRUTH SEEKER, but could not get any. I loan my papers and they go the rounds until they are worn out, and I think they are doing good work for the cause.

Respectfully, L. C. CHENEY.

About the Bible God's Days.

THREE RIVERS, MICH., March 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: According to a statement made by Prof. R. H. Crittenden, M.A., published in a scientific astronomical paper, Word and Way, of November, 1891, edited by Mr. Hicks, St. Louis, Mo., the Lord's creativ day contained 1,400,000 of our man-made calendar years.

If we multiply 1,400,000 by 7 of God's creativ days, which 7 days constitute one creativ week, we find it amounts to 9,800,000 of our years. The 6,000 of our years since Adam's time, added to the 1,400,000 years (God's Sabbath or day of rest), givs us 1,406,000 years since God's first Monday came in of his second week. Therefore we find there will be no second Sabbath of the Lord until 8,394,000 years of our calendar time shall hav passed away.

But man-made Sabbath and week-day time we shall hav for convenience in reckoning time as he (man, not God) has nicely divided it, or them, up into seconds, minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and lunar and calendar years. About our man-made Sabbath, the Bible God has given no orders or laws. Therefore, I would ask, Why do Christian ministers and laymen make such a hullabaloo about people who wish to employ one day in seven, or our man-made Sundays, or Sabbaths, in any way they please, provided they do not do anything by force, or by *un*civil law, etc., that will oblige them to do as others wish they should? "I pause for a reply."

E. D. BLAKEMAN.

Futility of Prayer.—Land-Holding.—Scientists Are Honest.

LEXINGTON, KY., March 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Lent(which is the continuation of an ancient heathen custom) is the season when the few pray, the many starve. Forty days of prayer ought to bring comfort to the poor and needy, if religion is from heaven.

It is not difficult to see that Bible holiness is declining all over the world, although Lenten and other spasmodic efforts to maintain it in full power and splendor are kept up, proving that the blazing torch of reason casts into the shade the feeble rush-light called "piety"—that languishing lamp which only flashes to die.

Natural influences always reign supreme. Religious powwows continue, but external depravity is a condition, proving the existence of internal rottenness, which indicates a relapse into a savage state—all this announcing the downfall of a splendid Christian civilization.

We should take cognizance of the following facts: When governments are first constructed, a few noble spirits always insist on the proviso that no bargains reating to public lands or property shall be made with corporate bodies of men; that no grants of land shall be given in which transactions the industrious poor hav no share; that provisions for the poor should be considered in all that pertains to lawmaking.

Do scientists try to work on our feelings, or to deceive us, in regard to the laws of nature? ALHAZA.

Infidels Hav No Right to Think.

STAPLES, MINN., March 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to offer a word of thanks for the pleasure and instruction I hav derived from your valuable paper. Although reared in orthodoxy I hav got superstition below the waistband, and I hope to finally trample it underfoot as we do the snakes from whom it originated.

I gave two short speeches in a neighboring settlement this winter. The second one was attended by several so-called Christians and two ministers. During the discourse I raised the point that God had promised the people seedtime and harvest ever after the flood, which promis—with hundreds of others—he had failed to keep, referring them to some of our famin-stricken countries of to-day. At the close I extended the privilege to the reverend brethren to vindicate their faith. One of the called of God arose and called me a liar, claiming that there had always been enough for the people to subsist upon, if it had been rightly distributed. I then put it that God was amply able to furnish the provision but his means of distribution were very limited. Again, I inferred from the passage that God meant all the people, and that if he meant to feed a few and starve a few it was certainly a selfish principle, or if he intended we should all hav plenty, God simply failed to keep his promis; and I offered him his choice of apples. But he got mad, saying Infidels had no right to infer anything. I leave this last argument for the thinking minds to draw their own conclusions.

I hav read your publications for some time, but hav, I must say, been a paying member but a short time. I am promised subscriptions in the near future. Wishing yourself and paper a long life, I remain, as ever, A lasting friend of freedom,

D. S. PETERS.

Attempt at Solution.

March 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER of Aug. 15, 1891, publishes "A Problem" over the subscription of Holt as the propounder. Mr. Holt admits that intelligences beyond ourselvs are indubitable facts, then goes on to discuss the machinery of human thought—the brain—and argues that because its mutilation diminishes its power, therefore its complete destruction necessitates the complete destruction of consciousness as its belongings, and implies an end to individual thought.

The whole body is a machine; the grist is derived from earth (and air) products, and has, so to speak, two hoppers; into one are poured the molecular supplies from the earth, into the other the chemical constituents of air in proportion of one part of solid to fifteen parts gaseous. At death each source of supply claims its own; the ponderable gravitates, the imponderable levitates. A man may lose an arm, but does not lose the conscious use of it; even at times forgets the deprivation. Nature is so kind to the lobster that the lost claw is renewed and the invisible space of the old claw is filled up with a new one by growth.

Now, if the air claim is fifteen-sixteenths of us at death, it seems that all we lose at that change is the power to gravitate; and it is at least reasonable to suppose that any merchant owning fifteen-sixteenths of the old stock when a dissolution of partnership was declared would be able to start again.

Mr. Holt argues that when the visible portion of a thing partly or wholly comes to grief, the invisible belongings follow suit; but the data of support are wanting. If a little trepanning will recover a lost consciousness of the past under surgical treatment, it is only a step further to say, the great orderly energies of the universe hav natural ways of carrying on the work of self-consciousness in the hospitals of "the sweet by and by," for they hav only left behind what was unsuited to the purpose. One-fifteenth only of the body is returned to the earth—described somewhere as "dust to dust"—while all the rest the same authority describes as the spirit (breath) returning to its Origin. AN INVESTIGATOR.

The Bible Exposed.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Feb. 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I never hav written to you, although I am one of your readers. I am not in one place long enough at a time to be a subscriber. I can get hold of the paper almost any time. I used to belong to the Christian church or Christ church. I thought, like thousands of others, that the Bible was the only book, and that Christ was the savior of the world, and God ruled the world; that he sent the rain on the unjust as well as the just. But I suppose you know that a man must get his eyes open some time, and I must say I got mine open in western Kansas. I went out in Osborn county, spent the last cent to get my crop in, and trusted to the God of the Bible to send the rain, but it never came, and my crop burnt up and I lost everything I had, and when it began to get dry the Christian people of all sects got together to pray for rain, and the more they prayed the hotter it got, and everything was burnt up. That opened my eyes. I commenced to investigate for myself. I found I was not a disciple of Christ, for in Luke xiv, 26, Christ said: "If any man come to me, and hate not his father and mother, and wife and children, and brethren and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." Now, what do you think of a Christ like that? I looked at my own heart, and I knew I loved my parents and my brothers and sisters, and to think I had to hate my wife and my children and myself, to be a disciple of such a fanatic fool as that. I said, No! So I went at it, as the saying is, tooth and toenails. I found that the God of the Bible was a nasty, filthy, dirty, angry, murdering God. Now, to prove it, I will cite a few passages of the Bible. It is too nasty to go in your paper in full, so I want your readers to look it up: Deut. xxiii, 1; xxv, 11; xxviii, 36-57. 1 Sam. xxv, 34. 1 Kings xiv, 15; xx, 21. Job iii, 10, 11; xxiii, 10; xxxi, 9, 18; xl, 15, 17. Psalms lxxi, 6, 7. Songs of Solomon vii, 1-7. Jere. l, 11. Ezek. iv, 12, 15. Mal. ii, 1-3. Now, then, if you would print such nasty stuff as all that you would be arrested, and you would be sent to the penitentiary or mobbed, and still that filthy old book can be sent through the mails and never a word said about it. If a man wants to learn low-down, mean, nasty stuff, let him study the Bible; he can be a professor in a little while. That is all it is fit for, and to uphold priests and preachers in their idleness. Now, I want every man and woman to compare Luke xiv, 26, with Eph. v, 25, and see which taught the best code of merits, Paul or Christ. So now I will close, hoping you a long life and your paper a sure success. And if you hav any old copies of your paper I can help you to get subscribers, if you will send me some samples, especially of date Feb. 6, 1892.

W. S. PHILLIPS.

A Lofty Character Eloquently Described.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Feb. 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: On Feb. 16, 1892, Mr. John Riggin, of Los Angeles, Cal., paid the debt of nature and ceased to be as a conscious physical entity. He was in his eighty-second year, and passed away as peacefully as sleep steals over the weary when the shades of night hav fallen. Mr. Riggin was an outspoken Freethinker, and believed, as Solomon proclaimed in his wisdom, that "all go unto one place; all are of the dust and all turn to dust again." He had neither hopes nor fears of the future, but died with that calm resignation which ever prevails with the man of philosophical mind. He was born in Maryland, and went to St. Louis, Mo., in 1828, where he remained for fifty-four years, being a merchant and real estate man during that time. He was a prominent man in city affairs during the Rebellion, and was widely known as a just, wise, and honorable person. He was a personal acquaintance of General Grant, and had a son who served on Grant's staff from Paducah to Appomattox, and was mustered out as brigadier-general. Mr. Riggin came to Los Angeles about ten years ago, and has been identified with all Freethought movements ever since. His generous hand was ever open to aid the advancement of Liberalism, and he was not only a subscriber to numerous publications, but he put them in circulation when read, and with earnest enthusiasm sought to spread the light of reason and common sense. He was raised in a religious community, where reason was held in subjection to religion, and mental slavery to priestcraft was the rule of the times. But alone and unaided, over sixty years ago, he broke the fetters of superstition; and from that day to the day of his death he had no use for preachers or theology. He realized that this world was the only one we know anything about, and made the most of it. He cultivated no fears regarding another and the possibility that his soul might find it unpleasant, for as he remarked to me more than once, "I don't know I hav any soul." Like many others, his life was a demonstrated fact that a belief in religious dogmas, eternal torment, and the wrath of God was unnecessary to insure right conduct in living, and he left a record that needs no apology, no concealment. The books of the brightest intellects that lead progressiv thought filled his library, and during recent years, since the effect of age upon the body prevented close attention to business, he was a great reader; and what was known about this world and its affairs was chosen in preference to what somebody thinks of another. He preferred the practical to the visionary, and no man could arouse his interest in theories and speculations beyond the reach of knowledge. He did not care what this person or that person believed, but said, Tell us what you know. He realized that the happiness and welfare of mankind was more dependent on knowledge of our physical bodies and their needs and requirements, than on putativ conditions of the soul in some other world; and he studied and read accordingly. In a world filled with sickness, misery, and ignorance, he saw that science instead of theology would bless the world, and all hopes for the future improvement of the race must rest on science alone. He had a remarkably firm and methodical mind, and this mind, despite bodily weakness, remained clear and activ to the last, and a few days before his death, when talking was an effort, he wrote these lines: "Having no inclination to punish enemies; no anxiety for the present; no vain regrets for the past; no fears for the future, I am in every respect ready for death—the inevitable end." He died as he had lived for over sixty years, free from superstition. He was a Freethinker while living, and wished to be known as such when dead; but relativs lacked the courage to oppose custom, so one of the "ninety thousand" mumbled doctrins over his remains which he rejected while living.

Thus ended the existence, so closed the drama of life, of one of the best and kindest men that it has ever been my fortune to know; and long in the memory of many friends will liv the name and recollections of John Riggin. C. SEVERANCE.

The Clergyman's Side.

FAIRHAVEN, WASH., March 26, E.M. 292.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been doing some missionary work with my papers, and sent to Rev. J. C. Wright the paper of the 12th of March, which contained an article by J. Edw. S. He came to me and said he would reply, and I said I would like to hav him, so his reply I inclose herewith. I hope you can giv it space, for I would like to hear more from J. Edw. S. Mr. Wright is a Congregational Christian, occupying that position here.

RICHARD SHARPLESS.

Through the kindness of a fellow-citizen a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 12th came into my hands. One article of special interest to my friend was entitled, "If the Church Wants Thinkers It Must Giv Something to Think About."

This sounds, and seems, reasonable, and I am sure that a very large majority of Christian ministers will frankly concede the claim.

Every preacher, like every other public speaker, should "giv something to think about." But whilst admitting this let us not forget that the true minister of the gospel is not a moral philosopher, not a metaphysician, not even, in the first instance, a teacher. He is primarily a herald, a messenger. His first duty is to deliver a message from his all-father to his children. A message which he himself—if he is an honest man—believes, and his most earnest desire is that others may receive it and act upon it.

This reminder is offered not as an apology but in simple justice to the minister.

And now in regard to the questions proposed by J. Edw. S. That they are difficult questions goes without saying. Indeed, it is probable that no man could answer all of them to the entire satisfaction of any other man.

It seems to me that most of our definitions are like that given by Plato concerning man, "A two-legged animal without feathers," a definition which his cynical neighbors easily caricatured.

Bearing this thought in mind, I will modestly offer my explanation or reply to the questions proposed by friend J. Edw. S.

I. "Giv such an idea of God as will suggest his nature, attributes, and location. Does he see, hear, and think?"

Concerning his nature the definition given by Jesus (see John iv, 24), "God is a spirit," meets my desire. A spirit, as I apprehend it, is a being without fleshly or material qualities. His attributes I believe to be infinit power, wisdom, justice, mercy, and purity. As to his location, I do not believe that can be either apprehended or expressed by human beings. To locate is to limit, and my God has no limitations.

He certainly sees, hears, and thinks, though not in the limited sense that we do.

II. (1) "Was Christ's death on the cross a necessary sacrifice? (2) In what way does it affect me? (3) In what way did his death facilitate salvation?"

(1) Yes; sacrifice is at once the most essential necessity and most glorious manifestation of human life.

Every sphere of our life is ennobled and elevated by it. Christ had ever taught that men should be true and do right and never fear the consequences. If he had shrunk from the cross he would hav been recreant to his own teaching, i.e., a false and not a true man.

(2) As I believe, Jesus died for love and truth's sake, and in that measure that you are seeking to conform your life to love and truth Christ's death will be an inspiring example to you.

(3) By salvation I mean character. Character in its highest perfection can only be attained through loving sacrifice. Christ sacrificed for the sake of the race.

In other words, he was the representativ man, and I believe there is no salvation for any man who is not a "partaker of Christ's sufferings," thus following in his steps. Salvation is not a mantle that Jesus throws over a man to cover up his sin, but a method whereby every man may crush out his own sin and cultivate purity. When this work is perfected he is saved.

III. "Is there a heaven and hell?"

I understand these terms to mean condition rather than location. "The kingdom of heaven is within you." That man is in heaven, in a sense, who is in perfect harmony with the law of his own nature—who is loyal to the highest truth that he knows. Walking in light and seeking and loving light. Yet it does not seem to me incredible that a gathering-place has been arranged for spirits of like desires and qualities.

Outside of the Bible are the almost universal opinions and conceptions of the race in regard to a future of rewards and penalties.

IV. "Is the holy Bible inspired? Is it strictly true in every particular? Is it the only foundation for the Christian faith?"

Yes; I believe it is inspired. That is, that it contains what, for lack of a better term, I would call a divine element.

No, it is not true in every particular. Yes, and no. It affords the historical facts upon which an intelligent Christian life is based and built up. Yet in a broad sense, a man might be a Christian without reading or even hearing of the Bible. That is, he might in some measure liv like Christ, and therefore follow Christ, and be blessed and received by Christ.

V. "Is the soul material or immaterial? What proof is there besides the Bible that the soul preserves its consciousness after leaving the body?"

I apprehend you to mean spirit and not soul.

According to our best authorities the soul is that which givs life to the body —anima is the Latin term—and includes the "intellect, sensibilities, and will." But in addition to these faculties, which even the lower animals, in a measure, possess, man has other faculties—these we term spirit, viz., conscience, or sense of right or wrong; reverence, or love for goodness; and hope and love. These, I consider, constitute the spirit of man.

Neither in the Bible nor outside is there direct demonstration for the future existence of the spirit.

But the fact that our desires for love, justice, and knowledge are never fully satisfied in this life affords an inference that, to my mind, is stronger than any mathematical demonstration might be. It is easier and more reasonable to believe in a future existence than not to believe in it.

VI. "Is the church a human or divine institution? Does eternal pleasure or remorse depend upon sectarianism? Can anyone be saved who is not a church-member?"

(1) Like the Bible, the church is partly a divine and partly a human institution.

(2) No.

(3) Yes. Salvation does not depend upon creed nor church connection at all. "God is no respecter of persons"—much less of creeds. In religion, as in poetry, "worth," i.e., goodness, makes the man, the want of it the "fellow."

VII. "Is there any positiv knowledge of anything other than what we may see, hear, feel, taste, and smell?"

The term "positiv knowledge" is just a little hazy. It has been seriously questioned whether we can hav any positiv knowledge through the senses even.

We are very often deceived by our senses.

It seems to me that we are as justified in claiming as positiv, knowledge of things which we cannot test by the senses as of those which we can. Take that faculty we term memory—what is it? Can you see it, hear it, or feel it? Nevertheless, you believe in it.

We speak of love as something real, yet it is not tangible; and so of a host of other things. We believe in them most positivly, and yet they are not cognizable by the senses.

In conclusion I can but wish that my response to the questions may afford as much pleasure to those who consider them as the questions of J. Edw. S. hav given to me. Very truly, J. C. W.

Thinks Ingersoll Correct on the Tariff.

SHERIDAN, PA., Dec. 28, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Some late writers in THE TRUTH SEEKER find fault with Colonel Ingersoll's views on "Some Economic Questions" of the day, as promulgated in your issue of November 21st.

One of the fault-finders with whom I am personally acquainted, an intelligent and radical Freethinker, exclaims with charitable tenderness — half piteously: "How strange that he whose sound logic and matchless eloquence hav led thousands out of the slough of theological superstition should yet himself be enthralled by political superstition and worship the protection fetich!"

Another writer, seemingly more technical than courteous, applies the endearing appellation of "nonsense" and "absurd" to fancied disquisitions of the colonel that hav no existence in fact, and finally winds up his article by placing a Freethought tract in one hand of the colonel and an impoverishing tariff tract in the other, entertaining the hope, however, that "so great a man never wrote such grand mistakes."

Still another writer, "'way down East," finds fault with what he calls Mr. Ingersoll's "queer logic" as applied to his ideas of liberty and economic opinions.

It seems to me that a majority of the Radical writers on economic subjects lose sight of the fact that a tax must be collected in some way from the people in support of a government. How we may be able to do without some kind of a government passiv Anarchists and Socialists hav not yet been able to satisfactorily explain.

In my opinion such a thing will not happen, at least before millennial happiness.

The question then arises: How shall we collect a tax that is least burdensome to the people? An income tax was collected for some time after the war, until an almost unanimous cry went up from the people and press for its repeal as being obnoxious and too inquisitous.

Latterly a single tax on land has been advocated by the free trader Henry George. That means that the farmers of the country will please pay all the tax and be done with it. Very edifying indeed to the latter, the hardest-worked class in the country. This man had quite a following at one time, by that class who expected to slip through without paying any taxes, and in addition divide the farmer's property among themselvs—a polite way of confiscation.

The tax on tobacco and liquor—about the only monument remaining of internal post-war taxes—is still upheld by the followers of the Y. W. & M. C. T. U.'s—the T. being an abbreviation of tobacco as well as of temperance, and virtually meaning prohibition.

Mr. Hugh Pentecost, who stigmatizes all tax collections as highway robberies, infamous, etc., etc., has among his followers the Anti-Poverty Society, Socialists, Anarchists, etc.

Contrary to the advice of these self-constituted pseudo-economists, all civilized countries move steadily on and collect a tax on imports. England is the only exception to the general rule; but their farming classes are even now crying loud to hav our cereals taxed to save them from utter ruin.

Are all these other countries still in the "slough of political superstition" that worship the protection fetich?

One of the colonel's criticisers says he "knows of scarcely a reputable writer on political economy (who has no ax to grind) but who is a free trader." Perhaps this last word is wrongly spelled and should be traitor. He is careful, however, not to mention any names. but admits that such writers are called "theorists, visionaries," and he might hav added extremists, and mentioned the would-be speaker and free trader Mills, and at least a few others of his stamp, who hav no axes to grind (?).

To say that the best writers on political economy are all, or nearly all, on one side, free traders, is a very broad assertion.

Let me examin this question a little further by producing some practical facts. Before doing so I will quote a few lines from "Protection or Free Trade," by Henry George, page 125. He there says: "Had we never embraced the policy of protection we should to-day hav been the first of iron-producers. The advantage that Great Britain has over us is simply that she has abandoned the repressiv system of protection, while we hav increased it."

Now, under this "repressiv system of protection," we hav increased the production of steel in our country in the last twenty-six years from five hundred tons made in two Bessemer convectors to the enormous total output for the year 1890 of 4,277,071 gross tons, made in eighty-five convectors—an amount larger than was produced in this year by any other country in the world, England not excepted.

This is 8,554 times the tonnage of 1865.

The Chicago Rolling Mill Company on May 24 and 25, 1865, rolled six steel rails. These were the first steel rails produced in America, and were laid in the track of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. Today the country is girdled by such rails for thousands and thousands of miles, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the great lakes to the gulf.

It is almost a dream, a phantom! but it is not "theory," or visionary; it is a materialized specter, a practical fact—rather "killing" to the "best" (?) writers on political economy.

It is the same with pig-iron. We hav nearly doubled our production in four years, it being 5,683,329 gross tons in 1886 as against the enormous output of 9,202,703 gross tons for 1890. This is in excess of the production of any other country.

With regard to the woolen industries of our country under "this repressiv system of protection," it is the same story over again. While our imports decreased $20,000,000 in the twelve months preceding Oct. 1, 1890, our home production was correspondingly stimulated and increased. These are stubborn facts, and not the wild vaporings of visionary theorists.

If the tin plant is sufficiently nurtured, in my opinion the plant will grow to maturity in less time than it took steel. This is theorizing, but it is in the nature of a scientific hypothesis, a deduction based on material fact.

One of the critics of Colonel Ingersoll's bookkeeping labors under a misapprehension of the facts. The colonel does not double up the figures, as he would hav us believe. He makes the simple statement that if a ton of steel rails is produced in this country, costing $30, both the money paid for raw material and labor done to produce the steel, and the ton of steel itself, are all in this country; and if we buy the steel in England for $25 the money which is expended for labor and material goes out of our own country to England; whether in shape of gold, cereals, or meats really does not matter. It is paid in some shape to English producers instead of to the American. In other words, Colonel Ingersoll would sooner pay our producers $30 per ton for steel rails than $25 to the English, knowing at the same time the money would remain in this country, and the extra $5 would go principally to our working classes in enhanced wages.

Any person that will take the time and trouble to make calculation of the difference in the wages paid in the two countries will find the above observation to be substantially correct.

Mr. D. Webster Groh in THE TRUTH SEEKER of December 12th wants Colonel Ingersoll to keep books as follows:

United States debtor to the expenditure of $30 worth of labor....	$30 00
United States creditor by $25 worth of home-made steel rails	25 00
Deficit $5 worth of wasted labor.....	$ 5 00

He should hav said that the $5 so-called deficit was paid to American workmen in excess of British wages.

The natural result of Mr. Groh's ideal economy would, in my opinion, metamorphose our many and various industries into an exclusivly agricultural one, or nearly so. Or, as another possible result, reduce the wages of our industrial classes to the level of the European.

If we had imported all the steel that was produced and principally used in our country for the year 1890, it would hav necessitated an expenditure of over 100,000,000 bushels of wheat for one article alone.

What? Make this country an agricultural country pure and simple? No, never!

Look at Russia in a year of failure of the crops. Why, if reports are reliable, their peasants are starving by the thousand. No! Giv us a country of diversified industries.

If we cannot compete in the world's market with all of our products, let us at least preserve the home market for such of our industries as are still in their infancy.

Farmers generally hav no idea of the value of this home market. I think that I am within bounds when I say that nineteen-twentieths of all the produce raised on the farm goes into this home market.

Why should we on a venture, under a proposed system of free trade, break down this golden home market in search of a visionary one? Yes, why, indeed, should we kill the "goose that lays the golden egg?"

Again, we hear the plaintiv cry of the farmer's friend (?): Giv us free raw material and we will command the markets of the world. About the only thing a farmer raises is raw material and children.

Now, we hav the raw material cotton free right at our doors. We hav skilled workmen, machinery, etc., and can make as good a grade of cotton goods as is made elsewhere. Yet even to-day we cannot compete with England in price. She is selling from twenty-five to forty million dollars' worth of cotton goods a year, right in our markets, even after paying extra two ocean freights. Colonel Ingersoll is about right when he proposes to exclude from our markets things that we can just as well produce ourselvs, and put all other articles on the free list.

The true policy is: Don't employ a person to do work for you that you can do for yourself; don't spend money before you hav earned it, and you are bound to get rich. "Blessed are the poor?" No. Blessed are the rich, for they shall inherit the earth and the comforts of life.

RICHARD LECHNER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

A Rose for Thee.

From out my heart I pluck a rose
For thee, dear friend, for thee;
In Friendship's soil it livs and grows,
And blooms eternally. S. H. W.

Bessie's Opinion.

Bessie went to church that morning;
She had never been before,
"But she's old enough," said mamma;
"Three years old, and almost four."

She had promised to be quiet;
"No, indeed, she wouldn't cry!"
Holding tight to papa's finger,
Off she went with sparkling eye.

Wonderingly she saw the people,
Saw the flowers and the rest,
Gazed up at the lofty arches,
But the music pleased her best.

When it ceased and came the sermon,
Bessie frowned and fidgeted.
"'Sh, be quiet, Bess!" said mamma.
But she shook her little head,

Stood upon the red pew-cushion,
Waved her hand in queenly way
Toward the preacher, toward the organ—
"Man, be quiet! Band, you play!"

—M. Heten Frazer Lovett in the Churchman.

Legend.—Continued.

"I hear much about sweetness," said Jane, "but yesterday I saw several ladies and gentlemen engaged in conversation. One Liberal young lady, not very wealthy, left them all, and smiling sweetly, walked with me to the provision store. Look here—what a basketful she bought for me. I then passed by a large warehouse where I saw a St. Bernard dog covered with little, wooly curls, hunting for his master; and though he was restless and anxious, if persons spoke to him he would reach forward and kiss their hands. If you were sick or half frozen he would lead you to a comfortable place. I am speaking of a poor dog.

"Then I came to a place where rich ladies, fresh from the sacrament, were boasting that they had overpowered the city council and forced poor widows to close their little stores on holy Sunday, though that was their best morning for business, for workingmen who were paid off Saturday night could then buy food for their families. A billionaire Christian lady got out of her carriage, when Miss Patty Parasite crawled up to her and kissing her hind foot exclaimed, 'Oh, I would rather be caught in Tophet than in the World's Fair on Sunday.' I remarked," said Jane, "that the Pharisees ought to be at the World's Fair with scripture texts pinned to their heads and shoulders." All such people are worshiping Satan, but they seem to be ignorant of the fact.

Lexington, March 30, 1892. ALHAZA.

P.S.—"Come, Ravy," said Jane, weeping, "let us carry some medicin to the poor who are sick and suffering. Mrs. Billionaire, a noted Christian, is out now frightening the destitute sick, without offering money, or the simplest remedy, which is cruel and wicked conduct." A.

What the Little Folks Are Saying.

Little Winifred said she would like to make up a prayer herself, and this was the form of it: "O Lord, please take care of me through the night. When daylight comes I'll look out for myself!"

A small epicure, while saying the Lord's prayer at her mother's knee the other evening, varied the usual formula by substituting, "Giv us this day our daily chicken." "I thought I might just as well ask for something I liked while I was about it," she said, with childish faith, "and I just love fried chicken!"

Tommy had been a bad boy—a very bad boy indeed. His pious mother shut him in a dark closet and bade him tell Jesus all the wicked things he had done, and Jesus would, by the inner voice, tell him what he thought of such a little sinner. After a while Tommy emerged from his confinement quite radiant. "Did you tell Jesus all your wicked actions?" inquired his mother. "Yes, I did." "And what did our good savior say?" "Well, after he heard it all, he said, 'Great Scott! I've seen a darned sight worse boys than you!'"

A little boy of three was kneeling at his mother's side saying his evening prayers. In the midst of them he stopped and said, "But, mother, I don't love Jesus." The mother, dear, pious soul, young, and this the only lamb, was quite shocked and said, "But, Henry, you must love Jesus; you owe him all you hav—father, mother, what you wear, all your pleasure, what you eat, everything!" There was a long pause, the little head was bowed, then suddenly the baby looked up, complete satisfaction beaming upon his face, and said, "Yes, mother, but Dan brings the milk."

A Surprise Party.

Little Jack: "Mamma, can I go to the surprise party at Billy Bunt's to-night?"

Mamma: "Who are going?"

"Oh, all the boys; 'bout a hundred."

"Mercy! Perhaps you won't be welcome."

"Oh, yes, indeed. Billy invited us hisself."

"He did? Then who is to be surprised?"

"I dunno. His mother I guess."

Answer to Riddle.

Mr. Dashwood, being at the point of death, sent for his friends and relativs. They sent for Dr. Childs, who penned a few lines to Dr. Barns and implored his assistance; but before he arrived the invalid died, and the undertaker was sent for.

Correspondence.

COALING, ALA., March 24, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: Please find inclosed a piece I wrote while I had nothing else to do. Please look over it, and if you think it is worth printing, please do so. I think it is a very good piece, and hope you will think so, too. If it is not worth printing (but I hope it is), I suppose you hav a wastebasket, so just put it in there; but I do hope you will not hav to put it in there, as I would like very much to see it in print.

Yours, WALTER WARD.

GOLDTHWAITE, TEX., March 23, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought that I would drop you a few lines for my first time. Well, I am going to school, and I like my teacher very well. Her name is Miss Susan Cassidy. I am studying arithmetic, reading, grammar, spelling, geography, physiology, and am getting along very slowly. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for some time, and I like to read the Children's Corner. This is my first letter to the Corner. I am going to the E. G. C.; it is about the nicest house in the western part of Texas. I hav not been to school for about two weeks, and will get behind in my studies. I hav been sick. Well, I guess I must close. I want to get some girl or boy to correspond with me. I will close now, as I hav already taken up too much time. I remain,

With best wishes, ROSA MCPHERSON.

[Study hard, for now is the time to store your mind with useful knowledge.—ED. C. C.]

OXFORD, N. S., March 28, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner, and the first I hav seen from Nova Scotia or any other part of the Dominion. So I will make a start to keep up our side of the line. I hav taken a quarter of music lessons, and can play quite a number of tunes on the organ. I am in the ninth grade in our school. The Methodists hav had a series of revival meetings here and hav succeeded very well in bringing people to their so-called "God." I like the Corner very much, and also hope—like some others—that it will be a large paper in the near future. I wish some of the children of the Corner to write to me, and I will gladly write back to them. If you wish I will write again and tell all about the town in which I liv.

I will close, wishing success to the Corner.

Yours truly,
ROBERT SCHURMANN.

P.S.—My address is Oxford, Cumb county, N. S.

[Yes, we shall be pleased to hav Robert tell us about Oxford.—ED. C. C.]

OAK MILLS, KAN., March 25, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I now seat myself to write my first letter to the Children's Corner. We hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a number of years, and like it splendid. I do not get to read a great deal, as I hav been taking a course in music for the past two years. I hav practiced seven hours almost every day this winter. So it keeps me busy. I take lessons on the piano and violin. There is nothing I like much better than music unless it is to make fun of preachers. I sing in the choir when I go to church. But it is for my own pleasure, and because all the pretty girls sit in the choir. I went to a revival one night and a lady came and took hold of my hand and asked me if I did not want to join the church. She said that I was too good a boy to be an Infidel. I told her that she never saw an Infidel that was any other way. And she did not say another word to me. So, not getting religion that night, I remain,

Your Infidel friend,
JOHN J. I. REMSBURG.

[Welcome, John, to a front seat, with all the other good boys and good girls.—ED. C. C.]

ARCH BEACH, CAL., March 25, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend and Helper: Please, may a stranger be permitted into your bright little Corner circle?

I hav said "stranger." Well, that I may be to you, but let me say you are not to me. No, nor any of your little correspondents. For I take great interest in the Corner.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is, and has been for many years, a weekly visitor to our home. I read every word in it, from first page to last, including advertisements, and enjoy the titles of books I can read only in imagination.

We hailed with pleasure the announcement of S. P. Putnam's lecture at Arch Beach on the 3d. Quite an event for that little place, and one or two more would stir the people up considerably. Almost everybody is Christian here, but there are a few Liberal families. At the lecture my mother purchased a book by Colonel Ingersoll, which we are perusing with interest.

My brother and I had a religious talk with two Christian friends of ours last Sunday. They are quite Liberal and do not know it, discarding many biblical ideas which do not "fit the times;" pretended they had read Ingersoll's works and found them full of evil, but could not recall one single word he had ever uttered against morality and right. Good reason why—because there are none in any of his books. But I must not make my first letter too long, so will close, hoping Mr. Putnam will giv us another lecture erelong.

From a sixteen-year-old Atheist,
HARRIET E. THURSTON.

[Come again and often, Harriet.—ED. C. C.].

OAK MILLS, KAN., March 27, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Esteemed Friend: We hav been having here in Kansas the dreariest March weather I ever experienced. The azure blue has for many weeks been o'ercast by a sheet of misty clouds, but on awakening this moruing I was delighted to see the majestic sun peeping through the lattice-work of my window, and making a bright checkered painting on the floor. It is now almost the close of day, and as I sit here at my table, that same majestic heavenly body whose brilliant rays I gladly welcomed to my window this morning is, at this moment, kissing the golden occident, and leaving behind a glorious promis of to-morrow.

Your article in the Scientific column on "The Ugly Worm" was read with pleasure, as was also the account of your visit in the country, which appeared in the Corner. I also notice a number of very interesting letters and essays from the young folks. It seems to me that the Corner is growing better all the time, and I am pleased to see this improvement.

I notice that the Freethinkers' Magazine has been greatly enlarged and improved, and it makes a beautiful ornament for any Freethinker's center-table. It is so neat and clean, the typography is excellent, its contents are valuable, and I like it altogether; it is a publication that is a credit to the cause of mental freedom in America. The March number contains portraits of some of the members of the Young Men's Freethought Temperance Society, conspicuous among which I notice the bright, charming features of one of the valuable contributors to our Corner, Ida A. Ballou. The frontispiece is a fine likeness of the noble historian of Freethought, James Parton.

I hav just finished reading "The Candle from Under the Bushel," by Wm. Hart, and I find it an unanswerable little book. It is just the thing for missionary work, and I hope it will hav a large circulation. McCann's "Myth of the Great Deluge" is also a splendid work for this purpose.

My collection of curios is growing all the time, and I am safe in saying that I hav one of the finest private collections in this state. My prehistoric collection, in particular, is assuming immense proportions, as it is composed of nearly every kind of rare and curious stone objects, wrought out by the patient, skilful hand of some aboriginal sculptor. I hav just received from a friend in Iowa a number of stone axes, one of them being the largest specimen I hav ever seen. It is ten and a half inches long, six and a half wide, four and a half thick, and weighs fourteen pounds. One of them is only about three inches long and two inches wide; thus the two specimens present quite a contrast. I hav also received from various parts of the country a lot of flint hoes, war-club heads, arrow-points, and many other implements; but the most valuable addition is a long copper needle from the famous mound at Cahokia, Ill. This mound is the greatest work of the mound-builders in America. A friend in Canada kindly sent me two copper kettles, an iron tomahawk, a silver breastplate, a lot of beads, and other relics from the old Jesuit mission on the Shebeshekong river in Canada. They are about two hundred years old. For an account of the Jesuit missionaries in Canada see Parkman's "History of Canada."

I am at present engaged in writing a book on prehistoric man in Kansas. I intend to present a large amount of evidence to show that Kansas was occupied by man about the time of the glacial period, while the mounds in Kansas are the remains of the mound-builders, who built the immense earthworks in the Mississippi valley. My claims will be substantiated by the testimony of many prominent scientists. The book will be ready about the latter part of September.

Inclosed you will find a letter from my brother John. He is, as you will see by his letter, a musician. He has just composed a piece of music which is very pretty.

With kind regards to you and the readers of the Corner,

Your friend, GEO. J. REMSBURG.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Aronnd the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth, 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

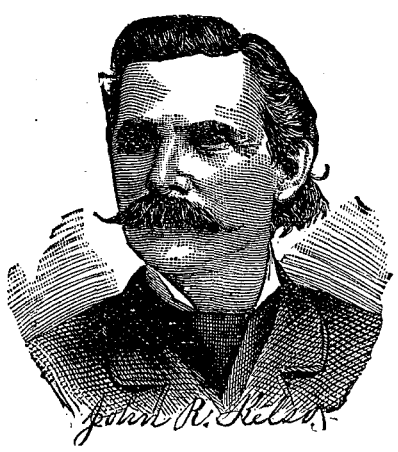
CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ONLY 2 CENTS.



JUST PUBLISHED.

There has just been published for general circulation a most interesting pamphlet, containing a good likeness of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll and articles from the following well-known writers: R. G. Ingersoll, Thaddeus B. Wakeman, B. F. Underwood, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Helen H. Gardener, Rev. Henry Frank, Nelly Booth Simmons, A. B. Bradford, Parker Pillsbury, Lucy N. Colman, Capt. R. C. Adams, Prof. A. L. Rawson, Lyman C. Howe, Susan H. Wixon, Allen Pringle, Wm. Emmette Coleman, Harry Hoover, Mrs. M. A. Freeman, Sara Underwood, Rev. J. C. Grumbine, J. J. McCabe, Lydia R. Chase, Henry M. Taber, J. C. Watkins, Dr. Edward Montgomery, Emma Rood Tuttle, Dr. Juliet Severance, Hudson Tuttle, E. C. Walker, Judge C. B. Waite, Dyer D. Lum, Voltairine de Cleyre, Lewis G. Janes and Dr. Richard Hodgson.

The publication will be forwarded to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of an American two-cent postage stamp.

Address FREETHINKERS' MAGAZINE, Buffalo, N. Y.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

THE

LOGIC OF DEATH,

—OR,—

Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

THE

LOGIC OF LIFE,

—DEDUCED FROM—

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

News of the Week.

CHRISTIAN journals are assailing Walt Whitman's literary work.

IN the Michigan municipal elections Catholics and anti-Catholics were opposed.

WALT WHITMAN left a poem on Columbus which will be offered to the World's Fair.

THE steamships Conemaugh and District of Columbia are to be sent from American ports with relief to Russia.

ON the 5th a church at Olean, N. Y., was providentially struck by a cyclone, one person being killed and several injured.

THE latest cures by Rev. Father Adams, of Kingston, N. Y., were performed on a woman with cancer, and a lame boy, by rubbing them with holy relics and praying.

FRANK WHITE and Buffalo Black, self-styled prophets of the messiah, hav been released from the Guthrie jail on a habeas corpus writ, and the ghost dances will be renewed.

CONGRESSMAN HATCH of Missouri recently on the floor of the House spoke slightingly of Congressman Raynor of Maryland as "a Jew," for which he is censured by Hebrew journals.

SPAIN is in great terror over Anarchists on account of their attempt to blow up the chamber of deputies. France is in like alarm, and reports a plot of an Anarchist to become waiter in a club and poison its members.

M. RENAN said to an interviewer on the 8th: "Leo XIII. is not a great pope or diplomatist, merely an Italian litterateur; yet he is the busybody of the Catholic hierarchy, compelling the clergy to interfere in what does not concern them."

ON Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's visiting immoral resorts in New York in disguise to gather evidence, Colonel Ingersoll says: "He may hav had a good object in view, but no good purpose was ever well served by skulking methods and decoy tricks."

BROOKLYN clergymen and others denounce the directors of the Academy of Music for letting it to Colonel Ingersoll for his lecture, "Myth and Miracle." They are indignant also at the mayor and several judges for attending, as "men holding such positions should not aid by their presence a man who mocks at Christianity and despises God and Jesus Christ."

LIEUTENANT TOTTEN'S warning star which he said would appear on the 29th ult. to mark the first day of the seven years of judgment, was not on hand. He therefore made use of the dynamite violences in Paris, saying: "Look at the incidents in Paris yesterday, the beginning of the reign of terror. We hav passed the edge, and are in the seven years of judgment." "The terrors of the period," he says, "will be systematic, and increase geometrically, as did the seven years of famin in Egypt. At their termination, you will remember, there was one man who owned Egypt—land, cattle, men, and river. A word to the wise is sufficient."

CATHOLICS in Germany are stirring up a tremendous hostility to Emperor William because he allowed himself to be intimidated from pushing through the denominational school bill. In Dielefeld, Aachen, and Mayence there hav been noisy demonstrations in favor of reconsideration of the bill. In Hamburg a huge meeting in its favor became so disorderly that it had to be suppressed. The Catholics hav enlisted unexpected allies. The Kreuz-Zeitung, half of whose space was formerly filled with accounts of Jesuit intrigues, papal aggressions, and Catholic disloyalty, now denounces reports of such things as base calumnies of Atheists. This powerful journal, and the Volk, the organ of Pastor Stöcker, the extreme conservativ and Jew-baiter, are assailing Liberals savagely.

COLONEL INGERSOLL says: "There is a feeling, growing stronger, I think, against the second term. As long as presidents can hav a second term they will sacrifice everything to secure that, and they will distribute patronage where it will do the most good. I think for the average man in times of peace, when no great question is agitating the people, one term is enough. Mr. Harrison's administration has been good in the main, and he has given fair satisfaction. But I do not think he has earned a renomination, and I do not believe he will get it. He certainly has only few elements of popularity, and cannot expect to get a vote outside of his party. That man from Maine may loom up in spite of withdrawals and declinations. If the Republican party wanted to make a real good square fight, with protection for the issue, then McKinley would be the man. Harrison would better keep an eye on the man from Ohio. McKinley represents something and stands for something, and his nomination would mean a splendid struggle for principle and victory for the Republican party."

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - .10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW. WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.

Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP,
DARWINISM.
DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION,
JESUS NOT PERFECT.
UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

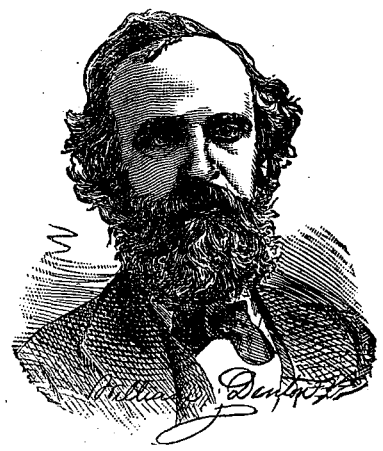
By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.



Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.

Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.

Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.

Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.

Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.

Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.

Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.

God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.

Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.

Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.

Is Spiritualism True? 10c.

Man's True Saviors. 10c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.

Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.

Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.

Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.

Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.

Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.

What Is Right? 10c.

What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.

Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 346 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF Millionaires Against Miners;
—OR—
THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By Henry D. Lloyd.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

If thou seekest to please, thou art lost. —Epictetus.

Fanatics always become tyrants whenever they obtain the power of doing mischief.—Voltaire.

Take theology from the world, and the churches can be schools and the cathedrals universities.—Ingersoll.

Old deeds for old people, and new deeds for new. Old people did not know enough once, perchance, to fetch fresh fuel to keep the fire a-going; new people put a little dry wood under a pot, and are whirled round the world with the speed of birds, in a way to kill old people.—Thoreau.

I will make a song for these states that no one state may under any circumstances be subjected to another state,
And I will make a song that there shall be comity by day and by night between all the states, and between any two of them,
And I will make a song for the ears of the president, full of weapons with menacing points.—Walt Whitman.

Neither in crime nor in madness is there anything strange or extraordinary. Both arise from settled and definit causes, which are just as accessible to our investigation as the laws of natural philosophy, except that the human mind is harder to understand, on account of its greater complexity. . . . It is a truth that each of us would become criminal or mad if he were placed in conditions favorable thereto.—Anon.

If the civilized Indo-European is compared with the highest mammalian brute, the gap is found great not only intellectually, but also physically, and a horror is then felt of the idea that man and certain animals, such as the higher apes, should stand in any genetic relationship. But if we take the red prognathous New Hollander or Bushman, whose body may almost be termed brutelike, and whose intellectual life is of the lowest grade, the gap appears by no means so great, and the comparison and juxtaposition of such a creature with ourselvs is by no means flattering. And who can assure us that the anthropoid apes now known, such as the gorilla, chimpanzee, and ourang, were really the mammals most like the human race that hav existed, or that in earlier times there were not men more savage and lower than are known at this day?—Kölliker.

The Praxiteles of the breathing marble was superseded by the sniveling saint. The esthetic flights of poetry, in its fiery magnificence, were to giv place to morbid drivel about the blood of a biped lamb. The practical science of Hero was to make way for a long series of sacred ages, in which everything ingenious was set down as the work of the devil. The thinkers of Alexandria were to make way for the hair-shirted and fanatical troglodytes whose withered flesh was eaten into holes with vermin, and who wore away the floor-stones of their caverns with their prayerful knees. The sun of philosophy sank in eclipse, and for a thousand years struggled in vain to flash through the clouds that were dense and murky red with the blood of Calvary. The glory of Athens had vanished; the grandeur of Rome was no more; Byzantium had flung over the Golden Horn the saltire flag of the half-mad preacher of Galilee. And, instead of the magnificent cities which rose under Ormuz and Zeus and Aphrodite and Ares, there arose under Jesus, tacked on to Jehovah, the miserable towns of a miserable faith. The hovels jostled the dunghills. In the streets, so-called, swine wallowed in the exuviæ of the living, and dogs crunched the bones of the dead. There was the ever-recurring rattle of the death-cart, and the Sweating Sickness and the Black Death peopled heaven with the elect and crammed hell with the damned. Europe had taken the Arles of the semi-Hebraic faith of misery and darkness, and the shackle was on Europe's brain and the sword in Europe's heart. The toleration of "Pagan" Rome was no more. The Jehovah-Jesus juggle of the Semitic and the Aryan had smitten the continent like a canker. The fires no longer burnt on the shrine of Vesta; they blazed in the market-place of every filthy but holy Christian city, and they scorched the flesh of Europe's best and bravest. The prayers of the devout and the insufferable stench of the burning flesh of live men and women rose together as a sweet-smelling savor unto God. The dishonest palterer was a sybarite in the abbey; the honest thinker expired in the agony of the rack. The infant faith had never drawn the milk of human kindness from the breast of a loving mother. Its first aliment was the blood of the illegitimate son of Mary, and, like Catharine de Medici, it literally bathed in blood, in the baths of its merciless crusades and its unsparing persecutions.—Saladin in God and His Book.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine, cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—The Straight; so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—The Just.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

Contents:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Co-operation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By Professor LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.
THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.
Testimonial To Walt Whitman.
BY
ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.
AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.
With a Portrait of Whitman.
AUTHORIZED EDITION.
Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.
Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.
The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel
(Mark iv, 21); or,
1,306 Questions to the Clergy:
And for the Consideration of Others.
Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.
BY WILLIAM HART.
Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:
Priest and Man.
A NOVEL.
By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.
An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.
1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery
Takes hold in this order:
Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,
Driving everything before it that ought to be out.
You know whether you need it or not.
Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.
Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.
Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.
The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.
Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.
Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.
Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.
Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.
Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.
Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.
The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.
Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.
Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,
OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.
By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Price, 10 cents
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.
By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.
Boards, - - - - - 40 cents.

The Proposed
POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.
In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.
By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.
Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.
Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Agnostic Annual
FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.
Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

DOWN THEY GO!
Best make American Stemwind Watches. 17 jewels, adjusted, pat. regulator, in silverine case, only $11; in 3 ounce coin silver, $16; 4 ounce, $18 (a few years ago $60). In best 14 kt. filled gold cases, open face, $20; hunting, $23 to $28; 14 kt. solid gold, $40 to $100; same, not adjusted, $3 less; 11 jwls. $3.50, and 7 jwls. $5 less (lower grade watches, $5, $4, and $2.50).
THE PERFECTED "OTTO WETTSTEIN" WATCH, much finer than above, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position 16 jwls. and all modern improvements, nickel movement, cased as above, $8 more, gilt mov't. $6 more. No one else in the world sends out so good a watch at the price.
LADIES' GOLD HUNTING AMERICAN WATCHES, latest styles, best filled, 7 jwls. $17; 11 jwls. $18.50; 15 jwls. $25; 14 kt. solid gold, $10 to $100 more. All sent prepaid, kept in order one year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory.
DIAMONDS: in rings, pins, drops, studs, etc., $10; $15; $25; $50; $100 to $1,000 per set. Cash refunded, if not 20 per cent below regular price, any time within one year.
WEDDING RINGS: Plain, chased, with pearls, emeralds, rubies, moonstones, opals, garnets, turquoise, solitaires or combinations, a specialty.
SUNDRIES: Rogers Bros.' triple-plated knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; tea spoons, $1.80; tables, $3.49; best spects. in the world, $1; pebbles, $2; 14 kt. gold, $5 more (send line of finest print you can read without glasses 14 inches from eyes); gold-headed canes, $8; $10; $15; $20. Best razor—a luxury—$3. Solid silver spoons, $1.70 per ounce. Souvenir spoons, silver, $1.25 to $2. Tea sets, $20 to $40; everything in the line of fancy table silver, novelties, plush, and art goods, gold pens, etc. All sent prepaid (except cutlery) subject to exchange or cash back.
OTTO WETTSTEIN.
Established 1857. Rochelle, Ill.
Send for price lists, beautiful cards in colors and gold of my Freethought badges (large and small), tracts, etc. Free.

"WHY"
I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.
Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.
ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A TEXT THAT MAY BE APPLIED TO THE CLERGY.

Though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.—Prov. xxvii, 22.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

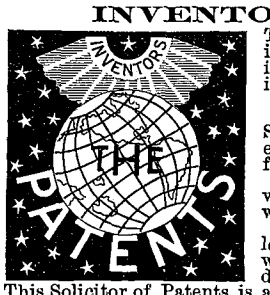
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.



Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo. cloth $1 00.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN.

Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free.

N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense.

This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

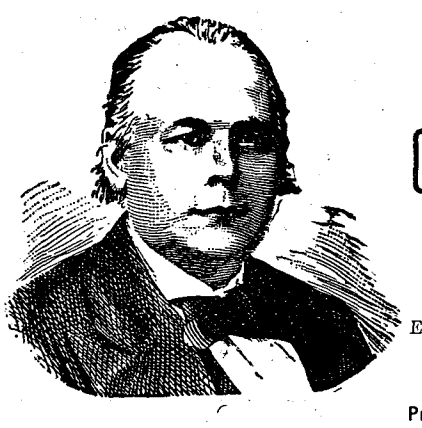
WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:



16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.
8	"	Thanksgiving.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.
14	"	Children and the Church.
10	"	Woman and the Church.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.
2	"	The Bible and Science.
25	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.
2	"	Prayer.
10	"	The Creeds.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.
2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	"	Missionaries.
1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	"	The Church and Slavery.
2	"	Priests and Politics.
4	"	Ireland and the Church.
2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
12	"	Some Allegories.
3	"	Heaven.
6	"	Hell.
7	"	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

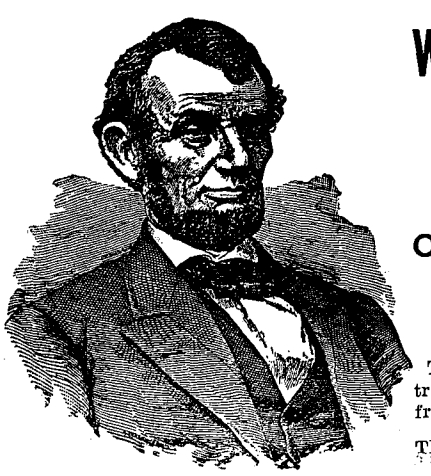
WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")



The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Pocket Theology.

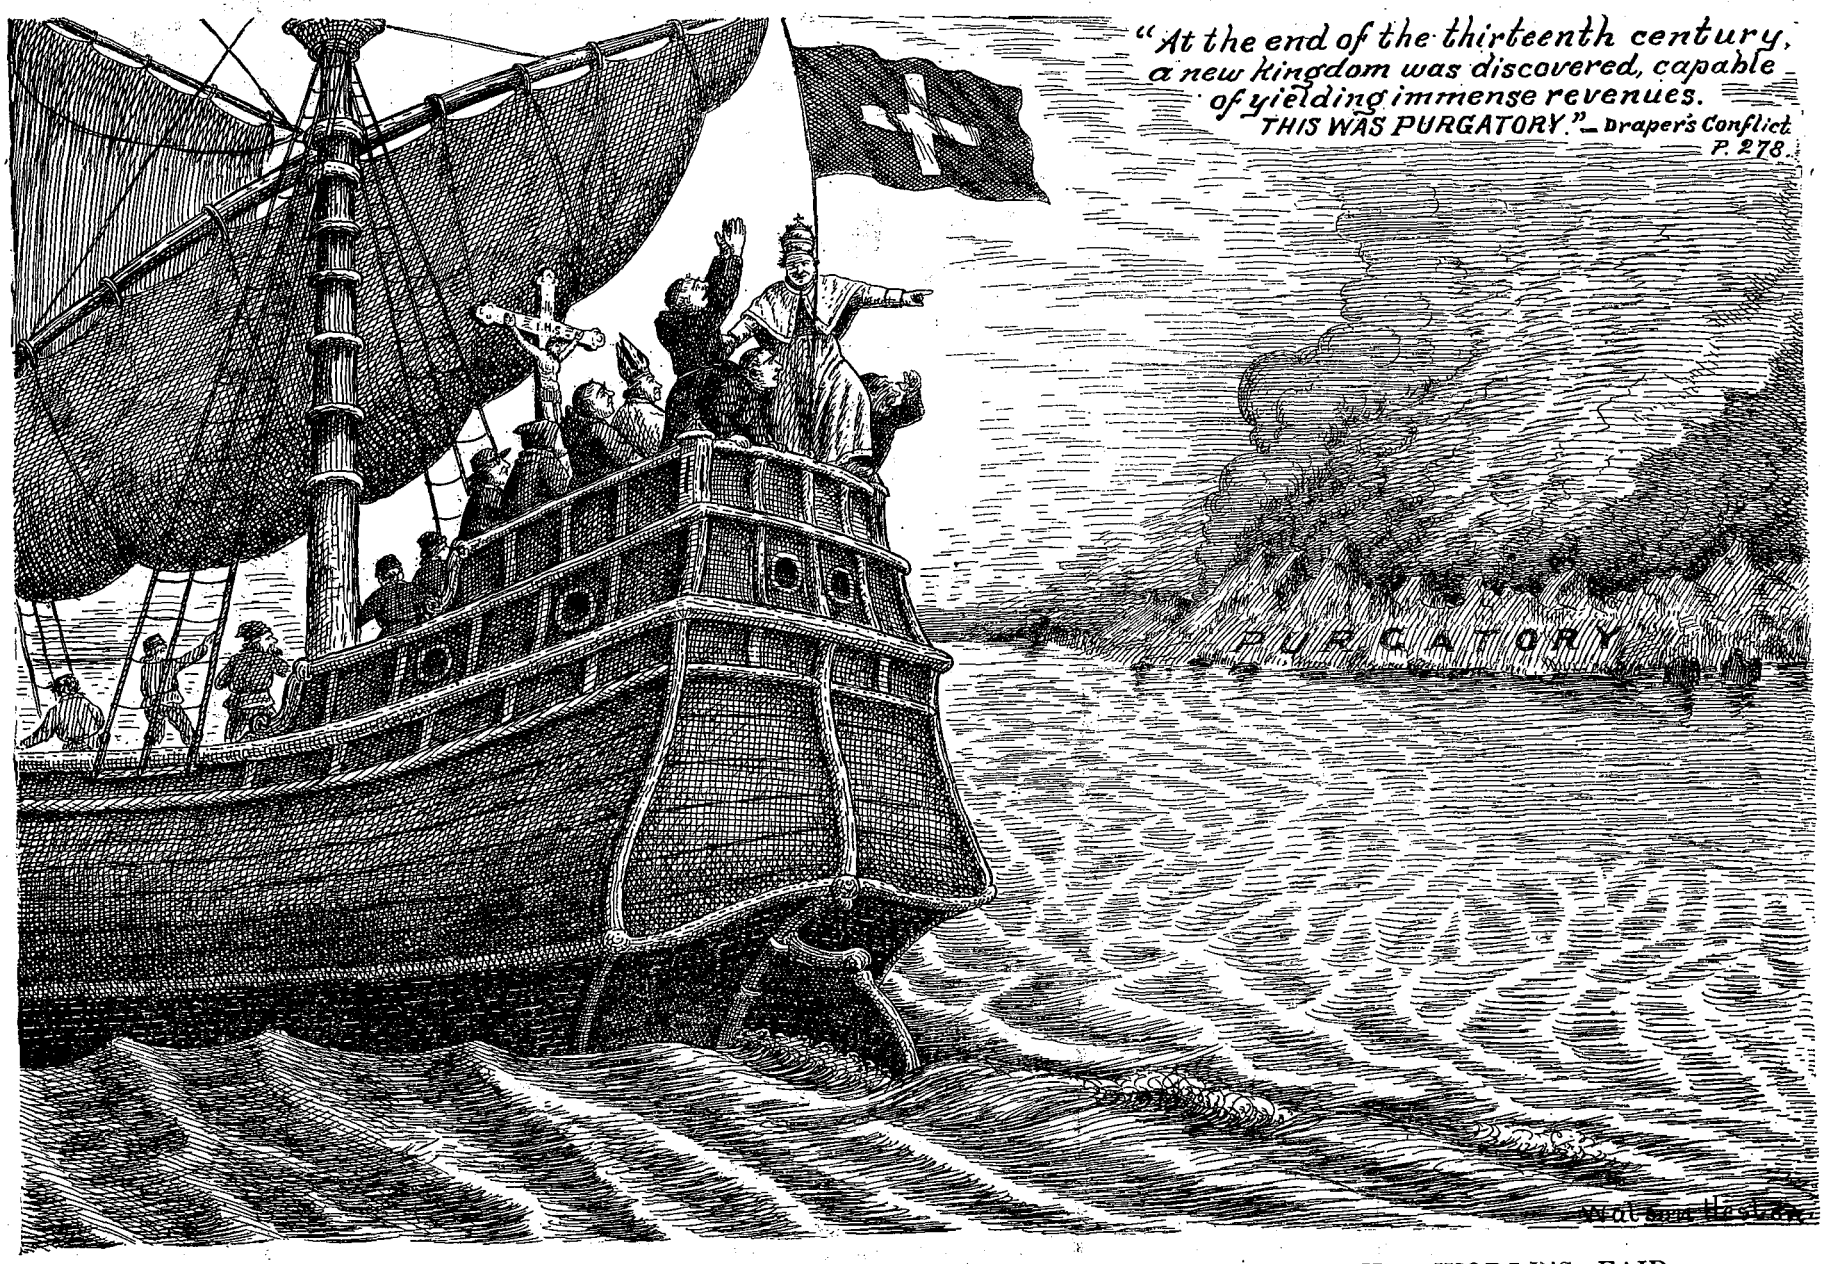
By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."



By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - 50 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 17. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 23, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A ROMAN CATHOLIC DISCOVERY THAT SHOULD BE REMEMBERED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 883 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF
ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Roussean. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 17. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 23, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 23, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Old Testament Shown Up.

From Lucifer.

"Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated, by Watson Heston. The Stories Being Humorously Told, and Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament." New York, Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place.

As a cartoonist Watson Heston has probably no equal living, as the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER are prepared to testify. The book before us has about one hundred and seventy full-page illustrations or delineations of Bible texts by Heston, besides about a dozen more illustrativ of the "Jonah and whale story," by another aspirant for distinction in this line. Each of these humorous crayon sketches is accompanied by a page of seriocomic explanation from the pen of some ready writer with taste and talent for this method of showing up the absurdities, the incongruities and crudities that are to be found on almost every page of the nondescript, and yet in many respects valuable, collection known as the "Old Testament scriptures."

"Desperate diseases require desperate remedies," is an old and truthful saying; and when we remember the mischief that has been wrought, and is still being done, by belief in the literal truth of these old Bible stories, Bible precepts, Bible heroes and heroins held up as examples for us to follow, it must be conceded that no amount of satire and ridicule—even though it may seem to our prejudices to be coarse and unfeeling—is uncalled for if it only serve the purpose of breaking the spell that holds the unreasoning devotee to a blind belief in the divine authority of these traditional records of an ignorant, barbarous, clannish and intensely vainglorious people.

This book is unique, none other even approaching it, except the similar collection sent out a year ago by the same enterprising publishers. It is cheap at the price, cloth $1.50, boards $1. Address the publishers or this office.

Confirmatory Views.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of the 2d instant we quoted from President Eliot's speech in Salt Lake likening the Mormons to the Puritans—a speech for which he has been soundly berated by his Massachusetts friend. Concerning this same speech the Sun of this city says: "We are not at all sure that his comparison of the Mormons with the Pilgrims is not fair. Neither the Mormons nor the people of Plymouth or Massachusetts Bay had the slightest idea of religious liberty. The immigrants to Massachusetts came to a new country for the purpose of worshiping God in their own manner, and raising thunder with any other form of worship. . . . Indignation created by the polygamous practices among the Mormons drove the colony westward, and there a theocracy was founded just as a theocracy had been founded in Massachusetts two hundred years before. . . . The fatal weakness was in assuming that it was in illustration of religious liberty. Both the Mormons and the founders of New England were exemplars of religious despotism."

That is very nearly correct. Neither the Puritans nor the Mormons—and we had almost said, nor any other Christian sect—care for liberty for others. What they want is the right to do as they please and make others do just as they do, whether pleased to do so or not. Perhaps the Quakers, the Baptists, and the Seventh-Day Adventists are the only exceptions to this rule; and their defense of equal religious liberty is probably made more ardent by the persecutions they hav each received from the other Christian sects. Fundamentally, anyone who believes that this is God's world, that he is the great ruler thereof, and that his rules are to be found in the Bible, can hav no proper conception of liberty.

But, nevertheless, these truths do not make the prosecutions of the Mormons by their fellow-Christians any less a persecution than were the Puritan attacks upon Quakers, Baptists, and so-called witches.

Dr. Parkhurst's Crusading Methods.

The criticisms of the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, president of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, for hiring abandoned women to commit crime, hav reached such proportions that he has felt it needful to make a public apology and defense. Naturally he has recourse to the old Jesuit motto, The end justifies the means. All spies and purchasers of crime quote this saying, and Howard Crosby, Mr. Parkhurst's predecessor, improved on it by saying that whenever a "righteous enemy"—meaning an enemy to Mr. Crosby's conception of righteousness—was to be destroyed it was right to deceive him.

The most important part of Dr. Parkhurst's apology, however, is his reiteration of his conviction that the Tammany Hall Roman Catholic police force is the protector of vice, because either they are paid for not molesting it, or derive a profit directly from it. This includes gambling dens, liquor saloons, and houses of ill-repute, and his object is to indict the police force rather than to convict the criminals he manufactures. He says:

"In the sermon which was preached from my pulpit on the 14th of February last the one point urged was that one of the greatest difficulties which the church has to encounter in the prosecution of its work is the license which is municipally allowed to vice. This was immediately met, on the part of municipal authorities, with a tempest of raillery which culminated in the presentment of the February grand jury. I was told that my charges were general, that I had no idea what I was talking about, and that the whole tendency of such vituperation was to bring the government into disrepute.

"In the sermon preached from the same pulpit four weeks later I accepted the situation and squared myself to it, or tried to, and took and maintained the position that not only were the general charges that I had previously made supported by facts, but, specifically, that liquor saloons, gambling houses, and houses of prostitution were protected by the police department, apparently for a valuable consideration.

"My contention was then, is now, and will continue to be, with the controling powers of the police department, considered as the guardian of criminality, meaning by that simply what was comprised in the presentment of the March grand jury, which held up that department before the people in the character of a criminal: and it still hangs there. The evidence which, with the aid of detectivs and friends, I was easily able to collect was secured with the distinct end of showing by unimpeachable testimony something of the extent, infamy, and publicity of certain crimes, with the necessary inference that if a police force as competent as ours is conceded to be, and in the possession of all those legal powers known to be accorded to it, fails to hold such crimes in stern check, it can only be because of having entered into some evil alliance with them. It was not at all a matter between me and any individual parties. When I went before the grand jury with 284 affidavits I said: 'Gentlemen, I hav no interest in the conviction of these parties. Evidence has not been secured against them for the sake of inducing you to indict them. My object has been solely to secure in the general mind an indictment against the police department.'

"When, therefore, for instance, the suit against the keeper of that low resort on 27th street is represented as a contention between Dr. Parkhurst and Hattie Adams, there is not a suggestion of truth in it. I hav no personal controversy with the keeper of any disorderly house or gambling house. My contention is only with the police, who allow the crimes of such houses to be so vile and accessible, in disregard of one of the rules of the department, which is that 'each patrolman must, by his vigilance, render it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for anyone to commit crime on his post.' My connection with the dispossess suit recently initiated against the lessee of the house just mentioned is due simply to the accident of my own knowledge of the character of that house, obtained for another purpose, but naturally enough utilized by the landlord, when it became necessary for him to make a show of attempting to dispossess his tenant. My only object in referring to this case is to blow out of the air the smoke that the police department and others in alliance with it are blowing into the air, and to bring clearly to the attention of the public the fact that the criminal par excellence is not Hattie Adams, nor 'Dink' Davis, nor 'Silver Dollar' Smith, but the police department, which the grand jury so vigorously scored. . . .

"At the same time, fellow-citizens, I do not ask you to approve my methods. They are approved in my own judgment and conscience, and that is enough for me. But I do appeal to you not to allow differences of opinion about methods to obscure the one object and end that we need to hav in view. If the presentment of the March grand jury is true in its statement and in its implications, the police department, to which we pay something like five millions a year, instead of doing its utmost to suppress gambling houses, houses of ill repute and excise violation, is their most efficient and trusted ally, it always being understood that most generous exception is made of every member of that force who has the integrity and courage to treat his position as a sacred trust. The police department, taking the expression broadly, is therefore as much your enemy as it is mine. I beg of you therefore utterly to forget me in the cause toward which the best powers that I know how to exercise are being devoted. I profoundly hate the conspicuity into which during the past six weeks I hav been brought. I beg of you to think only of the common enemy at which it behooves us to strike, and to let me be simply one with you in our common crusade against the organized and salaried criminality with which we are municipally menaced. We are none of us so foolish as to think that vice is to be utterly stamped out, but we do hav the right to expect and insist that the department which is employed and handsomely paid to make crime 'exceedingly difficult, if not impossible,' should not be the chief reliance of crime in all the attempts which church and society make to weaken and reduce it."

This is pretty vigorous language to use, but the facts gathered by Dr. Parkhurst bear him out. There is no doubt in the minds of hundreds of thousands of the people of this city that the Tammany-controled politicians, whether policemen or court clerks, are corrupt and purchasable. They are, almost without exception, firm adherents of the Romish church, and their "ward heelers" are all Catholic-raised toughs. It is a disgrace to the decent people that they allow themselvs to be plundered by such rascals.

But there is one fundamental error in Dr. Parkhurst's crusade. He desires more laws, for like all his kind he thinks that law is the panacea for all social ills. In this he is egregiously mistaken. Vice behind closed doors is always worse than when open to the public. There is more danger to sobriety in a "closed" saloon on Sunday than in an open one. In Europe, where the people enjoy Sunday as a holiday and not as a holy day, where gardens and concerts and saloons are wide open, there is less crime and vice than in a puritanically governed city like New York. Without the law closing the saloons in this city on Sundays the police could not blackmail them. If the gambling-dens were open to be visited by all, people would be afraid to risk their reputations by being seen in them. Public sentiment would do what law fails to do, because now the public's servants protect the very businesses they are paid to suppress. Public sentiment is more powerful than a club in the hands of a dishonest policeman.

It is pretty sure that Dr. Parkhurst's raid will end in smoke, for Tammany Hall will protect her henchmen, and Rome cares little for decency so long as her coffers are full and her primates hav the power they seek.

Passed the Freedom of Worship Bill.

With some amendments which practically reduce it to a simple permission for Catholics to set up their worshiping paraphernalia in public penal institutions, the Freedom of Worship bill has passed both houses of the legislature. Originally the bill compelled the state to furnish means for sectarian worship and made it a punishable offense for the officers of charitable and penal institutions to neglect to furnish the inmates with an assortment of sectarianisms. These provisions, however, were stricken out, and a clause added so that anyone whose freedom of worship is interfered with shall hav a right of action in the supreme court, and the supreme court shall grant an order to prevent such interference after a careful hearing. The commission, consisting of the attorney-general, the superintendent of prisons, and the president of the state board of charities, which was to hav control of religious worship in all institutions receiving money from the state, is also done away with.

In the assembly the bill was favored by Speaker Bush, who left the chair to advocate it, by another Democratic Mr. Bush, who leads the majority on the floor, and by all the Catholic members of course. Leader Bush said that the bill was not a political measure, and he hoped that there never would come a time when the political parties would divide on religious lines. He did not think the bill was unconstitutional, and he hoped it would settle the religious question forever. Speaker Bush said that he had always believed that the state penal institutions should be reformatory in their character, and that the influences of religion should be used to improve the convicts. It was the duty of the state to look after the management of its penal institutions in all respects, and the state board should hav the same control over the times and methods of religious services as they had over the other actions of the convicts, in order that prison disciplin might not be interfered with.

The opposition was by Mr. Wheeler, of South Dover, and Mr. Husted, of Westchester, the latter something of a demagog himself in religious matters. Mr. Wheeler obtained the elimination of the clause compelling the state to provide the paraphernalia of worship, as he truly said the state had no business to go into the conversion business, and Mr. Husted pointed out the unconstitutionality of the measure and the fact that it is the Jesuits who desire its enactment. He nearly killed the bill by moving to recommit it to the judiciary committee with instructions to strike out the enacting clause, a motion defeated by only one vote. In making this motion he said:

"Religion is a matter of faith, of conscience, and of reason. Recognizing this great truth, and familiar with the history of the past, on whose bloody pages has been written the dread effects of religious persecution on the part of the state, the founders of this great republic placed in the organic law this article:

"'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibit free exercise thereof.'

"For one hundred years this article has remained untouched. Its wisdom, its justice, its patriotic quality, has been recognized throughout the length and breadth of our beloved country.

"Those wise men well knew that any attempt to ally the church with the state would be destructiv of the principles on which was based the American superstructure of civil government. Following out the same idea, the people of this state engrafted in their organic law the following provision:

"'The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this state to all mankind.'

"The federal Constitution forbids the establishment of religion and allows the free exercise thereof. The state constitution allows that same free exercise. It makes no mention as to the establishment thereof, and for the reason that the federal Constitution, embracing that provision within its articles, has always been held to cover the entire subject.

"But were there no constitutional provision touching this matter in any form, no reflecting and candid man who has read the history of the religious wars, which brought ruin, rapin, and pillage upon the fairest fields and loveliest cities of Europe, would hesitate for a single moment to protest against any attempt from any quarter to mingle together the affairs of state with the affairs of church.

"This bill is not asked for by American citizens. It emanates from a secret society, whose headquarters are beyond the sea, and, calling to mind the farewell words of George Washington, I am impelled to appeal to that patriotic American sentiment which he invoked, that it may resist all attempts from foreign authorities, of whatever kind, to impress their systems either of government or religion upon the statute laws of this imperial commonwealth.

"As I said before, the organic laws of the United States and of this state declare for the free exercise and enjoyment of religious worship. If these laws hav been violated in any case, the remedy is with the courts and not with the legislature. There can never be any difficulty in enforcing the organic law. It is binding on the humblest citizen; it is binding on the presiding judge of the highest court. If that organic law has not been violated, and if, on the contrary, this bill seeks to obtain from the legislature more than the organic law itself authorizes, then it should receive the universal condemnation of the members of this house.

"Its advocates must take one of the horns of this dilemma; they cannot take both. Either selection will result in an impalement of this bill."

The outcome of the matter is, if the bill is signed in its present shape, that the Catholics can set up their religious plants in state charitable and penal institutions by furnishing the capital themselvs. It is but a partial victory for them, but better than nothing, they think; though if Tammany Hall continues its ascendency they will unquestionably make a strike for all that they desire, which is that the state shall compel convicts to attend Catholic worship and also pay the priests who furnish it.

Another "Converted Jew" Who Preaches.

The indefatigable renegade-hunter, Mr. Benjamin, has discovered what he thinks is another excellent specimen of a Jewish convert to Christianity in a Jewish gentleman connected with the city mission in the Bible House.

Mr. Herman Warzaviack was introduced to the mission by Dr. John Hall, one of the most eminent of the preachers of this city, and in the annual report of the mission he is called a "remarkable young man" because of his talent at converting his coreligionists; though to one not converted, nor interested in converting-missions, it is difficult to see where the remarkableness is manifested, for the report claims only eight renegades for the year, though at one time Mr. Warzaviack, the remarkable young man, claimed two hundred.

But it is not of that we intended to write. It is claimed by Mr. Benjamin that no Jew who allows himself to be taken into the Christian camp is an honest man. That he is not far wrong we know from the evidence he has produced against the converts of Mr. Freshman, and in the case of Mr. Warzaviack he holds documentary evidence that seems to throw doubt upon that "remarkable young man's" integrity. As Dr. John Hall is the sponsor for the Hebrew Christian, Mr. Benjamin has asked him to interrogate Mr. Warzaviack upon these points: 1. Whether he knows anything about a certain transaction he had in Farnau, Austria, with a certain Mr. Ashur Brown, involving three thousand Russian rubles? 2. Whether he knows about another transaction with a man in Berlin, Germany, involving four hundred marks? 3. Whether he did not forget to pay his hotel bill (two hundred marks) in Berlin? These are questions which Mr. Benjamin considers pertinent, though Mr. Warzaviack may regard them oppositly. At any rate Mr. Benjamin desires them answered before Mr. Warzaviack is set up by the city mission as a teacher and leader of the Hebrews of the city. And it is only fair that he should hav his desire.

Four New Pamphlets.

Three new works hav been added to The Truth Seeker Library the past week. "My Religious Experience," is by S. P. Putnam, a record of his travels in faith from bondage to freedom, and in our opinion his best book. It is the experience of a man who honestly seeks the truth and follows his reason wherever it may lead. It is brilliantly written, besides explaining much of the religious, or psychological, experience of the craze known as conversion. The pamphlet is mailed for 25 cents.

"Infidel Death-Beds," by G. W. Foote, has a self-explanatory title. It is an account of the deaths of sixty-three of the most prominent Infidels of the world, showing the stories of "recantations" by such men as Paine and Voltaire to be "idle tales of dying horrors," and showing also that Infidels pass away more fearlessly than Christians who are a little afraid that they may after all find their merited fate to be hell instead of heaven. The price of this pamphlet is also 25 cents.

Our readers will recollect Austin Bierbower's consideration of the query, "Was Christ Crucified?" His treatment was so able that one of our subscribers has purchased fifteen dollars' worth of the pamphlet for distribution. Mr. Bierbower is an eminent lawyer of Chicago, the author of one of the best of treatises on ethics, and his researches into the subject of this pamphlet hav great weight. Price 10 cents.

The "Great Ingersoll Controversy," as it is now known, which appeared in the Evening Telegram is published in neat pamphlet form, large type, for 25 cents. Altogether, in various ways, through newspapers, pamphlets, pulpits, and societies, this discussion will hav a circulation of millions of copies, with millions more of readers. Buckley builded much better than he knew when he advised a boycott of the Telegram.

Remsburg's "Bible Morals" has at last been answered. A Freethinker in Canada handed a copy of it to a pious Methodist neighbor. The Methodist brother examined it for a few minutes and then frantically exclaimed, "It's a God-d—d lie!"

No vast flow of tears, we imagin, will be drawn from our readers' eyes by the news that the defeat of the bill to make the schools of Germany denominational has "planted the glaive of sorrow and anxiety in the heart of the aged pontiff and the Catholics."

The White Cross and Woman's Christian Temperance Union tried to get New York's legislature to pass a law making adultery a crime, but the senate refused to do it. Supposing the law had been enacted and were enforced, what would become of the legislators and the ministers? Lord, Lord!

The Rev. Senator Edwards, a sort of mugwump Republican from upcountry, has induced New York's senate to strike out of the Game and Fish law the clause permitting Sunday fishing in Jamaica bay. But that won't stop the fishing by a good deal! If the Rev. Senator Edwards thinks it will let him come down here any Sunday after May 1st and look over Jamaica, Pelham, and Bowery bays, and if he doesn't see literally thousands of fishermen, we'll buy the bait.

Notifying us of the forwarding of papers containing articles on the World's Fair and its attempted Sunday closing, Mr. A. T. McMillan, of Wamego, Kan., says: "A few of us wrote our Congressman, Mr. Broderick, and he replies: 'I havn't the slightest idea that the World's Fair will be closed on Sundays. It will be impracticable to do so, and aside from this there is a large class of clerks and laborers who cannot attend on any other day.'" This is encouraging.

In the Southwest.

News and Notes.

I stop over at Fort Worth to visit with J. M. Brown, an old comrade. I also meet with Dellequest, of Meadville, Pa., who is working on radical Unitarian lines, and has plenty of the spirit of Freethought. I had a delightful time at the home of Mr. Brown. Circumstances were not in favor of a lecture this trip at Fort Worth; but I expect to make this a battle-ground next year. The Rev. Mr. Lowber is ready for a debate, and twelve months from now I guess Fort Worth will see the "colors flying." I hope so.

Fort Worth feels somewhat the desolation of the boom, and, at present, things move lingeringly, but there is a fine country about this city, and it is "picking up" and looking ahead.

I hav to be up before sunrise in order to pursue my way northward. It is a lovely morning, and the clouds are beautiful as the beams flash over the boundless dome of day.

I arrive at Denison about noon, and here I hav varied fortune. On the first day there is the tumult of an election, and by night the bonfires are so brilliant, and the crowds are so enthusiastic as the returns come in, that only a few gather at the lecture in the city hall, and the city hall itself is not a very attractiv place. It has a somewhat gloomy and forlorn look. I suppose it will do for the "Solons" as they come together to decide the destinies of man; but the ladies do not think it to be sufficiently adorned with "sweetness and light" to make a fair platform for Freethought. For the next two evenings the hall of the Sons of Hermann is secured for the lectures, and this makes a pleasant gathering-place, and the Sons of Hermann are themselvs imbued with the spirit of reform. But alas for Wednesday evening! The climate is variable in Texas, much like April all the year round; storms and sunshine intermingle with quick variations. It pours "great guns" at the hour for the lecture, and only about a corporal's guard put in an appearance. However, I make an address, and keep the ball moving. The next day the sun comes forth in glorious splendor, and the evening is beautiful with moonlight and starlight, and a good audience greets me. If I could hav stayed a couple of nights more, crowded houses would hav been the result, but I must move on. Denison is along the frontier line. It is growing about as fast as any town in the state. The people are enterprising. A big cotton mill is completed and will soon be in operation. There are immense quantities of iron ore in the Indian Territory, and coal is within fifty or sixty miles, and so Denison will make a superior manufacturing point. There is a vast country to be developed.

The National Commercial College has been established at this place. Mr. T. V. Munson is president. It has over two hundred students, and is, in every respect, a first-class institution. It givs a practical education—fits for life and for real work. It promises to be one of the best colleges in the land. Mr. Munson is splendidly adapted to carry it forward—a man of affairs, one of the most successful horticulturists and fruit-growers in the country, having received medals from foreign countries for his improvements. Under the auspices of Congress he is now publishing one of the ablest books on grapes and grape culture that this century has produced.

Denison is almost the "jewel city" of north Texas, an emporium of trade and education. It is somewhat in the "rough," and does not possess the elegance of an Eastern city, where the fruit of hundreds of years of toil are witnessed; but for a pioneer town its "forehead is to the dawn." It has a brilliant future.

Mr. Luther Andrews takes me to his pretty home in the suburbs of the city, and here I hav days of rest and enjoyment, with music and books. Mrs. Andrews touches the piano deftly, and when I am tired with reading, and after the lecture—especially on the stormy nights—the beautiful strains giv one cheer and comfort. Mr. Andrews is an ardent Shaksperian student. He believes in Bacon as the author of the plays, and has a fine portrait of Bacon over his library, which is packed with volumes of history, poetry, and philosophy. The "Cryptogram" is there, and I read it with great interest. Poor Will Shakspere! how the critic does pitch into the unfortunate deer-stealer, and all that is known of him is twisted to his discomfiture, and you would not think him capable of any creditable thing, much less the writing of these plays. The argument, as a matter of special pleading, is pretty strong against the "Man of Stratford," especially his "handwrite." That is simply awful. But it is granted by his severest critics that, from abject poverty, he became, by his own efforts, one of the "millionaires" and magnates of his time. He might hav written the plays after all. He had brains. The question is not settled. The arguments against Bacon are almost as potent as those against Shakspere, and I must confess that I cannot realize that a philosopher who wrote the silly essay on "Atheism" would ever write "Hamlet" or "Lear." If Shakspere is dethroned the author of this magnificent literature will forever remain a mystery. It looks as if there were a cipher in some of Shakspere's plays, but nowhere does the cipher claim for Bacon the authorship of the plays. It is merely a desultory narrativ, and does not touch upon the great events of the world. I am deeply interested in this discussion, and enjoyed the enthusiasm of my friend Andrews, who has studied the matter thoroughly, and while I am still inclined to "Shagsper," as they call him, the authorship is uncertain and presents to the lover of poetry one of the most romantic and splendid problems in history, and no student can afford to overlook the arguments in favor of Bacon. They are striking and ingenious, and are presented with great learning and eloquence, but are not by any means demonstrativ.

B. C. Murray is still at his post. They refer to him as "Before Christ" Murray, and I understand that the whole calendar can be found in his staff—A.D.'s, P.M.'s, A.M.'s, etc. But Murray is not B.C. in his philosophy. He is right at the front on that. They don't tackle him much round about Denison, but once in a while the country minister gets after him, feeling that the Lord is on his side and that he can smash the Infidel. But it is not long before the rural defender of the faith creeps into his hole and is silent forevermore—a sadder, a wiser man. He finds out that the world moves.

It is a pleasure to meet Murray. He is always ready to do his level best, stands by his colors without flinching, and works for the cause. R. M. King, J. T. Munson, Robert Collins, and many others make cordial welcome. Mr. T. V. Munson presides at the meetings, and with all his busy life is ready to lend a hand for Freethought.

Denison, with storm and sunshine and varying fortune, is a bright memory. True hearts are there.

On Friday afternoon, with Mr. and Mrs. Murray, genial companions, I am on my way to Waco. We arrive there at midnight. On Saturday we find the Waco convention under full headway, with Judge Richardson in the chair. He delivered a noble address on Thursday evening on "What is Truth?" It was an able exposition of the method and aim of Freethought. All our knowledge comes through the five senses. There is no royal road to truth. The common road all minds must take. But the knowledge that we thus acquire is infinitly precious, and we can use it for human happiness and progress. The Gods cannot help us. We must help ourselvs.

A goodly company is gathered at Waco from different parts of the state, and harmony prevails. Friday morning and afternoon the business of the convention is transacted—the adoption of resolutions, election of officers, and a general discussion of the ways and means of Liberal work. In the evening lectures were given. The Waco Orchestra furnished most inspiring music. Mrs. Brown gave an appropriate recitation on "The Gathering of the Spirits," and I spoke upon "The Religious Conspiracy."

Sunday morning there was a fair audience, although the church-bells did ring on every side, and the Salvation Army drum was booming. Dr. Graves read his amusing poem on "The Bible and the Gods," and Judge Walker, of Waco, gave one of the best addresses I hav yet heard—a criticism keen and destructiv of the attempted reconciliation of science and religion. It showed the fallacy of this alliance—that it cannot be. Science asks no favors of religion. It will go right on regardless of religion. It will seek the truth and nothing but the truth. The truth is everything. If the truth is bad we must still take it. We cannot help ourselvs. We cannot swap off the truth for a lie even if the lie is a good one. The lie will not stand. The most uncomfortable truth in the world is better than the most polished falsehood. We must make the best of truth. We cannot compromise. We cannot reconcile truth with religion. Religion must take truth, however bitter it is, or perish.

Sunday afternoon J. D. Shaw takes me on a pleasant journey about that fine city to the flowing artesian wells, the parks, etc. Waco is the most religious city in Texas. It has plenty of churches—Methodist and Baptist—colleges, etc. It has scarcely any parks or driving-grounds, or those modern improvements that contribute to beauty and enjoyment. It is hoped that Waco will advance in this matter and look somewhat after the worldly welfare of the people. It is one of the foremost business points in the state—has a population of twenty thousand, and not an empty house in it. It has had no boom. Its growth is steady. There is a Liberal element; but it will take time to make it as effectual as it should be.

Sunday evening the hall is crowded. The orchestra pours delightful strains. Mrs. Hallie D. Shaw givs a beautiful recitation written for the occasion by Mrs. Shaw herself. It is replete with noble sentiments and the hopes of Freethought, and is delivered with exquisit melody—one of the gems of the convention to giv courage and joy in pioneer service. It is received with enthusiastic applause. I giv a lecture on "The Bible and Modern Thought."

Closing addresses are made by Mr. Shaw and Judge Richardson, voicing the inspiration of the occasion and the promises of the future. This convention will giv a new impulse to Liberalism throughout Texas. All are united. Mr. Shaw is supported with confidence. He has indeed accomplished much since he left the pulpit ten years ago. Texas is in the front rank of the Liberal movement.

Space forbids to mention the many friends I met at Waco, the standard-bearers of Freethought, who are willing to giv time and money to the work, who keep the fires glowing from point to point. With heart and hope I can say, Hail and farewell to Texas.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Waco, Tex., April 11, 1892.

A Big Time.

I lectured at Rarden, O., last Saturday night. The meeting was held in Taylor's Hall, an elegant little temple dedicated to Freethought and human progress. The audience that greeted me was an attentiv and intelligent one. The cream of little Rarden's populace was on hand, and when that is said it means of course that not a few seats were occupied by fair and lovely women. The Rarden brass and reed band was present, discoursing the sweetest strains, making music that the gods would envy. The chairman of the meeting was Judge R. W. McNeal, a brainy fellow with a mind of his own. The judge was formerly on the judicial bench of Adams county. At present he is practicing law at Portsmouth's bar. He has few equals as a jury talker, being a ready speaker and convincing in argument. I like the judge because he is bold and fearless.

It is not necessary to weary your readers with a synopsis of what I said, so instead I will tell of the sights I saw, of Rarden as she was and is, her people, her factories, her workshops, and her hills. The latter are stately and majestic. They encircle the thriving, prosperous place, and from their smoky summits she appears a diamond surrounded by the rough. Nestled thus amid the hills she becomes a natural place in which to beget and grow the independent and the strong.

Approaching Rardon from the east the first sight to catch the weary traveler's eye is an unfinished Gothic church. Like the creeds of Christendom, it is "not half made up." Like them it is crumbling to decay and naught. Another sight is the planing mill, the whirling wheels and humming lathes of which proclaim in no uncertain sounds the chant of death to priestly forms and pious ways. And the stores and barber shops of the place proclaim the self-same thing; they stand as monuments to progress made and being made.

Rarden was first laid out by R. L. Williams, a sturdy old Virginian, named after the well-known Confederate general, Robert Lee. This was fifty years ago. Since that time Williams has moved to West Virginia, being now located at Huntington. Williams, so I am told, was an Infidel, and the old house of Rarden, in which he spent so many pleasant days, and gave his views an airing, still stands. It is now occupied by John Burns, a butcher, who it is said would not sell the same for love nor gold. And I would not if I was he.

Timber, of all sorts and kinds, is handled extensivly by the Taylor boys, who, by the way, are giants in the cause of freedom and the right. In addition, they run a large dry-goods and grocery store, supplying the wants of the people within a radius of ten or fifteen miles. The hall in which I spoke is owned by them. Their homes are palaces, so to speak. In each is found a well-stocked library of standard works on science and the arts. There is an utter absence of the biblical and the orthodox. The wives of each cling to the religion of their husbands, discarding the church, its cruelties and its fears. In short, the homes of the Taylor boys are like the home that Ingersoll portrays, viz.: "The home where love and virtue dwells is like a lilly with a heart of fire—the fairest flower in all the world."

WILL S. ANDRES.

The Oregon State Secular Union.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: The time has arrived for my quarterly report, and it will not occupy very much space in your journal to print it. I hav furnished my own stamps and stationery, and hav written over four hundred letters to our vice-presidents, and other prominent Liberals throughout the state, since taking charge of this office. Since we raised the money for Mrs. Krekel I hav had, in answer to all those letters, seven letters. One from Mr. John Price, of Scappoose, Ore., inclosing $5, the other six full of good advice and lectures on economy, which, if closely followed by our government, would beat "tariff reform," "fiat money," or any other scheme ever started by cranks, but, unfortunately for the o cers of the Oregon State Secular Union, there is not one cent in the treasury, except the $5 just sent by Mr. Price, consequently we hav nothing to practice economy on. Mr. Editor, I mean to ask a few questions in this letter, as I cannot call it a report, and I shall address them especially to the Liberals of Oregon, but shall be glad of answers from anyone who chooses to write, either directly to me, or through the columns of your valuable journal. What do Liberals expect to accomplish by having a lecture once a year? What good results can we look forward to, if we meet once a year in convention? Elect officers and instruct them what to do for the good of the cause, and then practically tie their hands with an empty treasury, and ignore their personal letters, also their appeals through the public journals, and allow every particle of enthusiasm to die between "hay and grass." What would any church organization accomplish if they met once a year, had one or two sermons, and then closed the doors of their church until the following year?

What hav the Liberals of Oregon, or I might say of the United States, done to attract the women and children to the cause of Liberalism? Socially they hav done practically nothing. I presume there may be a very few places where there is some kind of social life kept up in the local Unions. But I do not know where it is. The Liberals of Forest Grove hav the best Liberal hall in Oregon, and about three years ago they reorganized a Union under the title of the Washington County Secular Union, with nearly eighty members. We met regularly once per month for about one year, having three or four lectures in that time, but no music, no anything, to attract the young; then we gradually froze, until now no dues are paid, no social gathering of any kind is thought of, no money in the treasury, no lectures in the hall since last August, "no anything."

What are the results? Our women join the church "sewing societies" and attend church and church sociables; the young people join the Christian Endeavor societies, the Sunday-school, attend prayer-meeting, the Young Men's Christian Association, for social life, and finally finish by joining the church. Now, my friends, who is to blame? You cannot possibly expect women and children to giv up every social pleasure for an idea, especially if you do nothing to cultivate that idea.

We cannot plead poverty, for some of the wealthiest men in every community are Liberals. We cannot complain of lack of organization, for our lecturers hav organized Unions everywhere throughout the land, where there seemed to be the least sympathy with the cause. We cannot complain of lack of interest on the part of the few Liberal women in each community, for I hav always noticed they are the first to urge any social gathering that will help to giv life to the organization. So I ask again, "Who is to blame?" And I shall probably wait as long for an answer as I hav waited for answers to those four hundred letters scattered throughout this state.

Dear Liberal friends, I do not wish to complain or appear to find unnecessary fault. I was very proud of the honor conferred upon me last fall, when you elected me secretary of the state organization, and entered upon my duties with the greatest enthusiasm, hoping to giv such perfect satisfaction that there would really seem to be a cordial indorsement and encouragement all along the line, and that not only myself but our entire board of officers would be assisted in every way to build up the cause of Liberalism throughout the state. Well, six months of our time hav elapsed, and not one responsiv chord has been touched either by the president or myself. All our appeals for action, for sympathy in the cause, for assistance, even for letters, from our numerous vice-presidents, are passed by unheeded, and so far there has been actually nothing accomplished for the year. I repeat, who is to blame?

I said in my last report to you that three officers could not make a successful Union. We hav done our best so far, and I really do not know how the president, Mr. Schroeder, feels about it, but I feel just as if I was sitting with my fingers placed upon the pulse of an Egyptian mummy, trying to find a responsiv thrill.

I hav asked several questions here, and one of them I will answer myself. I hav asked what Liberalism is doing for woman socially, and will answer it. I do not know what Liberalism is doing for her in other places, but here in Forest Grove it offers her "complete isolation in this life and complete annihilation in the next."

I speak from experience. I hav been a Liberal for sixteen years, and I do not think anyone can accuse me of lack of enthusiasm; and in all that time, if I had attended nothing except what was furnished by Liberalism, I should not hav averaged one lecture per year, and, with the exception of our three conventions in Portland, where we had good music, I should hav heard instrumental music probably three times. In writing this I might just as well hav used the plural "we" as the singular pronoun "I," for my experience is simply voicing the sentiment of every Liberal woman belonging to our Union, and we hav twenty-two women on our membership book.

Sarah C. Todd.

Forest Grove, Ore., April 3, 1892.

Hav Men Souls?

Several weeks ago, through the columns of The Truth Seeker, one E. J. Bowtell, in an article called "Hav Men Souls?" gave the particulars of his conversion to Spiritualism. A day or two ago I reread the article, in connection with similar accounts of others who hav been shown the "light," and even at this late date I desire to reply to Mr. Bowtell, with a few remarks thrown in that may be applicable to all Spiritualists. It is to be hoped that the "light" which has been shown these good people has only dazzled them with its brightness and not entirely blinded them.

To the question, "Hav Men Souls?" Mr. Bowtell, in the new light, answers, "Yes!" And further asserts that when the present material environment has been thrown off, each soul has still "another material environment in which its individuality is preserved." I am glad to note that Mr. Bowtell is yet fair-minded enough to add that the fact of his "knowing" will not help others to know unless they obtain like evidence.

Although he does not say anything about women having souls, yet I take it for granted that he means us too. I am a woman and I feel pretty tolerably certain that I am possessed at the present time of what I am pleased to call a soul. I also firmly believe that I hav a mind of my own. I presume that every individual has a soul and mind as well as myself—although there are a few that I hav my doubts about.

In my opinion, mind and soul are entirely separate, mind or brain being the matter, and soul the spirit or force that animates the brain. Without the force the brain could not work, and until the brain is formed, by the action of force of course, it cannot retain the impressions that make the individual. Force and matter, acting in conjunction with each other, make the individual, and in the same manner destroy it. I do not believe that souls hav any intelligence apart from brain or mind. Orthodox people do not see any difference between brain and soul, for they think that if the brain can be made to receive a certain impression the "soul is saved"—whatever that is.

I agree with the Spiritualists that the soul livs after the body is dead, but I cannot conceive of its being intelligent and retaining its individuality. It lived before the body was formed just as much as it will liv when the body is destroyed. My idea of Spiritualism is that it is nothing but the effect of mind upon mind, through the agency of force—a sort of unconscious mind-reading. I thank—God I was going to say, but I will say my lucky stars, which is just as good—I hav never had the delirium tremens, and never want to, but I hav been told that the victims believe the snakes and rats to be as real as any that ever existed, although when they come to their senses they know that they hav not in reality seen them. Now, we know that a man is physically affected when he sees these things, and it is just as reasonable to suppose that people are physically affected when they see spirits or ghosts.

I hav very dear friends who are confirmed Spiritualists, and they tell me with all the earnestness of their natures that they hav seen and conversed with their dead relativs and friends; but they cannot convince me. I hav never heard or read of any instance where a spirit has revealed a fact that had hitherto been unknown to any mind then living. I hav searched in vain for such an instance. If I should ever find one that is proved to be a fact, then I shall begin to think that, perhaps, after all, there is something in Spiritualism. But now it seems utterly impossible that souls can liv as individuals, retaining memories, and receiving new impressions, when the body is dead. There is just so much force and so much matter in the universe, and I cannot conceive of either being increased or diminished; but, according to the Spiritualists, it is only a question of time when all the force will be used up in souls, and then what will be done? No, I believe that when the body is dead, the force or spirit element mixes with the universe, just as the matter of the body does, and there is an end of it.

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy." There are many phenomena in nature that we as yet know little or nothing about, but we may learn. Sleep is a phenomenon, but we are very familiar with it and giv it but little thought; and when the unseen zephyrs move the trees and wave the grass we think it nothing strange. But table-tippings, rappings, etc., are claimed by the Spiritualists to be the work of departed intelligence. There is a natural cause for everything; so when anything strange occurs, let us not at once set it down as supernaturalism, but let us reason and investigate.

"The Spiritualist," Mr. Bowtell informs us, "does not expect another life such as the orthodox promis, but he knows [knows, mind you] that this life goes right on, with the same desires, interests, and pursuits that it has here, gradually becoming more and more elevated with his ever-increasing knowledge." Well, if that is so, and departed spirits gradually become more elevated with their ever-increasing knowledge, it seems high time that those who lived about eighteen hundred years ago should find some means of settling the numerous earthly disputes about the various saviors supposed to hav lived and died about that time. With all their knowledge they seem to be considerably behind the times as regards telephonic communication and other important inventions.

We are also told that departed spirits hav the same desires and interests that we hav here. Goodness! what an awful lot of jealousy there must be when a married man goes to spirit-land and meets his better half, or third, or two-thirds, as the case may be. And how pleasant it must be for a wife in spirit-land to see her husband here making love to another woman who has taken her place.

They also hav the same pursuits, it is said. Manufacturing, buying, and selling, I suppose. Where in the world do they get the material?

We hav been told how the spirits liv; now will some good person, who "knows" all about it, tell us where they liv? Not on this earth, surely, for there is no room for the millions and millions of souls that hav lived and died. Where, then, do they liv? I guess they must liv in the imagination of the Spiritualists. Imagination goes a great way.

Miss Lizzie Magie.

Washington, D. C.

Mr. Murray and the Sisters.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: You are a little off in your statement in The Truth Seeker of March 12th, when you say friend Murray, of the Denison, Tex., Gazetteer, thought it was right for Catholic sisters to teach in the public schools, dressed in the garb peculiar to their religious vows. I did say that I believed a Catholic sister was as much entitled to a state certificate as competent to teach in the public schools as a lady of any other religious profession, or of no religious belief, provided she passed successfully the examination prescribed by law, but when I said that I had no idea the question at issue at San Antonio, this state, involved the right to teach in the public schools in their peculiar religious garb. When this first came to my knowledge a week or two after, I wrote the following, which is clipped from the Gazetteer of Sept. 6, 1891. So you see I hav already revised my opinions in accordance with your suggestions:

The question raised in San Antonio regarding the legality of granting certificates by state normal schools to nuns or sisters of charity, who hav passed the requisit examination, has assumed another phase. It is now claimed that their certificates giv them the right to teach in the public schools dressed in the habiliments prescribed by the Catholic church. The Gazetteer does not so understand it. The state law positivly prohibits the inculcation of any religious doctrins or ceremonies in the public schools. Now, religious instruction is not necessarily oral instruction. The opening of schools with prayer is not permissible under the law, and the teacher cannot evade this sensible regulation by requiring the pupils to stand or sit with bowed heads while she repeats the mental prayer. To dress in a garb peculiar to some religious sect is inculcating ideas by sight, as much so as though pictures intended to illustrate a religious belief were hung upon the school-room walls. The Gazetteer still insists the sisters are clearly entitled to certificates when they hav passed the required examinations, for these simply certify to their intellectual qualifications, but if they wish to teach in the public schools they must also comply with the letter and spirit of the law which forbids the inculcation of religion, either oral or otherwise.

We hav had both Catholic and Protestant lady teachers in the Denison public schools, and ladies too without religion, and I hav noticed that while, as a rule, the lady teachers are content to confine themselvs strictly to the rules of the school trustees, which forbid religious instruction or ceremonies of any kind, the only trouble that has been experienced in enforcing this restriction has arisen with one or two overzealous Protestant teachers. The Catholic teachers hav invariably kept their peculiar religious notions to themselvs. Neither did they dress in a way to attract attention to their religious professions. Such a dress would not be permitted in the Denison schools and cannot be in any public school in the state without openly aggrieving the plain letter of the state school law.

Denison, Tex., March 17, 1892. B. C. MURRAY.

Cowardly Editors.

The writer has had some experience with editors afraid to print non-orthodox thoughts, and thinking an account of one or two may prove interesting herewith offers them.

Some weeks since the Cincinnati Post said editorially:

What is it to be a Christian? The Post will publish answers to the above query, not to exceed sixty words each. The Post will also receive queries from any disbeliever in God and the Bible upon religion or upon religious customs which will throw light upon the points on which he bases his unbelief or non-participation in religious worship. Questions sent to the Post under this proposition will be submitted to ministers, or others well informed, for reply, and both questions and replies will be published in the Post.

The Post is a very religious journal; will not violate the sanctity of the Sabbath by publishing the paper on Sunday as the wicked papers do. It is an evening paper in Cincinnati, but those copies sent to the country towns are dated the next day; therefore the Saturday evening paper is dated and delivered Sunday morning by the wicked newsboys in the country towns.

The following was sent in reply to the query: "What is it to be a Christian?"

It is to obey Christ's teachings. He taught, do as you would be done by; love thy neighbor as thyself; love your enemies; resist not evil; judge not; take no thought for the morrow; do not your alms before men; when thou prayest enter into thy closet; sell that thou hast and giv to the poor.

Fearing this did not cover the whole ground, the following was sent:

Christ said, "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." To be able to do these things is to be a Christian.

The following quesiions were sent for the "well-informed ministers" to answer:

Christ said, "If ye hav faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you." "If two of you shall agree on earth, as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for you of my father which is in heaven." "And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Are these words true? If true, why do not ministers pray for the necessaries and luxuries of life instead of begging the same from those who earn them? Is it not impudent for one ignorant of what is best for him to ask an infinit being, "who doeth all things well," to change his plans?

You do not need to be told that these answers and questions were not published, even after the foregoing invitation. For two or three days a few answers to their questions were printed, nearly all being from believers. Evidently some pressure was brought to bear—by Christians, of course Freethinkers enjoying these exposures—and the discussion very suddenly ended.

A short time since another Cincinnati journal, not quite so religious as the Post, the Commercial Gazette, contained this editorial:

One of the strongest assaults yet made on Colonel Ingersoll, the professional Infidel, was by Rev. Dr. Gottheil, a Jewish rabbi, of New York. He declared Ingersoll lectured for revenue only, and this fact, coupled with that of his ignorance of the Bible, compelled him to indulge in startling and amusing statements to the discredit of his true convictions. The baldheaded orator has not yet responded.

The following mild criticism was mailed to the editor:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE COMMERCIAL GAZETTE: I note your remarks about Rabbi Gottheil and Colonel Ingersoll, "the professional Infidel." The rabbi in saying Colonel Ingersoll "lectures for revenue only," and "to the discredit of his true convictions," intended his hearers to believe the colonel a hypocrit. There is no evidence on which to base the accusation, and we may safely suspect the rabbi judges the colonel by himself. If to receive money for speaking to an audience against Christianity constitutes one a hypocrit and "professional Infidel," eighty thousand hypocrits and professional Christians speak for money against Freethought from American pulpits every Sunday. Colonel Ingersoll could easily make many times the amount he now does lecturing on the unpopular side of the question, by giving more lectures; but he could become the most popular man in America by renouncing his present belief, and, "to the discredit of his true convictions," lecturing against Infidelity; and no Christian would ever suspect him of insincerity.

The writer remembers when the finger of scorn was pointed at the Abolitionists, as it is to-day at the Freethinkers; and doubtless conservativs accused these noble advocates of an unpopular cause of insincerity. The Abolitionists finally won, even with millions of dollars at stake by their opponents, and all the churches against them, because they were on the side of truth and justice.

The Infidel has all to lose and nothing to gain (except his own self-respect) by an open avowal of unbelief. Hypocrits never ally themselvs on the unpopular side of any question. When Infidelity becomes the popular belief, the hypocrits will flock over to that side, and all professing Christians will then be as sincere as Freethinkers now are. May many of us liv to see that day.

Sidney, O. EMORY P. ROBINSON.

These thoughts suffered the same fate as those sent the Post. Great progress will hav been made when editors become brave enough to print opinions differing from their own. EMORY P. ROBINSON.

A Christian Association Exhortation,

WITH A RATTLE OF RESPONSES.

A sky-pilot, from somewhere in the wilderness of Michigan, preached the other Sunday to the Grand Rapids Young Men's Christian Association upon "The Man for the Times," wherein he expatiated that there was need of a man for these times of widespread skepticism and open Sabbath desecration, or we shall soon hav upon us a European Sabbath and a godless society; that the man for the times must be fearless, unselfish, and cautious; he must stand for the right, no matter who may oppose, and to do that he must not regard self; he must be cautious, and not do his work too soon, not engage in reform before the people are ready for it, lest he retard what he would advance.

After he got through, and there were calls for others to "improve the time," yours to shillala superstition whenever he can, struck out thusly:

"I believe in the man for the times. ["Bless the Lord!"] The motto of the man for the times is, Be a man; ["Amen!"] don't be a clam. ["Good!"] That is, don't keep your mouth shut when you hav something to say. ["That's it! Speak out!"] Don't refuse to say what you think, for fear of what those who don't think will say. ["No! no!"] Never mind the opinions of those about you; it is for your own opinion, not theirs, that you are responsible. ["That's so!"]

"When I speak of the man for the times, I do not mean these times more than any times. All times need the same kind of men, for men are much the same in all ages. ["Just so!"] The man for the times is the one whom the times needs to set it right. ["Yes!"] And because the times is wrong, when the man for the times comes to right it, he is the man the times least wants, and does all it can to get rid of him. ["So it does!"] When the man for the times comes, the people will prosecute him, imprison him, crucify him, burn him, and damn him to hell, because he does not agree with them, but tells them their folly and denounces their deviltry. ["Lord, save!"] Or, if the government has become so civil that bigotry is not allowed to handle the executioner's ax; if superstition and villainy is not allowed to kill the man for the times outright, for God's sake ["O! oh!"]. then the foolishly pious, and piously evil, will call him bad names, they will brand him heretic, skeptic, Sabbath-breaker, Infidel, Atheist, no matter what, set prejudice at work against him, break up his business, and thus starve him to death, if they can. ["That is the way they do it."]

"One of the best men for the times, and perhaps the earliest we read much about, showed up in China twenty-five hundred years ago. He put common sense in place of mysticism, and good morals in place of tomfoolery about a thousand gods. We hav not a word that he wrote, that we are sure of, as he wrote it. The times did not think much of his doctrin. It did not fit. He was thought foolish and allowed to peacefully die in poverty; forgotten were his ashes but by a few who continued faithful to his instruction, and at last gained it some popularity, in name at least, when a book was written as a report of his sayings, which became conned as a literary classic, and Confucius, the Agnostic, got worshiped as a god, while his votaries may be villainous as an opium joint.

"In Greece, a land of many gods, was born a man for the times. He showed up the absurdity of sophistry, and the folly of idolatry. He opened an academy of philosophy where he instructed the young men in logic and patriotism. He was a man for the times, but the times was not for the man. They accused him of corrupting the youth by ridiculing the gods, and poisoned him to death. We don't know much of his ideas, but they were good enough to be cherished by some, and other men gave repute to their own notions by writing them down and labeling them the sayings of Socrates, who has ever since been worshiped as the god of philosophy, and what is not according to Socrates the college does not count according to Hoyle. Albeit, it is not philosophy that the college is after, but popularity, and to this end its president will utter the inanities of a zany.

"According to the big book you hav here, a man for the times came on earth, from somewhere, about nineteen hundred years ago. But the times didn't want him, so they hanged him. ["Lord, help!"] He taught in that age of tyranny and servility, of treachery and sycophancy, 'Call no man master,' and they nailed him to a post, on the charge that he called himself the king. At least, so the story goes, and it is the faith of the times, 'He shall be damned who doesn't believe it.' We don't know what he said. He hadn't been through college, wasn't a Jerusalem-cultured writer, but a Salvation Army sort of a fellow, going about condemning the religion of his day. So they accused him of blasphemy, of doctoring sick folks and threshing wheat on the holy Sabbath, brought the police down on him, and shut up his mouth by letting out his blood. ["Precious blood, shed for me!"] I do not know how much Jesus had to do with breaking up the Sabbath, but it is surely gone to pieces, and the whole Sabbath-keeping nation with it. I don't know what Jesus taught; whatever it was, it was opposed to the times, and when it had gained some repute somebody thought to make a point by tying his name on to the tail of their kite, strung together a lot of proverbs and old stories, called it the gospel of Christ, and founded a church which overrode the state. Thus Jesus, the Nazarene tramp, who was maligned as an Infidel, and murdered as a blasphemer, is to-day worshiped as God the author of the universe. ["So he is, halleluiah!"] The times makes all the difference.

"A few years ago there appeared in this country a man for the times. He saw man pretending to hold property in man. ["But man hadn't any right to do it."] No, a man cannot own his fellowman. He can only own what he produces. But all the preachers of the gospel of the Christ of God, the Jesus of Calvary, in the South, and two-thirds of them in the North, said that slavery was a divine institution. Old John Brown said it was a damned institution; and without fear, without selfishness, without caution, he drove a wedge into the legalized and gospelized iniquity which speedily stove it into everlasting nothingness. ["Glory!"] Yes, glory, glory, halle, halle, John Brown, his soul goes marching on—if it doesn't, it ought to. He didn't wait for the times to get ready for his work. He cut out the work for the times, and when he got it cut out it had to be made up. He was not a cautious man; if he had been, he would not hav been a man for the times. The times don't get ready for the man, the man for the times must get the times ready for the next man, who gets the benefit, and calls the next man for the times a crank, or an ungodly wretch.

"These men for the times hav come and gone. They hav demolished the divine institutions of pious piracy in their day, and been worshiped as divinities themselvs sanctifying other institutions just as cussed. It is because an institution is iniquitous that it denominates itself divine. And now you come and in the name of the Jewish Sabbath-breaker you ask for a restoration of the Roman and Puritan Sunday, the relic of Latin superstition and cannibalistic religion. I stand here, a man for the times, to protest against such an echo from the Dark Ages. You can say what you please of me, but I had rather be a man for the times than be all the gods who were ever worshiped, or ever will be, for, to be a man for the times, is to be myself; and to be other than myself, I might as well hav never been born. ["True enough."]"

There was too much of a sensation, too intense listening, during the last part of that discourse, to allow of many responses. When I had done one said that he hoped the last speaker was saved by the blood of him who died for all, but the name of Jesus was too sacred to be taken lightly upon profane lips. How is that remark for a jumble? If the speaker was saved, were his lips profane? and if Jesus died to save all, didn't he make a mistake if he is to miss me? JOHN P. GUILD.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

Death, Funerals, and the Future.

For the last few months Death has been swinging his scythe at a fearful rate in this immediate vicinity. He has been gathering a plentiful harvest from the old and elderly people. Ministers and undertakers hav also realized a harvest. The undertakers conduct the bodies to the graves, and the ministers act as conductors of the souls which emigrate to that happy land where they are not disagreeably exposed to those who eat onions.

I hav attended some funerals of late, and am still deeply impressed with the idea that the superstition of the people is very great. And yet I am pleased to think that there is so great an improvement in regard to the manner of conducting funerals.

A funeral was a notable occasion when I was a boy, sixty years ago. In those early days, when the country was new, there were very few churches, and funerals were generally attended at school-houses. A funeral at a private house was a thing unthought of.

People came from a distance out of idle curiosity to see how the immediate relativs would be affected and to see the corpse. It was an occasion on which the minister was expected to appear at his best. His address to the "mourners" was the special feature of the occasion, and nothing could raise a minister higher than to hav it said, "There was not a dry eye in the house."

Some of those early funeral sermons were of such an outrageous character that it seems now like a wonder t at the people did not rebel outright. At the funeral of a man who had died and left a wife and children I hav heard remarks something like the following: "You will miss father now. The earth will soon close over him and you will see him no more. He can no longer act as a guide to your erring feet. You will call, 'Father,' but no father will answer your call. In a few moments you will look upon him for the last time. His eyes are closed in death. The worms will devour him, and he can not return. But you must try to realize that it is a dispensation of providence and that your father, now dead, is in the hands of one who doeth all things well.

"And, O God, what shall I say to this bereaved and heart-stricken wife and mother? O God, giv her strength to bear up under her affliction. Her heart-strings are parted asunder. How often has she called, 'Jacob, Jacob!' but Jacob will no more hear her call, neither can he return. His voice is now hushed in death, and his sightless eyes can never look upon her again. He will soon be covered with the clods of the valley;" and much more precious and pious nonsense in the same strain which ought never to hav been uttered.

And then to note the expression of countenance, to see him roll his eyes and turn his pious mug toward heaven and strike an attitude, would prove a drawing card in a theater. The man who could succeed in harrowing up the minds of the people to the greatest degree was counted the great preacher of the day. Many a time in my younger days hav I witnessed this barbaric display of a preacher's sense of propriety—hav seen one, instead of trying to still the troubled waters of affliction, take the opposit course and strain himself almost to bursting to bring to the mind the most excruciating thoughts and disagreeable reflections.

A funeral was considered the greatest success where there was the most crying. A girl said she "liked to go to funerals because it made her cry so." And one would think that the multitude came to a funeral to cry and to see others cry and to see the corpse.

After such an inspiring sermon the corpse would be placed out in front of the school-house to be stared at by the crowd, mostly drawn there by idle curiosity.

In those days church-members and ministers were in the habit of using quite exhilarating beverages, and many of them would get gloriously fuddled.

If a person died who was a member of the church, no matter about the character, the minister would dwell upon the sure promises of "God's word" and giv them a first-cabin passage on the "old ship Zion," with extra accommodations, and an angelic escort to the land of the sneaks and the home of the imbecils, where the weary can lounge around in the cosy nooks and the wicked are not "in it."

But if a man died outside of the church, though his character was without spot or blemish, the minister never forgot to remind the people of a burning hell and an angry God and the torments of the wicked. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." This is not my word, but God's word, who spake as never man spake, and whose word will stand "when the mountains shall hav passed away."

And then he would go on to say that he was an embassador of God, and standing between the destinies of two worlds, and dare not do otherwise than to declare the whole counsel of God. And when God says, "'Depart from me ye cursed,' no man is to be held responsible for what God says." And inferentially the soul was handed over to Old Sooty, grinningly impatient to catch it on his "three-tae'd leister" and splash it into his "boiling brimstone pot" as quick as a country girl could turn a flapjack.

But these things are all changed now. Old things are passing away. Common sense is coming to the front. "God's word," which could not pass away, is constantly changing; it does not mean what it did sixty years ago.

Funerals are conducted in a more rational manner, generally at the residence of the deceased, and with some regard to decency. The sermon is delivered without reference to an angry God, and nobody is reminded of a leering long-tailed devil hovering around to bear away the soul of the defunct, and hell is left out entirely.

Now, if I were allowed to venture an opinion, I would say, to the Liberals belongs the credit of this reform. But it is only fair to giv the Universalists credit for the part which they hav acted in banishing the horrid ideas of hell from the minds of the people. I can well remember when Universalists were as much lied about and misrepresented by orthodox churches as the Liberals are to-day.

When I was a boy there was a Universalist who preached in the neighborhood where I lived, and the sermon which he preached sixty years ago did not differ widely from the orthodox sermon of to-day. He did not preach a burning hell, and there is no hell preached now. As far as I am able to remember, one of his sermons would giv no offense in any orthodox pulpit at the present time.

But it would be hard for the people now to understand how the orthodox saints of that day were horrified at the idea that there was no hell in which an angry God could punish those who differed from them in belief. It is only by going back in imagination and traveling over the ground again, and counting the milestones, that we are able to realize how far we hav advanced in sixty years.

At the time I speak of I used to hear the Christians say, "What is the use of making all these sacrifices and trying to liv a Christian life if there is no hell? What difference can it make whether we liv good honest lives or whether we lie and steal, if there is no punishment after death?" It is evident from the Christians' own showing that it was a great sacrifice to keep from lying and stealing, and that they only refrained from doing so because they were afraid of an angry God and a burning hell.

The idea of living good lives out of self-respect and a decent regard for the welfare of others seems never to hav crossed their minds.

I hav heard some funeral sermons lately, if sermons they could be called, and I could but contrast them with those I heard in the long ago. No Bible-reading, no long prayers, no text—simply "remarks," much of which any Liberal would indorse. Individuals were given credit for good deeds, manly conduct, and a due regard for the welfare of others, and for uprightness and morality.

In my boyhood days I often heard ministers say, "No man can get to heaven on his morality." That good deeds alone would not avail, that God's word was yea, yea, and nay, nay, and that there was no way to get to heaven only through the blood of and belief in Jesus Christ.

The ministers hav given up hell, or at least it is no longer preached in their sermons, and it is no longer a winning card. And the superstitious barbarity preached sixty years ago would oust any minister from an orthodox pulpit at the present time. And still they cry, "What has Infidelity ever done to make the world better?"

The truth is, Infidelity has changed their God from a bloodthirsty, savage God into something like a god of humanity. It has brought the people to take a more sensible view of the old book of fables, and not to regard commands as binding upon them which would disgrace a Digger Indian, because they are dubbed holy. Even ministers hav been changed in a great degree from intolerance and savage cruelty into something like forbearance and decency.

Ministers hav become ashamed to say that the souls of men will be worked up into b imstone tarts because they did not believe as John Calvin told them to. A roaring lion of a devil, a savage, revengeful God, and a burning hell are no longer preached, and yet, as I said in the beginning, the superstition of the people is very great. Though the Liberals hav accomplished these great changes, yet let them not think that the time has come for them to rest from their labors.

Though the gods are not as vindictiv and cruel as they were once, yet the Christian thinks that he cannot get along without them. And he still believes in a God-written, infallible book, and that a man will keep right on living after he is dead. He still has such a craving after his Gods that he eats their bodies and drinks their blood. Then he has a place, though he has never been able to tell exactly where it is located, where all who believe as he does are to hav robes and crowns and harps and enjoy an eternal jamboree.

In ancient times gods were as plenty as blackberries; the Christian still requires three, the Mohammedan makes one answer, while I hav found out that I can get along without any.

The Christian still insists that a man livs after he dies. A man either dies or he doesn't die. The preacher says he doesn't die. If there is no death, why does the Christian bewail the loss of his child? Do not his actions belie his words? Can a stream keep running after the fountain is dried up?

Up to about a hundred years ago there were as many deaths as births in the world, because all died that were born. But the Christian says the countless billions which hav preceded us did not die at all—that they are still living. He says that his God does not bring beings into existence to liv but a few years and then terminate their existence.

Since the advent of animal life on the globe there hav been thousands of animals for every human being. If man livs on after he is dead, how about all of these animals? If they hav all died, will man form an exception to the general rule? If these animals are all living, where are they?

Until recently the Christian has taught that the good people went to heaven and all the bad people went to hell. Is there a heaven for the good animals and a hell for the bad ones? Where is the sense in saying that all of these animals hav really died but all the human beings who hav died are still living?

If these animals are all dead, why did God bring them into existence to liv but an hour or a day or a few years at the most, and then end their existence? If the far greater portion of animal life is thus disposed of, does man form an exception to the general rule?

It is said that the life of man is so short that God would never bring him into the world to liv but a few years and then take him out of existence. But there are insects which flit about for only an hour and then their existence ends. Is it not as reasonable that man should die after living three score y ars and ten, as that the insect should die after living only an hour?

Taking all the animals in existence, man is a thousand times above the average in size. As far as I am informed, the whale has the longest life of all the animals. As man is far above the medium size of animals, so his life is far above the medium length. And, for aught I know, the life of the insect may seem as long to it, as the life of the whale does to it. Who can prove that the length of life does not seem the same to all animals?

Every animal comes into existence but to die. Every tree, shrub, or plant which sprouts from a seed or shoots up from a root, comes into life only to die. Death is a universal law as much as the law of gravitation. I accept Webster's definition, "Death is a total and permanent cessation of all the vital functions." What is there about a man to liv, if death is "total and permanent?" Men may talk about eternal life and home in heaven, but the theory has no foundation in truth or reason.

But the Christian asks, "If death ends all, why has God implanted in the human breast this desire for continued existence?" Why are a hundred other unsatisfied desires interwoven into his nature? Men hav a desire to see their children do well, but many turn out badly. Most men desire to become famous, but fame is awarded to the very few, not to the many. Most men desire to become rich, but the vast majority are struggling in poverty. A desire is no evidence of the realization of that desire. Most men desire to liv—very few want to die. It is no wonder that the desire for continued existence should be as general as the desire to liv, for the one desire grows out of the other.

The sooner we learn that when a man dies he is dead the better, for every fact has its value. A dead body does not differ from other inert matter. We cannot injure the dead, neither can we help them. They are conditionless. There is nothing for them to enjoy or to suffer. All the good we can do must be done to the living. No favor can be shown to the dead. Millions upon millions, first and last, hav been spent upon tombs and monuments, but hav the dead been benefited? It may hav been a satisfaction to the living, but in most cases only for a generation or two at the most.

In the early settlement of Wyoming county a man was killed by a falling limb from a tree. A man cut twice around an elm tree, and peeled off a section of bark, and in this humble coffin the man was buried. Years after I stood by that grave, and I asked myself if he was not sleeping as peacefully and quiet as though he had been shrouded in gold and purple.

In disposing of the dead, the interests of the living should mainly be consulted.

In too many cases the living hav suffered for means which hav been foolishly squandered on funerals and monuments. For children to suffer for means which hav lavishly been spent to bury a dead parent, is, to say the least, sacrificing to the dead at the expense of the living. I hav known a man to spend money for a tombstone when his children were suffering for food and clothing.

Funerals, especially of the poor, are far more expensiv than they ought to be. I hope there are many who will liv to see more rational ideas prevail. The welfare of the living should mainly engage our thoughts.

A general license to attend a funeral is as much out of place as a general license would be to attend a birth. None ought to feel at liberty to attend only those whose presence will be agreeable to the friends of the deceased. In my opinion funerals ought to be very quiet affairs and conducted according to the wishes of immediate friends. I can see no more call for a great parade at death than at birth.

When I die I want my friends to dispose of my body in such manner as to giv them the least trouble and expense. If I were worth a million of dollars I would want no lying inscription on costly marble. If I cannot win a place in the memory of the people, let my name be forgotten.

Years ago a man with whom I was acquainted wrote his funeral discourse before he died, and it was read at his funeral. Friends who were present made appropriate remarks. Most people at that time thought that the whole proceedings were a heathenish performance. I thought them very proper. Later, Dr. Baldwin, of Yates county, died, and no minister was called to attend the funeral. A friend of the deceased, by request, made some very timely remarks, and the funeral was conducted in a very quiet and rational manner.

Of course, forty or fifty years ago these funerals excited a great deal of comment. It was said, "No man would desire to be buried in that way unless he had been put through a hardening process—no minister, no prayer offered. When I come to die, I hope I shall not be buried like a dog," and many other remarks of a like character. During these forty or fifty years common sense has been coming to the front. Such funerals are quite common now.

I hav attended many funerals conducted in a similar manner, and I do not think the individuals "died like dogs," neither do I think they had been put through the "hardening process." As far as I hav been able to learn, they were men of acute minds, and had a due regard to propriety.

One good old Methodist man heard that I had attended the funeral of a Liberal, and he thought it a thing so awful in its character that a law ought to be passed to prevent the future occurrence of such a transaction. The idea that John Peck, an Infidel, should be allowed to "preach a funeral sermon," seemed to him like the sin against the Holy Ghost which could not be forgiven in this world neither in the world to come. There should be little formality about a funeral. It should be conducted according to the taste and desire and circumstances of those immediately interested. Common sense would dictate that no particular form should be observed. Circumstances may so far differ that what would be proper on one occasion might be highly improper on another. It is no business of the public how funerals are conducted, so long as the peace of society is not disturbed nor the right of others infringed.

To see a man at a funeral acting as master of ceremonies, and giving orders as a military officer would at a general parade, in many instances is censurable and not in keeping with good sense.

The funerals which I hav attended of late hav given rise to these thoughts. And I am induced to giv them publicity, because I am more interested in the living than in the dead.

I want the time to come when costly monuments will no longer be reared for the dead, and men will cease to worry about a future state of existence and become good enough to hav a heaven all around them, and fully realize that man is the grandest being of which we hav any knowledge, and that his well-being should engross our whole attention.

Naples, N. Y. JOHN PECK.

English Notes.

DEAR TRUTH SEEKERS: The revival in English Freethought continues in a most satisfactory way. It is evidently no spurt, but an awakening of the majority of Freethinkers to the necessity of taking advantage of the position which Mr. Bradlaugh and his colleagues of the National Secular Society hav won for them by the persistent advocacy of their views. Since Mr. Bradlaugh allowed himself to be drawn almost exclusivly into the political world, the advocacy of practical Secularism had to some extent lapsed for want of a leader. Mr. Foote is admirably supplying his predecessor's place, and is a good organizer in addition; so that this outburst of renewed and sustained energy takes no one by surprise, whilst it is a source of great encouragement to his lieutenants to throw themselvs more and more heartily into the work.

During the past few weeks I hav had a splendid opportunity of seeing the reality of this regeneration. Hanley has already been referred to in these notes. Nottingham calls for some comment. Unlike Hanley, the necessarily dirty seat of the potteries, Nottingham is a particularly neat and clean town forming the center of lace-making industry. Almost every window is draped with snow-white lace curtains. People talk lace, think lace, and almost eat lace, with hosiery for a change. Other industries abound in Nottingham, but lace and hosiery take first and second places. For five and twenty years Freethought views hav been openly preached here. Hooper, the dean of local lecturers, is full of anecdotes of his quarter-century's work. Mr. Hooper, or, as he is called locally, "Jemmy Hooper," was my chairman for the open-air lecture in the market-place, where we had a thousand persons round us listening to the relationship existing between labor and Secularism. His genial face at once drew an audience, for he is known and respected throughout the town. What a mistake it is not to take much greater advantage of outdoor work than many Freethinkers seem disposed to do! I often wonder whether you adopt this method of propaganda in the States. To my mind there is nothing like it. Folks will not come indoors, try all you will. Mr. Foote is able to get decent audiences, but the majority of speakers fail to draw: not, I believe, because of their inability to lecture, else they would be unable to hold their hundreds together for an hour outside the buildings, but because workingmen are rather nervous about going into a place where they can be nobbled to join an unpopular society.

Lectures under a bright blue sky, delivered from a substantial wagon, and amplified by a liberal distribution of aggressiv literature, are far and away the best means of making our cause popular. And suppose sometimes a lecturer does come to grief and people howl a bit at him, or pelt him, or what not—what does it matter so long as it is a step toward breaking down the terrible superstition which is ever balking us in our endeavor to bring about reforms? Fortunately the Nottingham people accept this view of the case, and Messrs. Hooper and Lord are taking turns to keep the ball rolling.

A few nights ago I extended our work in a new direction. It so happened that the colliers were enjoying a week's holiday, or, in other words, had unanimously suspended work for a week in order that the heavy reserve stock of coal might be reduced and so prevent the masters from insisting upon a reduction of wages throughout the system. At Pendlebury the miners took advantage of this leisure to inaugurate a branch of the National Secular Society in their village, and Mr. Willock, the secretary of the Manchester branch, and myself went over there to conduct the ceremonies. It is perfectly certain that if the Secular party would only act more vigorously in harmony with the working classes a much larger and brighter future would lie before it than it can ever hope to attain to so long as it devotes itself exclusivly to Bible-banging. That Secularism is essentially destructiv all will cheerfully admit; that successful Secularism must also be constructiv is equally certain. Besides, the clergy are getting so broad and shallow that our destructiv work is becoming now of comparativly minor importance. The clergyman who opposed me at Pendlebury gave up entirely the opening chapters of Genesis and admitted freely that he did not believe that to be the true account of the world's beginning. My Atheistic arguments he practically accepted in block; all he held out for was a belief in a God, who is our father, and a Jesus Christ, who should be our ideal. As for the exact nature and characteristics of this God and Jesus, he seemed to hav no very definit ideas about them.

I forgot to mention with respect to Nottingham that I had the pleasure of meeting there the brother of a young lecturer who is now very activ in your States, Mr. Charlesworth. He hails from Nottingham, where he is held in great respect. Your lecturer's wife honored me with her presence at the afternoon lecture; but I did not know her, and no one thought to introduce me to her. Many were the inquiries about Mr. Charlesworth. Unfortunately I never see THE TRUTH SEEKER here in Manchester and could not giv them any recent news of the young missionary to the Americans. Nottingham has produced several good lecturers. In addition to the three already mentioned in this letter we must add J. B. Coppock, fellow of the Chemical Society, who usually lectures on scientific subjects, and Arthur Hunt, whose voice is now but seldom heard on our platforms.

The excitement of the week is the announcement that John M. Robertson, editor of the National Reformer, the late Mr. Bradlaugh's paper, is about to contest a Radical seat at Northampton, but in what or whose interest goodness only knows. Northampton is already well represented in Parliament by Messrs. Labouchere, editor of Truth, and Manfield. Mr. Robertson, in a leading article, avers that Mr. Manfield only holds his position on sufferance; that Mr. Labouchere personally gave an understanding on his colleague's behalf that the seat was not to be contested by its present owner at the next election. As things go now, the people of Northampton and Mr. Manfield are equally agreed that it is wise to let well alone and to run Mr. Manfield again. To this Mr. Robertson demurs with a most extraordinary argument. "When Mr. Bradlaugh died," he says, "the men whom he had trained, led, and represented, claimed the seat as one to which, in the local councils of the party, they had the right of nominating candidates." This is quite a new departure in English politics, and begs the question of party heredity. Mr. Bradlaugh was an excellent man, and his friends succeeded in sending him to St. Stephen's; but when Mr. Bradlaugh died, all that naturally came to an end, and it remained for the next best man to be sent in his place. Fortunately the Radicals succeeded in obtaining a good man, and all parties, with the exception of the Tories and a few factionists, are contented with the result. But Mr. Robertson contends that he has "some little title, if anyone has, to speak in Mr. Bradlaugh's name—that I am perfectly convinced he would hav approved of the course taken by his old followers in this matter." Therefore, Mr. Manfield ought to make way for Mr. Robertson to occupy Mr. Bradlaugh's place in Parliament. This is altogether too rich. Mr. Robertson is a very nice young man, when he likes to be nice; but he is also very bumptious. His record for work done is extremely small. He nags like an old woman, and is never happy unless he is criticising somebody; but there are already enough chatter-nags in Parliament, and if he wishes to succeed our late and immortal leader he must win his spurs first.

Perhaps the principal feature of interest in the coming parliamentary struggle will be the position the Labor party will prove able to occupy. In Manchester Labor has been dubbed "a religion," and has its Labor church and Labor minister. It now seeks to run Labor candidates for municipal and Parliamentary honors, quite irrespectiv of party organization, being willing to see an enemy to progress representing a constituency instead of a Radical rather than that their own nostrum should pass unnoticed. Like the total abstinence party, the labor advocates are rapidly losing their heads. It is ever thus with faddists, and the most humane and beneficent movements are apt to receive the severest injury at the hands of their friends.

Yours fraternally,

Manchester, April 2, 1892. SAM STANDRING.

Lectures and Meetings.

THE Manhattan Liberal Club lectures for April are as follows. The club meets at 220 East 15th street:

April 22d, "Religion and Morality," Henry Rowley;
April 29th, "Lunacy Real and Factitious, and Its Treatment," Albert Bach.
Business meeting and election of officers after lecture, on April 29th.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Chicago	Apr. 24	Boston	May 8
Massillon, O.	May 1	Montreal	" 15
New York	" 6	Boulder City, Col.	June 5

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Cincinnati, O.	April 24	Waterloo, Ind.	June 4, 5, 6
Centralia, Ill.	" 25, 26, 27, 28, and 29.	Butler, Ind.	" 7, 8
Strasburg, Ill.	May 1, 2	Columbus, O.	" 12
Ottumwa, Ia.	" 15	Pittsburgh, Pa.	" 19
Angola, Ind.	" 30, 31	Butler, Pa.	" 20, 21

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Manchester, Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Auburn and Philadelphia, Pa.

Letters of Friends.

The Greatest Woman's Book.

ABINGDON, VA., Jan. 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Will you kindly send me a sample copy of your paper? I hav just read what I believe to be the greatest book ever written by a woman, "Men, Women, and Gods," published by you, and if the paper is what I think it is, you will soon add my name to your subscription list. P. J. DAVENPORT.

Hopes To Keep the Fair Gates Open.

WAVERLY, WASH., Jan. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1 to send me six petitions to Congress, and keep the rest for that fund—fifty cents as a contribution from B. F. Dashiel and fifty cents from me. Hoping for success in this matter in particular and our Infidel cause in general, and to you and your paper prosperity, I remain, Yours respectfully, JULIUS SCHUR.

"April Fool!"

MONTPELIER, IND., April 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: On April 1st a good religious man asked me who that was coming across my farm, and when I looked said, "April fool!" I then thought that his religion, like "April fool," was based on faith without evidence, so if he is a good Christian all his life and in the next world fails to find Jesus and feels as bad as a lost kitten dropped by the roadside, the minister has only to say, "Christian fool!" or "Sunday fool!" as he thinks best.

H. B. ALLEN.

Preparing for His Future.

SOLDIERS' HOME, CAL., April 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am an old soldier from Sullivan county, of your state, now at the Soldiers' Home here in California. I am taking your TRUTH SEEKER and am very much interested in it. But I am bound to make a sure thing of it in that trip to the other world. I send you $1 for your new Bible Picture Book. It will giv me some chance to pick out my place in the burning region in the other world, so some of my old soldiers of Sullivan county will know where to find me when I get there.

Yours, JAS. B. WILSON.

Ridicule Counseled.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., April 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $1, for which send the Bible Picture Book to my address. I regard ridicule as altogether the most effectiv weapon to wield against the exceptionally ridiculous superstition named Christianity. Its honest votaries are not affected by appeals to their reason, for their reasoning faculties, if they possess them, are dormant, but their sense of the ludicrous is frequently acute. To the hypocrits (and they are often in the majority) ridicule comes with telling force.

JESSE HOOKER.

Missionary Work Amid Worse Than African Superstitions.

BEAVER DAM, March 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed express money order. This does me as much good as it does you, to get a new subscriber to your paper. I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER ever since it was started by D. M. Bennett, and hav scattered my papers round on missionary work and tried my best to get new subscribers, and this is the first. I shall take courage and try again.

I see on the first page of THE TRUTH SEEKER of March 5th that the new Ingersollian Controversy can be ordered at your office, therefore send me $1 worth.

B. THORP.

Domestic Information to Be Exchanged.

ANN ARBOR, MICH., April 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Will some one please write me what will remove grease spots from carpets? I hav a nice carpet nearly ruined by grease.

I hav peaches, pears, strawberries, and grapes now over a year old, and as fresh as when picked. I use the California cold process. You do not cook or seal the fruit. It only costs a cent a quart to preserve it. If any of your readers wish, I will send them a small sample of berries by mail, and tell them just how to put them up. It is much nicer than canned fruit, and much less trouble and expense. You can put up a bushel of berries in about ten minutes.

MRS. ROSE R. DELDERS.

Believes in Dynamite—of Our Kind.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., April 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am extremely pleased with the way THE TRUTH SEEKER pours hot shot and dynamite explosivs into the camps and fortresses of the enemies of truth. The horrid pictures of their mythical Joss, which they hav set up and insist that the ignorant masses shall fall down before and worship, are an immense weapon, which strikes terror and consternation into every expounder of the caricatures who is to be heard Sundays in the joss-houses of the land, and makes him feel and know with certainty that in the warfare his Joss is doomed to annihilation.

The leaven of truth is working, and the warfare is breaking out all along the line in the camp of the enemy.

GEORGE DAVIS.

Young Men Devil-Bound.

FRANKFORT, WASH., March 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed twenty-five cents in stamps for "The Strike of a Sex, the 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' of Woman's Slavery," and twenty-five cents in stamps for some of those letters to be sent to Washington in regard to the World's Fair. I want quite a number of books. I hav got four young men well interested in THE TRUTH SEEKER. I let them hav mine as soon as I get it read through. These four boys hav a logging-camp of their own, and hav considerable young company, and some said to be quite religious, and that religious part thinks the boys going to the arms of his majesty the devil right away. I would like to see all of THE TRUTH SEEKER's pictures in one book. I would giv more for it than any Bible I ever saw. My regards to Mr. Heston. May he liv a thousand years anyway, to make pictures for us and the churches.

Yours in the cause of liberty,

MRS. RACHEL J. BUTTS.

Thinks the World's Fair Sunday Question the Main One.

MEMPHIS, TEX., March 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please send me five copies of the Telegram. One can hardly agree with D. Webster Groh's second letter to Mr. A. N. Bonsteel, showing "The Progress of the Church." The church is progressiv in no sense or form, and to goad the enemy lengthens the combat and intensifies the strife. The opening of the Fair on Sunday is first and foremost. That triumphant is the issue. Nothing can take its place. And it is far nobler to secure the freedom of body and soul to the world than to taunt the enemy with its past heinousness. We hav no time to fling stones, but to one purpose and its conjunctions. On to freedom for all, now and forever. Yet I do like the kindly and truthful expression of Isaac S. Lee's letter from Fort Worth, Tex. In his kindness he is far-seeing, and is fully armed to battle for the right. I shall be in such a rank, with the mighty dollars—all I can giv—and urge a fair and honorable warfare.

Yours truly, J. V. MULKS.

Despotism Intolerable and Damnable.

SHEPARD, O., March 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find a clipping from Columbus Ohio State Journal showing that the Ohio legislature has been doing some very foolish work:

Mr. McConnell's bill to prohibit shaving on Sunday is a law. The senate passed the bill yesterday morning after considerable discussion and the addition of one amendment. Mr. Carpenter, of Fayette, offered this amendment, which exempts all those who conscientiously observe Saturday as the Sabbath. Some claim that the effects of this amendment will be to giv the Hebrews a monopoly of shaving on Sundays. Senator Marshall offered an amendment to prohibit the shining of shoes also, but it was defeated after it had served the purpose of creating a laugh. Messrs. Green, Forbes, McConica, and Lampson spoke in favor of the bill, but Messrs. Geyer, Phillips, and Von Seggern opposed it unless it was amended so as to allow shaving in cases of necessity. This amendment was defeated and the bill passed without an opposing vote, and twenty in favor of it. The penalty is not less than $25 or more than $50, or less than fifteen days or more than thirty in the county jail. A number of local barbers were in the lobby working for the bill.

F. S. MONTGOMERY.

A Courageous School-Teacher.

CODORUS, PA., April 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am well pleased with THE TRUTH SEEKER. It is all it claims in its title. Here is some of my late experience. Where I liv is a hotbed of so-called Christianity. I hav been a teacher since 1866, being a Freethinker during all this time, but hav, because I was urgently requested, read the Bible in opening my school every morning. At the last term I positivly refused to comply with the demand, though it was prophesied by sky-pilots and others that I would fail in my school work. The contrary proved true. I hav had greater success than ever before. I succeeded in obtaining the good will of all my patrons, and besides that the school board raised my salary, even to back pay on five months. I strive to make thinkers and reasoners of my pupils, and teach truth and morality, but everything clearly secular, as demanded by our state school law. It is said that I had the best-disciplined school in the district. Freethinkers, it will pay you to stand up to our colors.

I hav had several arguments on the Sabbath, Bible in schools, creeds, etc., during the winter. I am now challenged by a clergyman to discuss the "Propriety of the Bible in Our Public Schools," but hav thus far declined, owing to the fact that he is determined to hav it take place in a church, where I am confident I would not get justice. J. W. F. COPENHEAVER.

Religions Terrors Priest-Made All.

IONIA, MICH., Feb. 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $5 to renew my subscription for another year and one new subscriber. I intended to get two more, but think I will get them yet.

The new subscriber is an intelligent society lady, and has frequent discussions with the clergy in which she has been able to hold her own with them without the aid of any Liberal journal. She needs THE TRUTH SEEKER and must hav it. I hav been a reader of your paper about ten years, and think it improves every year, and especially this year in its new dress. Heston is inspired.

I herewith send you another specimen of my home-made bric-a-brac verse.

Very respectfully, S. M. BAYARD.

DEDICATED TO THE CLERGY.

In ancient days astrology,
Priest-cursed, became mythology,
Then doubly-damned theology,
  Pope-hatched from the beginning,
With gods and ghosts, and heavenly hosts,
  And hells and devils grinning,
And savior's blood, as clear as mud,
  Atonement for their sinning.

Theology is earth's greatest curse,
As preached and prayed and sung in verse,
As all their silly creeds rehearse,
  All joining in the hue and cry,
  With threatenings dire on all who die
  Who do not with their terms comply.
  One truth is clear, let none deny,
Religious gall is priest-made all,
From Buddha down to Pope Pecci.

S. M. B.

A Russo-Jewish Controversy.

SALISBURY, MO., April 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: A. W. Kientoff in "Angry Jews" of your issue April 2, 1892, is nothing more nor less than a Russian or a descendant of Russia, as his name indicates, and also the spirit of his article. It is true, as Herbert Spencer once exclaimed, that a Russian is invariably a liar, so if Kientoff can prove that a Jewish mayor down south, or anywhere else, ever prohibited the selling of milk on Sundays, then and only then will his story hold water. Milk is a necessity and can be had even on Sundays. He undoubtedly has matters mixed; it was in his glorious Russia where some of his Greek priests got after some Jews for selling milk on Sunday. Kientoff is not an adherent to Freethought, for the only thing that strikes his fancy is when he sees the Jewish belief attacked through Watson Heston's pictures—which are, by the way, good—but Watson Heston's pictures attacking Christianity are more forcible, but Mr. Kientoff is such a good disciple that he can only take delight in THE TRUTH SEEKER's picture on its last page, for that suits his Jew-baiting propensities. But to attack his Jesus!—you would see the Russian intolerance creep out of him every time! Any person half posted and with the slightest knowledge of a schoolboy knows that the Jews are not Sabbatarians, and that they hav been drifting very fast from belief to Freethought. Of course it is hardly worth the while to answer such cranky correspondence impregnated with ignorance—but even such calibers hav to take up the time and space of as valuable a paper as THE TRUTH SEEKER. Yours respectfully, L. L.

The Golden Rule Challenged.

CONCORDIA, KAN., Apr. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The Golden Rule is a farce. I hav often made this statement in writing for the press, and hav never heard the argument defeated. If to "do unto another as ye would he should do unto you" is sound morality, it must be on the theory that the assumed premis is true, viz.: That the proper rule of ethics, so far as each one is concerned, is just what he may wish others to do to him! For observe that if my wish as to what you should do to me is at fault, then your action toward me may be immoral, and yet in strict keeping with the rule. All cases in which the desire upon my part is opprobious are examples. The judge upon the bench, before ruling upon the motion of the criminal to set the verdict aside, might pause and ask: "What would I wish him to do if our places were exchanged? Of course to grant the motion; motion allowed." The tramp who asks me for a dollar may wish I could be induced to giv him my horse; observe that the conclusion is as obvious as can be arrived at—"I ought to giv him my horse."

It is no argument to say your own wishes should be pure; for if the rule is not operativ beneficially with bad men, it is no account. We do not need a saponaceous compound that will wash clean clothes, but those which are dirty. B. R. ANDERSON.

Down With the Black Fiend of Ignorance.

TAMPA, FLA., March 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find $4 to pay for four copies of the new Picture Book, as per advertisement. I hope to get a few more subscribers soon. If all goes well we shall open a news-stand for Liberal papers and Liberal literature. We are increasing gradually but surely in this place. There are too many who are afraid of Mrs. Grundy, but I hope to help them hav more confidence in themselvs in the near future.

I should long ago hav sent for more literature, but I had the misfortune to be burnt out, and lost what little I possessed of worldly goods, and it has been an uphill business to scratch together what little I hav now. But, thanks to my good Liberal friend, Mr. R. Mugge, I hav been able to start in a small way and make my living, and will soon be able to get square with the world. I am over seventy years old now, and it comes a little rougher than it would years ago. But I shall not despair, although feeble. And I may thank our noble Freethought papers for the light I possess. For it is they that first lifted me out of the darkness that shrouded my earlier days. May the light of intelligence spread her bright rays over every old hell of bigotry and superstition, until the black fiend of ignorance is swallowed up in the bright rays of intellectual science. Let progress be our aim and "Excelsior" our motto. Then, if we reach not perfection, we will at least be so much nearer to its goal.

Thanks to Brother Heston for the many and varied productions of his fertil brain. As soon as I am able I will procure another copy of the other Picture Book. It is a pleasure to me to remember my dear old friend D. M. Bennett, whose acquaintance I made over Science Hall on 8th street. It was the last time I met that good and noble man. The fearless advocate of justice and right, our genial and good Col. R. G. Ingersoll, whom I shall always remember with pleasure, was also present, and the witty Moses Hull, with his keen sarcasms, helped to enliven the pleasant hour I passed in the sanctum of the brave old TRUTH SEEKER.

Hoping to receive the books as soon as possible, as friends are anxious to get them, I am, Yours fraternally,

S. J. WALKER.

Freedom of Individuals, Classes, and Races.

MOUNDS JUNCTION, ILL., April 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Your issue of April 2d contains an account of the reception of Frederick Douglas in New York, and a statement that Mr. Depew credited Douglas with having suggested the Emancipation proclamation. So far as my mind serves me, Robert Dale Owen made a direct and strong appeal to the president through the press, and I am glad to see you bringing out the facts. A most important factor in directing attention to the matter was Mrs. Stowe's book, and still more important was the debate of Mr. Lincoln with Stephen A. Douglas; but the truth is, the nation evolved out of slavery as they are evolving out of the idea of personal control in this universe and as they must evolve out of all error. That progress toward justice and humanity has been made in spite of the Bible is certainly true, whether those who were most activ were called Christians or heretics. The part played by the over-zealous chief-justice who declared that "the black man had no rights that a white man was bound to respect," must not be overlooked.

Colonel Ingersoll well says that neither races nor individuals can fairly claim to be civilized who do not willingly concede to others the same rights they claim for themselvs. The man sneeringly called an Infidel aspires to the entire domain of nature. The orthodox Christian says he scarcely thinks he is entitled to anything, but to "obey his master."

But keep open the question of the rights of individuals, classes, or races until people are induced to think; thinking is the crowning virtue. JAS. H. CRAIN.

No God, No Christ, No Good in the Church.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., March 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: With your kind permission, and for the benefit of others, allow me to place myself and name on record as any kind of a believer that others may want to call me. I am as a black sheep in this community, and I presume the reason is because I hav no ready cash, and because I do not believe in anything preached by one church more than another; and although I keep my own counsels, that no possible mistake may be made as to what I do and do not believe let me declare that: I deny that there ever existed a God, personal, ideal, or otherwise. I deny the present existence of any; and I further deny the ultimate possibility of any ever existing. More, should I make a rash error in my denial, and, by some hook, crook, or issue, there be one, then I defy or dare him in all his glory or his lowness. I deny that there is any positiv proof that Jesus Christ ever existed on this planet. I deny that the Virgin Mary ever existed. I deny the allegation that the church has ever done any moral, spiritual, or intellectual good. I deny the allegation that the church has ever made a woman out of a woman, or a man out of a man. I charge that the church, as a whole, is the acme of autocracy; that its aim is to acquire all the worldly wealth and influence possible, under the pretext of taking care of our stomachs and souls. That it hampers science, philosophy, and the development of mind, body, heart, and soul. That it is selfish, egotistical, arbitrary, and the exact opposit of what it pretends to be. That its teachers are, consequently, absolute impostors, or, in the alternativ, the emblem of ignorance, and incapable to teach the truth. I believe, because I know, that death is the birth of the spirit, and further I say not.

We expect our brother Liberal S. P. Putnam here on April 13th and 14th, and I hope that his lectures may find place in our secular papers.

Yours in the fight for liberty,

JOSEPH MAILLE.

Things in Arizona.

TUCSON, ARIZ., March 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Not seeing any account from this corner of Uncle Sam's domain in THE TRUTH SEEKER, I am prompted to pen the following:

S. P. Putnam lectured here two nights, the 14th and 15th inst., at Reid's Opera House, to large and appreciativ audiences. This was a surprise to myself, as well as the general public; as this city has been conceded to be a priest-ridden town. Mr. Putnam's lectures gave general satisfaction, and I can truthfully say that nine out of every ten were well pleased. But there is always found a crank, in each and every town, who would not be pleased even though he had the full run of the fabled garden of Eden. But we as Liberals are glad that a few such animals exist, as without them we could not appreciate the true and noble. The ball has been opened, and we intend to keep it rolling.

I will not try to giv you any description of this town and surrounding country, but will leave that for Mr. Putnam, knowing that he will do justice to the subject.

We hav two daily papers; and one weekly, the Tucson Star (Democratic), and run on the Women's Christian Temperance Union principle, under the thumb of the clergy, so it consequently could not say anything good for a Freethought lecture—and has not brains enough at the helm to do much injury. The Arizona Citizen (Republican) did not mention the lecture; they probably are waiting to see which way the tide flows. The Arizona Enterprise (Republican), weekly, is the only free and fearless paper in our midst, it being edited and run by the proprietors without the assistance of the clergy and Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Please send me a few sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER with Putnam's representation of Tucson, for distribution, as he authorized me to take subscriptions for the paper.

Anyone wishing to correspond with any of the Tucson Liberals can address either of the following names: R. D. Furgeson, attorney-at-law; A. J. Davidson, contractor; J. Landis; Chas. Etchells. By writing to the above you will receive immediate attention.

With the best of wishes for the success of our cause and THE TRUTH SEEKER, I am,

Yours for liberty, ISAAC E. CRUM.

The Devil.

NEWARK, N. J., March 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The Foresters is the third largest order in the world, and their first "chief ranger" was old Father Adam, who picked the first fruit out of the garden of Eden. Of course God was displeased with our chief, who believed when fruit was ripe it should be eaten, and because he ate of the forbidden fruit God punished Adam for his disobedience with death. Now, as God intended that man should liv forever, I think the old fellow should be praised for his great wisdom in obeying Eve instead of God. With no deaths there would not be any standing-room for the two-legged animals to-day. I always forget my friend, the devil, who persuaded Eve to raise the racket. Of course he was the prime mover in the deal, so God informs us. Well, I think the devil should hav his full share of praise, and as he has been a faithful soldier and a slave all his life for popes and Protestant heretics, it is quite time to giv him a pension for the rest of his life. He has done work enough, God knows, for nothing. The Christians say he is old and superannuated and cannot do any more harm. That is no reason he should not receive his pay and hav roast turkey on Thanksgiving day. Before last Thanksgiving I went to Summit, N. J. I called on a Baptist minister. He was busily engaged roasting a large turkey. It was high noon when he was taking the bird from the oven. I bid him good morning and made known my business. He smiled a sickly and sanctimonious smile, as all theologians do who abuse the devil. That smile told me as plain as words, "You can't hav any turkey here to-day—for to-morrow I am invited out." So that fellow had two feast-days. Now, if it had not been for the devil, the ranger, that fellow would never hav had that sinecure, and a fat salary, and a fat turkey. When I left that man's door I said to myself: "Morris, you are an unfortunate devil. Instead of being a commercial tramp, why not try the salvation fake? What's the reason I could not get a few sermons, commit them to memory, put on a shadbelly coat and a white choker, and travel on wind, cheek, and eat good grub? I don't see any reason only that I would not stick to their text, and abuse the devil, their best friend." If I ever do start out in that kind of work I shall advise all my hearers to pray to the devil, for God never hurts anybody. The devil is the one that runs the cremation furnace, and if we follow him we will be intelligent, honest, and industrious, and those gifts lead to happiness. But I forgot the devil and Foresters never pray in their lodges. So instead of praying to the devil we will sing the doxology. W. W. MORRIS.

Church-Meeting Fooleries.

PETERSBURG, IND., April 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Last evening we had a Union meeting under the auspices of the Women's Christian Temperance Union for the purpose of cultivating a Christian Sabbath public sentiment, and to boom the order by an appeal to the public for money to feed starving Russia! A young lady read, "Though I giv all my goods to the poor and hav not charity," etc., after which she said, "In a little while I want to see how much charity you hav got." On starting the baskets she said, "One of these baskets has got a hole in it and it won't hold nickels, so you can just put in dollars." The speakers were Brother Fields (C.P.), Dr. Bain (M.E.), and a Baptist minister. The latter showed the legality and expediency of the seventh-day rest, touching with a heavy hand baseball, the milkman, and the butcher shop, as well as the shamefulness of Christian indulgence in these evils on Sunday.

Next Dr. Bain, of the Methodist Episcopal church, said he "was not only ashamed but disgusted! sick!! very sick!!! awful sick!" (I remarked quietly, "Bilious as hell.") Being so sick, his remarks amounted to but little. Then the C. Presbyterian, the lion of the evening, with the assurance of a tin rattle-box came forward. He was not blaming the railways for Sunday running, as Christians require them to do it, mentioning a church (Methodist Episcopal) dedication where the members chartered the train and collected fares by the way, also worked the branch roads for all they could make. "That was not on Sunday." Bain: "Yes, on Sunday." Fields and the bishop gave them a setting out, but kept the money. Brother Fields repeatedly cited "heathen Spain" and "heathen France," as well as calling them Infidel and godless nations.

The greatest misfortune is that Fields "will not attend the Columbian Exposition if it is opened on Sundays or if whisky is sold on the grounds." I hope some one "near the throne" will notify the management, so they may not be deprived of his presence, or his brash voice.

Brother Fields and his wife say they do not want to raise children in such society as this town is composed of; that "it would be impossible for children reared here to become good Christians" like them. In other words, their seed would not be theirs; so they liv in the practice condemned in Gen. xxxviii—and yet stand before the public (both being lecturers and preachers) as teachers of ethics and moral reformers. There is nothing like a little family circle to make adults satisfied with life and cause them to not meddle with other people's business.

The church of to-day is typified by Judas Iscariot, who carries the purse, kisses the savior, and breaks his own neck (Isa. iii, 12).

As in the story, Christ will be again resurrected from the orthodox tomb to appear to the "twos and threes" (Infidels) who meet in truth and for righteousness's sake. FRANK S. WEAVER.

For We Are Commanded To Spread the Gospel.

ANTRIM, N. H., Feb. 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I take great pleasure in reading your paper. Every time I get it I cannot rest easy until I hav read it all through. And it is the same with the Ironclad Age, for I take that also, and as I am a lover of all common-sense talk it fills my brain with something that does me good. It makes me laugh sometimes and at others it makes me feel bad to see some of our brothers or sisters so considerate of some one's feelings as not to want to hav Brother Heston draw those pictures on paper. "It is so shocking to some Christian friends!" Now, my dear friend, let those sensitiv Christians only read the Bible, and read it slow enough to understand it—that is, if they possibly can understand it. I do not want them to read it as the young man that I was talking to the other day said that he did. When I asked him if he ever read the Bible much, that he was so bold in advocating as such a nice book, he said, "No, not much." He said that he had read the New Testament through. "Well," said I, "did you understand it after you got through reading?" "Well," said he, "no, I don't know that I did. Mother gave me fifty cents to read it through, so I got through as quick as I could to get my money." Now, I advise all those dear Christians that hav got such a nervous system that a truthful picture will shock their feelings so that they cannot rest well after retiring at night, to just take their blessed book and begin at the commencement and read slow the first chapter of Genesis and see if the world and all therein was not made and finished before God stopped. Then let them stop and rest a moment to consider what more was to be done or what more could be done. For if they hav common sense they will understand that when everything is made and then pronounced good and perfect that is all that any reasonable person will expect. And they will find there that God made everything that was made to his own liking except one great job, and then it appears that he thought that the undertaking was more than his great brain was capable of grasping, so he spoke to his partner and said, "Let us make man like unto our own image." Now, they will find that the other fellow had nothing whatever to do with the job, for they will see fully by reading the twenty-seventh verse of the first chapter that God made man in his own image, and it appears that after he commenced on the business he liked it so well that he made two, with a slight variation, and then he blessed them, as all good parents will their children when they get married and are going away from home to settle, for he told them to be fruitful and replenish the earth—and all poor people hav obeyed the command. And after reading and thinking over that chapter let them turn to the second and there read all about that God's work, and read carefully and understandingly, and I think that their eyes will be opened so that they will understand that the Lord God was an impostor on all decent society. And after studying these two chapters as well as any good scholar would study the first four rules in his arithmetic, they will be all ready to advance on the enemy. For they will see, if they are not totally blind, that this Lord God was the most bitter enemy that man ever had—providing there is or ever was such a being as God, Lord God, or Holy Ghost that begot that man that the weak-minded call Christ. Oh, my dear Christian friends, it is a beautiful road to travel in imagination, but it is a mighty rough one when we come to the realization part of it. That is, I mean, when God's servants, as they call themselvs, set their hell-hounds on all that do not believe as they do. And after those good, tender-hearted Christians get the Bible read through let them take the money that they giv to support ministers and buy some history, and then they will see how kind and loving that blessed book—so called by some—has made people toward their fellowmen.

And now, Brother Heston, I want you to keep those pictures a-going until the crack of doom, and I will keep circulating the good stuff as fast as I can. I hav sent the "Pictorial Text-Book" on a mission, and it is traveling every day and being explained to the people, for we are commanded to spread the gospel, and that is mine. And I must hav a Pictorial Bible. I am bound to keep the people posted, so that they will take the right road to start with, and not allow them to go along eight or ten miles and then hav to come clear back and take a new start. It will be night by the time they get fairly started, and I want them to go in the sunshine of life, when they are young and can enjoy their journey. H. B. RALEIGH.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

A New Member of the Family.

We hav a stranger at our place!
Some one new! Thanksgiving day
He came; and he can jump and race,
And all he does is just sleep and play.
No, 'tain't the baby. That was last week.
This one has hair an' great big eyes;
And baby can't run at all, 'r speak,
Just cries! an' cries! an' cries!

It's a dog—a nice, white, curly dog!
An' the funniest dog you ever saw!
Round as a tub an' fat as a hog!
An' he'll sit on his tail and hold his paw
For me to shake; an' 'en he'd go
An' sit by the stove where the kitten is.
An' first she'd hump her back, y'know,
An' sizz! an' sizz! an' sizz!

First day that Jack came to our place,
He was all hungry, an' poor, an' wet;
An' the hair was hangin' all over his face,
An' burrs an' mud; an' you'd thought he'd et
The whole place up. You 'n me can't think
What 'tis to be hungry like that, pa says,
An' never hav nothing to eat 'r drink
For days! an' days! an' days!

An' after he'd et for a while, an' set
By the stove where the little yellow kit—
Ten is, Jim took him down to the Vet—
R'n'y surgeon to clean him up a bit.
An' Jack had to hav a bath, and some
Of his hair was cut, where the mud an' burrs
'S stuck; till he's clean an' the kitty comes
An' purrs! an' purrs! an' purrs!

—Charles Gordon Rogers in Sunny Hour.

Talks on Political Economy.

In the eastern part of the state of New York, below Lake Champlain, is the quiet little lake of St. George. And in one of the prettiest villas, overlooking the tranquil lake, is Madam Hauton's college and seminary for young ladies. It was a cool and delightful place in the summer, brisk and healthful in winter, and in all times of the season seemed just the place for gayety and merriment. But instead of dancing halls, theaters, and other places of amusement, massiv stone churches and large educational libraries seemed to frown upon the frivolous little dancing lake, great waving trees, and soft whispering zephyrs. And above it all Madam Hauton's college loomed proudly up above the rest, and not only overlooked the villa, but overlooked several other little villas that dotted the borders of the blue Hudson in the distance. Pretty as the villa always was, never did it look prettier than on this especial day, April 30th. There had been a heavy shower in the forenoon, but now at 12:30 in the afternoon the sun shone grandly down upon the moist earth like some benevolent father caressing his children. Beautiful, stately lawns to match the building adjoined it. There were urns filled with choice hyacinths, near which two young girls were standing, one seventeen and the other sixteen. The youngest I will describe first. She was the daughter of a wealthy engineer in New York city, and well known in the fashionable circles of Washington, because of her talents and bright, vivacious beauty. Her uncle was a well-known Senator, and it was through his influence that Ethel obtained admission into the homes of the aristocracy of Washington. Had it not been for the latter fact, I am afraid that her talents would hav hardly proved satisfactory, even in this republican country. Then her cousin Harry, who promised to follow in the footsteps of his father, was the most eligible match for ambitious mammas in Washington, and as he adored his cousin Ethel, it was well society wisely thought to tolerate her for the sake of so wealthy a young man.

The elder girl was Miss Isabella Lloyd, the orphaned, but petted niece of a wealthy aunt. She had sent Isabella here to complete her education before entering society. Isabella also lived in Washington, and her aunt figured conspicuously among the lady guests of the White House. Miss Ethel Carlton and Miss Isabella Lloyd were inseparable friends. These were never known to hav quarrels or disagreements as girls often do. Perhaps it was because the two were so unlike. Ethel was wild, dark, and tomboyish. And that was the principal reason why her cousin Harry liked her so well. "She is not giddy, like other girls," he would often say, "but so chummy. She knows so well how to sympathize with a fellow, too." Nevertheless, the two cousins were almost never together two hours before they were quarreling. Some dispute would surely be the cause, and it angered Harry to see Ethel conquering. She was sarcastic, too sarcastic for Harry altogether, and she would always cap the climax of her sarcasm by turning on her heel contemptuously, leaving her cousin grinding his teeth in rage. But two minutes later they might be seen smiling and pleasant once more, ready for another fight.

Isabella was quiet, sweet, and gentle. At an unkind word or look her blue eyes would fill with tears that would melt the sternest heart, and her small, red lips would quiver like a child's. She was slender and small, with sunny brown hair.

Wild as Ethel was, there were moments when her beautiful, expressiv brown eyes would grow tender with the sweet inspiration of thought. And as they both stood beside the hyacinths that beautiful spring day, it was one of the sweet moments in Ethel's life. With her arm around her friend's waist she sang softly:

The smiling spring comes in rejoicing,
And surely winter grimly flies;
Now crystal-clear are the falling waters,
And bonny blue are the sunny skies;
Fresh o'er the mountain breaks forth the morning,
The evening gilds the ocean's swell,
All creatures joy in the sun's returning,
But I rejoice in my bonny Belle—ending with an affectionate little squeeze of her friend's hand. As she did so a book Isabella was holding fell to the ground. Ethel eagerly picked it up; she was passionately fond of books, and read slowly, "Political Economy." "Hav you read this, Belle?" she asked. "No," responded her friend, "but I hav read books on the same subject." "Well, what does it mean?" inquired Ethel with some impatience. "I hav read and heard a great many people talk of political economy, but I never knew what they meant by it. But you will tell me, Bell," coaxingly. "Certainly," replied the amiable Miss Lloyd, "I will try and define the science to the best of my ability. Well, political economy is a term invented by Francois Quesnay, a writer of France, who published his views in 1785. He evidently thought that the policy of a nation might be conducted after the pattern of a household. His theory was evidently paternalistic, and his government revenue should consist of a tax on land values, which has been restated in late years, and made popular, by Henry George and others. After the French Revolution political economy came to mean something entirely different under the guidance of Ricardo, Mill, and others. Briefly stated, we may say that it is an endeavor to discover and reduce to a science those laws governing the commerce and trade of the people, that government may shape their legislation so as to harmonize with those laws."

Here Isabella paused, and Ethel, who had been listening attentivly with the book in her hand, leaning against the marble urn, asked quizzingly, yet earnestly, "Bella, do the politicians that form those laws take advantage of the wisdom of the economists? Uncle Harry, you know, has been to Congress, and I am sure he never studied political economy. And as for Harry—well, I could not see much economy in his politics"—significantly.

Belle laughed. "You are no doubt right, Ethel. The average politician knows very little about political economy. Still, this is no fault of the economists. Nor is it an argument why the study should not be pursued."

While the two girls were so busily talking they had not noticed how the bright sky was clouding over, and how long they would hav stood there talking no one knows—until the afternoon bell rang, probably—but now an interruption came in the shape of a large drop of rain on Ethel's hand, causing her to exclaim in surprise, "If it isn't going to rain again! And it was so pleasant only a few minutes ago. Well, there is no accounting for April's moods. That is true." Isabella drew out her watch, and after glancing at it she said smilingly, "Only a few minutes ago! Well, I am glad that you hav enjoyed our talk so well. It just lacks three minutes for the bell to ring, so we might as well go in now, as it is going to rain. Come, Ethel." And she drew her friend toward the steps. "Belle," asked Ethel as they were about to enter the building, "will you tell me some more about this interesting study after a while?" "Certainly;" replied her friend; "I am very glad that you are interested in it, because I hav just begun the study myself, and it will be comforting to hav some one to talk to. So, if it will be pleasing and beneficial to you, we will continue these talks with the greatest of pleasure." I. A. B.

Natural Reasoning.

"What did Solomon do besides build the temple?" asked a little girl of her brother, who at once replied:

"He wrote the dictionary."

"Does the Bible say so?" queried the sister, with wide eyes of believing interest.

"I don't know as it does in so many words, but he was the wisest man, and that's the wisest book, so of course he wrote it."

This original method of reasoning was evidently admired by a still younger member of the family, who had come up to listen to the conversation.

"Well, Tommykins, what do you know about Solomon or his temple?" asked the brother, jocosely.

"Everything," was the stout reply.

"Oh, you do, do you? Well, where was his temple?"

"You must think I'm clever," answered Tommy, in scorn.

"Oh, you don't know, you don't know!"

"I do, though."

"Well, where was it, then?"

"On the front of his head, same's 'would be in anybody!" replied Tommy, in conclusiv triumph.

Meaning of the Word "Doll."

Numbered with other problems referring to small matters is the one why the little manikin so enjoyed by girls is called a "doll," instead of, as the French do, a "puppet," or, with the Italians, a "bambino," or baby. With a view to setting at rest the minds of little women on this subject Golden Days has investigated the meaning of the word "doll." It says: "To explain, it is necessary to go back to the Middle Ages, when it was the fashion all over the Christian world for mothers to giv their little children the name of a patron saint. Some saints were more popular than others, and St. Dorothea was at one period more popular than all. Dorothea, or Dorothy, as the English hav it, means a 'gift from God.' But Dorothea or Dorothy is much too long a name for a little, toddling baby, and so it was shortened to Dolly and Doll, and from giving the babies a nickname it was an easy step to giv the name to the little images of which the babies were so fond."

All Reverence the Dead.

A day or two ago a fruit peddler was passing up Elizabeth street east, yelling "Ba-nan-oes" at the top of his voice, when he suddenly caught sight of the crape on a door which signified that a child lay dead in the house.

"Ba-nan-oes! Ba-nan-oes! Ba"——!

He checked his words as he saw the crape, removed his hat and placed it on his cart, and he walked to the next square bareheaded and silent.

A Remarkable Dog Story.

The following dog story is taken from the pages of the Westmoreland Gazette: Just as the frost was setting in five weeks ago, a rough-coated fox-terrier bitch on the Beast Banks gave birth to three puppies. The owner decided at once to drown one of them. He watched its struggles in the bucket for some time, and when it appeared to be dead he covered it over with a board and left it. Next day the ice in the bucket was too thick to be broken, and it remained in this condition for three weeks. About this time he went to look at his litter of pups, and found three in the kennel instead of two, as he had expected. The anxious mother had, as it proved, rescued her pup long before the ice had formed. She restored it to its brothers in the kennel, and there, without the aid of medicin or doctor, or even a St. John Ambulance lecture, had restored the little doggy to health. This case of recovery from drowning can be attributed to nothing but good nursing.

Correspondence.

[ANOTHER LITTLE SOLDIER.]

HARMONY, WASH., April 4, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for two years. I enjoy reading the Corner very much.

It is always raining nowadays; we hav not had much good weather in western Washington. The sun shines one day and the next it rains again. I think my letter is long enough for the first time.

Yours sincerely,
LOUIS NEWMAN.

WAMIC, ORE., March 29, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav never written to the Children's Corner before. I thought I would write a few lines. I like to read the Children's Corner, and look at the pictures. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for ten years. I am thirteen years old. I hav a brother and sister. Our school will start next Monday. I guess I will close for this time.

Your friend, PERCY B. DRIVER.

[Write again, Percy.—ED. C. C.]

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

ONLY 2 CENTS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

There has just been published for general circulation a most interesting pamphlet, containing a good likeness of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll and articles from the following well-known writers: R. G. Ingersoll, Thaddeus B. Wakeman, B. F. Underwood, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Helen H. Gardener, Rev. Henry Frank, Nelly Booth Simmons, A. B. Bradford, Parker Pillsbury, Lucy N. Colman, Capt. R. C. Adams, Prof. A. L. Rawson, Lyman C. Howe, Susan H. Wixon, Allen Pringle, Wm. Emmette Coleman, Harry Hoover, Mrs. M. A. Freeman, Sara Underwood, Rev. J. C. Grumbine, J. J. McCabe, Lydia R. Chase, Henry M. Taber, J. C. Watkins, Dr. Edward Montgomery, Emma Rood Tuttle, Dr. Juliet Severance, Hudson Tuttle, E. C. Walker, Judge C. B. Waite, Dyer D. Lum, Voltairine de Cleyre, Lewis G. Janes and Dr. Richard Hodgson.

The publication will be forwarded to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of an American two-cent postage stamp.

Address FREETHINKERS' MAGAZINE, Buffalo, N. Y.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Prometheus, A Poem. "It is crammed with life, thought, and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary beauty."—[Dr. Henry W. Bellows. Price, $1.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY
BETTER THAN
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions
And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

News of the Week.

SUBSCRIPTIONS are being taken to buy Walt Whitman's house and keep it and the furniture as the poet used them.

THE clerical party in Chili are harassing President Montt so, because he refuses their exorbitant demands, that he may resign.

IN Bolivia thirty thousand Indians, led by a "messiah," are killing white men, murdering their children, and carrying off their wives.

LAST week the health officers of New York city were alarmed at discovering fifty-seven cases of typhus. They were among Jews from Russia.

ON Sunday, the 11th, the congregation of the African church at Burlington, N. J., engaged in a free fight as the benediction was about to be pronounced.

THE laying of the second Palestine railroad is looked on by Mohammedans as a forerunner of judgment-day, according to their prophecy, "When the iron is laid at length, then look for the happy day."

OUR government has offered 125,000 francs indemnity to Italy, for relatives of the Italians lynched at New Orleans. Secretary Blaine acknowledged it a "duty." Italy was satisfied, and accepted.

EUROPEAN papers of clerical policy report that Jews at Port Said were kidnapping a Greek child for sacrifice when Greeks killed two of them. Another report is that the Jews were attacked without provocation.

AROUND Delhi, India, an insurrection nearly broke out over a report, circulated by religious fanatics, that the British government would kidnap seven boys and sacrifice them to the water deity on the site of the projected reservoir.

AN interesting example of the power of state despotism to wipe out dissent in the long run, is the proposal among Jews to giv up their Saturday Sabbath for Sunday. Rabbi Krauskopf, of Philadelphia, has expressed his favor of the change.

AN Antichristian pamphlet in China, entitled "Death to the Devils' Religion," contains illustrations in which Christ figures always as a pig, Christians appear usually as hogs, and missionaries as ghouls and vampires engaged in hideous deeds.

THE Indiana's cargo saved forty thousand lives in Russia. The crew received testimonials of Russian gratitude, such as "a piece of bread consecrated by the Greek Catholic bishop of Libau." Talmage blessed the cargo of flour sent on the steamship Conemaugh.

A BOMB was thrown in a religious procession at Madrid, Spain, recently. Church attendance has fallen off, in consequence of Anarchists' threats to blow up the edifices, and to put in holy-water fonts a substance that will explode after a certain period of contact with fluid.

CATHOLICS are circulating the testimony of a Protestant physician to a new cure at Lourdes. A girl long paralyzed and stone-blind performed nine days' devotion to the Virgin and then on one moment's bathing in the miraculous water was given sight and full health. Catholics inquire, "What hav the scoffing Infidels to say to this demonstration of the efficacy of faith and prayer to the mother of God?"

RECTOR AHLWARDT, the notorious anti-Jewish divine of Germany, has created a sensation by accusing the Jewish firm of Ludwig, Loewe & Co. of furnishing the government 425,000 guns so defectiv as to be more harmful to the soldiers than the enemy could be. The firm repudiates this, saying, "These anti-Semitics are worse than Anarchists. They share our lives, but kill our honor."

CHRISTIANS in Germany cite their recent discoveries as to the Berlin school board as incentivs to combined action of Protestants and Catholics against Freethinkers and Jews. Of the twenty-four members of the board thirteen were found to be Jews and eleven Freethinkers. Dr. Hermes, the chief of the board, openly avowed his Atheism and put to each applicant for teachership the question, "You do not, I trust, believe in that old nursery tale about Christ?"

POBIEDONOSTSEFF, the Russian minister of public worship, has issued new edicts of persecution against the Stundists. These are a sort of Lutheran Wesleyans, and the most sober, honest, and industrious people in Russia. Vishnegradsky, minister of finance, disgusted with this fresh retrograde step, pointed out to Pobiedonostseff that Russia is already in the most gloomy financial and industrial plight and that this could only further increase her misfortunes. "But what of that?" replied the procurator of the holy synod. "Think of the spiritual gain!"

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:
Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents.

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP, DARWINISM.
EVOLUTION, DESIGN ARGUMENT.
JESUS NOT PERFECT, UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD, Price, 25 cents.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.

Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.

J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.

T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.

J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.

Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.

A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.

Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st., [Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.

J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.

Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.

N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.

Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.

S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.

Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.

John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.

Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.

John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.

B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st , Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.

H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.

Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.

L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 346 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.

John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.

Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.

Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st , London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.

W Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.

A. D. Willis, Wanganui

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G J Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By Henry D. Lloyd.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

There is no evidence that God has ever interfered in the affairs of man.—Ingersoll.

While civilization has been improving our houses, it has not equally improved the men who are to inhabit them. It has created palaces, but it was not so easy to create noblemen and kings.—Thoreau.

There is no stoppage and never can be stoppage,
If I, you, and the worlds, and all beneath or upon their surfaces, were this moment reduced back to a pallid float, it would not avail in the long run,
We should surely bring up again where we now stand,
And surely go as much farther, and then farther and farther.—Walt Whitman.

The different genealogies of Jesus in Matthew and Luke; the incidents of the miraculous conception and birth; the star in the east; the slaughter of children by Herod, mentioned only by Matthew and unnoticed in history; the differing accounts of Saul's conversion; the miracle stories; the fact that Jesus is not mentioned by contemporary historians; the uncertainty as to who wrote the Gospels and when they were written—all these things, and multitudes that it would be tedious to mention, prove the New Testament to be the word of man, and of less enlightened man than exists to-day.—Robt. C. Adams.

It has been pretended that the dispersion of this people [the Jews] had been foretold, as a punishment for their refusing to acknowledge Jesus Christ as the Messiah; the asserters affecting to forget, that they had been dispersed throughout the known world long before Jesus Christ. The books that are left us of this singular nation make no mention of a return of the twelve tribes transported beyond the Euphrates by Teglat Phalasar and his successor. The Acts of the Apostles certify, that fifty-three days after the death of Jesus Christ, there were Jews from every nation under heaven assembled for the feast of the Pentecost. St. James writes to the twelve dispersed tribes; and Josephus and Philo speak of the Jews as very numerous throughout the east.—Voltaire.

Only by a long and weary training through study and experience has man, after surmounting countless steps of error, reached that pure clearness of free and unprejudiced thought in which all scientific minds now move or ought to move. Deep ignorance of the laws of Nature surrounding him, and a very intelligible fear of the natural forces pressing on him and threatening him, in conjunction with a belief in the continuance of the principle of life after death, which was incomprehensible to him, must necessarily hav led the earliest man, when he came to consider a little, to anthropomorphic ideas and fancies of a divine and supernatural government of the world, which belief being fostered and worked upon by ambitious priests, has brought so much misery and such great trouble on suffering humanity. —Büchner.

This is a pretty long catalog [of books accepted or rejected by the church councils], O Lord of Hosts; but you hav, of course, had all eternity to produce it. Now, inter nos, which on the list did you write, and which did you not write? I think I hav detected thy bold Roman hand in the Book of Tobit. Am I right? I think I could point you out seventeen lines in the Book of Gad that you could not look me in the face and say you did not write. I think Ruth is all by thee; it is quite in thy style. O Ancient of Days, am I right? I deem thy son's letter to Abgarus quite genuin, more especially since thy son could not write. I recognize in the speech of Job's wife flashes from the pen of the Most High. Numbers is written by you, especially the thirty-first chapter. Several of the Psalms, too, are thine, especially the psalm of curses (Psalm cix). A good deal of Genesis is thine, especially the two accounts of Creation, which flatly contradict each other, and which are, nevertheless, both true. This sort of writing undoubtedly takes a God to write it and a devil to understand it; and for this and all thy other mercies, make us truly thankful. These, O Shaddai, I mention from the mass of books in which thy Jewish and Christian followers hav supposed thee to hav had a finger. But there are a great many books in regard to which, O Lord, I humbly confess before thee, I cannot for my life determin where Smith ends and Jehovah begins. O Lord, help thou my literary discrimination, or else strengthen my faith ad libitum. I should like wings and glory, and should be sorry to miss them through not knowing whether to attribute the Book of Susanna and the Book of Og to Smith or to thee, O Mighty One of Israel.—Saladin in God and His Book.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29. 1884. Price, 10 cents.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—The Straight; so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—The Just.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

Contents:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Co-operation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By Professor LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

FITS—All Fits stopped free by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. No fits after first day's use. Marvelous cures. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free to Fit cases. Send to Dr. Kline, 931 Arch st., Phila., Pa.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - 40 cents.

The Proposed

POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.

In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.

By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.

Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.

Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The

Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR.

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3. Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"

and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

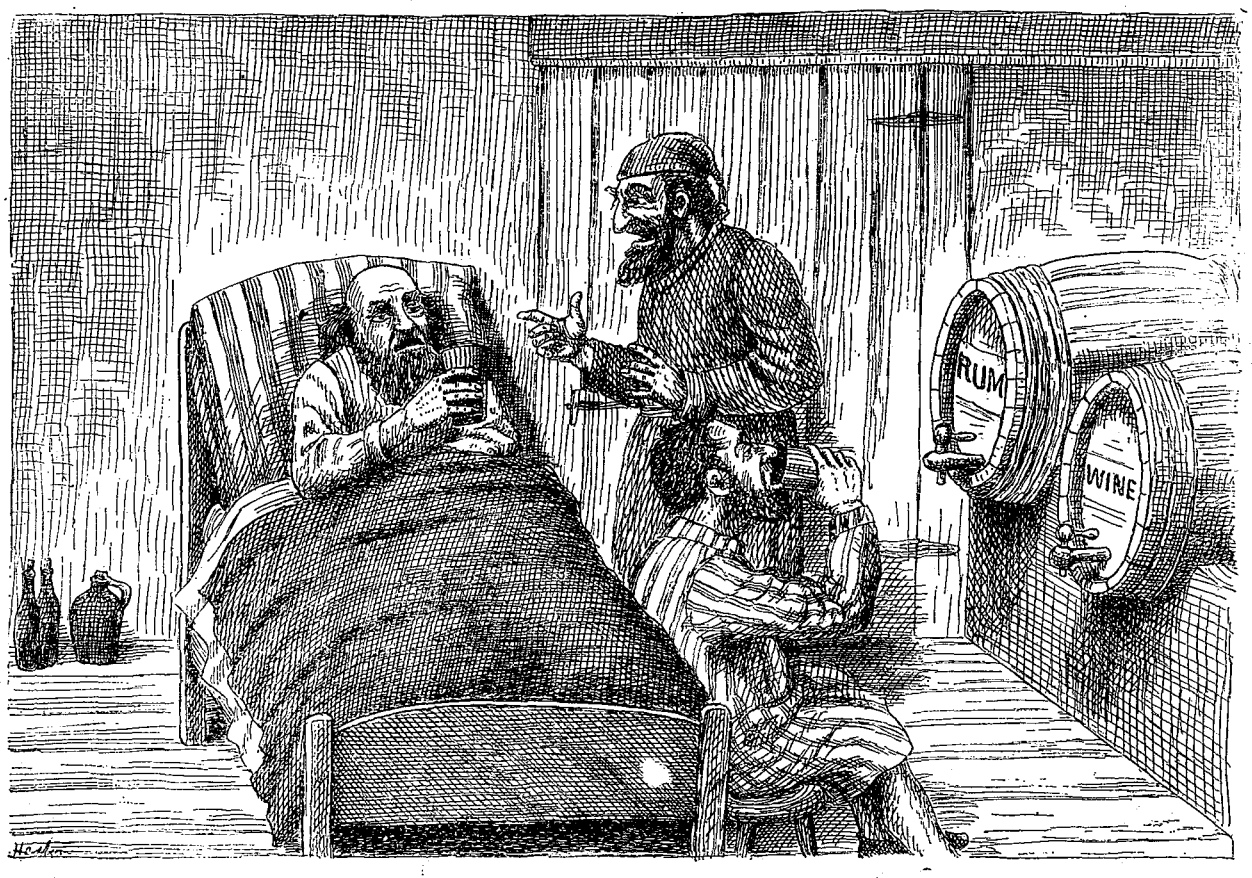
WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.



Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SOLOMON WAS EVIDENTLY NO PROHIBITIONIST.

Giv strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. Let him drink, and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more.—Prov. xxxi, 6, 7.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

THE

LOGIC OF DEATH,

—OR,—

Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents.

THE

LOGIC OF LIFE,

—DEDUCED FROM—

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT.

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth $1 00.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN.

Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free.

N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense.

This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS,

AND

OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.
3	"	Thanksgiving.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.
14	"	Children and the Church.
10	"	Woman and the Church.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.
2	"	The Bible and Science.
5	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.
2	"	Prayer.
10	"	The Creeds.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.
2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
5	"	Missionaries.
1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
1	"	The Church and Slavery.
2	"	Priests and Politics.
4	"	Ireland and the Church.
2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
12	"	Some Allegories.
3	"	Heaven.
6	"	Hell.
7	"	Miscellaneous.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, ... 50 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 18. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, April 30, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A BIT OF HISTORY.—THE MORALITY OF THE CHURCH IN THE FIFTH AND SIXTH CENTURIES.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

—o—

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:
Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.
Price, 25 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,
Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price. - - - - - - 10 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF

ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During American Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4 50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4 50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 7886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 18. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, April 30, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 30, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Doesn't Quite Suit Mr. Carus.

From the Open Court.

The Truth Seeker Company (28 Lafayette place, New York city) hav again collected their illustrations of the last year in a handsomely bound volume, entitled, "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," by Watson Heston. Their plan is to propagate Freethought by ridiculing the superstitions and errors of religion, but they are not careful as to whom or what they strike. They are as vigorous in their work as are the most fanatic believers on the other side. We do not approve of this method of The Truth Seeker Company; they spread in this way a wrong kind of Freethought, and we believe they will make but few converts by their grotesque pictures. It will make the iconoclast laugh, but the believer will turn from them with disgust. In the general household of human thought, iconoclasts of this kind seem to equilibrate the balance with those eccentric forms of piety which find an expression in the Salvation Army and similar institutions. So long as the one extreme exists, the other extreme has also right to existence, and there seem to be deeper causes that demand that it should exist too.

Who Changed the "Sabbath?"

The Seventh Day Adventists are very greatly interested in "Sunday keeping," because of their persecution for "Sabbath keeping" by their fellow-Christians. They are therefore most persistent writers on the subject.

In a recent number of the Advent church paper Mr. Franke continues the consideration of the question, Who changed the Sabbath? and presents the opinions of authorities on two points—that the New Testament never changed the Sabbath to Sunday and that the Catholic church did. As to the first point, it must be admitted by all who know anything upon the subject. It is indisputable. As to the second, the letters presented from Cardinal Gibbons are of interest because he is the voice of the Romish church in this country and because that church ought to know something upon the subject. The cardinal's words hav the significance of the confession of a thief. The first letter was written to Mrs. Mary J. Stavely, of Edesville, Md., and is as follows:

"CARDINAL'S RESIDENCE, BALTIMORE, MD.,
"Feb. 18, 1892.

"DEAR MRS. STAVELY: In the old law, that is, before the coming of Christ, the Sabbath, the last day of the week, was the day of rest. In the new dispensation, that is, after the coming of Christ, the day of rest was changed from the last to the first day of the week, namely, Sunday. The church, the mouthpiece and representativ of Jesus Christ, made the change.

"The reason of the change is this: Sunday is the day upon which Christ rose from the dead, and is the day also upon which the holy spirit descended upon the apostles. Sunday is therefore the day upon which two of the most important events of our church took place. Hence it was deemed most appropriate by the church that this should be the day set apart for rest and religious exercises, rather than the Sabbath, or seventh day, which had been observed in the old law. Yours respectfully,

"WM. A. REARDON."

The next was written to Mr. John R. Ashley, of Rock Hall, Md.:

"CARDINAL'S RESIDENCE, BALTIMORE, MD.,
"Feb. 25, 1892.

"JOHN R. ASHLEY, ESQ., Dear Sir: In answer to your first question, directed by the cardinal to reply to your letter, I will say:

"(1) Who changed the Sabbath?

"Answer: The Holy Catholic church.

"(2) Are Protestants following the Bible or the Holy Catholic church in keeping Sunday?

"Answer: The Protestants are following the custom introduced by the Holy Catholic church.

"(3) The Protestants do contradict themselvs by keeping Sunday, and at the same time profess to be guided by the Bible only.

"I am, faithfully yours, C. F. THOMAS,
"Chancellor."

A letter to Mr. Franke himself is next put in evidence:

"CARDINAL'S RESIDENCE, 408 N. CHARLES ST.,
"BALTIMORE, MD., Oct. 3, 1889.

"DEAR MR. FRANKE: At the request of his eminence the cardinal, I write to assure you that you are correct in your assertion that Protestants, in observing the Sunday, are following, not the Bible, which they take as their only rule of action, but the tradition of the church. I defy them to point out to me the word 'Sunday' in the Bible; if it is not to be found there, and it cannot be, then it is not the Bible which they follow in this particular instance, but tradition, and in this they flatly contradict themselvs.

"The Catholic church changed the day of rest from the last to the first day of the week, because the most memorable of Christ's works were accomplished on Sunday. It is needless for me to enter into any elaborate proof of the matter. They cannot prove their point from scripture; therefore, if sincere, they must acknowledge that they draw their observance of the Sunday from tradition and are therefore weekly contradicting themselvs.

"Yours very sincerely, W. A. REARDON."

Awhile ago Mr. Franke saw a statement by a Redemptorist priest, Father Enwright, of Kansas City, Mo., offering money to anyone who could find in the Bible any authority for "Sunday keeping." He wrote to the priest and received the following response:

"Jan. 11, 1892.

"DEAR FRIEND: Your letter reached me only a few days ago. The paper you speak of I 've not seen. My words were, 'I hav repeatedly offered $1,000 to anyone who can prove to me from the Bible alone, that I am bound to keep Sunday holy. There is no such law in the Bible. It is a law of the holy Catholic church alone. The Bible says, Remember that you keep holy the Sabbath day. The Catholic church says, No! By my divine power I abolish the Sabbath day, and command you to keep holy the first day of the week. And lo! the entire civilized world bows down in reverent obedience to the command of the holy Catholic church.'

"Excuse delay in answering. Yours respectfully,
"Lock Box 75, Kansas City, Mo. T. ENRIGHT, Css. R."

Mr. Franke then wrote to Archbishop Ryan, stating the Redemptorist priest's position and asking if it correctly represented the Catholic church. He received this reply:

"ARCHDIOCESE OF PHILADELPHIA,
"CHANCELLOR'S OFFICE, 225 NORTH 18TH ST.,
"PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"MR. E. E. FRANKE, Dear Sir: Of course Father Enright is correct. There is not a word in the New Testament about Christ's changing the day. On the contrary, he always observed the Sabbath, the seventh day.

"Consult any Catholic work that has a chapter on Tradition, and you should find what you need.

"The church alone is authority for the transfer from Saturday to Sunday. Truly yours,

"IGN. F. HOOSTMAN, Chancellor."

This is all nineteenth century testimony, from a source possessing exceptional knowledge on the subject, and is conclusiv as against the other Christian wing. It remains now for the Catholic church to show what right she had to make a "holy" day. For, as a matter of fact, there is no such difference in the days of nature; one division of time is like another, and the observance of one above another is nothing but a man-made regulation to which no one is bound to pay the least respect whatever.

D. M. Bennett Believed in "Another Life."

We hav received the following inquiry from Mr. Hacker:

"VINELAND, N. J., April 13, 1892.

"BROTHER MACDONALD: Riley M. Adams, an aged red-hot Spiritualist, has an article in the May number of the Watchman, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., in which he writes the following:

"'Father Bennett established THE TRUTH SEEKER for truth's sake, as the name indicates. The persecution he endured he bore with the patience of a hero, serving out the time in the penitentiary with the exception of abatement of a part of the time for good behavior.

"'When returned to his editorial seat a friend invited him to attend a materializing séance. There he met his friends from the other side of life and was converted to Spiritualism. After his trip around the world the writer called on him and asked him if he was a Spiritualist, and got his reply, "Yes." He was not afraid of the truth, and his name stands higher to-day with the angel world than all the skeptics who dare not investigate because of prejudice and popular feeling.'

"Now, I wish to know if the above is true. Please copy it into THE TRUTH SEEKER and tell us whether we shall believe it or not. J. HACKER."

We cannot say that the incidents narrated by Mr. Adams are correct. Mr. Bennett was not "converted" by a materializing medium, as he was a believer in Spiritualism before he went to Albany at the instance of Judge Benedict. That he answered yes to the friend's inquiry if he was a Spiritualist is no doubt true; but he used generally to qualify the admission by quoting the remark of a witness in the Beecher-Tilton case—"but not a damned fool." That is, he believed in the reality of spirits and a spirit-life, but did not believe in the twaddle of the philosophy nor in chasing ghosts to the neglect of this world. "One world at a time" was his motto, quoted a thousand times in our hearing, and his life-work was the destruction of the Christian superstition and not the promulgation of Spiritualism, which he regarded as a side issue, caring little for it, though a vigorous defender of it when it was assailed in his presence. But just what he believed we may let him say in his own words: "After some years of doubt we hav been led to giv our adhesion to a belief in a continued existence. This belief has been induced by the proofs we hav witnessed, the manifestations of intelligence unconnected with visible physical organizations, and which hav been brought to our cognizance through the agency of what are called spirit-phenomena. Recognizing the fact that much that has been palmed off as this class of phenomena has been fraudulent and unworthy of attention, it cannot be successfully denied that under proper conditions certain phenomena do take place which cannot be relegated to the domain of deception. The cry of 'fraud' will not suffice to meet the actual results that take place in the direction indicated. A force is made apparent, an intelligence is demonstrated, that for want of a better theory is attributed to invisible existences possessing organs of thought and action similar to ourselvs. When the laws of the universe, which are still greatly unknown to us, are brought to our knowledge and comprehension, we may be able to assign other causes than spirit existence for the phenomena that take place; but until this time comes the Spiritualistic theory seems the more probable and covers more of the facts than any other hypothesis that has been advanced. . . . Imbued with the conviction that matter with its inherent forces is all that is—that it does all that is done—we cannot agree with those who claim that matter is only the result of spirit—that spirit is the substance and matter the shadow. We dissent entirely from the philosophy which claims that spirit is everything and matter nothing. On the other hand, matter is the summa summarum of all existences. Whatever is not matter is nothing. If spirit is anything, it is a form of matter; matter is not a product of spirit, but spirit a product of matter, and in a high form of evolution which matter is capable of attaining. If this is so—if spirit existences are material organizations—it is not difficult to comprehend a continued individual life; but not an immortal existence. By immortality we understand a never-ending existence. It is a logical conclusion that that which has no end could hav had no beginning. It is an axiomatic truth that what has a beginning must hav an end. As it is very evident that as individuals we all had a beginning but a few decades ago (despite the untenable theory of the incarnationists, who hold that we are eternal as individual entities and never had a beginning), the only logical deduction that can be arrived at is that at some period of time our individual existence must terminate, when the elementary molecules of which we are composed must revert back to the great fountain of the universe whence they came. How long this individual, conscious existence may continue we know not; possibly thousands of years. If, however, in the wonderful provisions and capabilities of the universe, individual immortality is among the possibilities, let us duly appreciate the future that awaits us. Of all this, however, we shall know more, or know less, when, in the language of our Spiritualistic friends, we 'leave the physical plane' and 'cross the shining river.' As much, however, of all this theory of the future life is beyond the ken of our vision; as much of it is mere speculation, let us not waste our time and energies in a fruitless effort to look into the beyond. While we occupy this state of existence it is wise for us to giv our whole attention to the duties, labors, and objects of this life, and leave the imaginary conditions of a future life until we hav finished with this, and are far more able to meet and discharge the duties of another. We find plenty here to employ all our talents, energies, and abilities, and it is unwise in us to neglect them and, in preference, giv our attention to that so far beyond our grasp and comprehension. Our services are needed here. All the efforts we are capable of accomplishing can be usefully employed here, and cannot be intelligently directed to conditions in the world beyond our sight and knowledge. Let us, then, while here, liv for this world only, securing and increasing our own happiness in every conceivable and legitimate way, and in adding to the happiness of those around us, to the extent of our ability."

If Mr. Hacker's memory had served him well he would recollect the many times Mr. Bennett said substantially the same thing in THE TRUTH SEEKER. And also that we hav many times answered this question in the affirmativ. Mr. Bennett did not conceal his convictions, nor hav we ever denied the truth. We should do the same as he did if we felt that way.

The American Secular Union.

When Mr. E. A. Stevens was secretary of the American Secular Union he began some practical work in Illinois by invoking the law against unconstitutional appropriation of funds to sectarian institutions. The measures he took were reported at the time in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mr. Stevens's successors in office did nothing with this suit, and it has been hanging up in the supreme court. We are glad to see by the circular sent us—reprinted in another place—that Mr. Waite is awake to its importance and contemplates pushing it to an issue. It is just the kind of work the Union is organized to do. It grieved us to note that the Union was not represented before the National Commission of the World's Fair when it met in Chicago to talk about Sunday opening or closing of that great show, nor at Washington when the same subject was argued before a Congressional committee. But if the Union will force a decision in this suit it will hav partially atoned for its inactivity.

We think the officers of the Union hav done wisely in abandoning the one-hundred-thousand-dollar hall project. It was chimerical. The Union should expend its energy in effecting the separation of church and state—the purpose for which it was organized.

Not Yet a Law.

The Freedom of Worship bill is now in the hands of the governor, and he will, we understand, giv its supporters and opponents opportunity to talk about it. It is noticeable that its friends say little about it, relying upon the orders of Croker to the governor to put it through; while the Protestant opponents talk a good deal, but really say little. The fact is, and it has come to be somewhat recognized, that the Protestants hav no more business in the state institutions than hav the Catholics, and that their preaching and praying therein are as unconstitutional and un-American as would be the setting up of the Roman Catholic paraphernalia of worship.

The National League for the Protection of American Institutions has filed a brief with Governor Flower against the bill, of which the following are the main points why it should not become a law:

Because it is deceptiv in its purpose, and would be destructiv of the interests it pretends to desire to promote in its enactments and enforcement.

Because it would destroy the character and overthrow the work of one of the oldest and most useful unsectarian institutions under the care of the state—the House of Refuge—by rendering disciplin and moral instruction impossible, because of the admission of sectarian religious teachers not subject to the control of the managers.

Because it attempts to accomplish by a simple enactment a change in state policy of so fundamental a character that it amounts to a constitutional amendment.

Because it is impossible to classify into sects juvenil criminals or delinquents, the children of criminal or neglectful parents.

Because, if its provisions should be literally carried out, it would open asylums supported and controled by private beneficence, and threaten every private charitable institution with ecclesiastical domination.

Because it is not designed to secure freedom of worship, but to suppress it.

The law tends to develop, emphasize, and make bitter the differences of religious opinion which it has been a cardinal principle of our government to ignore in the administration of the laws.

It is contrary to the spirit of our institutions and to the letter of our law, for it brings religion into politics.

Measures of this character are hastening the day when religious controversies will become political controversies.

From these points it will be seen that the League argues simply from a Protestant standpoint; that is, that the Protestants are in and want to keep in without any interference from their rivals in the religious business. There is no doubt that the bill is deceptiv, for the ultimate purpose of its promoters is to obtain from the state recognition of religion as a sort of side-partner in administering criminal as well as educational laws. But the House of Refuge is not unsectarian, and Catholic worship therein would be no worse than the Protestant worship now enjoyed by the inmates; that is, the state might as well pay for masses as for Methodist and Presbyterian prayers. For the only state policy the bill changes is to let the Catholics hav a voice where till now Protestants were heard exclusivly. And the Sun, Tammany organ with Agnostic leanings Jesuitically injected between the lines, is right when it asks, "Why is not that fair enough? How can the state ordain otherwise with due regard to the constitution, if it permits any religious teaching or worship in these institutions? The only tenable ground on which the measure can be opposed is that no religious service of any kind should be conducted in a state institution, but that the institution should be wholly secular, the state having nothing to do with religion."

It is true, it is not possible to classify all prisoners into the subordinate sects, and it is for that very reason that no religion should be taught in any public institution. The lone Unitarian or the solitary Universalist has the same right precisely as hav the numerous Catholics and the multitude of Methodists. If the state must provide religious teaching and consolation for all, then a minister of each denomination—and there are some two hundred of them—must be kept within call at all times. Such a condition of affairs could not exist for a moment.

That the law will help on the coming religious war is possible. Indeed, that is a point in its favor. If the two great sects get to fighting bitterly enough it may be that at the constitutional convention provided for by this legislature the organic law of the state may be so amended that no religion shall flourish at its expense. Such a Secular triumph would be worth the humiliation of the enactment of many such laws.

The Sensational Preachers.

The preachers of the present time are nothing if not sensational; and the rivalry between them in getting up sermons which will draw leads sometimes to spicy revelations. Dr. Parkhurst's "circus" in a house of ill-fame put him at the head of this class of soul-savers, but Dr. De Costa is a good second, though shining somewhat in the light reflected from Parkhurst's efforts. In his pulpit the other day he told of his effort to convert the fallen women that his brother clergyman had hired to demean themselvs. His subject was the susceptibility of the fallen of humanity to moral and spiritual regeneration, and he said that often the more depraved a person has become the more readily he will accept moral and religious teaching and be converted by it. "Within a few days," said he, "there has been an illustration of this in an individual represented to be one of the wickedest women in New York; a woman so fallen that there were those who felt themselvs at liberty to regard her as hopeless, to make sport of her sin, plunge her lower down, and 'jump on' her. Yet there was a tender spot in that poor woman's heart, a sense of shame and a desire for something better. Hence when one went to her abode introducing himself as an embassador of Christ he was kindly and courteously, ay, gladly received, and when the subject of her mother was brought up, recalling tender memories of the past, memories of a lost home, a once sweet life, of Sunday-school days and church-going, this woman gave way to convulsiv sobs and shed tears of bitter repentance. Then when the time came she thankfully accepted the invitation to assemble her entire household for prayer, and in the very parlors only a few days before the scene of disgusting orgies, the magdalens humbly knelt, and in plaintiv tones there went up the prayer, 'Forgiv us our trespasses; Lord, hav mercy upon us miserable sinners!'"

The idea of trying to reform these women with prayer is about as absurd as the command of Joshua to the sun to stand still. They are already Christians, and do not need converting. What they need is an honorable way to get a living. Men who hav investigated the social evil and interviewed the poor victims say that ninety per cent are driven to it because no paying occupation is open. A few are naturally depraved; some are forced into the vile work because of seduction and consequent shunning by friends, but the vast majority are made vile by poverty. And to rescue them requires more than a prayer.

But the other side of the story is not less entertaining than the melodramatic sermon of the sensational preacher. A Sun reporter divined that the house in which the prayer occurred was that of the woman Dr. Parkhurst and his agents visited, and he made her a call. The woman told this story of his visit:

"He came at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and sent in his card, just as any gentleman should do. I was a little surprised when I saw that another minister had come to see me, and I did not know but that all the parsons in the city had been seized with a sudden desire to call at my house. This was not long after Dr. Parkhurst's visit. But Dr. De Costa behaved like a perfect gentleman. He did not send out for beer, and he did not ask for any particular boarders. He was alone. I saw him in the parlor, and he talked very kindly to me. He said he did not believe in Dr. Parkhurst's methods and thought that society of his was trying to turn me out into the street. He talked to me about a quarter of an hour and then asked me if I would pray with him and hav my household come in and pray, too."

"Did you weep when he talked to you about your mother?" the reporter asked.

The woman smiled. "I don't remember of his saying anything about my mother, but I know I did not weep."

"Well, what happened when the 'household' came in?"

"I called in everyone and all the servants too. Everyone in the house was there. Dr. De Costa asked us to join in saying the Lord's prayer with him, and we did. Then he offered another prayer asking to be forgiven for his sins, and asking that we all be forgiven for ours. Then he blessed us all and went away."

"Did he speak to anyone besides you?"

"No; he spoke to no one. Before he went away he said that he would be glad to do anything he could for me. But I did not want him to do anything. He said that if Dr. Parkhurst succeeded in turning us out, we should come to him and he would find accommodations for us."

"Well, if you are dispossessed will you take him at his word?"

"No, indeed; if I am dispossessed I know where to go. I don't hav to ask help of any man. Of course if Dr. De Costa wants to come here and pray I hav no objections to make, and I did not say anything about his being here. But as long as he has told of it himself it is none of my business to keep it quiet."

The woman added that if ministers must call on her she preferred to hav them come openly rather than in the disguise of Western reprobates.

Dr. De Costa does not seem to hav done any more good than did Dr. Parkhurst. There is a ring of defiance which should teach the preachers and society something in the answer of the woman that she "don't hav to ask help of any man." Men hav driven her into the business and she has made them pay for it, is what it indicates. And decent people will say it serves them right. But what of the poor devils of girls without ability to make it pay, who go down and down and finally die a drunken death in the streets or in the almshouse? Our much-lauded "Christian citizen" has in them a monstrous problem, and that such a class can exist, sport of "gentlemen," prey of police and degraded men, is a shame and disgrace to humanity.

The preachers will probably not pursue this subject far. Some of their pewholders, who are also holders of good paying real estate, might object.

Iowa has a Sunday law which in blueness makes quite a streak on the statute books. A little while ago the fanatics of Sioux City undertook to color that town with it and closed up the places of business usually open on holidays. Then the people whose places were closed formed a Sunday Enforcement League to see how close to Sioux City they could bring the sky. They succeeded nicely. They forced all the stores, billiard rooms, and some of the restaurants to put up the shutters. Most of the transit lines were stopped, informations for employees and officers being sworn out and these persons arrested. The League is said to hav the sympathy and support of many leading people and announces that it will follow up the work vigorously and compel the closing of all business on Sunday. But a curious phase of the affair is that while the people crowded the streets to see the operation of arresting street-car drivers, and vigorously applauded the president of a line who ran a car himself when the driver was taken off by the officers, they do not seem to hav sense or energy enough to get the Sunday law repealed. It would in the end be a great triumph for Liberals if every blue Sunday law in the country were rigorously enforced.

In the Southwest.

News and Notes.

Friends at Houston, Tex., desired me to remain over one night and lecture. Although there was but little time for advertising, a fair audience was present, and a most appreciativ one. Houston is a bright and prosperous place; and there is no city in the state which has a better outlook. I enjoyed my visit among the Liberals here. Dr. D. B. Powell has been a stanch supporter of the cause for many years. He was not able to attend the lectures on account of sickness; but I had the pleasure of making his personal acquaintance at his home. D. Z. Emmich is our oldest veteran here, and notwithstanding age is ardently interested in Freethought. Wm. Harral is at the front. Dr. J. J. Burroughs is a well-known exponent of our principles. J. B. Cochran, and others of the Single-Tax Society, make industrial reform on Freethought lines. Mr. F. J. Trapp, my correspondent here, with whom I came in communication with the Liberal element, is a vigorous worker, who overcomes difficulties with unflinching spirit. Stewart is a Radical representativ of the press. I was surprised and delighted to meet with my campaigning friend of last year, Dr. Lincoln, who, amidst his professional duties, delivers an occasional sharp fire into the ranks of the clergy; with him also I greeted an old-time San Franciscan comrade, Dr. McLellan. Houston is one of the best points along the route. It only needed that I should stay a couple of nights to hav a full house. Professor Grey introduced me with a ringing speech, aud after I finished my discourse, Dr. Burroughs entertained the audience with some pertinent remarks on the philosophy of Freethought. On the whole, I feel that this short stay at Houston will be productiv of future progress. We hav struck hands and I hav found genial and stalwart supporters.

I arrived at New Orleans Wednesday, April 13th. I hav not been here since the war. I find a few familiar landmarks. Great changes hav taken place. New Orleans is a peculiar city. It has both a provincial and metropolitan look. There are many curious old houses that suggest the Middle Ages in their appearance. The churches and cathedrals hav a gloomy look, mingled at times, however, with brilliant architecture and green and flowery adornments. New Orleans I should judge, by the way I see all sorts of people bowing at the altars, to be the most religious city on the continent; and at the same time it is the gayest and most festiv. The religion is a formality, but the pleasure is a reality.

I was not able to find many Liberals in New Orleans. The Spiritualistic society is flourishing, and I lectured in their hall. I am indebted to Captain Abbott, Geo. P. Benson, president of the society, Mr. Brodie, secretary, and Joseph Maille for kind services rendered. New Orleans is a most difficult place for the advance of Liberalism. If religion here were the same stern affair that it is in Puritan New England there might be a powerful reaction. But religion here partakes of the sunny nature of the climate. It is sentimental, esthetical, and pleasure-loving. It presents no salient points. After people hav said their prayers they think no more about religion. It is business then, and a good time.

However, the spirit of skepticism is abroad, of inquiry and of progress. The people here are bright, inquisitiv, fearless, and frank. They do not wear any chains; at any rate, the chains are invisible and do not clank. There is buoyancy in the very atmosphere of this teeming city, and the multitude seems to flow along like the glittering tide of the Mississippi itself. I expect, with time and patience a sturdy Liberal element will find its evolution here. I certainly shall always enjoy a sojourn in this brilliant, picturesque, and joyous city, which has its own characteristics, and is unlike any other metropolis in the New World.

Friday, April 15th, I push to the northward, after delivering two lectures in New Orleans. Brookhaven, Miss., is my next field. Mr. Remsburg has been here before and opened the way for Freethought. I find myself in a progressiv community notwithstanding the seven churches and the Methodist college. S. F. Smurr ever since 1869 has supported the principles of Freethought. For many years he was alone, and the wonder was how an Infidel like him could do business in a straightforward fashion and giv a dollar's worth for a dollar. His quiet determination and undeviating honesty hav won him the day. Freethought is now respected.

I giv my first lecture on Saturday night. The court-house is nearly filled. I am introduced by Capt. James A. Haskins, and his short introductory address made a generous welcome for the lecture. Zach. T. Haskins, his brother, is a vigorous ally. He is willing to put his shoulder to the wheel. Mr. A. Krauss, Dr. Bennett, the Seavey brothers, R. R. Parsons and Frank Parsons, Mr. H. Coleman, Wm. Abshagan, Max Preibatch, Lowenthal, the Bosshy brothers, Mr. E. Pfeiffer, E. Dreifus, George Hoskins, John Turnbull, and others are among those who aided in the work here; and they make a splendid company for our side. Brookhaven is rather a stronghold for orthodoxy. Sunday morning my jovial landlord, who is something of a Methodist, invited me to church, and I went and listened to an Easter sermon on "The Resurrection." It was well delivered, and very comforting to the believer. The preacher, however, could not help pitching into the Infidel, and talking of his "polluted reason." I did not hear anything worth answering; but I would like to hav had the same audience listen to a Liberal lecture. The speaker said he "knew" there was a future life and that he would see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in heaven, and other dear friends, but he did not giv any evidence of his assertion. I wondered how anybody with a particle of intelligence could find any real comfort in such a "faith" as that.

I lectured on Sunday afternoon and evening, and on Sunday evening left Brookhaven for Chicago, with a hope that I shall again enjoy the "sunny South," with its fine, cheerful hospitality and promises of intellectual growth.

Over the broad Ohio rolling to the magnificent Mississippi, the overflowing waters gleaming for miles away in meadows and forests—almost in mid-air, it seems, as it crosses the lofty bridge—the train bears one on to the green hills and plains of Illinois. It is raining heavily when I reach Centralia about 10 o'clock at night, but I find a cheerful supper at the Centralia House, where F. D. Rexford provides for the famished and weary traveler. I wish I could hav stayed a day or two in this hospitable place. But I must hurry on. The next morning I am in Chicago, which seems just now to be the center of the world with its immense activities. E. A. Stevens brings me to his home, and here I rest for a while, meeting many friends and refreshed with social and intellectual life. One has to come to Chicago occasionally to renew his being. It is like electric treatment. It is invigorating.

I lecture at Chicago next Sunday at O'Neil's Hall. I leave to-night for Eau Claire, Wis., where I am to be Friday and Saturday. Next week, April 28th, 29th, and 30th, I am at Waterloo, Ind.; May 1st and 2d, at Massillon and North Lawrence; May 6th, at New York. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Chicago, Apr. 21, 1892.

Lectures and Meetings.

NEWARK Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market.—Sunday afternoon, May 1st, at 3 o'clock, J. Edelmann, of Forest Hill, will lecture. Subject, "God and the State."

THE Manhattan Liberal Club lectures for April are as follows. The club meets at 220 East 15th street:

April 29th, "Lunacy Real and Factitious, and Its Treatment," Albert Bach.

Business meeting and election of officers after lecture, on April 29th.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Massillon, O.....	May	1	Montreal.....	May	15
New York.....	"	6	Boulder City, Col.	June	1
Boston.....	"	8

Those desiring lectures along this route will please communicate at once with S. P. Putnam, Los Angeles, Cal., care of C. Severance, Box 451.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Strasburg, Ill.....May	1, 2		Butler, Ind.....	"	7, 8
Ottumwa, Ia..... "	15		Columbus, O....	"	12
Angola, Ind..... "	30		Pittsburgh, Pa..	"	19
Waterloo, Ind..June	4, 5, 6		Butler, Pa.....	"	20, 21

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Manchester, Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Auburn and Philadelphia, Pa.

PHILOSOPHICAL Association, Sundays at 3 P.M., Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D.—Lectures for May:

May 1st, T. B. Wakeman: "Relation of Evolution to Individual Culture."

May 8th, Van Buren Denslow: "If Knowledge Were Universal, What Would Religion Be?"

May 15th, Mr. S. H. Wilder: "Self-Contradictory Evolution."

May 22d, Mr. Henry Frank: "Selections and Discussions from 'His Bold Experiment.'"

May 29th, closing service: Mr. H. Rowley, Review of the Season's Work.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

How Uncle Nottoway "Squashed" the Indictment.

The good year of grace 1887, or so much of it as belonged to Tennessee, will be remembered for two conflicting events: the great dryness of the summer, and the wonderful wetness of the autumn which followed. That Tennessee was "literally dried up" did not argue that she was "going dry" in all respects—not by thirty thousand majority.

It went decidedly wet in the Prohibition election; and the stump speakers told the people, with proper patriotism, that Prohibition was against the constitution. They did not tell them it was against the Christmas eggnogg and the "Fourth o' July" celebration; but the people had an eye to the lesser calamity, the stump speakers took care of the greater, and so, between them, they saved the constitution—and the eggnog.

The churches fought for the "Reformation;" in the colored churches the battle was especially bitter. Some of the most prominent members were "had up in meetin'" as supporters of intemperance. The church made a blunder, however, when it tackled old Uncle Nottoway. The church felt the force of the blunder before the polls closed and the sun set upon the defeat of Prohibition. But as for old Nottoway, his face wore a broad grin when he stood in the presence of his attorney, "Marse Torm, son ub ole Marse," and reported upon the result of his trial by the members of the Mount Zion Baptist church.

"Yaas, sah, Marse Torm," he said, "dey done hab me up in meet'n', de chu'ch hab. Brudder Parker 'twuz done it, sah, et de constigation ob Rufe Barton—young Rufe, de son ob ole Rufe, his daddy, sah. Had me up in meet'n'! 'fo' God dey did, on er indictment ez I done tol' yeh 'bout, Marse Torm. En' I jist follered de advice yeh gin me, en' squashed de indictmint, en' thankee fur de same, sah."

And Uncle Nottoway bowed himself out with mingled feelings of gratitude and indignation. Gratitude toward the legal adviser to whom he stood as office porter rather than as client, and by whose good help he had been able to meet the outrage offered him by the members of the Mount Zion church, said outrage being a public trial, for offenses hereinafter to be stated, by the officers and members of that upright institution. Having a member "up in meet'n'" means much to the Southern town negro of the latter day's representation. A season in the workhouse or even a short term in the penitentiary is looked upon with more forbearance than being "up in meet'n'."

Uncle Nottoway was a member in good standing: "a 'fessin' member," the leader in the singing, and regarded by the "brudderin en' de sisterin" of the Mount Zion membership as one "might'ly gifted in pra'r."

Indeed, so far above reproach was he that on one occasion, when this same Brother Parker had preached from the text, "Enoch walked with God," he had used righteous Nottoway as an example, that "might be seen and read of all men," whereby to illustrate his text.

True, Aunt Sally Garvin remarked at the time, jokingly, that "Brudder Parker gwine spile dat nigger twell salt won't save him."

In the fight for Prohibition the church came up almost as a unit for the abolition of "whisky, wine, ale, or beer as a beverage" (thus read the proposed amendment to her consititution) "in the state of Tennessee."

Therefore it was with no little surprise that the dry element of the church heard of Brother Nottoway Sims's having come out against the measure.

At first the old man was very quiet about it, expressing himself cautiously, and giving his opinion only when asked to do so.

But one day, hearing that Aunt Sally Garvin said at the "S'ciety ob de Macerlates" that "Unc' Nottoway Sims hab done sol' out ter de whisky men, or else de ole boy done fling a spell 'pon 'im, 'fo' God I dunno which," the old man's wrath rose to such heat that he swore; that, too, in the hearing of one of the sisters; one of the talking members.

"A man hab de right ter his convictions," he declared. "En' ez fur me, I ull stan' by de whisky barr'ls twell de bungs bust. I ull do it ef de whisky air riz knee-deep 'bout de Mount Zion meet'n'-house, en' Brudder Parker am drownded daid, an' Sister Gyarvin 'bleeged ter borry a washtub ter float ter de debbul in. I ull do it, sho'. I sw'ars I will."

Word promptly went back to the Society of the Immaculates that "Brudder Sims, one ob de pillars ob de chu'ch, hab done fell fum grace, same's a Metherdis', en' not like no Babtis' nohows."

At length Brother Parker, following the injunction laid down, went to the erring brother and told him his fault privately.

He was promptly advised to "Look arter de shout'n' Prohibitioners dat wuz a crowin' fur Prohibition in de daytime en' stealin' ob de chickens off'n de whi' folks' hin roostes et night."

Matters grew painfully serious; the pastor was in a dilemma. His congregation demanded an example be made of Brudder Sims, and Brother Parker himself felt that such a proceeding would be but just. Yet he knew that Mount Zion could ill afford to lose the old man, who was leader both in song and in prayer, as well as chief contributor to the church fund, and, indeed, one of the strongest and most necessary pillars of the church.

For the second and even the third time he called upon the brother. The welfare of Mount Zion lay heavy upon his soul.

"See you now, brudder," he said, "it am not dat yer am determinated on bein' ob a anti-Prohibitioner. A sight ob de members hab elected ter dey own consciences ter be dat. It am ca'se yer talks too much 'bout de chu'ch, en' de sisters, en' de members. Hit am de talk dat am raisin' ob de disturbmint."

"Who started de fuss, brudder?" demanded Brother Sims. "Who started dis yere fuss enyhow? Didn't ole Sally Gyarvin fling de fus' rock?"

"Turn de udder cheek, brudder: turn de udder cheek," advised the shepherd of the Mount Zion flock.

"Done done it," said Nottoway; "done done it en' got ernudder lick fur bein' sech a fool. Naw, sah, Brudder Parker, 'tain' no use fur ter argerfy en' ter talk. I wuz druv inter dis yere fight, en' I ain' gwine be druv out ob it like a sheep what ain' got no reas'nment en' no 'scutionment neider. I ain' gwine be disqualified no sech way; dat's huccome I keeps talkin'. I's in de fight en' I aims ter fling rocks sassy az de balance ob de saints. I ain' gwine hol' up twell, like Saul ob Tarshucks, I's on top in de wras'le. Dar, sah! dem am my sentermints; yer's welcome ter 'em."

Finding persuasion unavailing, the pastor tried coercion. He threatened the unruly member with a public trial; he would hav him "up in meet'n'" for bringing politics into the church.

"Who fotched her in, Brudder Parker?" cried the angry member. "Who fotched her in? It sho tuck more en' one ter do dat, sah; en' when yer tries ole Nottoway fur fotchin' ob de critter in, yeh am boun' ter try ole Sally Gyarvin fur crackin' ob de do' open. En' when de 'Macerlates,' en' de 'Dorters ob Aberham,' en' de 'Sons ob Solermon,' en' de 'Sisters ob Ruth,' en' de 'Ban' ob de good Sermaratins,' en' de udder branches ob de sanctication ob de saints am all turn loose on ole Nottoway, he am gwine hab a sey so at de saints his own se'f. Yeh min' what I done tol' yeh now, en' tell it back ter dey all fur me. Ole Nottoway didn' come fum ole Ferginny 'fo' de war fur nuffin'. He am sho goin' ter hab a las' word 'fo' de rope goes roun' his neck, en' he am kicked out ob Mount Zion. Now, brudder, yeh jist go'n back ter de saints, en' let dis ole sinner trot 'long ter de debbul." And the pastor was forced to take him at his word.

The next day it was rumored that Brother Sims would speak against Prohibition, and a large representation of the Mount Zion membership turned out to hear him.

"Speakin' in de cote-house yard long o' de whi' folks!" said Sister Garvin. "De ongodliness ob some niggers am mighty nigh big ez dey's imperdence."

Still she went to hear him, along with Sis' Ann Price, upon whose righteous ribs she played with her elbow whenever the speaker made a point especially "ongodly."

Brother Sims took advantage of the occasion to say a good many things calculated to injure his cause with the brethren.

"I tol' yeh, frien's en' feller-citizens, whisky kin do a'most enything it got a min' ter—onless it be ter make a Mount Zion nigger hones'."

"What dat?" said Sister Garvin, with a dig into Sis' Price's short ribs. "What dat nigger say 'bout de chu'ch?"

"Dat ar chu'ch," proceeded the speaker, "hab got fo' laigs. Three ob dem laigs am good soun' laigs: hones' men ez teks a toddy Chris'mus en' don' tell no lie 'bout'n it. D'udder laig am de Prohibitioners what drinks whisky all de year roun', en' preaches 'bout de evils ob liquor on Sunday 'casions. Dat laig am boun' ter fall, ca'se it air rotten. En' when it fall it sho gwine hurt some-un. But it am more en' likely ez 'twill let down dat eend ob de buildin' on hitse'f like de temple ob de Pherlischuns done ter Samson."

That speech settled Uncle Nottoway's case at Mount Zion. The election came on, Prohibition was defeated, and the church proclaimed itself ready "ter set 'pon Nottoway Sims fur fetchin' ob a disturbmint inter de chu'ch."

Brother Sims was formally notified that on the following Sunday evening he was expected "ter answer ter charges inferred against 'im by de members ob de Zion chu'ch wid op'n do's, so's the young en' de onexper'enced might profit by de fall ob a great leader."

"Tell 'em I'll be dar, brudder," said Nottoway. "Tell 'em I'll be dar ter answer ter de charges en' ter pull de Prohibition laig fum under de temple ob de Laud. I'll sho be dar."

"Start a man on de debbul's highway, en' he gits more faster et ever' step," declared the Reverend Parker, to which Sister Garvin added:

"Amen."

The appointed evening found the church filled with eager observers. It was a most exciting occasion—a most "solemn" occasion. The Reverend Parker sat with bowed head and clasped hands. "Fa'rly wras'lin' fur grace," Sister Garvin whispered to Lihu Perkins's wife.

The only unaffected person in the house was old Nottoway, honest, shrewd, wicked old Nottoway himself. Occupying his customary place in the right Amen corner, he faced the Mount Zion membership, as Sister Garvin declared, "Ez bol' en' ez brazen ez ef de chu'ch wa'nt sett'n' on 'im."

The Reverend Parker, too much overcome for words, rose slowly:

"Brotherin," he said, "sing something."

Brother Sykes, by special request, took the lead, but a trifle too high in the scale.

"Ermazin' grace, how sweet de sound Et saved"——

Brother Finny took up the tune, as much too low in the scale as Brother Sykes had been too high.

"Ermazin' grace"——

Brother Barton hurried to the rescue.

"Ermazin'"——

The tune caught somewhere between nose and throat, and lodged there.

The Reverend Parker groaned; this was a fair sample of what he might expect in the future should Brother Sims be displaced. He turned to the offending brother in a kind of helpless agony.

"Brudder Sims, will yeh please ter raise de chune?"

Brother Sims rose in all the grandeur of offended dignity, and bending slightly toward the pulpit, said:

"Brudder Parker, dis am de fus' occasion I hab heeard ob, sar, wher' a gin'leman am expected ter lead et his own fun'ril. I axes ter be excused, sah."

"Let us pray," said the pastor, and the outraged congregation sank upon its knees.

"O Laud!" said Brother Parker, with so much emphasis that it frightened him into instant dumbness. It sounded more like an oath than a prayer, yet some one of the pillars called "Amen," the people rose, and Brother Parker, without further ado, proceeded to plunge into the case before him.

Brother Parker had been a Methodist before he joined the Mount Zion Baptists, and he still carried about with him his old Disciplin—possibly because it was good reading, as good for Baptist as for Methodist; probably because he knew it by heart, and the knowledge gave fluency to the othe - wise crippled elocution of the divine. He opened the book with great solemnity; he was at home there thoroughly. He turned full upon Brother Sims:

"Dearly belubed, yeh hab heeard how de congregation hab sung en' prayed."

"Hol' on dar, brudder," cried wicked old Nottoway. "Hol' on dar jist a minute. I ain' heeard no singin' en' prayin'. A screech up in de raafters en' a groan down in de suller ain' makin' music in yeh heart ter de Laud, sho 'taint. Naw, sah! I ain' heeard dat singin' en' prayin' yit, en' I ain' gwine be aid'n' en' abett'n ter no lie in de house ob de Laud. I denies de singin' clause ob de accusation!"

The pastor laid aside the Disciplin. It had suddenly begun to dawn upon the minds of the Mount Zion leaders that the accused was fully equal to the occasion. They felt a trifle shaky when called upon to testify as to the fall of the sharp old brother. There were Brothers Sykes, Finny, and Barton, with Sister Sally Garvin, chief witnesses, and a score or more of the lesser lights ready to bear testimony touching upon lesser sins. Solemn witnesses they were.

"Bent en' boun' ter rid de chu'ch ob de millstone roun' its naik," as Sister Garvin declared.

The Reverend Parker explained to Nottoway how "Dese am dem ez be eye-witnesses en' year-hearers ob yeh onseemin' sinfulness."

Old Nottoway sprang to his feet.

"Jist a minute, brudder," he said, and from force of habit the congregation gave attention.

The old sinner drew himself up.

"Ez imposed ez ef he wuz a lead'n' ob de class-meetin'," muttered Sister Garvin. "Ez imposed en' ez detarmint."

Old Nottoway evidently knew his ground.

"Brudder Parker," said he, "dar am a new law in Tennessee what allows a man ter speak fur hisse'f, ef he speaks afore de witnesses does. Marse Torm Mason, sah, hab tol' me about dat law, en' I jist wants ter hab my sey so, 'cordin' ter de law."

"Broderin en' sisters, I ain' gwine derny nothin' dese here eye-hearers en' year-witnesses hab got ter say. I ain' feared ob nothin' I hab done. But befo' dey begins der witnessin' I want ter sey ter Brudder Sykes, one ob de chief witnesses, dat Mr. Jim Duffy's sow hab got anudder litter ob young peegs; some fatter 'en dem she had las' Thanksgibbin' time, ez wuz only toler'ble for a sutten occasion dat Brudder Sykes ull rickerlict about. Dat am all I hab ter sey ter dat ar witness et dis time. But I wants ter tell Brudder Finney dat Miss Em'ly Jones's hen-'ouse, back in on de ally whar I libs, en' kin sometimes see Brudder Finny gwine home o' nights, dat hen-'ouse hab got a passel ob fine chickens in dar, jus' like 'twuz las' Christ'mus eve night, which de brudder am boun' ter rickerlict anyhows. Dat am all I hab ter sey ter dat witness et dis time. But I wants ter tell Brudder Barton, ez work so hard dat night Mr. Tom Newton's sto' burn up, dat dey ain' miss nothin' 'tall, 'ca'se I done heeard 'em sey so; no sto' close, en' no coffee, en sugar neider. Dat am all I hab got ter sey ter dat witness et dis time. Ter dem young men witnesses ober dere, I wants ter sey, Mr. Lem Justin, ob de gran' jury, am enquirin' some 'bout some votes ez wuz bought up et de 'lection las' week. I knowed all 'bout dem votes, en' I lowed ez dem young men ud like ter heear tell about 'em. Dat am all I hab ter sey ter dem on dis occasion. But I hab jist a word fur Miss Sally Gyarvin, de widder 'oman. I wants ter sey ter de widder ez I am still a consid'rin' ob dat prop'sition what she made ter me las' spring, when my ole 'oman 'uz so poly. En' dat am all I hab got ter sey on dis occasion, Brudder Parker. Anudder time I 'spec's ter hab a longer sey so, en' a mo' p'inted, ef dis meet'n' do'n' go off ter suit me."

The silence following upon Brother Sims's address was one of suspense; the suspense became anxiety before Brother Sykes gravely rose and announced in his own peculiar tenor:

"Brudder Parker," he began, "dar am surely some misunderstandin' 'bout dis meet'n'. I ain' got no word ter sey 'g'inst Brudder Sims. He am a pillar ob Mount Zion ez can't be laid low. I ax ter be excused fum off dis committee."

"En' so does I." It was the bass voice of Brother Finny. "I don' onderstan' de meanin' ob all dis onjustus dat de sisters hab started ag'inst a leader ob de chu'ch."

"God a'mighty, brudder! don' be layin' ob de blame on we all. We am des eachin' ter shake han's wid Brudder Sims. Come 'long, honey, le's bergin right dis bressed minute."

The pastor caught at Aunt Sally's suggestion in a twinkling.

"All in favor ob de motion say 'I.'"

But nobody waited for the vote. The Mount Zion membership crowded about old Nottoway with shouting, singing, and shaking of hands. "Fur all the worl' like 'twuz a sinner jist come froo," said Sister Garvin.

And that is how Uncle Nottoway "squashed the indictment."—Will Allen Dromgoole in the Arena.

Preface to Helen Gardener's New Book.*

Back of all human action there is a sufficient cause. Some of the more open and simple causes we hav learned to recognize. But in the complex and as yet unanalyzed varieties of mental, moral, social, industrial, or other aberrations, of what is by courtesy called civilized society, we are constantly confronted by strange manifestations which we hav made little intelligent effort to comprehend.

In the industrial world the unseen hand of greed has pushed millions of men into an abjectness measured only by the awful limi s of their dependence. It has fostered in the race those mental, moral, and physical conditions which retard even the painfully slow progress of natural evolution to a loftier manhood.

Again, in the dark and untrod halls of heredity we hav ignored and still insist upon ignoring the plainest finger-prints of the "unseen hands that long ago were dust." Only when those finger-prints are left in blood do we deign to recognize them—when it is, alas, too late to place in their shadowy grasp the roses of beauty and sheathe for them the weapons which are double-edged. And so the blind lead the blind and are pushed by the blind until they stumble by chance or fate upon horror or hope, and, learning nothing by the experience, their children and their children's children still grope within the same dark walls and draw the window-shades of habit and inherited forms of thought against the sunlight of science and a rational to-morrow.

Often our very courts of justice are made partners with the criminals they prosecute because they must administer laws which hav come down to us from the unseen hands of brutal power brutally applied, or from ignorance, superstition, unfairness, or stealth.

The past clasps its fleshless hands and the present dances to the music of the rattling bones. Until we cease, in the darkness of willing blindness, to put patches on the past and learn to fit a new garment to the fair form of the future, we shall continue to be pushed and swayed and controled by the myriad unseen hands that should be to us a helpful memory and not a merciless menace.

In these little studies of social and hereditary conditions I hope I may hav suggested many lines of thought to those who care to think, and furnished imaginativ entertainment for those who prefer to muse.

Dr. E. C. Spitzka, the leading brain specialist (or alienist) of America, in writing of certain of these stories, says:

"I am inclined to criticise and commend this work much more earnestly than would be looked for from the technical position of a specialist. I attach far more than a mere literary value to two of these stories, to which especial attention is not likely to be directed, and believe no other author of fiction has ever adequately attempted what is here done. The book will not only retain a place in my library, b t I also feel sure that other more 'unified' works by the same pen will be placed beside it. Appealing as they may to a larger circle of readers, they must earn the author a recognition, alas, to-day, awarded to many shallow pretenders instead. . . . We see strange things in the field of heredity, and I can pay the book no higher compliment than to say that I had heretofore believed only specialists capable of at once intelligently and popularly dealing with these subjects." . . .

While this most eminent brain authority honors these sketches with a place in his library, on the basis of their scientific suggestion and value, the late Don Piatt wrote of similar stories by the same pen, which hav appeared under another title:

"It is not that they are beautiful stories, for the charm is not in the fact of the story, but in the delicate touch that leaves so much to the reader's imagination. It requires an imaginativ genius to do this. With such a quality and with her exquisit touch she has a genius for writing fiction which she should not throw away or degrade on reformativ novels or scientific speculation. These stories are rare fiction. Facts, science, and reformation work belong in another field."

And so each must decide for himself what these stories contain for him. Whether they present to his mind scientific suggestion of important facts, or merely offer the entertainment of more or less impossible fiction. Whether they will amuse his leisure hours and tickle the fancy of a drowsy man, or whether they are a stimulus, a suggestion, or a query. The mental outlook of each reader will determin the value and quality of the author's message for him. HELEN H. GARDENER.

New York.

* "Pushed by Unseen Hands." A volume of short stories. Contents: An Echo from Shilo, Old Safety-Valve's Last Run, How Mary Alice Was Converted, A Hall of Heredity, "That Reminds Me Of"——, His Mother's Boy, Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar, Onyx and Gold, In Deep Water, A Prison Puzzle. To be issued this month. Price, $1.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

In Finland it has been decided that a person, to receive assistance from the authorities when in need, must attend church every Sunday.

The other day, when the Freethinkers of Köln, Germany, were about to open their annual meeting, the police came and prohibited the same.

$118,331,516 is the value of the non-taxed property of the Roman Catholic church of the United States. Let us organize and wipe that shame off us.

We are pleased to announce that Henry V. Berghell has arrived in this country and is at present occupying the position of lecturer for the Swedish Unitarian Association of Minneapolis. Mr. Berghell took the place with the understanding that he was to preach nothing contrary to his convictions. We wish Mr. Berghell success and welcome to the United States. His address is Minneapolis, Minn., P.O. Box 157.

The recent death of the Jesuit general calls attention to this order, the greatest enemy to human freedom that ever existed. It has 12,947 members. Of these 1,764 are in Italy, 2,863 in France, 2,570 in Spain, 2,507 in England, 2,974 in the United States.

Great enthusiasm is prevailing in Spain among the Freethinkers, and all are combining to make the Universal Congress a success. It is about time that we, here in the United States, make some definit movement and elect a committee to see that things are done right. An editorial on this subject from the versatil pen of Mr. Macdonald would be very timely.

In Belgium the Catholic church, through its various orders, numbering ninety-four men and one hundred and fifty-one women, owns property worth 4,242,192 francs, but as a Liberal reaction is setting in this amount is liable to be made smaller before long. The Belgians generally mean business, as may be seen from the fact that in one city alone there hav during the past year been one hundred and eleven Secular funerals.

While Spain is generally looked upon as a priest-beloved land, it is evident that the Spanish Freethinkers are no half-way people. They stand up as Freethinkers whenever occasions allow it. In the village of Comunas, in the province of Toledo, there hav since 1870 been fifty-three civil marriages, one hundred and forty-five Secular baptisms, and one hundred and forty-one Secular funerals. Hav we here in the United States a city that can show so good a record?

Hypocrisy is rife in Austria, and wherever the clerical party can punish dissenters and Freethinkers it does so. Under the title, "Our Education to Truth," an article of Dr. Ewald Haufe appeared in Allgm. Osterreichischen Lehrerzeitung. It showed up the fallacies and mistakes, not to say crime, in giving a child both a scientific and a theological education. He and the editor of the paper were both indicted. The doctor escaped under the plea that science and its teachings are free in Austria. But not so with the editor; he had to go to jail for three months.

In the land of thinkers (should be tinkers), Germany, things are a little mixed up. The crazy emperor rules his officials with an iron rod. In Offenbach am Main, and Hesson, a crematory was erected at a cost of 15,000 marks. The principal stockholders were good Christians of the most loyal stamp, and some were even government officials. When the building was finished a great public opening was to be held, and judge of the painful surprise of the good stockholders when orders from Berlin prohibited the inauguration on the ground that the building tended to spread Antichristian teachings by turning into naught the words of "dust," etc.

Our London Letter.

Mr. J. M. Robertson, the able Freethought lecturer and editor of the National Reformer, has intimated his intention of becoming a Parliamentary candidate for Northampton, and if duly elected he will certainly make a far better representativ than the member who succeeded Mr. Bradlaugh; for although Mr. Manfield may be a thoroughly sound Radical, yet his state of chronic ill-health certainly unfits him for activ political life. It was very unfortunate that Mr. Robertson was not prepared to come forward in immediate succession to the late member, as Mr. Manfield is apparently unwilling now to carry out his engagement to retire into private life on the termination of the present Parliament, though he knows it is impossible for him to do his duty to his constituents. There appears to be a great charm to the holders in having the letters "M. P." after their names, and which they will not willingly relinquish, which possibly accounts for Mr. Manfield's declining to abide by his promis. But after all it is a matter for the electors of Northampton to decide. If they prefer a vigorous working member they will decide on Mr. Robertson; if they are satisfied with a mere dummy they will keep Mr. Manfield, and thereby show they are quickly forgetting the man they formerly stood by so stanchly.

There appears to be some little diversity of opinion as to the form of a memorial hall to Mr. Bradlaugh—some of the subscribers wishing to leave Old street and build a new place elsewhere, others preferring to keep on the Hall of Science, Mr. Foote being the champion of the latter party, which is the stronger of the two. There is much to be said on both sides of the question, which is a difficult one to settle to the satisfaction of all concerned, but this has been done so far that the old place has been acquired by Mr. Foote, and so the National Secular Society will not hav to find new quarters. It is a pity that the place is only leasehold, and it is necessary to spend a lot of money on the building, but if the society is satisfied it is not for others to grumble.

Mr. Spurgeon did not make such a bad bargain when he became converted. He certainly picked out the only business he would hav been likely to hav made money in. In addition to living in clover all his days he managed to leave personal property amounting to upward of £11,000 for the benefit of his wife—what his landed property was worth is not made public. I can quite believe he preached and expounded his doctrins from conviction that they were right, for they undoubtedly paid him well—much better than they did his traditional master.

When the ex-butcher Varley contented himself with abusing Atheists he was regarded as a man full of the "holy spirit," but now that he has taken to task some of the dignitaries of orthodoxy, it is found out that he is only an ignorant egotist, quite beneath contempt. It is well enough for a humble disciple to abuse the other side, but if he criticises his own party, ll the fat is in the fire, and excommunication is the only way of settling matters.

There is a great deal of trade jealousy in the religious world, and an obscure curate has been bitterly complaining in print that laymen hav been allowed to appear in the pulpit, on the ground that they "cannot represent the Lord on earth as the clergy can, for the simple reason that they hav not been called by him." As a man can only become a state parson by scrambling through a university examination, it is not clear who the "him" is, or when, where, or how he calls.

It is gratifying to hear that the International Christian Police Association is flourishing, and that a woman's branch has been formed, though it is not generally known that there are female policemen. It is thoughtless on the part of the promoters of this association not to make their members wear badges to distinguish them from the unregenerate members of the force; they would be curiosities. I presume the officer who dodges round the corner in the opposit direction when there is a street row, is a member, though I doubt if his religious feelings would overcome him when free drinks were in sight. J. D.

London, Eng.

The State Secular Union of Ohio.

The above organization has now been brought to a successful issue, and the state of Ohio has decided to follow the example of sundry of our sister states in the West by organizing an independent state Union of her own. True, there was not such a large representation present from the state as I had anticipated, but nevertheless there were sufficient present, imbued with a spirit of enthusiasm for our cause, to enable us to bring the convention to a satisfactory termination.

On behalf of the Union now established, I sincerely thank those of our friends who had taken sufficient interest in the movement to attend the meetings—delegates attending from Cleveland, Cincinnati, Ottawa, North Baltimore, Shepard, Gladstone, Fostoria, Delaware, and several other points throughout the state.

I also thank those who, unable to attend, had assisted us from a distance by forwarding funds to help us in our work.

Among those generous hearts who assisted us and from whom I acknowledge the receipt of subscriptions are:

C. E. Beardsly, Ottawa, O.	$ 7 00
Mrs. White, Columbus, O.	5 00
Through Samuel Toomey, Canal Dover, O.	14 00
A friend	1 00
W. S. Sutliff, Fostoria, O.	5 00
Dr. J. B. Schueller, Columbus, O.	10 00
F. S. Montgomery, Shepard, O.	7 00
F. S. Dean, Cleveland, O.	2 00
Joseph Simpson, Columbus, O.	2 00
J. H. Hunt, Massillon, O.	5 00
W. S. Moke, Massillon, O.	2 00
John B. Cochran, Columbus, O.	3 00
C. R. Kimberly, Gladstone, O.	2 00
S. M. Bower, North Baltimore, O.	10 00
Through E. P. Wright, Columbus, O.	5 00
By contribution	6 17
Total	$86 17

The writer opened the proceedings by a short address, setting forth the objects and principles of the Union and urging the necessity of such an organization within our own state.

Several suggestions had been made through the Liberal press that such an organization should be inaugurated, and all suggestions for social and moral advancement remain but a dead letter unless put into practice. I urged that it was certainly incumbent upon all the Freethinkers in Ohio to seize the present opportunity and effect an organization for practical work.

The constitution was then read to the meeting, which at once resolved into general committee and discussed the same, which occupied the whole of the morning session. It was at last got into a satisfactory shape, and the delegates decided to present it to the Union for adoption in the afternoon. (The constitution will be sent for publication in the next issue.)

When the meeting reopened in the afternoon the constitution was presented as recommended and unanimously adopted, an incident which decided the unanimity of opinion and feeling that prevailed among the delegates and friends present, and which seemed to rekindle the old characteristic party spirit of Freethinkers.

This being agreed upon, the Union, now properly organized, proceeded to elect officers, and the following were unanimously elected:

For president, F. S. Dean, 25 Jennings avenue, Cleveland, O.

For first vice-president, S. M. Bower, North Baltimore, O.

For second vice-president, Joseph Simpson, 935 Neil avenue, Columbus, O.

For secretary, John R. Charlesworth, 154 North High street, Columbus, O.

For treasurer, Dr. J. B. Schueller, 439 South High street, Columbus, O.

The following were also elected to act in conjunction with the president, secretary, and treasurer to constitute the executiv committee: J. J. Burdge, 62 Northwood avenue, Columbus, O.; Mrs. Lyndell, 110 Mound street, Columbus, O.; Mrs. Gray, 112 Monroe avenue, Columbus, O., and F. S. Montgomery, Shepard Station, O.

Each and every one of the officers is an earnest and enthusiastic Freethinker. They are all successful business people, and are heart and soul in our cause. With such a staff of officers, supported by a well-organized body, we can soon hold up our heads publicly, and compel a due recognition of our rights as Freethinkers.

The secretary is a salaried officer, who shall devote the whole of his time to the service of the Union, lecturing and organizing local auxiliary societies wherever possible.

As I hav accepted the position until such time as the Union shall be in a prosperous condition, it is now my earnest desire to do whatever lies in my power for its good and for its future welfare.

I shall make my headquarters in Columbus, and in case any measure should be presented to the legislature which shall affect us as Freethinkers, it shall be my duty to appear before the legislativ bodies and argue upon such measures in committee. Should the measure be of local or national import, the same precautionary method is required. But, to do this, I must hav the assistance and support of all Freethinkers throughout the state by means of resolutions, petitions, and financial assistance.

The terms of membership are: To members of local auxiliaries, fifty cents per quarter, or $2 per year, payable in advance. To certificated members (where the members in any town are insufficient to establish a local auxiliary), $1 per quarter, or $4 per year, payable in advance.

With good, activ work, I hav every confidence, judging from my experience in Ohio, that at least one thousand members can be enrolled during the coming year.

To accomplish this I must hav help, and we urgently invite all lovers of mental freedom and the friends of Freethought to stand by us and help us to make our party triumphant.

Our efforts to be successful must be in concert, and those who think our principles worth propagating are asked to join our Union. Those who desire to free the land from superstition, priestcraft, and ignorance, under whatever name, now is their time to come forward and render what support they can.

Those who wish to see Secular principles spread o'er the land, make yourselvs known and assist us.

Those who wish their children to be taught plain truth, apart from an immoral and vicious system of theology, giv us your aid. Those who wish to be friends to their country and their kind, must help us to spread the gospel of Freethought, and the good work shall go on, and bravely, too.

At the afternoon session Mr. J. J. Burdge, of Columbus, gave us a splendid address on "Organization," and in the evening B. F. Underwood, of Chicago, gave an admirable review of the principles of "State Secularization," taking for his theme the words of General Grant: "Keep the church and the state forever apart." And the convention was brought to a successful termination by an address from the writer.

Great praise is certainly due to those few heroic Freethinkers who hav so nobly assisted in this movement.

The expenses of the meeting hav been fully met, and the treasurer has already a balance in hand to commence the work of the Union.

We earnestly solicit voluntary contributions in addition to the regular dues, and those desiring to help us in this way are requested to forward the same to the treasurer, Dr. J. B. Schueller, 439 South High street, Columbus, O. All applications for membership, and business communications, may be addressed to me at 154 North High street, Columbus, O. JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

Appropriation of Funds for Sectarian Schools.

VIOLATION OF THE STATE CONSTITUTION.

Section 3 of Article VIII of the constitution of Illinois reads as follows:

Neither the general assembly nor any county, city, town, township, school district or other corporation, shall ever make any appropriation or pay from any public fund whatever, anything in aid of any church or sectarian purpose, or to help support or sustain any school, academy, seminary, college, university, or other literary or scientific institution, controled by any church or sectarian denomination whatever; nor shall any grant or donation of land, money or other personal property ever be made by the state or any such public corporation, to any church for any sectarian purpose.

In an Act of the legislature which went into effect May 28, 1879, provision was made for incorporating industrial schools for girls. This Act provided for the commitment of dependent girls by the county court of any county to any industrial school for girls which might hav been organized under that act, and authorizes and requires the county to pay the industrial school for the tuition, maintenance, and care of such dependent girls.

Under this act a school was organized, called "The Chicago Industrial School for Girls." Various commitments were made to this institution. But the "Chicago Industrial School for Girls" had no buildings or any means for furnishing the girls either tuition, maintenance, or care. The institution existed only on paper.

It received, however, nominally, all the girls committed, but immediately sent them to two Catholic institutions, the House of the Good Shepherd, and St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum. In fact, the Chicago institution was a mere feeder for the other two, seven of the nine directors and incorporators being Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

In the spring and summer of 1886, the county of Cook paid to these institutions $2,314.34, it being admitted on the face of the bills rendered by the Chicago Industrial School for Girls that the tuition, etc., and clothing for which the money was paid, had been furnished entirely by the two Catholic institutions.

About this time some good Protestants, having some regard for the constitution of the state, must hav demurred; because the next bills of this kind which were presented, the county refused to pay. The Chicago Industrial School for Girls brought suit. The case was tried before Judge Tuthill, and judgment rendered for the Chicago school. The county took the case to the supreme court.

The decision of the supreme court of the state will be found at page 540 of Vol. 125 of the Illinois Reports.

The supreme court reversed the decision, holding that the constitution had been plainly violated in paying money to the two Catholic institutions. That it was the duty of the state to provide for the dependent girls, and the state had no right to turn them over to sectarian institutions. The court decided also, that the fact that the doctrins of a particular church were taught, and that all exercises of a religious character were those of said church, would render the institution sectarian, within the meaning of the constitution.

In the face of this decision, and in the face of the constitution, the county is still appropriating money to sectarian institutions. And the commissioners do not even beat about the bush, as they did before the decision was made, but in open and shameless disregard of the constitution, and in open defiance of the authority of the supreme court, they appropriate the money of the people directly to sectarian schools.

The decision was made in 1888, and published in the reports of 1889.

In 1890 the board of county commissioners appropriated $40,000; in 1891, $45,000, and in 1892, $45,000.

This sum is distributed as follows:

To the St. Mary's Training School for Boys, at

Feahanville, $12,500; to the Illinois Training School for Boys, at Glenwood, $12,500; to the Chicago Industrial School for Girls, $8,000, and to the Illinois Industrial School for Girls, at Evanston, $12,000.

Of these, the first and third are well known to be Catholic institutions. The other two, though not under the ostensible control of any Protestant sect, are yet Protestant institutions to all intents and purposes. They hav Protestant prayers, Protestant Sabbath-schools, and Protestant teachings.

Sufficient evidence that they are sectarian institutions of a Protestant character, is found in the fact that their managers consent so readily to the appropriations for the Catholic schools. How is it that there are no complaints and expostulations, such as there were in 1886 and 1887, against the misappropriation of the public funds, in violation of the constitution? Because they get a share of the public plunder. It is an unholy religious alliance for the purpose of robbing the people and depleting the public treasury in disregard of all the supposed safeguards of the constitution.

Great praise is due to Commissioners Stauber, Cool, and Stepina for opposing these acts of the board, and voting against them, and particularly to Mr. Stauber, who argued strenuously against the appropriations.

Some two years ago, the Secular Union took the matter up, and had a bill in chancery filed for an injunction to prevent funds being paid to the Feahanville school. That case is now pending in the supreme court of Illinois.

All opposed to union of church and state—all opposed to pious frauds of every description, and especially all opposed to open violations of the constitution, in the supposed interests of religion or of education, are called upon to assist in putting a stop to such practices.

Anyone wishing to aid in this matter financially, will send to M. Reiman, treasurer American Secular Union, 4325 Drexel boulevard. C. B. WAITE,
Pres. Am. Secular Union.

Chicago, April 10, 1892.

Vice-Presidents of American Secular Union.

The following well-known Liberals hav been elected by the board of directors honorary vice-presidents of the American Secular Union:

Nathan L. Perkins, Bangor, Me.; Parker Pillsbury, Concord, N. H.; John D. Powers, Woodstock, Vt.; Susan H. Wixon, Fall River, Mass.; N. F. Griswold, Meriden, Conn.; Julius Fehr, Hoboken, N. J.; Thaddeus B. Wakeman, New York city; Dr. R. B. Westbrook, Philadelphia, Pa.; Marius Heighton, Kent, O.; W. W. Wilson, Spiceland, Ind.; Otto Wettstein, Rochelle, Ill.; E. Chope, Detroit, Mich.; G. E. Swan, Beaver Dam, Wis.; Dr. G. A. F. de Lespinasse, Orange City, Ia.; Jacob Hoffner, Fort Snelling, Minn.; G. G. Beck, St. Joseph, Mo.; Mrs. J. Burwells Williams, Kittrells, N. C.; Seborn Kitchens, Sr., Gibson, Ga.; T. W. Shank, Hurricane, W. Va.; W. F. Aldrich, Aldrich, Ala.; Capt. E. C. Garner, Green Cove Springs, Fla.; J. D. Shaw, Waco, Texas; F. W. Hill, Little Rock, Ark.; P. C. Isbell, Manchester, Tenn.; Daniel Dreamer, Newport, Ky.; John Remsburg, Oak Mills, Kan.; G. W. Watson, Washington, D. C.; C. B. Reynolds, Fremont, Wash.; Samos Parsons, San José, Cal.; A. K. and M. J. Olds, McMinnville, Ore.; Rousseau Hess, Fort Custer, Mont.; F. A. Lamont, Harshaw, Ariz.; Lewis Moffatt, Seward, Neb.; John Engstrom, Crested Butte, Col.; W. Barnhard, Banner, Ida.; H. P. Mason, Salt Lake City, Utah; Henry Cardwell, Carbon, Wyo.

We ask that each of the above-named vice-presidents do what he or she can to further the work of the Union, not only in its present effort to prevent the appropriation of public funds to sectarian institutions, but arrange also for a Congress of Liberals to be held in this city during the World's Fair. If among the appointments there are those who can not work with the Union, or do not care to serve, they are kindly requested to notify the secretary of their declination, that others may be elected to fill their place.

The American Secular Union had hoped to build a hall. But the time is so near, the labor involved so great, the arousing of the Freethinkers so slow a process, that the project of building, it is feared, must be abandoned. This, however, need not deprive the Union of headquarters, as a hall can be rented and held for the use of the organization during the Exposition. MRS. M. A. FREEMAN,
Cor. Sec. Am. Secular Union.

THE creed of Christendom is the enemy of morality. It teaches that the innocent can justly suffer for the guilty, that consequences can be avoided by repentance.—Ingersoll.

In the Field.

In accordance with arrangements, I went down to Rainier last Friday, and that evening spoke upon "Providence; or, God's Tender Mercy." The audience was not so large as when I was down to debate with the Rev. Mr. Staub, but was attentiv, and not very small, considering that the exact place of the meeting was not known until 7 o'clock in the evening. There were some who reject the Bible, but still believe in God and providence, present, and my lecture was to their notion "too iconoclastic." Most of those present seemed well pleased and went away satisfied.

Saturday evening I spoke at Stahman schoolhouse, out in the woods from Rainier, and although the roads were well-nigh impassable and the rain was pouring down, the house was crowded. I talked on "Jesus as a Labor Reformer," and my exposition likening the kingdom of heaven to one hundred per cent usury, fifteen cents for ten hours' work, slavery, and imprisonment for debt, was new to a good many, and horrifying to some. A Catholic and a Protestant came and sat together for the purpose of objecting. The Protestant would pat the Catholic on the back and the Catholic would interrupt me and make a denial. Finally I gave him the floor and invited him to say all he wished. He soon ran dry, as all he could do was to repeat a few of Lambert's vilifications of Colonel Ingersoll and call me an Ingersoll, asserting that I was calling them all damned fools.

Brother Kittering got excited and started to call him down, but was prevailed on to let him go. When he sat down I got after him, and by comparing his manner, his utterances, and spirit with those I had maintained all evening, made him hang his head with shame.

These two zealots for religion are known as the biggest liars and most unreliable men in this community. Sunday evening I spoke in Scappoose on "Sunday Laws." The man who owns the hall failed to light and open it at 7 o'clock, and many went away, and it was reported that I had not come and there would be no speaking. However, after the hall was finally lighted, at 8 o'clock, a good many gathered in and it was quite a revelation to them to learn that the Women's Christian Temperance Union had $10,000 on hand to buy a strong Sunday law with next January. W. W. West, the Liberal light of this community, defrayed the expenses, and he is to hav a discussion soon with the Rev. Mr. Staub, the preacher I knocked out at Rainier on the subject, "There Is More Good than Bad Teaching in the Bible."

I am going to Arkansas soon for a few months, and expect to return and take the field in Oregon in opposition to the proposed Sunday law, which the Women's Christian Temperance Union are working for so hard. I should be glad to arrange for lectures by the way on my return, and will make it known through THE TRUTH SEEKER when I intend starting back. HENRY ADDIS.

To Colonel Ingersoll.

ON HIS RECENT BRUSH WITH THE CLERICALS.

Old man, thou put'st another leaf
To that full wreath already twined;
Better a champion hold his brief
In noble nature, broad and kind,
Nor wasp-like stab with venomed prod
Out of the boundless love of God.

Thy glowing cheek and thy fresh heart
Time spares; and if he plunders bare
Thy temples, 'tis a kindly art
That shows the greening laurel there.

A. CARROLL.

Repeal or Carry Through the Obscenity Laws.

Lately two respectable women took it into their heads, for reasons sufficient to themselvs, to blackguard each other through the mail. A post-office spy got on their track and soon had them on their knees in tears and begging to save themselvs from five years in the penitentiary. If they had been men and confined themselvs to the oral use of the terms in question they would not even hav been in danger of a fine or a night in jail. The spy who arrested them, who hears every day of his life men bandying such words and laughing at them, must hav felt very much like a man when he had the cowering, weeping, voteless women on their knees before him. He has used the same words many a time himself. The federal post is sacred—taboo—a fetich. Words that a man can speak with impunity and that nine men out of every ten do speak every week of their lives, if sent through the mail may giv them five years in the penitentiary.

If the fact is immoral and it is not merely the place that is sacred let us hav the obscenity laws for everybody, everywhere. If you send certain words through the mails you are a criminal, but every other man who handles the mail-sack containing the offensiv letter, from New York to the Pacific, pronounces the said words over the sacred mail-sacks as he pitches them about. I hav myself heard a post-office employee using words as he handled the mail-sacks that would make him a transgressor of the law of Congress if he had written and mailed them.

Let Congress enact that if any person shall speak any obscene word in the District of Columbia or any territory of the United States, or in any post-office, or in the same block in which any letter-box is placed, or in presence of any post-office employee, or whilst riding in any train or vehicle that carries the mail, or whilst walking on any track on which a mail-train travels or on any post-road, he shall be punished as now provided for sending obscene matter through the mails. We might even go farther and provide that if anyone who uses or has ever used the mails shall use any obscene language, he or she shall be punished as above. No Senator or Congressman was ever known to use improper language or tell naughty stories, so knowing themselvs safe they would readily pass the law. SENEX.

Infidels of Past Ages.

Infidels hav reared a monument, splendid and superb. It is as wide as the earth, as pure as truth, and as enduring as time. From reason, its broad and everlasting foundation, towers that glorious edifice of innumerable truths called science. And upon this structure stands the goddess of Liberty beaming with starry brightness and holding the torch of justice. Who is there so blind as not to behold this magnificent monument? Who so ignorant as to say it will not endure? And who so blind and ignorant as to deny its existence? This monument was not raised in a day nor with perfect ease, but it is the product of many years and untold suffering. The layers of the foundation were men of intelligence, men of courage. They were noble enough to sacrifice their lives that this emblem of reason, science, and liberty might be made so strong that all the religious fanatics on earth could not injure it. They were heroic enough to die that Truth might live. They were bold enough to say that every man has a right to think for himself and to follow his own convictions. And they were brave enough to confront heartless and bloodthirsty theologians that they might make known to the world the inestimable results of their investigations.

To these martyrs we owe our freedom. They labored bravely, earnestly, and zealously for the good of the human race. They strove with infinit patience to teach the world man's duty to man. They were anxious to see the ignorant raised from the swamps of barbarism to the plateau of education and refinement. Their pity went out to the many millions of men and women who were so unfortunate as to be overcome by the horrible tide of superstition. They were philanthropists. They longed to see the day when individual liberty would be regarded as sacred as life. Their hearts overflowed with the love of humanity. They were hospitable, charitable, and kind. They considered all men as their brothers, and all women as their sisters. Their sense of justice would not allow them to believe in a hell where innocent children and ignorant parents would burn eternally to appease the anger of a most merciful God. They could not believe that Paul was affected by a supernatural influence when he said, "Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection." It did not seem reasonable to them that an all-wise God would inspire men to write a book full of mistakes and falsehoods—full of accounts of bloodshed, murder, and almost every known crime.

They were not so narrow-minded and hard-hearted as to think that such words as "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," would ever "fall from the lips of the Infinit." And they were so firm in their belief that the most tyrannical words ever uttered, "Believe or be damned," did not alarm them in the least.

O noble men of past ages! O liberators of mankind! Words are inadequate to express our love and esteem for you! C. W. WILLIAMS.

New Editions.

We hav just received from the binder new editions of Remsburg's "Bible Morals," price 25 cents; "Maria Monk," price 50 cents; and Voltaire's "Pocket Theology," price 25 cents.

Helen H. Gardener's "Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle" will soon be issued in an attractiv pamphlet form for ten cents.

These are all good books and orders for them are very gratifying.

Letters of Friends.

Fifty Messengers of Trnth Sent Forth.

STRASBURG, ILL., March 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The Evening Telegram came to my hand last night. I went out among the boys and told them I wanted fifty cents apiece for five Telegrams. It took hard work for nearly an hour to make up the inclosed $5. Please send me fifty copies of the Evening Telegram, containing the Ingersoll controversy. A. YORK.

A Wolf About to Invade a Shepherdless Flock.

WILBER, NEB., April 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As the preachers hereabout are giving their attention mostly to politics, they cannot be depended upon for religious instruction or spiritual consolation from now till next November. I would do what I can to console the flock whilst the shepherd is riding on free passes attending political conventions, etc., etc., so for the inclosed $2 please send two copies of Heston's late revision, the Bible Picture Book.

We hav discovered John Jasper's off mate. He is here declaring the same kind of geography. H. KILGORE.

Better Than the "Comic Bible" Published in Paris.

BOSTON, MASS., Feb. 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: "Old Testament Stories" came duly to hand. I hav enjoyed them very much, and they will afford me a great deal of amusement. The price is reasonable for such a useful and interesting work. The quotations under the pictures are very handy, and in this respect also the work is far superior to the French "Comic Bible," which costs four times as much. Inclosed find $2 for two more copies. RUFUS K. NOYES, M.D.

A Catholic Beyond Help.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., March 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated" to hand, and I am delighted with it. I had just finished Bastow's "Voices," which only needs the illustrations to be complete. I showed the Picture Book to a devout Catholic and he frequently repeated, "Look at the monk'—he's always in it, ain't he?" and that's all he could see in the pictures. I thought, "Poor fellow! Ignorance so dense would slip an engin or make a freight train lose time falling down a mountain!" E. B. HART.

Boards of Trade, Insurance Companies, Lotteries.

COLES STATION, ILL., March 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: As I am a constant reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER and find nearly all the evils discussed except the board of trade of Chicago, I would like to see your opinion in the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER on the board of trade and those insurance companies. What a fraud they are! And also this lottery of New Orleans—a man can invest thousands and lose and yet it is no crime, but if he gets out and runs a horse-race he is fined for it because he has not got a license. I think our national law-makers ought to make these crimes as gambling at high stakes, as well as licensing such. J. S. JOHNSON.

Lotteries.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Feb. 23, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1.50, for which please push the inclosed label six months further on the dial of time. I shall know you receive this instead of Comstock the mail-meddler by the extension on the label.

The steeple on Christ church, Philadelphia, in which General Washington had a pew while he resided in Philadelphia, was paid for by money received from a lottery established for that purpose, and General Washington bought a number of the said tickets. The Comstocks should be reminded of the fact.

Yours for some of the good that lotteries hav done, J. B. ELLIOTT.

Freethonght Must Be at the Fair.

CANYON FERRY, MONT., Jan. 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5—$3 for subscription, $1 for the new Bible Picture Book, twenty-five cents for "Did Christ Rise from the Dead?" and seventy-five cents for "Christian Absurdities," by John Peck. I want them to hand to my Christian friends.

Why should not the Liberals of America secure a large hall to hav Liberal meetings and lectures, that we can invite the Liberals of all countries to meet with us at the great Chicago Fair? If there is such a move, I stand ready to assist to the amount of $5, and yet I am a poor man.

Yours for Liberalism,
J. V. STAFFORD.

But They Knew As Much As Theologians.

TURLOCK, CAL., March 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Not long since, a little four-year-old at breakfast, sitting in her high chair beside her father, suddenly arousing from an apparent reverie looked up in her father's face and inquired, "Papa, has God got any babies?" The father, seemingly surprised, made no reply, but a little urchin, some years older, who had been to Sunday-school, very promptly replied, "Yes, he has, he's got a son, and his name is Jesus." "Well," said the little one, "what is his mother's name?" After a little hesitation he answered, "Why, Mrs. God, of course." "Children," said the father, "you had better go out in the yard and play awhile." After the precocious pair had vanished the father spoke as follows, "Mariah, what makes you put such foolish stuff into the children's heads?" And there was silence in that house for the space of half an hour.

Yours, etc., J. C. P.

Not Milk for Babes.

GREELEY, COL., March 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In renewing my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, allow me to congratulate you on its increased and increasing interest from week to week. Not only is this true as to its contents, but in its "new dress," typographically speaking, it is a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." The latter part of the quotation is intended as a prophecy based on my most sincere wish and hope.

The new Bible Picture Book recently received pleases me immensely, but is rather strong diet for those who still cling to that old book as being inspired. "Milk for babes" best applies to this class of persons, and they cannot bear to see their idol so truthfully shown up.

Yours fraternally, A. CHAPMAN.

A Philosophic, Complacent Letter.

STITZER, WIS., Feb. 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER for 1892. I hav to hire money of the bank to pay my taxes—$58. I wish some books, but there is $300 interest to pay. Such is the slavery of myself, and not a small number in this county are in the same boat. I tip the scale of time sixty-seven years this day. The buoy of life is hope. It keeps the ship of life afloat, and to-morrow will be a better day.

Let me see—I see that no such person as Jesus Christ ever lived. It is all pious tradition for the benefit of the fetich-worshiper, who can be traced link by link in the chain of living truths to Africa, where all the essentials as taught by the Christian religion are taught to-day by the Africans as discovered by David Livingstone, the faithful missionary who died at his task rather than come home and lie for the furtherance of the religion which he there found in all its essential purity. The same hypnotic force that holds the savage fast sustains the white man in his faith, and by that he is blessed. I feel, I see, the life I liv has revealed the light that Nature would that all were blessed. Hypnotic fashion rules the people here to-day. Their book has its origin of the savage their natures love so well. Why should they consult C. Darwin in his teaching nature's laws, when fetichism comprises all they know or see?

WM. A. GRISWOLD.

Asks a Hearing for the Single Tax.

DAPHNE, ALA., April 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Of late there has appeared in your paper frequent reference to taxation, tariff, etc., the last which has come to my notice being a brief letter from Mr. Shepherd in your issue of March 26th, in which he writes that "it makes little difference how revenue is raised," etc. I beg to be allowed sufficient room in your paper to say that for over twenty years I hav been in the Liberal ranks, and for the last ten years hav given most of my time and spare money to pushing the single tax on land values, because I realized that "this reform would make all other reforms easier." Will your Liberal readers not investigate this proposed method of taxation and judge for themselvs as to its merits? I would advise that they begin by reading Henry George's Reply to the Pope upon the Condition of Labor; then follow this up by "Protection or Free Trade," and then read his "Progress and Poverty." We who claim to be Liberal, progressiv, and willing to change our minds at any time upon any and all subjects if upon further investigation we find good reason to do so, should investigate this most important subject. Without in the least wishing to open any mere political discussion in your columns, I beg of you to giv this a place, and if I can aid anyone by answering questions, either by mail or through your paper, I shall be glad to do so. The books cost but twenty-five cents each, and may be had through your office.

Yours in the cause of humanity,
EDWARD QUINCY NORTON.

No Snnday Opening, No Money.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Jan. 30, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find a letter from the Hon. W. W. Bowers, M. C., being an answer to a letter I wrote him on the 4th of December last, desiring his opinion upon the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. It is highly encouraging—in fact, exhilarating—to every Freethinker in America to know that men of the caliber, courage, honesty, and broad-gage ideas of the Hon. W. W. Bowers has the opportunity and privilege of representing the rights, justice, wants, and necessities of the most numerous class of the citizens of this great nation, without fear or favor. H. L. SHAUG.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVS U. S.
WASHINGTON, D. C.,
Jan. 12, 1892.

MR. H. L. SHAUG, Los Angeles, Cal., Dear Sir: I hav your letter of the 4th inst., and if any resolution is passed by this Congress looking to the closing of the World's Fair on Sundays, thus shutting out thousands of poor people and workingmen from visiting it, Sunday being the only day on which they could visit it, I shall vote against any appropriation for it.

Yours truly, W. W. BOWERS.

Why Did Not the Bible Tell Us Something?

MOUND CITY, KAN., March 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to offer a few suggestions. Chess always comes from wheat. Its growth is from the stool when the main stalk is destroyed below a certain joint near the main root. This has been discovered by close observation in wheat fields where chess is found. It occurs from close feeding by calves, sheep, rabbits, or swine; sometimes by the March frosts freezing and thawing, and often in spaces of ground where puddles of water hav stood where the horses turn about in plowing lands. This should not be done, but the proper way is to leave a headland to be plowed last. I hav seen or read but few statements in agricultural papers as to how chess is produced, during many years, and I hav been a farmer till old age came on compelling me to retire. I assert chess always comes from wheat, and I hav never seen a statement yet that the seed of chess contains the life-germ to sprout and grow, but simply that chess comes from chess, which is not true.

Now the parables. Had revelation revealed to us in the old book the true philosophy of tares, the modern world would hav been more enlightened as to matters of fact and vast benefit to mankind. Had revelation revealed to Europe and the East the existence of a continent in the West, and other facts of geography and astronomic science, and some things in geology, it would hav been a clincher for the Biblists. But no, nothing of the kind was given to convince us.

Yours truly, WM. B. LEWIS.

Write to Local Papers.—The Fair.

LAKE CITY, IA., Feb. 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I took your advice in writing an article to our home paper on Sunday closing of the World's Fair, or rather I wrote one of our principal state papers an article, hardly hoping to get it published, as the paper is rather Christian. But being men of good sense, they published it, and that at a time when the legislature was in full blast, and the cranks were trying to work it for all they could get out of it. So I thought I would help them all I could in the way of explaining matters so they would not be left entirely in the dark. It was published, as you will see, in the Iowa State Register, a paper having a circulation, or paying a greater amount of postage, than all the other fifty publications in the city of Des Moines. The article will be read by many thousands, and goes to show what we can do in the way of getting our sentiments before the people if we only try.

If we can get a good place for our people to lecture in during the time of the Fair, I do not think we will lose anything, be it opened or closed on Sundays. I am willing to pay my part for such a building.

But there is no use of talking about $500,000 being raised by the Freethinkers of America, neither is such a sum needed or required. If we could raise $50,000 it would be a grand thing for our people. I do not expect to liv to attend the Columbian Fair, but I should like our people to hav a home there, a place they could call their own for the time being.

J. L. TOMPKINS.

A Bible Mystery.

CAMPBELL, IA., Feb. 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: There is one very important subject I think your correspondents hav studiously failed to comment upon with reference to the contents of that awful book called the Bible, and that is the account of the resurrection of Lazarus, who it states had lain in the grave (or sepulcher) four days, and his sister Martha thought at the time of his resurrection, "He stinketh." I never could see why it was necessary to hav the stone rolled away by lookers-on while the command came from such a powerful source. But the greatest mystery to me is why there is nothing, not even a single word, said what Lazarus saw or heard in that state beyond "this vale of tears." To hav put a chapter in that "Holy Queer" of what purported to hav come from Lazarus, and sealed by "Thus saith the Lord," would hav been in my estimation a thousand times more argument to prove an existence after death than all the promises, guesses, and prophecies found within the lids of that book. The following questions always arise in my mind when thinking upon the subject: Did Lazarus go to hell, purgatory, or heaven? Why didn't he tell us something about it? It would hav been the supreme opportunity of his life to hav told the world his adventures in that unseen state, but it looks a little suspicious when he failed to do so. Again, why did Christ hav to raise his voice to a loud pitch in order to make Lazarus hear unless there was a capacity for hearing? Surely giving the command in a low voice would hav been as effectual. It surely was a scheme, and I think poorly managed. Write a chapter on the subject, or get some of your correspondents to do so. I should like to see the subject elucidated.

Yours in the cause of Freethought and investigation, L. T. WOMACKS.

God Relieved of the Labor of Creation.

SOUTH BEND, IND., March 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $4, for which send me the Bible Picture Book and some of Ingersoll's works. Also $3 for which my father wishes THE TRUTH SEEKER sent another year. He has been taking this distributor of Freethought and Liberalism for a number of years, and by the knowledge he receives therefrom he finds great pleasure in quite frequently giving the ministers and other superstitious beings a few taps on religion.

I hav just read "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" "All In a Lifetime," and "A Thoughtless Yes." Misses Helen Gardener and Susan Wixon are certainly to be praised in the way they impart striking thoughts of Freethought to the human mind. I am now reading "The Advancement of Science," by Tyndall. Science opens the way "to know more." I hav also read some of Ingersoll's lectures in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and am so completely wrapped up in his grand and sublime thoughts that I wish "to know more" about him and hence send for more of his books. To read his writings is a pleasure, and his arguments are so forcible and reasonable that they cannot with good judgment be refuted in an honest and fair manner. In my estimation, his late critics made a grand failure, and some of them still follow the examples of the dumbheads who tried to answer Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason" by answering in slander and abuse, thinking to conquer in that manner. But people are beginning to say, "We want facts." The "great orator" is gradually opening the eyes of the people to the truth and leading them from the low depths of ignorance and superstition to higher and nobler vocations in life.

I hav been reading THE TRUTH SEEKER for the past four years, and I think it is doing a great and noble work in the extension of Freethought, Liberalizing the masses and curtailing the arrogant and domineering power of the churches, whose foundation-stones are blood, myth, and superstition. The greatest curse or evil known to humanity is priestcraft, ignorance, and superstition. Christianity is false. Religion as exhibited by the church is a lie. We want more Science and less Bible; more civilization and less priesthood; more honesty and less fraud. Upon the ground of evolution God is relieved of the labor of creation. Long liv such words as hav flowed from the pen of Darwin, Haeckel, Huxley, and Tyndall. I hav faith in truth, confidence in Science, and much love for such words of Ingersoll—"O Liberty, dwell not forever in the heart of the enthusiast—in the prayer of the philanthropist—but come and take up your abode with men. I know not what inventions may spring from the brain of the future, but there never will touch this shore a greater blessing,—a rarer gift—than liberty for man, woman, and child!"

I see by notice in the paper of lecture announcements that S. P. Putnam is to lecture in Chicago April 24th. South Bend is not far from Chicago, and as there are quite a number of Liberals in this city I do not see why we may not all arouse a little energy and grasp the opportunity of having him giv us a grand treat by a lecture, or as many as he can giv.

Hoping THE TRUTH SEEKER and Liberals will continue the grand fight in the future, as they hav in the past, to bring the priests "to time" and sink them and their teachings into "innocuous desuetude," I am, as ever, one to fight for Freethought and Liberalism, FRED E. STROUP.

Overcomes Them With Guile.

TURNER, ORE., Feb. 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow another of the late lamented Freethought family to become known to the Freethinking fraternity through your columns. The particular spot on this planet which acknowledges me as one of its citizens is a point on the Southern Pacific railroad, eight miles south of our state capital, Salem. The place has about two hundred inhabitants, and is a good point for local trade, but it is priest-ridden to stagnation, and I am the only missionary of Freethought in it. There is some Infidel element here, but it is mostly like sheep in the shearer's hands. I am not discouraged. Freethought is advancing. People are slowly becoming civilized. I constitute myself a "home missionary," and work as opportunity presents. I hav a good deal of fun at it.

Occasionally some "greeny" (usually a preacher, or very pious person) tackles me; but never commits that folly the second time. I distribute literature, and when I can conceal its Freethought origin I am usually successful in getting it read, and often indorsed—and thus "overcome them with guile." I consider such course not only justifiable but commendable. The title of a Freethought book or paper, or the picture of Ingersoll or Putnam, et al, usually prevents it being read or destroys its influence.

Another plan I pursue is to cut out the pictures in THE TRUTH SEEKER and make me a scrap-album of them. I hav now a goodly collection, and I hav "lots of fun" with them. I also cut out the pictures of writers and speakers and paste them on the backs of picture cards of various sorts usually used for advertising purposes. These I g'v away to any who will accept them. Thus many a person, young and old, is made familiar with the features of Remsburg, Putnam, Helen Gardener, Paine, Ingersoll, et genus omne, unwittingly.

Speaking of Ingersoll reminds one of his position and his critics. His position is open to criticism. I am sorry to say it. But Ingersoll, of all men, should be consistent. Having received the "ten talents," he is accountable for their use. He should put into actual practice that which he advocates theoretically. I am not unmindful of the great mind and splendid talent of Ingersoll. But that is only a greater reason that he should be consistent. That the manipulation of the finances, the tariff, and the land is the cause of the present bad condition of labor, is as capable of demonstration as that two and two make four. I recognize the obligation we owe to Ingersoll for his defense of mental, moral, and social freedom—his breaking the chains of ecclesiastical tyranny and oppression; but he also owes an obligation to humanity, by virtue of his very great abilities, that he does not, while helping us out of one kind of slavery, help to bind us in another. Ingersoll strikes at ecclesiasticism with one hand, and upholds it with the other. "The church and the king," orthodoxy and the money power, always go hand in hand. Ingersoll should wear the jewel of consistency. F. S. MATTESON.

The Heathen Rage Furiously.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., March 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I read your paper with delight, although I hav not gone far enough with my research to know whether I am a Deist or an Agnostic.

Some correspondents object to the style of having the pictures removable, but I approve of it. It is hard to get people to read a paper when covered by pictures of the fetich before which they hav been taught to bow the knee and ask in fear and trembling to be allowed to continue their existence. We must instruct gradually, for "Rome was not built in a day."

I will tell you something of the place I recently left. Nanaimo, B. C., has a Spiritualist Association, and the members of that society hav had lively discussions in public print with the dark-cloaked clergy of mysteries. However, the latter had lain dormant, so to speak, through the summer, and when in the autumn Mr. S. P. Putnam appeared in the arena they began to wriggle and hiss, and the brimstone and bitterness began to ooze out of them and smoke and sizzle like caustic on a bunion. The parsons thundered from the pulpits, and some wrote in the press, but those who went a-gunning in the latter fashion only succeeded in losing their own scalps. Mr. Wm. Gordon, of Wellington, defended Freethought in a masterly manner. In one letter he referred to a discussion which took place in the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States in regard to the rough and inhuman treatment that infants had so long been subject to by the Confession of Faith. Rev. Mr. McRea, who is personally a kind and generous gentleman but religiously an enthusiastic follower of John Knox, bluntly denied that any such discussion had ever taken place, and furthermore stated that the confession of his Puritan forefathers contained no such horrible doctrin. Of course, if a man were still to hold that the earth is flat, one could only leave him with his own absurd assertion, for you know what Paine said about giving medicin to a corpse. The fight had scarcely abated when Mrs. Krekel came as an able exponent of the good cause. Well, these lectures turned every preacher and pious layman into a defender of the faith, and Freethought has been the principal topic for months. Many seeds fell on fertil soil, and I also think many more that lit on the thick orthodox skull rebounded, took root, and flourished in the intellects of the less prejudiced.

But the Infidel was soon to be lost sight of for a time, for there was a stir of a different sort starting in the orthodox camp. Two anything but wise men came stalking out from the east about Christmas crying; "You must be born again." They were Crossley and Hunter, evangelists of the Small and Jones type. But so little did their hue and cry amount to that it would not be worth noticing were it not that they set the Presbyterians and Methodists fighting like Kilkenny cats. Although the Presbyterian pastor attended the revivals, he went about in a cool and resolute manner, and obstinately refused to work himself up to the pitch of excitement becoming an earnest fisher of men. Besides, he warned his flock against making a vain display of their happy condition by standing up and relating their adventures with the spirit when perhaps it was only due to excitement. At this the Methodists waxed wrathful, and turned upon their enemy with a frenzy approaching that of the Reformation. The Free Press was almost wholly taken up for about three weeks with this Holy War, while the din of battle resounded in the neighboring cities. Peace was finally restored by the refusal of the editors to publish anything but fresh matter on the subject. So endeth an autumn and winter of religious excitement. J. H. P.

Christian Cheats and Intimidations.

BEATRICE, S. D., Feb. 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a clipping from the Inter-Ocean giving an account of a young skeptic at Round Bottom, W. Va., who died, went to hell, returned to life, made his peace with God, then died in the arms of the savior:

CLARKSBURG, W. VA., Feb. 8.—Special Telegram.—The Rev. John T. Johnson, the celebrated mountain evangelist, who has been traveling through the state for nearly forty years, states that during a revival at Round Bottom, Monongahela county, a young man of that place who had been ill with consumption for some time died, descended into hell, and returned to life in an hour, and, after describing his torrid trip, embraced religion and again died happily, in the full belief of his future salvation.

After stating that the young man, who was one of the most intelligent in the country, was a skeptic, Mr. Johnson says:

"He was apparently lying at the point of death. The Rev. Mr. O'Daniels and myself were called upon to endeavor to bring him to Christ.

"While Mr. O'Daniels was talking to him, holding him by the hand, he seemingly expired, and was pronounced dead by all in the room. He remained in this condition for some time, when he suddenly began breathing heavily, and then struggling as though with some mighty monster.

"He seemed endowed with supernatural strength, and it required the utmost exertions of several powerful men to keep him on the bed. The struggle continued for an hour, when he calmed down, and, regaining his senses, requested that we sing and pray with him.

"After the exercises were over, he told us that when he became insensible to earth he found himself at the brink of a yawning, black chasm. Lurid fires seemed to be burning at a great distance down, and shrieks of the most unearthly kind greeted his ears.

"After remaining quiet a short time, he felt a thread by his hand. He grasped it, and had hardly done so when a mighty wind struck his body, almost tearing his limbs out of their sockets, and dashing him down into the mouth of the pit, where he swayed from side to side, clinging to the thread, which alone kept him from falling to the flames below.

"He knew that should the thread break or he lose his grasp he was doomed forever, and he thought to himself: 'I hav been a skeptic and God almighty is showing me that there is a hell of darkness and fire to which unbelievers are exposed,' and he grasped the thread the tighter.

"After what seemed to him an interminable time the wind ceased, and he knew nothing until he requested the ministers to pray with him.

"Shortly after his return to life," Mr. Johnson continued, "he made his peace with God, and after giving full directions regarding his burial, bidding his friends good-bye, and requesting Mr. O'Daniels when he officiated at his funeral to relate his remarkable experience for the benefit of others, died practically in his savior's arms."

That Messrs. Johnson, O'Daniels, and others who witnessed this strange affair, believe actually in the supernatural occurrence is unquestioned. They are all persons whose veracity is beyond question, and even the physicians assert the young man was actually dead.

The narration of the story at the funeral caused considerable excitement, and people are flocking to the churches throughout the neighborhood. Meetings hav been held day and night since Thursday, the day upon which the young man was buried.

It is said that the final request of the man was that a report of his experience be published broadcast, so that all men might know there was a hell.

Please investigate this case or let us hear from some Infidel in the vicinity who knows the facts. These fellows who call themselvs evangelists I believe are the most contemptible scoundrels this earth contains. If outspoken Infidels would attend these revival meetings they might head them off in some of their tricks. An incident has just been published that happened where I used to liv in Iowa, in which the little game did not work worth a cent. I copy the account from the Times, of Alden:

Last March a series of meetings began in Alden under the direction of Evangelist Garlock, of Smithland. During the meetings, which continued thirty-two days, Mr. Garlock made a number of surprising statements as to his powers and capacities, among which was an unqualified claim of an ability to read the future. While stating that he was neither a prophet nor a son of a prophet, Mr. Garlock described his strange ability in language substantially as follows: "You may call it what you will. I cannot explain it to you. It comes to me as natural as my breath. It comes to me and it is my duty to tell it—to warn this one and that one that his days are numbered—and I cannot shake it off. And so, when one of these overpowering impressions comes to me I go and tell the person and exhort him to make haste," etc. At the close of one of these explanations Mr. Garlock caused to be read a letter from Battle Creek, where he had previously held similar meetings, written by a person acquainted with the impressions he had had while there and their sequels. He had foretold the sudden death within a limited time of about a dozen different people who had failed to accept his teachings. Several of them were robust young men. They had all, without exception, died sudden and miserable deaths within the time specified by the predictions. As might be expected from one who possessed such a terribly fatal power and still retained any humane instincts, Mr. Garlock distributed his premonitions in Alden with considerable care. There were several sweeping assertions of dire calamities impending over Alden that would be revealed in a few weeks, but no hint was given of their nature. A great number of sudden deaths within the near future was pointed out as a certainty, but no names given, and several persons were sorrowfully bid goodbye with the admonition, "You hav had your last opportunity; good-bye." In fact, there was but one prediction that was in any way tangible, and this one, it is fair to say, created considerable uneasiness and at once became a general topic of conversation. It was made Sunday afternoon, March 29, 1891, and had reference to either Miss Emma Palmer, Miss Emma Birdsall, or Miss Emma Hustan. The three were seated together. Mr. Garlock endeavored long and earnestly to move them, but all persistently declined. Near the close of his exhortation he said, "One of you three girls will die before the 1st of January." These are his exact words.

After further efforts to get them forward by talking of the impending death of one of them before the new year, he solemnly shook hands with all three, bidding them good-bye. The young ladies remained in their seats, and soon after the meeting closed. At the time of the meetings, and ever since, except during vacation, the three young ladies in question hav been in Alden as non-resident members of the same class in the high school, and at no time in their lives were their prospects of longevity more apparent. Had either of them been possessed of anything but the most hopeful and buoyant turn of mind the result might hav been very different. Let one of them hav been unfortunate enough to place faith in the impression and allow it to chafe upon her courage and gradually take shape as a morbid expectation of death, what would hav resulted? Through whose fault?

I think the editor might hav given Infidel teachings a part of the credit for the happy result, as I happen to know that the people of at least one of the young ladies are Freethinkers.

Such cases as the above should fire our hearts with zeal to do all we can to stamp out old hydra-headed Superstition.

Long may the grand old TRUTH SEEKER not only seek truth but teach truth, is the earnest prayer of the unrighteous

C. STRATTON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Polyp.

O, deep-sea child, your wondrous face
In heart of mine finds welcome place.
Where did yon get your knowledge clear,
To build so true and nobly here?
Where find the laws that govern well
The countries where your comrades dwell?
Whence came thy robe like frosted lace,
Whose beauty-lines all eyes can trace?
Such dainty touch, so fair to see,
Whence came it, polyp?—tell to me.
Then spake the polyp, soft and low:
"All gracious truths we may not know;
Yet, in ourselvs are laws as great
As keep in motion star or state.
The inward glow makes outward light
A glory to receptiv sight.
From out the depths of briny sea,
This sacred fact I'll tell to thee:
To Nature and her sweet command—
Who livs her laws as she has planned
Need never weep o'er wasted days,
Or count the lost along life's ways.
Who seeks the true and dares do right,
Is lord and king in raiment white.
He builds a stately mansion fair,
Whose polished towers all time outwear."

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Our Sunday-School.

From our earliest recollections we attended a Sabbath-school in the Baptist church of our nativ village. We are not intending to write anything reflecting on our early teaching by those whom we loved and whose memory we cherish. It was the teaching of their time. It was not the teaching of your time. It was before steam power was known or any of the wonderful discoveries in science of this day. It was when all believed in the miracles said to hav been performed by Moses, Christ, and Mohammed. We say all; we mean the devotees of these men, who lived in barbarous ages, and by the cunning of teachers in the supernatural. These names hav become perpetuated so that every school-child is familiar with them. In these days they would not hav been known at all except perhaps as the occupants of some prison, as idle nuisances, injurious to society. Those men were tramps, and for this reason were better able to deceive the local inhabitants of those days—ignorant from their very localness.

We feel assured our parents would not hav trusted our Sabbath-school teacher with their goods, but in their blindness they could trust the early education of their children in his hands. But if I go back to my grandparents' time I find they would hang their neighbors as witches. So you will see my parents were an improvement on their parents. And so it will be for all time to come, as it has been from all past time.

Our object in writing this article is to tell you a story we read in our childhood from one of the Sabbath-school books circulated from the library to be read during the week. We were fond of reading. And this story was a narrativ of a man who claimed to hav made a visit to the condemned in hell awaiting the judgment day. Coming to a man confined in a cell, he inquired of him how long he had been there. The prisoner said, "Ever since the flood." "Indeed!" said the questioner; "do you remember the flood?" "Oh, yes," said the poor man; "I was a shipcarpenter and worked for Noah eighty years." "And did not Noah urge you to come into the ark?" "Oh, yes; but we did not believe him. We would go to the alehouse every Saturday night and spend our week's wages in beer and laugh at Old Man Noah.

"At last the ark was finished, and all the animals got into it. That night I went to a wedding; on coming out to go home in the morning about 2 o'clock, we found the water over our shoes, and it rained so hard we could scarcely see. The young lady I waited upon, clinging to my arm with trembling hand, asked me if I did not think it Noah's flood. With many misgivings, I told her not to believe it. We all went to bed, leaving out wet clothes hanging by the fire. In the morning when we arose the water was up to the windows, the fire in the kitchen was out, our clothes were swimming in the water, we could get no breakfast; in fact, we did not want any, we had no appetite.

"The water continued rising until we were driven to the top of the house, when an old man on the next roof bid us be of good cheer. He said that when he was a young lad, about three hundred years old, they had just such a flood, and when the water rose to the top of the houses it subsided. This encouraged us for a moment; but we looked off and saw the ark sailing in the distance and all hope forsook us. Oh, how we wished we were in the ark, but it was too late. Pretty soon our house fell in, and I was suffocated, and ever since I hav been here. I know that after the judgment day my sufferings will be increased a hundredfold."

As intelligence increased in my nativ town this library was replaced with a new one, and the old one was sent to the East Indies to supply the Burmah mission.

Children in the Corner, this story is written from my memory, as it was printed on my mind when I read it indelibly.

OLD MAN PAXTON.

A Story For the Little Folks.

THREE BLIND MICE.

Once there were three blind mice, and it has often been said and sung that they ran after a farmer's wife. They were brothers, and had been blind from birth. They had always lived at the old farmhouse, and knew nothing of the great world outside. Their being blind did not prevent them from having very lively times. As no cat was kept on the premises there was nothing to molest them nor make them afraid; so they just went their own way. Every night when the house was still they were in the habit of visiting the pantry and helping themselvs to the rich dainties they found there. They fared sumptuously, and were especially fond of cheese and mince pie; but so much feasting and prosperity did not agree with them any better than with some people that I hav seen, for they began to put on very unbecoming airs. They grew bold, swaggering, and insolent. They were full of brazen-faced impudence. One day after an unusually rich feast the eldest one proposed to his brothers that they should go into the kitchen and hav a little fun by scaring the farmer's wife. The kitchen door stood ajar, and in they marched as bold as lions. Their victim stood at the table kneading dough, and singing, "If a body meet a body coming through the rye." And when she saw them come running toward her she started and ran, with the flour and dough still clinging to her hands, screeching and screaming at the top of her voice, for she was a very nervous, timid woman. They ran after her through the kitchen, out into the hall, and all through the rooms they went, those creatures, in hot pursuit after her. She jumped first into the chairs, and then upon the table, in hopes to escape them. They made fun of her, and laughed and giggled at her fears fit to burst their little throats. But after a while they got tired of their cruel sport and scampered off to their nest to relate to their three brothers that staid at home to keep house, what jolly times they had, the feasting and rioting, and that they had scared a woman almost to death. The eldest one, he that was the ringleader in the mischief, did not hesitate to call her a fool. He said she screamed as loudly as though a lion had been after her. He said he did not want to eat her nor even to bite her, he only wanted to see how badly he could scare her—which was just as reprehensible in him as though he had bitten her. Another one said he did not know as she was a fool but he thought she acted in a very silly manner. The youngest one piped up his tremolo voice and said, judging from all that he had heard about her, it was very evident that she would never set the river afire. That little chap prided himself on doing the tremolo. The three brothers that remained at home said, "We will go with you to-night on a foraging expedition to the pantry, for we, too, like good things to eat, and if there is any fun going on we want to hav a hand in it." The three blind ones said they were willing. Now, the farmer's wife had a great deal more sense than they gave her credit for. She proved a little too sharp for them, for when she found her tormentors had gone she jumped off the table and ran to the store, and she found there just the article she wanted—it was a mouse-box, circular in shape, and it had six holes in it. She hastened home with it, and toasting a bit of cheese she attached it to the wires underneath the box, and placed it on her pantry shelf. The next morning she arose early to examin her box; to her great surprise she saw six long tails dangling from the outside of the box. The creatures in their greedy haste to get at the cheese thrust their heads in so far they could not withdraw them, for the wires sprung back in place, and clasping them tightly around their necks they were all choked to death. Such was the tragical fate of those six wicked brothers. She was so overjoyed at her good luck that she picked up the trap and ran with it to show her husband. "Oh, husband," she said, "just look and see what good success I hav had. Last night I caught these six mice in my new trap." Her husband looked up from THE TRUTH SEEKER that he was reading and exclaimed, "Rats! now you hav caught them, you had better cut off their tails with the carving knife." And his wife with great alacrity obeyed him.

MIRIAM.

P.S.—A story that is so liberally adorned with tales (tails) points to the following moral: Those people who do not exercise proper self-control, and giv way to such childish fears, subject themselvs to ridicule, and that, too, by people who are vastly inferior to them in point of intelligence.

M.

She Yelled "Mouse!" and Jumped.

A surprisingly strong bit of evidence in proof of a woman's inability to remain calm in the presence of a mouse was that contributed by Bridget Colgan, the servant-girl who is now being treated for a broken ankle at the Philadelphia hospital.

Miss Colgan is a fine, strapping young daughter of Erin, who would giv most men a hard tussle in a trial of physical strength, and her nerves are usually as strong as her muscles. Yet, when Bridget was cleaning the second-story windows of the house where she was employed as chambermaid last week, and she saw a mouse run out from under the bed, she instantly turned and leaped into the street below, at the same time screaming, "A mouse! a mouse!"

Perhaps no more remarkable instance of this strange fear has ever been recorded, and Miss Bridget's escape with only the injuries mentioned is not the least curious part of her adventure.—Philadelphia Record.

Correspondence.

STOCKHOLM, WIS., Apr. 13, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my first letter to the Corner. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for fourteen years, and I hav read the Corner ever since I could read. I am nine years old. I was born in this place. It is situated on the Mississippi river, but as the river is about three miles wide here it is called Lake Pepin. We are all Swedish people with the exception of six families. We hav a graded school here and I am in the higher department. I study reading, arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, and spelling. The principal is a gentleman, by name Mr. Harrison Lowater, and the primary teacher is a Swedish young lady who livs in this place.

Perhaps my letter is long enough for the first time, so I will close with love to you and all the little friends of the Corner. I am, Your Liberal friend,

EVALD B. STROMBERG.

P.S.—Please accept this drawing.

E. B. S.

[Thanks, Evald, for the letter, card, and drawing. You may be some day a celebrated artist. We are proud of our little Swedish boy, and we feel sure he will grow up a true American.—ED. C. C.]

HOOPESTON, ILL., Apr. 12, 1892.

MY DEAR AUNT SUSIE: It has been several years since I addressed you and asked permission to call you "aunt," which you granted. I hav just been reading the Corner of this week, and will say it is splendid, as usual. I especially admire your poem, "Common Good," and wish that I were able to write one as good.

There are few Liberals around here, or rather there are plenty but they will not say so. There is one very firm Freethinker, a friend of ours, living a few miles from Hoopeston, just in the edge of the state of Indiana. He printed some passages from the Bible that contradicted themselvs and sent them to a number of families, and then some one wrote a piece and put it in the paper, attacking him for publishing the passages, and when he went to reply they would not publish his reply. It was too strong for them. That is the way with the Christians. They won't hav investigation.

We hav just received one of Miss Gardener's books, "A Thoughtless Yes." It is splendid. We hav ordered several more books, which hav not arrived yet.

Just now we are having lovely weather, and Mother Earth is donning her new green dress.

Well, for fear of making my letter too long, I will close.

Wishing you success in all your undertakings, I remain,

Yours for truth and right,

IDA L. JOHNSON.

P.S.—Papa, mamma, and my sister join with me in sending love and kind regards. If this is too long for the Corner, please write to me yourself. IDA.

[It givs the editor of the Corner much pleasure to hear from her niece Ida, and she trusts it may not be long before she writes again.—ED. C. C.]

JOPLIN, Mo., Apr. 10, 292.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav not written to the Corner for so long I expect you hav forgotten me. This is my second letter to the Corner. I am going to school now. I am in the fourth reader. I study reading, arithmetic, writing, geography, language, and spelling. I am ten years old. My teacher's name is Miss Nora Lichliter. I am reading Dickens's Child's History of England at night. I think it is very interesting. It is wonderful to think how ignorant the people were when they had nothing but the church to educate them. They didn't even know enough to be just. Religion and cruelty went hand in hand. It was just war after war—nothing but blood, beheading, hanging, drawing and quartering, and Christianity. And just to think how badly they treated the poor Jews.

I think the story of the Maid of Orleans a very interesting story. And it shows how far anybody can go stimulated by superstition. I am nearly through, and I am going to read the whole book through again so that I can understand it well. To-day is Sunday, and I hav been helping papa set out trees all day. We liv in the western part of Joplin in sight of the zinc works. And there is also a big white-lead works here. I will tell all about them in my next letter if you think it would be interesting for the Corner. I hav a little brother three years old; his name is Robert G. Ingersoll, and when anyone asks him what his name is he says, "Wobert Ineroll—hell on the preachers." I hav one sister five years old named Elmina Wood, and her great argument against the God idea is that there could not be anything above because there is no ground up there, nothing but clouds.

Miss Krekel was here and gave us three lectures, and I went to two of them, but I could not go to the other one. I think she is a splendid talker and I love to hear her very well. Well, as my letter is getting too long I will bring it to a close. I hope this letter will not find its way to the wastebasket.

With best wishes to yourself and to the Corner, and long life to Watson Heston and the cartoons and the grand old TRUTH SEEKER and all the friends of the Corner, I am, Your Liberal friend,

LENA F. WOOD.

[We hope you never will forget the Corner, where we all hav such pleasant times.—ED. C. C.]

ONLY 2 CENTS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

There has just been published for general circulation a most interesting pamphlet, containing a good likeness of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll and articles from the following well-known writers: R. G. Ingersoll, Thaddeus B. Wakeman, B. F. Underwood, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Helen H. Gardener, Rev. Henry Frank, Nelly Booth Simmons, A. B. Bradford, Parker Pillsbury, Lucy N. Colman, Capt. R. C. Adams, Prof. A. L. Rawson, Lyman C. Howe, Susan H. Wixon, Allen Pringle, Wm. Emmette Coleman, Harry Hoover, Mrs. M. A. Freeman, Sara Underwood, Rev. J. C. Grumbine, J. J. McCabe, Lydia R. Chase, Henry M. Taber, J. C. Watkins, Dr. Edward Montgomery, Emma Rood Tuttle, Dr. Juliet Severance, Hudson Tuttle, E. C. Walker, Judge C. B. Waite, Dyer D. Lum, Voltairine de Cleyre, Lewis G. Janes and Dr. Richard Hodgson.

The publication will be forwarded to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of an American two-cent postage stamp.

Address FREETHINKERS' MAGAZINE, Buffalo, N. Y.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Prometheus, A Poem. "It is crammed with life, thought, and profound emotion, poured forth, it seems to me, with extraordinary beauty."—[Dr. Henry W. Bellows. Price, $1.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By B. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

News of the Week.

BISMARCK says that drinking is decreasing in Germany.

THE Protestant Alliance of Great Britain has petitioned for a government investigation of convents.

JESUITS and other Catholics denounce the prohibition of a Jesuit conference at Dortmund, Prussia, as religious persecution.

MAY DAY is awaited with anxiety in Europe, on account of the labor demonstrations which are held on it, and which promis this year to be unusually violent.

IN England the movement to abolish landlordism, by taking possession of game parks and all large estates and dividing them among small holders, is assuming vast proportions.

THE Kreuz-Zeitung of Germany continues to publish vague stories of Jewish "ritual murders"—that is, sacrifices of Christian children in religious rites—in far-off neighborhoods.

MISS WILCOX has left Mt. St. Joseph's convent at Hartford, Conn., and thrown off her vows. It is said that she was persecuted by the mother superior, through jealousy that Miss Wilcox's influence with the bishop was equal to her own.

VINCENZO LIBERTINO has been convicted in a New York court of practicing medicin without being duly qualified. He said, "I hav supernatural powers," but Counsel Purrington for the county Medical Society called him "an arrant quack," and he was fined $100.

CATHOLICS continue to protest against unfair discrimination by Commissioner Morgan of the Indian schools. The mother superior of St. Peter's mission, Mont., complains that she has been reduced to $1 per month per pupil, while Protestant missions get $17.

IF universal suffrage is not given the Belgian workingmen they may rise in insurrection. France and Germany each keep troops at the Belgian frontier to take advantage of rebellion and by marching in and putting it down perhaps acquire possession of the country.

DISCONTENT and desperation prevail in Russia. Nihilists are improving the opportunity. All kinds of land reforms are broached. Some reformers advocate the single tax; some, division of land and inalienable settlement of it on the peasant families severally by primogeniture.

EMPEROR WILLIAM says that all nations should coöperate in punishing Anarchists, suppressing their press, and returning refugees. He proposes an international conference to this end, adding that combination in this work will strengthen good understanding and amity among the powers.

A CHOIRMASTER in Peterhof parish, Russia, had been growing more and more fanatical in church work, and had told his wife that he had committed the unpardonable sin. One night he went crazy and chopped his wife into small pieces with an ax and put the pieces in the stove, and drowned his three children.

CATHOLIC priests hav won the favor of the king of Dahomey, says a report, "by teaching the people the duty of submission to the king." The people were already so submissiv that he is able to sacrifice, of them and captivs of war, one thousand at each of his annual religious celebrations. Statues of the twelve Apostles hav been set up in his court.

CATHOLICS in France complain of "scandalous demonstrations by Freethinkers in the houses of God," which from Freethinking Paris are spreading to the provinces. During a recent sermon on the social question by the archbishop in the cathedral at Nancy, several "Freethinking interlopers" took offense and rose and threw chairs about, breaking chandeliers and injuring five persons.

DEEMING, the Australian criminal whose murders of women form such a sensational case, when imprisoned said, "What does it matter, if one has always led a good religious life?" He has talked with his chaplain on religious subjects considerably. However, he lately remarked that he did not care much for religion, as the woman who got him into trouble by her unfaithfulness (Miss Mather) was always reading her prayer-book.

AT the Vatican extraordinary importance is being given to the pope's episcopal jubilee next year. The central organizing committee has already received notices of thousands of gifts to be sent. To collect all the donations three hundred committees hav been formed in all parts of Christendom. It is believed that the presents will equal those made at his priestly jubilee, when they amounted to $8,000,000 in cash and $20,000,000 in other presents.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final RE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, orifiam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

LIQUOR DRINKING

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP. DARWINISM. DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION. JESUS NOT PERFECT. UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 346 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Brnno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlangh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitntes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

THE superstitious are in society what poltroons are in the army—they both feel and excite causeless terror.—Voltaire.

YOU can hardly convince a man of an error in a lifetime, but must content yourself with the reflection that the progress of science is slow.—Thoreau.

IN wisdom is to be found every work without exception. . . . Although thou wert the greatest of all offenders, thou shalt be able to cross the gulf of sin with the bark of wisdom.—Bhagvat-Geeta.

ONE of the first things that excites distrust in the New Testament is the discovery that all the prophecies claimed as referring to Christ are found to be uttered about people or events of the times in which the writer lived, and that the application of them to Christ is either fraudulent or the use of an excessiv poetic license.—Adams.

AT length the old dragon is dying, and some of us hav taken advantage of his moribund weakness to try to turn the world back to the place it occupied when Christianity first darkened and cursed it. Two thousand years hav been lost to the world! Millions of human beings hav existed in ignorance and misery whose lot should hav been enlightenment and happiness.—Saladin.

ALL the cruelties in the Old Testament are absolute mercies compared with the hell of the New Testament. In the Old Testament God stops with the grave. He seems to hav been satisfied when he saw his enemies dead, when he saw their flesh rotting in the open air, or in the beaks of birds, or in the teeth of wild beasts. But in the New Testament, vengeance does not stop with the grave. It begins there, and stops never.—Ingersoll.

WONDERFUL to depart!
Wonderful to be here!
The heart, to jet the all-alike and innocent blood!
To breathe the air, how delicious!
To speak—to walk—to seize something by the hand!
To prepare for sleep, for bed, to look on my rose-color'd flesh!
To be conscious of my body, so satisfied, so large!
To be this incredible God I am!
To hav gone forth among other Gods, these men and women I love.
—Walt Whitman.

ALL the well-known physiological or psychological differences, which in all ages hav been brought forward as proofs of the existence of an insuperable gulf between men and animals, hav appeared on closer investigation to be either non-existent, or else to hav but a relativ instead of an absolute value. It has become an axiom among all empirical psychologists and all students of human nature who judge by experience, that the highest mental capabilities of man begin to germinate in very inferior regions, and that the mental activities, abilities, feelings, and tendencies of man appear in their primary forms in the animal soul to an almost incredible extent. . . . Who is not acquainted with the wonderful economy existing among the communities of ants, bees, and termites? Who has not read about the canine communities in the North American prairies? or about those political and social habits of the ants which sound so fabulous, but none the less exist in reality—how the ants fight regular battles, undertake marauding expeditions, bring home slaves and train them in their service, keep milchcows in their extensiv and well-appointed dwellings, how they practice agriculture, and so on?—Buchner.

THE honey bees
. . . By rule in nature, teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They hav a king, and officers of sorts:
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home;
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad;
Others, like soldiers, armèd in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor;
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold;
The civil citizens kneading up the honey;
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate;
The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer—
That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrariously:
As many arrows, loosèd several ways,
Fly to one mark;
As many several ways meet in one town;
As many fresh streams run in one self sea:
As many lines close in the dial's center;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. —Shakspere.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—THE STRAIGHT: so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—THE JUST.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

CONTENTS:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Cooperation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

FITS—All Fits stopped free by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. No fits after first day's use. Marvelous cures. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free to Fit cases. Send to Dr. Kline, 931 Arch st., Phila., Pa.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

By WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - - 40 cents.

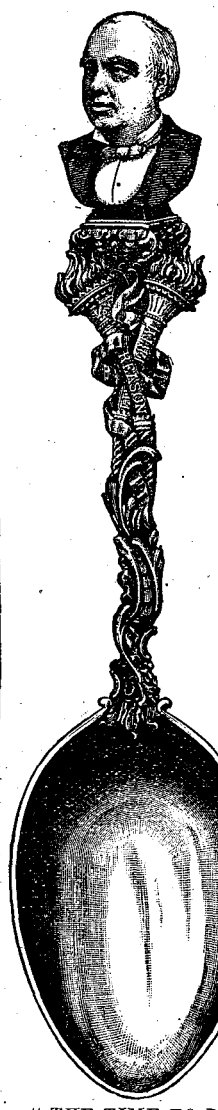
The Proposed

POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.

In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.

By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.

Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.



Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The

Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR.

THE KING OF SPOONS
IN HONOR OF
THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christmas, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3. Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW," and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

WATER OF LIFE
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY, No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.
And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

INSPIRED AUTHORITY AGAINST THE RESURRECTION.—For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they hav all one breath; so that a man hath no preëminence above a beast: for all is vanity. For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything, neither hav they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten.—Eccles. iii, 19; ix, v.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE

LOGIC OF DEATH,

—OR,—

Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

THE

LOGIC OF LIFE,

—DEDUCED FROM—

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT

By J. G. HOLYOAKE. Price, 5 cents

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - - 50 cents.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

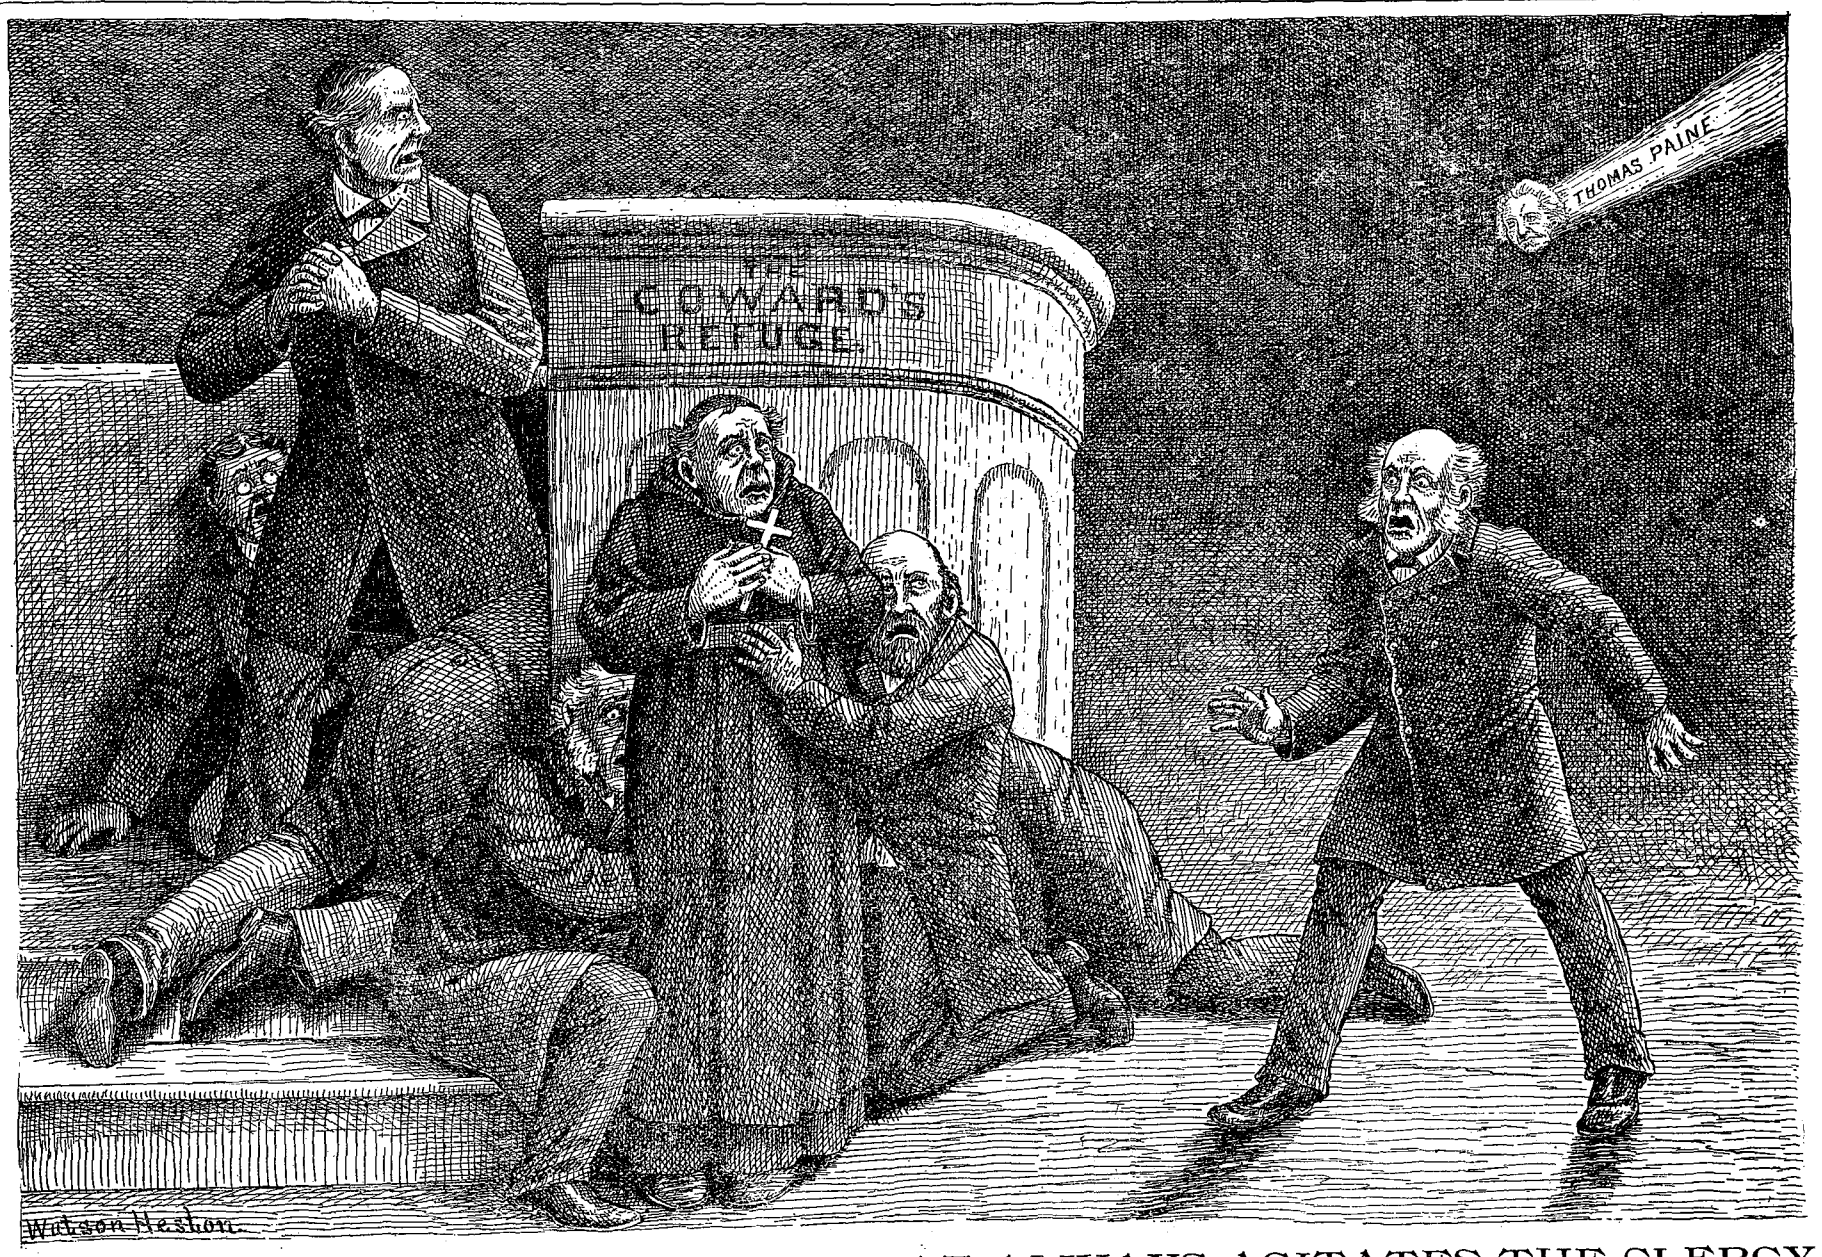
By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO?

SEND AND SEE!



Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 19. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 7, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

AN APPARITION (OR LUMINARY) THAT ALWAYS AGITATES THE CLERGY.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskeryille, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,
Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity. "That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price. - - - - - - 10 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politician; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH,

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 19. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 7, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - - MAY 7, 1892.

ACTION OF THE World's Columbian Commission

AT ITS SESSION HELD IN CHICAGO APRIL 6, 1892,

IN REGARD TO

PETITIONS, ETC., FOR CLOSING THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION ON SUNDAY.

OFFICE OF SECRETARY WORLD'S COLUMBIAN COMMISSION.
CHICAGO, ILL., April 14, 1892.

The World's Columbian Commission, on the first day of its sixth session held in the city of Chicago on Wednesday, April 6, 1892, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the second day of the next session of the commission be set apart for the hearing of all persons who desire to be heard on the subject of closing or opening the gates of the Exposition on Sunday."

The World's Columbian commission at the same session adopted a resolution providing that the next session of the commission shall convene in this city on Oct. 5, 1892, so that the second day of the next session of the commission, referred to in the above resolution, will be Thursday, Oct. 6, 1892.

In the meanwhile all petitions, memorials, communications, etc., in regard to the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday, received at the office of the secretary of the World's Columbian commission, will be promptly acknowledged whenever the party forwarding said petitions will definitly designate to whom they desire the acknowledgments made, and all such petitions will be properly filed and a record kept of same, showing the date of reception, from whom received, and from what state, and the total number of signatures to said petitions, and a copy of this record will be submitted to the commission by the secretary on the first day of its next session, Oct. 5, 1892, and the hearing above referred to will be given by the commission, in accordance with above resolution, on Thursday, Oct. 6, 1892. JNO. T. DICKINSON, Secretary.

We hope that the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER will make an earnest effort between now and October to send in thousands of names against Sunday closing of the Fair. All having petitions in hand should send them in not later than September 10th, so that they may be properly filed. Send them to John T. Dickinson, secretary of the World's Columbian commission, Rand-McNally building, Chicago, Ill.

Send also to Mr. Dickinson all the editorial protests in local journals against Sunday closing possible. Send the papers folded with the article outside, heavily marked.

Can Freethinkers Organize?

Some time last February, referring to Henry Frank's attempt to build up the Society of Human Progress, the Sun said, in answer to a letter from Mr. Frank: "After a few meetings the enterprise of our correspondent will go into liquidation and he will disappear from such notice as he now courts." The reason the Sun gave for so thinking is that, in its opinion, Mr. Frank's system, so far as he has one, is a philosophy rather than a religion, because based on science, and it holds that "whoever is looking for science to explain the problem of existence looks in vain. It can go no further than man's capacity for knowledge, and that is limited within a range infinitesimally small. Outside of these bounds he must see, if he can see at all, with the eye of faith; or he must picture the unknowable regions beyond with his feeble imagination. All the science of all the ages has barely scraped the surface of knowledge, and it can never get much deeper relativly. A religion, accordingly, which has no other foundation than science, is built on the sand. If mere ethical principles are its basis, it rests on the experience and conviction of men only. If it is built up from the imagination, it has no substantial corner-stone."

Mr. Frank's society, it will be remembered, was organized to take the place of Mr. H. O. Pentecost's Sunday evening meeting, which that gentleman had been obliged to discontinue because of lack of support. The business part of the movement was attended to by Mr. F. C. Leubuscher, who ran the Twentieth Century after Mr. Pentecost practically withdrew to practice law.

Considering the question raised by the Sun, whether science afforded sufficient basis for such an organization as Mr. Frank proposed, we raised another question, Can Freethinkers organize? and cataloged the successes and failures with which we are conversant. The question to be helped toward settlement by Mr. Frank's effort we considered to be, "Are the qualities of mind which make Freethinkers of so positivly negativ a character that cooperation is impossible?" And concerning those who attended the meetings of the new society we inquired: "Will they take more interest in them than in any other entertainment provided by private enterprise? Will they support them—pay for them? Would they help build a hall, or provide reading-rooms or recreation-rooms? Will they take any interest in the society beyond the interest of amusing themselvs for an evening? Will they make it to themselvs what the church is to the devotee?"

It is not yet time to finally answer the first query in the affirmativ, but the latter series can be answered negativly. The society has practically gone into liquidation, as the Sun said it would after a few weeks. Mr. Frank withdrew a month or more ago because of lack of support and a falling off in the attendance. He has resumed the business which he proposed to giv up had the Freethinkers wanted him badly enough to support him. The society still exists and will meet again next October, but its permanence is problematical and depends upon the efforts and cash of two or three persons.

And not only has Mr. Frank's attempt failed, but the Twentieth Century, with which he was allied, has passed into other hands, through sale. Mr. Pentecost and Mr. Leubuscher will practice law. During its existence the Twentieth Century has been known as an Anarchist journal, though Mr. Pentecost's most popular lectures were the expression of his Freethought ideas. But the attempt to make it self-supporting has cost its generous backer—generally supposed to be Miss Helen Weston—a good many thousands of dollars. It is now to be a general objector to all things established. In the words of its new editor, it will "uncover the festering evils that underlie the surface of civilized society," and "help make men discontented, aye, sourly, morbidly discontented, with things as they are!"

The failure of the society to do what its promoters set out to do, and the sale of the paper back of it, is another fact for those who maintain that there is not sufficient incentiv in the love of humanity and devotion to science and reason to urge men and women to work steadfastly and continuously, when sacrifices and effort as well as words are demanded. Quoting our review of the previous failures in effecting solid organization the Independent said: "These important admissions come from the head and front of the Infidel element. They show that there is no common bond between Freethinkers strong enough to unite them in a firm, aggressiv movement. They disbelieve and do what they can as individuals to induce others to disbelieve; but they hav no impulse in the love of their kind, which is their chief creed, to lead them to united effort, to self-sacrifice for their fellow-men."

Having in mind the failures recorded, we are disposed to consider this criticism more seriously than the general Christian criticism of Freethinkers is worth. We can learn something even from an enemy. We desire to see it disproved, and still believe it will be, even in New York. There are several reasons, plain to us, for Mr. Frank's failure. The great cost of the meetings and the extravagant ideals of the lecturer deterred some. Mr. Frank desired three thousand dollars per annum, which is two or three times the income of most of his supporters. This was for nine months' speaking and what we may call "parish work." The other expenses made the cost average nearly five hundred dollars per month. The society fixed its dues at one dollar per month, which is reasonable, but it has not been incorporated and its secretary never made any systematic effort to keep the work in shape. The business meetings were molded by two or three, and people placed in the board of trustees who could not possibly aid the society by work, and were totally indisposed to giv cash. Again, and this of itself relieves Freethought of the Independent's criticism, the society, though nominally a Freethought movement, had a more metaphysical than Freethought basis. Mr. Frank is a Pantheist as well as Secularist. In his letter to the Sun, reprinted in these columns, he was nonunderstandable from a rationalistic standpoint, and in his subsequent controversy with Mr. Pentecost in the Twentieth Century he developed a mysticism almost oriental in its unintelligibility to those who imagin words hav a definit meaning. So it will be seen that there are many reasons why this particular failure should not be charged against Freethought.

But even if the statement of the Independent be true, it only points out a phase of human development which must be as natural as slavishness to superstition seemingly is. And if it be true, it also affords the strongest of reasons why individual effort to rid the world of this same superstition should be persistent and strenuous. If organizations fail individuals must not. Let us remember that physical slavery was not abolished by organized bodies but by the work of a few heroic men and women. So shall mental slavery cease, by the same sort of work, though every attempt to organize be recorded as a failure. But this we do not think will be. The Society of Human Progress, even though it has lost its founders, may go on and flourish; if not, perhaps the very next attempt will be a success. At any rate, there should be no slackening of effort.

Christians Loving One Another.

A short time since, we made mention of the fact that more of the Seventh Day Adventists of Tennessee were to be arrested by their fellow-Christians for laboring on Sunday. A letter from one of the persecuted ones living at Springville to an officer of their organization at Battle Creek givs the particulars.

One of the evangelical Christians was at the county seat on business, and meeting the state's attorney was asked if he lived in the Advent community. Answering affirmativly, the attorney asked him if the Adventists kept up their Sunday work. This question was also answered in the affirmativ, the man adding that none of them would deny it. Then the attorney requested him to giv him the names of five of the leading church-members, which he did. The attorney said he had heard the circuit judge, Judge Swiggart, say he was going to put a stop to that Sunday desecration. The five warrants were issued, and are in the sheriff's hands. But he has understood that the Adventists will not giv bonds, and so will wait until court sits, which will be the fourth Monday in May. He knows the Adventists will not run away, choosing rather to suffer for opinion's sake, and by letting them alone till wanted he saves the county the price of their board. The piety of these evangelical Christians of Tennessee, it seems, is equaled by their shrewd penuriousness.

The officer to whom this letter from Tennessee was written is in possession of others from different localities in his own state, stating that the Adventists are being threatened with arrest for working on Sunday; and of still other communications from all parts of the country "showing the rapid advancement in public sentiment toward universal Sunday laws that will compel all to rest on that day."

The Rev. Mr. Dixon's Charges.

The. Rev. Mr. Dixon, of Brooklyn, has filed his answer in Colonel Ingersoll's suit against him for damages for having said that a few years ago Mr. Ingersoll was the representativ of the venders of obscene literature. Mr. Dixon preaches at the Hanson place Baptist church.

Mr. Dixon's attorneys in support of his charge allege that in 1878 the name of R. G. Ingersoll headed a petition to Congress of fifty thousand names praying for the repeal of the "Comstock laws," which forbid the importation of obscene literature into this country; that Colonel Ingersoll represented the dealers in obscene literature in their attempts to hav these laws repealed; that at the convention of the National Liberal League in Cincinnati, in 1879, Colonel Ingersoll made an address in which he attacked the postal laws of the United States, especially the laws against mailing obscene literature, and that the natural and necessary effect of the position and acts of the plaintiff was to pollute the minds of the young of this generation. It is also charged in the answer that Colonel Ingersoll wrote an introduction to a book by Van Buren Denslow which, it is alleged, attempted to prove that it is proper to be unchaste.

When interviewed about this Colonel Ingersoll had not seen the answers, but to the reporter's statement that its substance is as herein stated Mr. Ingersoll said that it was manifestly absurd; and from our own personal knowledge of the events of the period named we should say very emphatically that the colonel is right.

In the first place, the Comstock laws which that petition asks to hav repealed, or materially modified, do not forbid the importation of obscene literature. Second, Colonel Ingersoll never represented any dealers in such literature. Third, he did not even represent the petitioners who wanted the Comstock laws repealed or modified. Fourth, Colonel Ingersoll did not attack the postal laws at the League congress in 1879, nor at any other time, but upheld them so far as obscene literature is concerned; and at the League congress he only condemned their abuse as in the case of Mr. Bennett, the founder of THE TRUTH SEEKER. These are the resolutions of the League on the subject in 1879:

"Resolved, That we are in favor of such postal laws as will allow the free transportation through the mails of the United States of all books, pamphlets, and papers, irrespectiv of the religious, irreligious, political, and scientific views they may contain, so that the literature of science may be placed upon an equality with that of superstition.

"Resolved, That we are utterly opposed to the dissemination, through the mails or by any other means, of obscene literature, whether 'inspired' or uninspired, and hold in measureless contempt its authors and disseminators.

"Resolved, That we call upon the Christian world to expunge from the so-called 'sacred' Bible every passage that cannot be read without covering the cheek of modesty with the blush of shame; and until such passages are expunged, we demand that the laws against the dissemination of obscene literature be impartially enforced."

The last allegation is a pretty fair joke on Mr. Van Buren Denslow, who will probably enjoy it heartily. Altogether, Mr. Dixon's case lacks in an eminent degree the essential element of strength. In this case innocence on the part of the plaintiff would seem to be a perfect shield.

A Benefit Fund for Mr. Heywood.

On the 13th day of May Mr. E. H. Heywood will hav served the term of his two years' sentence, inflicted under the Comstock postal laws. He will then return to a home that is heavily in debt from taxes and mortgage interest that hav accumulated unpaid during his absence, and to a family that has patiently borne much deprivation of ordinary comforts during his incarceration. Even those who deprecate Mr. Heywood's method of reform recognize his earnestness of purpose and his steadfast maintenance of the principles of liberty as he understands them. Those who desire to see him relieved of the oppressiv burden of debt which threatens to greet him on his liberation, and who wish that he might be afforded a fair chance to retrieve his fortunes, are invited to subscribe to a benefit fund that should be immediately available to him on May 13th. The National Defense Association invites contributions to this fund, and urges that all contributions be promptly sent to the secretary, E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, New York. Subscriptions will be acknowledged by letter or in the Liberal press, as the subscribers prefer. The public method helps to encourage others. The secretary can send free to any inquirer, in pamphlet form, a letter from Mr. Julian Hawthorne "In Behalf of Personal Liberty," relating to the cause of Mr. Heywood's imprisonment. Already $60 has been pledged, and to render some fair appreciation of Mr. Heywood's services to liberty (the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church) the Association thinks his friends ought to raise about $658, or one dollar per day for each day he has "served his country and his cause."

The Kind of Men in the Albany Legislature.

Debate on the new legislativ apportionment bill. The Sun's report:

"Cheese it," said Mr. "Dry Dollar Sullivan" (Tammany).

"You hav no rules, no decency, no self-respect, no anything," said General Husted (New York Central Railroad Republican), jumping up and down with great rapidity in his excitement.

"I move the gentleman take the platform," said Dry Dollar Sullivan.

"Are we to hav no justice? I move to adjourn," said General Husted.

Dry Dollar Sullivan jumped around, too. He was enjoying it.

"I move the gentleman gets on the platform and givs us a song and dance," he said.

The Republicans stood up and yelled. The Democrats stood up and yelled. Everybody howled.

Mr. Bush stepped from his seat across the aisle to quiet General Husted. General Husted shook his fist in Mr. Bush's face.

"That's an assault," said Dry Dollar Sullivan.

"I call on the sergeant-at-arms," said O'Connor, of Brooklyn.

"I don't care a damn for the sergeant-at-arms. There are others here who will stand by me. I move to adjourn," said General Husted.

The Republicans stood up and advanced toward the Democrats. It looked like a punching match and the page-boys danced with expectant glee.

"Sit down," said the speaker.

"I supposed I was in a body of gentlemen, not of hogs," said General Husted.

"I move the sergeant-at-arms seat him," said O'Connor.

The Hon. Philip Wissig thought there was going to be a fight and left his seat in the rear row to come down in the center aisle and pitch in.

General Husted went down in the aisle and shook his fist at the speaker. O'Connor, who is also a little man, but accustomed to fighting, went from his seat into the aisle to tackle General Husted.

"You damned little manikin," said O'Connor to Husted, "get back to your seat or I will kick you."

"You can't bulldoze me," said Husted to O'Connor.

"Go on, Charley, and call the roll," said O'Connor to the clerk. "Go back to your seat or I'll kick the stomach out of you," said O'Connor to Husted.

"Take your own seat," said Husted to O'Connor.

Everybody yelled when the final vote was taken. Deyo took the floor and tried to make a speech, while the speaker pounded like a boiler factory.

"This is the work of Senator Hill, whose health is the toast of Connecticut horsethieves and ballot-stuffers," said Deyo.

Mr. Sulzer yelled for the sergeant-at-arms.

President Gilford of the State Grange said: "This looks like gag-rule, and I want you to remember that the voice of the people is the voice of God, and you will be turned out."

Is it any wonder that Freedom of Worship bills are passed, and that the title of assemblyman is a synonym for rowdy?

When addressing the Congressional committee about the World's Fair, Director-General Davis told them that the Fair ought certainly to be open on Sunday. Colonel Davis declared, for one thing, that the brewers and distillers would be willing to pay a large bonus to hav the Fair gates closed on Sunday, in anticipation of a heavy trade at the liquor saloons throughout the city.

Mayor Grant has appointed William S. Andrews, the eldest son of Stephen Pearl Andrews, to be excise commissioner for three years from the 1st of May. It is a matter for surprise that Tammany Hall wants one honest and capable man in office. Mr. Andrews has served one term in the same office before, and developed more common sense in its administration than has been shown before or since. It is a tribute to him that all of the political papers speak well of him personally, though opposed to him in politics.

In the West.

News and Notes.

Eau Claire is one of the brightest and busiest points in Wisconsin. I leave Chicago about midnight Thursday and arrive there at noon, Friday, April 22d. It is brilliant weather. The springtime begins to show its glory now in these northern latitudes. It is warm, effulgent, beautiful, with a little dash of winter in the musical breezes and glittering sky. The innumerable logs are floating down the stream. The mighty mills are humming and gather with iron jaws the rolling masses, while millions still sweep on to the Mississippi. It is an animating scene which greets the eye where the Eau Claire and the Chippewa unite their waters. Through fire and flood the city has grown until at present its population numbers twenty thousand. It has evidently before it a career of manifold prosperity. It has varied sources of wealth—forests, rivers, factories, good farms, railroads, and a commanding position for trade.

There are many churches here. Almost every denomination is represented. There is, however, a decided Liberal spirit in the community. No Freethought lectures hav been given here before, but THE TRUTH SEEKER and other Liberal journals hav greatly advanced the cause, so that the reception given to the lectures was beyond expectation. I gave two lectures and about five hundred were present both nights. The Unitarians here are pretty broad and open, for I was invited to giv a lecture on Sunday in their church; I could not remain, however, for I was booked for Chicago Sunday evening.

I shall arrange for a series of lectures at Eau Claire and vicinity later on.

The clergymen were invited to debate, but none responded. On the second night, however, a Young Men's Christian Association young man endeavored to answer the lecture. He said, however, that he must be armed and equipped for the battle. He did not want to come at me with an empty blunderbuss. He must load it first. He therefore proceeded to get loaded by at once falling upon his knees and praying to the Lord. It was somewhat cheeky, I must confess. I gave him the platform for debate, not for a prayer-meeting. He was to wrestle with me, not with the Lord. However, he and the Lord had it for about five minutes, while the audience evidently enjoyed the unexpected circus. After getting the Lord upon his side he then proceeded to demolish me. His arguments were of the usual caliber. He had been an "Infidel," he had been drunk, he had lain in the gutter, and Jesus had saved him. I replied that I had never got drunk, and had never lain in the gutter, and therefore his argument did not apply. An "Infidel" who gets drunk and lies in the gutter may be converted to Jesus, but those are the only "Infidels" who ever are. We do not, however, recognize such men as Infidels. They are not Freethinkers, but simply "loose thinkers" who hav neither intellectual nor moral backbone. If the "love of Jesus" can save these poor devils from the gutter, all right. It is simply homeopathic treatment. It is one excitement driving out another. As Sam Jones confesses, the revival ecstasy takes the place of the whisky-bottle. Essentially both are "drunks." That is why so many topers profess religion and get sober. They keep physically sober, but make up by being spiritually intoxicated. My "prayer-loaded" opponent also asserted that I misquoted scripture. I had said, "Jonah and the whale." Now, there was no whale about it; it was a "great fish." Nowhere in the Bible was it called a whale.

I referred the "follower of Jesus" to the words of his own master. He said that Jonah was "three days and three nights in the whale's belly." Jesus ought to know. If he says it was a whale, a whale it must be, and poor Jonah must take the consequences, and theologians also. They cannot go back on the commentaries of Jesus himself.

This is all that the orthodox camp endeavored to do. They fired this Young Men's Christian Association young man at me and he "fired" himself. He suddenly disappeared. He had nothing to say after the text of Jesus was quoted. I guess he went home to study the Bible.

Eau Claire has given a generous welcome. At the home of Captain Sherman and his pleasant family there is the atmosphere of Liberal and cultivated thought. Captain Sherman came to this place about forty years ago when there was scarcely a house where the city now stands. He was in the cavalry service during the war. He has been from the start a prominent business man. He has built some of the largest lumber mills in the state. He is Liberal and progressiv every way. Mrs. Sherman is equally a pioneer, broad-minded and courageous. Mark Sherman, the captain's brother, is most tremendously in earnest. He does not believe in any compromise. He is at the front every time.

H. O. Jackson, with whom I corresponded in regard to coming here, is a determined worker, who collected the "sinews of war," and rallied our forces with enthusiastic spirit. He is an artist and inventor, and has a future of promis. He has both the genius of youth and of reform, and the inspirations of art.

On Saturday morning, with Mark Sherman, I visited some of the great mills of this place, where hundreds of thousands of feet of lumber are turned out every day. It is a kind of magic scene these vast hives of industry present. An engin of a thousand horse-power flings its mighty throbs into the immense structure. The iron teeth of the mill, like those of some great monster, grasp the logs and force them along the steely highway to the swift embrace of the saw, which, almost in the twinkling of an eye, makes the huge lumber into boards, which are carried along by the ponderous and accurate machinery, and trimmed for use; are borne again into the river, and, constructed into rafts, float down to the Mississippi and the markets of the world. In this picture are seen the wonderful activities and skill of to-day as compared with the slow processes of half a century ago.

Eau Claire has been a most interesting place. Its business men are in the main Liberal, and I made many pleasant acquaintances among them. I hav not had better audiences anywhere, or more congenial allies. I was pleased to meet with the veteran campaigner and contributor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, C. L. James. He is always bound to be in the pioneer service, and when a reform becomes popular he lets others work for it while he presses on and takes the unpopular side still. He is bound to keep on the picket line.

Of course Chicago is the goal of all the pilgrims. Here is one of the wonders of the world.

The World's Fair is already open on Sunday. So much has been gained. Over five thousand people visited it the last Lord's day, and I don't think the Lord was hurt one bit. The admission is now twenty-five cents, and the Fair grounds are well worth seeing. Marvels begin to appear. The fishery building, for instance, which covers forty-one acres of ground, is wonderful in its architecture and adornments, although uncompleted.

I always hav a good time with Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Stevens. They hav a pleasant little home. On the same floor is the office of Dr. Bishop, my friend of the Spiritualistic faith, who, I am sorry to say, is at present an invalid, and was not able to join our social circle. I had the pleasure of meeting him. He rather hopes I will get beyond Materialism one of these days. I also enjoy the society of Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt. Mr. Hewitt is a Unitarian clergyman, radical and transcendental, and big enough in his ideas to take in even the Materialist. Of course I do not accept his Hegelian starting-point, and do not reach his mystical hights; but he thinks I will get there. I tell him I hav passed these cloudlands, so beautiful, so enchanting. They are in my past experience. If the Theosophic cycles are true, I may again wheel on the same round and see again the same visions. Mr. Hewitt exults in the fact that I hav written a religious hymn for a church-book, and that on Sunday last this hymn was sung at his own services. He thinks that I will come round to the transcendentalism of that hymn again. Well, that hymn seems like a far-off, dim, mystic music of the past. I think I hav exactly the same hope to-day, but I would not express it in the same form. I am a Materialist, however, and Materialism is to me the golden mean of all philosophies. It accepts fact and the poetry and rhythm of nature herself.

Stevens has the faculty of gathering a fine social element about him, and around his hospitable board gather choice spirits. A little sociable was held at his rooms previous to the lecture, and it was a very delightful affair. The friendly circle was of the best Liberal element of the city. Mr. Geo. L. Robertson, a whole-souled Liberal gentleman, is always at the front. Mrs. Robertson is one whose kindness of heart givs credit to our cause. Their bright children, George and Bertha, will never add to the ranks of orthodoxy. Mr. W. H. Harris and all his happy family are present, and with his flashing humor blends the aroma of art and romance. He knows how to catch and put on canvas the varying and exquisit colors of nature, especially the beauty of the flowers.

R. F. Bergh is one of the brightest Liberals in our Chicago constellation. Although out of town at the time of my arrival, he made special effort to attend the lectures and lend a hand. Judge Russel affiliates with the radical wing of the Unitarians, but he is a stanch Freethinker. He is the attorney who had the hardihood to tackle Romanish hierarchy in the suits brought against it by Stevens when secretary of the American Secular Union. Judge Russell, besides his legal learning, is considered one of the best mathematicians in the West, and in philosophical lore is not surpassed.

Dr. Charles Odell, Seymour Stedman, Albert Schaffner, and Attorney Lynford Geer are young men of promis in the business and professional life of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman, Mrs. Belle Crawford, Miss Ida Black, Miss Benheizer, and others help to make up the attractiv social and Liberal element of Chicago.

On Sunday morning I attended the meeting of the Society for Ethical Culture. Mr. M. M. Mangasarian is now the lecturer. He spoke Sunday upon "The Life of Buddha." It was an excellent discourse. Mr. Mangasarian has evidently a clear intellect, a philosophical insight, a scholarly genius, and a brave spirit. I like him. He is a fine orator. He is master of his subject, and holds the closest attention of his audience. His work in Chicago is becoming quite popular. The theater was nearly filled on Sunday morning.

I was pleased to meet Otis S. Favor, the treasurer of the Ethical Society and one of its main supporters. He is a prominent figure in the business and political affairs of Chicago. He is Stephens's employer, and Stephens says the e is no better man on earth.

Sunday evening I lecture in O'Neil's hall. A. D. O'Neil generously givs us the use of this hall. O'Neil is never behindhand in the Liberal cause. He is a right bower every time. You can "tie to him," as the Western folk say. He presided at the lecture, and in his jovial way made things smooth and bright for the Secular Pilgrim. Mr. Fred Brown opened with a magnificent rendition of the patriotic song, "America." This was followed by a beautiful duet on the piano and guitar by Mr. Brown and Mr. Hart. I then gave my lecture on "Spiritualism, Theosophy, and Infidelity." The hall was well filled. The listeners were generous and appreciativ.

Besides those already named and who were present, I must enumerate my good Episcopalian friend, Mrs. O'Neil. Dr. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Baker. William Williams, formerly county commissioner, and a live Liberal man, not afraid to combat the church. Mr. J. K. Magie, in the reform ranks, now resident at Washington, D. C.—but it may be that he will represent Illinois as Congressman at large. He would make an honest politician, I guess. Frank Ruggles, of Bronson, well known the world over as a collector of old books. If anyone wants a rare copy of any book on any subject, from before Christ to the present age, Ruggles is the one to get it. I hav known him for years by correspondence, but this is the first time I hav met him face to face. W. A. Johnson, of Byron, Minn. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Snelson. The Raywalt brothers, and others.

The Liberal element of this imperial city, even if it is small in numbers, is splendid in spirit and hope.

I visit while here the enormous fruit warehouse of the Raywalt Brothers. It is wonderful the amount of business of this sort which is transacted at Chicago. From all parts of the world are brought the fruits—watermelons from the Canary island, lemons from the Mediterranean, carefully and elegantly packed with brilliant-tinted paper, as if they were jewels. Ths paper is chemically prepared and preserves the fruit for months. There is nothing like it in this country. Tomatoes are now as carefully selected and wrapped in paper separately as the finest peaches. Improvement is thus going constantly on. Bananas are ripened in big vaults below. A carload of these is received at this depot every day, in the fruit season. The freight on one consignment of watermelons to this firm from Missouri was $3,000. Do not the railroads get the lion's share? It costs $300 a month for the telegrams for this one establishment. This givs some idea not only of the extent, but the swiftness and accuracy, with which business is transacted in Chicago.

My friend Bergh is quite interested in the Dwight institution, which he thinks is a success. It is a purely materialistic and scientific method of curing drunkenness. Of course the Woman's Christian Temperance Union do not like this way. They want prayers, the love of Jesus, and coercion. Mr. Bergh tells me there were eighteen ministers at the institute last month. This is something of a comment on the profession. Surely if drunkenness is ever to be cured it must be cured in this way. It is a disease and must be so treated. The remedy must be a physical one. Mr. Bergh took a friend of former years who was in the last stages of this madness to Dwight. In two weeks the change was marvelous. He was in appearance a man again. All this will interest those who believe in human progress by human and natural means.

I enjoy the bright, lively hospitality of my artist friend Harris. Around his table there is a feast of reason and a flow of soul. A. D. O'Neil also cheers the heart with his Bible casuistry and genial wit, something like Father Tom. He studied one time, when the dew of youth was on him, for the orders of the church. Of course he has reminiscences of theological jokes, with the attainment of Secular wisdom. I find that Mrs. O'Neil does not accept the Episcopalian creed, although she likes the Episcopal church. But how can the church survive if the creed is dead? I do not believe the bright little children—Shirley and Rea O'Neil—will ever come into the shades of orthodoxy. As I bid them good-bye I see in their innocent eyes the sparkle of the Freethought dawn.

Good-bye to Chicago and the host of friends here. Whatever may happen, we look to the future, to progress, to golden days, to the triumphant march of humanity, the colors flying for Liberty and Fraternity.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Chicago, Ill., April 27, 1892.

Little Blasphemies.

What class of people does the Bible allow to flirt? The Bible says, "The widow's mite."

Jinks: "Does Dr. Fourthly practice what he preaches?" Filkins: "If you were his poor wife and had to hav his sermons rehearsed to you I guess you'd think so."

Some Reasons Why John C. Bundy Should Not Get $10,000.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT,

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK.

JOHN C. BUNDY, plaintiff, against THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, defendant. } Answer.

The defendant, for answer to the complaint in the above-entitled action, respectfully shows and alleges:

First, That said complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; and that upon the trial of this action the defendant will claim the benefit of this objection and defense in all respects as though the same had been interposed by a demurrer.

Second, The defendant admits the facts to be substantially as set forth in the first and second paragraphs of said complaint.

Third, The defendant says, upon information and belief, that the pretended libelous publication set forth in the third paragraph of said complaint was in fact and substance true.

Fourth, That by way of affirmativ defense this defendant avers that said publication was, under the circumstances and the purposes with which it was made, privileged, to wit, 1. That the said newspapers referred to in the first and second paragraphs of said complaint, to wit, the plaintiffs Religio-Philosophical Journal of Chicago, and the defendants TRUTH SEEKER of New York, were, and are, both weekly publications engaged in the public, free, and untrammeled discussion of philosophical, religious, and so-called "Spiritualistic phenomena," theories, and questions, by the aid of the inquiries and communications of correspondents and other means. That as such free and Liberal newspapers it was the practice and custom and understanding between them to publish communications from correspondents which should leave to them the free and untrammeled expression of their views, and for which said correspondents only should be responsible. That as such newspaper, THE TRUTH SEEKER, the defendant, received and published the said communication of said H. Wettstein, and the facts therein stated, as information received from him as one of its correspondents in the usual course of its business as a Liberal newspaper, and relevant to the subject treated, and proper to be generally known as an item, or items, of news, and without any malice or intent to injure the plaintiff. 2. That the said correspondent and the defendant were also privileged as to said communication in that they thereby after the manner of Liberal newspapers in good faith endeavored to disabuse the minds of credulous people of the erroneous information and belief to the effect that Abraham Lincoln was a Spiritualist, and to that end also properly characterized the conduct of the plaintiff in publishing the said erroneous information, and in supporting the same after its exposure.

Fifth, That in and by way of mitigation of damages the defendant avers, and alleges in that behalf each of the facts and allegations above set forth in the fourth paragraph of this answer, and adds thereto the following facts: to wit:

That the book referred to in said alleged libelous publication, as then "recently published," was the book entitled: "Was Abraham Lincoln a Spiritualist?" purporting in its title-page and preface to be the composition of Mrs. Nettie Colburn Maynard, a notorious Spiritualistic trance-medium, and whose reliability as to facts was affected in general belief unfavorably by that fact, as the defendant is informed and believes.

That said book being thus publicly vouched for, received little public notice, and little credence, until the same was publicly indorsed, and pretended confirmatory facts were purported to be brought forward in support of the same by the plaintiff and his said newspaper, by which and by other publications and means the said book was approved and was pressed upon the public by the plaintiff.

That the general drift, purpose and innuendo of said book was to answer its question, "Was Abraham Lincoln a Spiritualist?" in the affirmativ and to cause its readers and the public generally to so believe. That to that end it is pretended in said book that communications and revelations were made through said medium to President Lincoln from certain spirits, to wit, two female spirits named "Pinkie" and "Parnie," and a certain male spirit named "Wisdom," and sundry other spirits through the same and other mediums. That thereby it was inculcated that the subject of Spiritualistic "phenomena" was not simply a matter of curiosity, amusement, or inquiry to President Lincoln, but that he had personally investigated the same as a serious business, and had become convinced of the reality and reliability of the said and similar communications and of the truth of "Spiritualism," and that he was controled and guided in fact in his public business, duties, and career, not by his own good judgment and experience, but by spiritual communications received from said and other spirits through said Maynard and other mediums; and that thereby it is pretended, for the first time nearly thirty years after the fact, that the said president by and under said spirit control, issued the proclamation of Emancipation, planned the campaigns of the civil war with his generals or confirmed them when planned, and directed the principal events in that period of our country's history, and that finally his "martyrdom" was also by said means intimated to him, but in vain!

The defendant prays leave to read from said book upon the trial of this action portions thereof, too lengthy to be included in this pleading, but substantially in words or by innuendo sustaining the above and similar allegations, or insinuations to that effect, which the reader would be naturally induced by the language used to regard as true.

That the plaintiff in his own paper and by public statements indorsed and undertook to corroborate the said book, and such statements were copied and reported in other newspapers, for example, in one called the New York Tribune, published in the city of New York, which report is hereto annexed as Exhibit "A," and which forms a part of this pleading.

That as soon as the said book became publicly known, by reason chiefly of the approval of the plaintiff and said reports from his articles and interviews, the intimate friends and associates of the deceased President Lincoln, who knew the truth in regard to the said allegations of said book, publicly declared the same and all similar allegations to be false, to wit: among others, John G. Nicolay, the private secretary and intimate associate of said Lincoln during the period referred to in said book, in the newspaper known as the Chicago Daily News, on the 21st day of October, 1891, by means of an interview with him had at Washington, D. C., declared publicly and in the most decisiv terms, as the fact was, that all of the said and similar statements, insinuations, and innuendoes contained in said book were to his personal knowledge wholly untrue. That a copy of said statement of said Nicolay is hereunto annexed and marked Exhibit "B," and forms a part of this pleading.

That the said correspondent Wettstein had previously called the attention of the plaintiff publicly to the manifest unreliability of said pretended revelations to President Lincoln now first asserted after the death of those who could expose the same. That notwithstanding the said and other similar public statements brought to the knowledge of the plaintiff, as this defendant is informed and believes, showing the unreliability of said book, and that it was in effect a slander upon the intellect, judgment, and fame of said president, yet the plaintiff continued and has ever since continued his public approval of said book without any qualification whatever.

That the plaintiff, as is stated in said Wettstein's communication set forth in the complaint herein, had been accustomed in his said paper and otherwise to boast of his great skill, honesty, and perseverance in detecting and exposing "bogus Spiritualistic communications," and had proposed a law to be passed in the state of Illinois to punish criminally "Spiritualistic" frauds and impositions.

That therefore the said Wettstein in said communication set forth in the complaint, and which was made after he and others had publicly called attention to the unreliable nature of said book and after the said exposure by said Nicolay, characterized the upholders of said book including the plaintiff as the same deserved and as a natural and just indignation prompted. And the defendant upon information and belief avers that the plaintiff was not damaged thereby, and that his damages averred in said complaint should be accordingly mitigated to nothing. And in further mitigation of damages the defendant avers that the said correspondent of the defendant, Wettstein, was well known to the plaintiff, as this defendant is informed and believes, to be a reliable and a responsible man and fully able to respond for any damages the said communication might cause to the plaintiff, if any. That instead of thus holding the said Wettstein, who with the plaintiff is a resident of the state of Illinois, the plaintiff, out of malice and a wish to injure the defendant, has brought this action against the defendant in this state.

And in further mitigation of damages this defendant says that after the said publication set forth in said complaint, the said Wettstein published in the said TRUTH SEEKER with the defendant's approval a further call for any reasonable explanation of the delay of twenty-five years and upward in making the said allegations of Spiritualism in regard to President Lincoln. Which call was in reply to a letter of William Foster, Jr., one of the supporters of the plaintiff named therein, and of said book. But that no explanation was ever attempted. That said Wettstein offered upon said explanation to withdraw all of the charges and insinuations against the plaintiff made by him. That said call is hereunto annexed and is marked "C," and forms a part of this pleading.

And in further mitigation of damages this defendant avers upon information and belief that the religious character of the plaintiff was such that it and he could not be, and was not in fact, damaged by the publication alleged in said complaint to be libelous.

Wherefore the defendant prays that said complaint be dismissed with costs.

WAKEMAN & CAMPBELL,
Attorneys for the defendant, No. 93 Nassau street, New York city.

EXHIBIT A.

From New York Tribune, Oct. 20, 1891.

WAS PRESIDENT LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

CHICAGO, Oct. 19th (Special): In reference to the statement made by Mrs. Nettie Colburn, of White Plains, N. Y., published this morning, to the effect that President Lincoln was a Spiritualist, Colonel Bundy, of this city, editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal, said to-day: "There can be no question but that Mr. Lincoln sat in séances and repeatedly had mediums at the White House. I know positivly that through his investigations he became convinced of the continuity of life and of communication between the two worlds. Is it a fact, as has been stated, that Lincoln held séances during the winter of 1864–'65 with Charles Colchester and Charles Foster, the well-known mediums? Yes, it is a fact, and I am also able to say confidently that he held a séance with Miss Nettie Colburn. Mrs. Lincoln became a confirmed Spiritualist, and it is within my knowledge that after the death of her husband she spent several weeks at different times in St. Charles, Ill., in order to be near Mrs. Leonard Howard, a noted medium."

EXHIBIT B.

NO FAITH IN MEDIUMS.—LINCOLN GUIDED BY JUDGMENT.—NICOLAY, THE MARTYR PRESIDENT'S OLD SECRETARY, SPOILS A SENSATION.

Special to the Chicago Daily News, Oct. 21, 1891.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 20: John G. Nicolay, the private secretary and intimate associate of Lincoln and the distinguished historian of the martyred president, was called upon by the Daily News correspondent to-day with a view to ascertaining what truth there was in the sensational stories that Lincoln was a Spiritualist and was in the habit of holding séances at the White House. Mrs. Colburn Maynard, a medium, started the story, and Colonel Bundy of Chicago, editor of a Religio-Philosophical Journal, adds corroborativ testimony, which was telegraphed to many of the Eastern newspapers to-day.

Historian Nicolay was in his library, surrounded by his books and busy with some old Lincoln manuscripts. He is about sixty years of age, with meager frame, intellectual face and tawny-gray, full beard. He had seen the statement of the medium and the corroboration of Colonel Bundy, and had dismissed both as idle stories having no foundation in fact.

Mr. Nicolay talked freely and said that he could declare without qualification that President Lincoln was not a Spiritualist and had no inclination in that direction. He had been the president's private secretary throughout the war, was with him almost night and day under the same roof at the White House, and he would undoubtedly hav known if anything so unusual as Spiritualistic séances were going on at the executiv mansion. He never heard of anything of the kind and he is absolutely positiv that nothing of the kind occurred.

LINCOLN NOT SUPERSTITIOUS.

"Of course," added Mr. Nicolay, "I hav no doubt that Mr. Lincoln, like a great many other men, might hav had some curiosity as to Spiritualism, and he might hav attended some of these séances solely out of curiosity. But he was the last man in the world to yield to any other judgment than that arrived at by his own mature deliberation. He was not superstitious, nor did he hav any Spiritualistic tendencies. I hav attended Spiritualistic séances, not because I believed in them but because I was curious to see the proceedings. They were such manifest humbugs that I usually came away disgusted. If President Lincoln ever attended séances, as alleged, it was with this same feeling of curiosity. But I do not remember that even curiosity ever impelled him to attend a séance. He had more important business on hand during those days. In any event, I can say, without the slightest qualification, that a séance never occurred at the White House."

DIRECTED BY HIS JUDGMENT.

Mr. Nicolay treats as ridiculous the story that the proclamation of Emancipation was hastened by advices from the spirit-land and also that Lincoln went to the front to learn the conditions prevailing among the soldiers after being advised by the medium to take this course. To show the absurdity of the statement Mr. Nicolay pointed to that portion of Colonel Bundy's interview which says that while Lincoln received advice from the spirit-world he never followed it blindly unless it conformed to his own better judgment. Mr. Nicolay says that it was this judgment in all cases which directed affairs and not any claptrap of mediums. As to the statements that Mrs. Lincoln had afterward become an ardent Spiritualist at St. Charles, Ill., Mr. Nicolay declared that this had no bearing upon President Lincoln's life at the White House, for it was well known that Mrs. Lincoln became unfortunately eccentric after the assassination of her husband, and particularly during the latter days of her life.

EXHIBIT C.

Referred to in the foregoing Answer.—From The Truth Seeker, Dec. 12, 1891.

AN EXPLANATION WANTED.

MARENGO, ILL., NOV. 22, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Replying to William Foster, Jr., I would simply say that if he can offer a plausible explanation why Mrs. Maynard waited twenty-five years before "projecting" (!) her book, as he expresses it, revealing to the world that Lincoln was a Spiritualist, which "projections" were corroborated by Colonel Bundy at this late hour, I will take my insinuations all back, and admit that they are above the weakness to which the average "medium" (?) is subject. One slight discrepancy I must note in your correspondent's communication, however, namely, that "there is nothing positiv in what the correspondent of the Chicago News puts into the mouth of Mr. Nicolay." That "it is all, I don't know, I don't believe things were so—testimony utterly negativ, which would be ruled out of court instanter." A greater prevarication than this, or a more willful perversion, cannot be conceived of. Let the reader look over Mr. Nicolay's declarations and see whether there is anything ambiguous or evasiv about them. On the contrary, they are most positiv and emphatic, and such expressions as Mr. Foster places into his mouth, as "I don't know," or "I don't believe this or that," do not occur in a single instance. Let Mr. Foster and his fellow-Spiritualists confine themselvs to the truth, and no one will then impugn their assertions.

H. WETTSTEIN.

WAKEMAN & CAMPBELL,
Defendant's Attorneys.

No. 93 Nassau st., New York.

Time to Call a Halt.

On Jan. 5, 1892, the following bill was introduced in the House of Representativs by Mr. Henderson, of Iowa, and on April 4th in the Senate, as No. 2,834, by Senator Dolph, of Oregon:

A bill to amend section thirty-eight hundred and ninety-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representativs of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section thirty-eight hundred and ninety-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows: (New matter in italics.)

SEC. 3893. Every obscene, lewd, filthy, indecent, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, letter, writing, print or other publication of an indecent or filthy character or devoted to the publication or principally made up of criminal news, police reports, or accounts of criminal deeds, or pictures and stories of immoral deeds, lust, or crime, and every article or thing designed or intended for the prevention of conception or procuring of abortion, and every article or thing intended or adapted for any indecent or immoral use, and every written or printed card, letter, circular, book, pamphlet, advertisement, or notice of any kind giving information, directly or indirectly, where or how, or of whom, or by what means any of the hereinbefore-mentioned matters, articles, or things may be obtained or made, or advertisement contained in any newspaper, pamphlet, or circular giving information where or by whom abortion may be performed, or where pills, medicins, nostrums, or advice for the prevention of conception or for abortion may be obtained, or advertisements of medicins, drugs, nostrums, or apparatus for the cure of private or venereal diseases, whether sealed as first-class matter or not, are hereby declared to be nonmailable matter, and shall not be conveyed in the mails nor delivered from any post-office nor by any letter-carrier; and any person who shall knowingly deposit, or cause to be deposited, for mailing or delivery, anything declared by this section to be nonmailable matter, and any person who shall knowingly take the same, or cause the same to be taken, from the mails, for the purpose of circulating or disposing of, or aiding in, the circulation or disposition of the same, shall, for each and every offense, be fined upon conviction thereof not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned at hard labor not more than five years, or both, at the discretion of the court; and all offenses committed under the section of which this is amendatory, prior to the approval of this act, may be prosecuted and punished under the same in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed: and the Postmaster-General shall hav full authority to declare what matter is nonmailable under this act, so far as the transportation in the mails is concerned: Provided, That nothing in this act shall authorize any person to open any letter or sealed matter of the first class not addressed to himself: And provided further, That upon the continued mailing of newspapers or periodicals containing advertisements or other articles or items forbidden by this act to be transmitted in the mails, the Postmaster-General is hereby authorized to declare said publication, including future issues thereof, nonmailable.

The tactics of the promoters of this bill plainly indicate that it is their purpose to procure its passage in the same stealthy way in which the original bill was passed in March, 1873.

There is no necessity for such legislation and it is doubtful if such a law could pass both houses after deliberate consideration. The only hope of success for such a measure rests in accomplishing by trickery and fraud what could not be gained by honest methods.

The mischievous purpose of this bill is manifest from a reading of the italicized portions. Should it become law the outrages which hav been perpetrated under the present law would only be repeated with greater daring and frequency.

We urge all Liberals to exert every effort to prevent the enactment of such a law.

OBJECTIONS.

1. The bill proposes to vest in the postmaster-general "full authority to declare what matter is non-mailable under this act." This is practically creating a censorship of the most dangerous kind by the operation of which the postmaster-general might close the mails to any newspapers containing articles not in conformity with his standards of morals, religion, politics, or literary taste.

2. As if purposely intended to sanction and encourage the exercise of the oppressiv powers it confers, the language of the bill is so vague that under its elastic provisions pretext might readily be found for declaring non-mailable almost any large metropolitan daily newspaper.

3. The curious combination of offenses grouped together in this bill, ranging from the heinous crime of providing means of procuring abortion all the way down to frivolous or imaginary violations of literary taste, and out of the whole constructing new and preposterous offenses against the mails, has already, in the attempts of the courts to apply the present law, produced the most inconsistent, confused, contradictory, irrational, and ridiculous jumble of nonsensical and contemptible decisions to be found upon any subject in the whole body of the law, and has done more than any enactment of the century to bring the administration of justice into contempt.

4. Such a law is unnecessary. There is no real offense among the long list of offenses which it is proposed to create that cannot be amply, fully, and adequately reached and dealt with under the laws of the various states.

5. This being the case, the existence of such a statute simply offers a premium to evil-disposed persons to bring groundless charges, which if made in state courts could be readily disposed of, but in the United States courts, unfitted as they are for such business, are full of terrible danger to the innocent victim of malice or greed.

6. These laws are the whole capital and stock in trade of a private amateur detectiv association and are principally made use of by the association for its purposes. It has been demonstrated that the temptation to the agents of this society to misrepresent the law, the pretended offense, the motivs of the victim, and their own purposes is in many cases too strong to be resisted.

7. The proposed law especially invites fanatical persecutions on moral grounds, and the postmaster-general being constituted the judge and arbiter as to the mailability or non-mailability of matter we shall under such law hav the application of eccentric and ridiculous standards of morality, varying with each succeeding incumbent of the office.

8. Already we hav seen that it is not possible to put into human language a definition of the word "obscene" which shall let in Shakspere, Rabelais, and the Bible, and keep out works intended to pander to depraved tastes. What meaning shall then be attached to such words as indecent, criminal news, immoral deeds, private diseases?

9. The words, "whether sealed as first-class matter or not," in the bill indicate a vicious disposition to pry into private correspondence which must be resisted by all means and at all hazards, and foreshadow a class of prosecutions whose chief result will be the limitless propagation of scandals.

SOME CASES UNDER THE OLD LAW.

1. D. M. Bennett was the editor of an Infidel newspaper, THE TRUTH SEEKER. As such he incurred the enmity of certain theologians and became the victim of a long, persistent, and bitter persecution. He was arrested for mailing a copy of Trall's "Sexual Physiology" and a scientific pamphlet on "Propagation of Marsupials." After much annoyance and expense this groundless prosecution was abandoned. He was subsequently indicted and tried for mailing a copy of "Cupid's Yokes," and although the pretended offense was purely constructiv and in no sense real, Mr. Bennett was convicted and sentenced to thirteen months' imprisonment, which sentence he actually served. To the eternal disgrace of President Hayes it must be said that he refused the petition of seventy-five thousand loyal citizens for the pardon of Mr. Bennett, to please the theological element, although the frivolousness of the charge was and is manifest from a reading of "Cupid's Yokes," of which one hundred thousand copies hav been sold. It should also be stated that another individual, having been subsequently indicted for precisely the same offense (i. e., mailing the same book), was discharged on the ground that the book was not obnoxious to the statute. This persecution of Mr. Bennett was in pursuance of an avowed purpose to suppress Freethought literature.

2. Mrs. Elmina D. Slenker, a well-known Radical writer, was engaged in private correspondence with many professional, learned, and thoughtful friends upon the subject of sex and sex relations. Some sneaking detectivs connected with the post-office department insinuated themselvs into this correspondence, and having obtained what they thought would serve their infamous purpose, commenced a prosecution against Mrs. Slenker. After a three days' trial Mrs. Slenker was convicted, but the conviction was set aside by the court as without foundation. The matters contained in Mrs. Slenker's correspondence were not violativ of the law and the prosecution was not further pressed. Mrs. Slenker, however, was without redress for the expense and annoyance to which she had been subjected.

3. Mr. H. L. Barter, the editor of a weekly newspaper in Le Claire, Ia., was subjected to prosecution through the animosity of unfriendly townsmen, who set about to break up his business. In this they succeeded, as he was a man of small pecuniary means, but the fact that the indictment was never pressed, with other facts that could be related, shows that it was merely a malicious prosecution made possible by an unwise law.

4. In 1882 this law was made use of to threaten and intimidate the Boston publishers of Walt Whitman's poems. And such pressure was brought to bear upon Messrs. Osgood & Co., that they canceled their contract with the Good Gray Poet, who sturdily resisted all bulldozing attempts to force him to expurgate from his book the very poems that hav since made him immortal. The attack upon Walt Whitman and his publishers was, probably, only an attempt to levy blackmail.

5. The attack upon Tolstoi's "Kreutzer Sonata" shows to what extent unrestrained fanaticism might make use of such a law to the subversion of the rights of citizens. In this case the post-office department actually decided to exclude that grand and humane book from passing through the mails. The officers in charge of that department do not seem to hav been deterred from their purpose by any moral principles, but the purpose failed by reason of its inherent absurdity.

6. The prosecution of Mr. Jones, of Ashland, Mass., bringing cruel disaster to his business and character, for sending by mail Clarke's "Marriage Guide," which Judge Lowell, of Boston, declared "is not immoral or indecent at all." Mr. Jones had, by the unwise advice of his counsel, pleaded guilty, and Judge Lowell being thereby required to pass sentence gave the light fine of $150 without cost.

7. The prosecution of Dr. Abbey, of Buffalo, a legal practitioner for sixteen years, and a physician of good repute and undoubted ability, for mailing a copy of his book on Sexual Diseases, which he had previously submitted to the Agent of the Society for the Suppression of Vice for consideration. Convicted by an incompetent jury, he was fined by Judge Wallace $100, the lightest possible; but he was subjected to an amount of expense, annoyance, and odium which $5,000 would not cover.

8. The prosecution of Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr., for sending by mail, and by request, to the address of a married woman, a small pamphlet intended only for private circulation and as an answer to many questions daily asked of a physician. This same pamphlet has received the indorsement of clergymen, physicians, and hundreds of married people who hav profited by it. Nevertheless its author was heavily fined for mailing it.

9. A weekly paper published in New York city, called House and Home, was detained in the post-office a full week because it contained an advertisement which the postmaster suspected to be unlawful, but which on further investigation proved to be unobjectionable.

10. A publisher in Chicago, Mr. G. S. Baldwin, reproduced in pamphlet form the report of the Pall-Mall Gazette articles upon vice in London, published during the summer of 1885. The matter republished by Mr. Baldwin was taken from the Chicago Tribune, thousands of which had been distributed by mail, but the same matter when put in pamphlet form was refused the privilege of the mail, at the dictation of the Chicago postmaster.

11. Mary Robertson, of Cameron, Mo., sued a wealthy and influential citizen of Cameron on the ground that he had assaulted her. She did not gain her suit, but the facts brought out on trial were so much in her favor that for the sake of vindicating herself she printed an accurate and careful report of the trial, which she addressed by mail to her friends. The postmaster, being an intimate friend of the wealthy and influential citizen aforesaid, held that the pamphlets were unmailable, and retained them until the lady got a reversal of the decision from Washington.

The Cause in Washington.

The annual convention and election of officers of the Washington Secular Union will be held at the Fremont Opera House, Sunday, June 5, 1892. Our success in accomplishing our aims and objects has certainly been very encouraging. We hav secured:

The abolition of paid chaplains, to make prayers at each day's session of the legislature.

The substitution of simple affirmation (when preferred) in all our courts of law, or legal proceedings, instead of oath and Bible-kissing.

The abolition of the custom of judges, lawyers, jurors, and other officers of the courts, questioning, and creating prejudice against, persons on account of their belief or disbelief in religious dogmas.

The total discontinuance of Bible-reading and religious exercises and instruction in our public schools.

The admission by our courts of the illegality of the so-called Sunday laws.

The recognition and respect of the leading newspapers, as evinced by the recent publication of a long communication from the secretary on Sunday laws in the Post-Intelligencer, and the publication of articles by the secretary in local papers throughout the state. At the organization of our state Union no newspaper in this city would giv us one line of notice, even for pay.

The work done to prevent the issue of the usual Thanksgiving proclamation by the governor, while failing of its avowed purpose, was in no sense wasted effort, or barren of good results. It called the general attention of our state officials and leading politicians to the fact that the Liberals of Washington are an organized and influential body whom it would be poor policy hereafter to ignore or treat with disrespect.

The Liberals of Washington need to fully realize that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and that the advantages obtained can only be perpetuated by constant watchfulness and prompt and effectiv protest against any encroachment on the rights so hardly won.

We need now to concentrate our efforts to the work of securing repeal of the infamous clause of the revenue law exempting church property from taxation. It reads: "All church property used exclusivly for public worship to an amount not exceeding $5,000. . . . Hospitals for the cure of the sick, whether supported in whole or in part by charity, orphanages and orphan asylums, institutions for the reformation of fallen women, and homes for the aged and infirm."

Thus all church property that is pretendedly devoted to any charitable purpose is entirely exempt from taxation. This is among the pressing matters for consideration at our coming convention.

We need a pamphlet giving in clear, concise, yet forcible manner the facts and arguments for the repeal. An edition of ten thousand distributed throughout the state would arouse and educate the masses to the merits and importance of this great question.

At our coming fall election every candidate for the legislature should be made to declare himself. Party lines should be ignored, at least so far as members of the legislature are concerned, and our votes and interest be cast in favor of those only who pledge themselvs to secure the repeal of the iniquitous exemption clause.

The Washington Secular Union has accomplished a very large amount of good with a very small amount of means. Every dollar contributed or paid to the Washington Secular Union has accomplished more—achieved better, greater, more practical results—than ten times the amount contributed to any other Liberal society or person in any part of the United States or the Canadas; with the one exception, the money contributed to THE TRUTH SEEKER to send publications to members of legislatures and others at just the time interest is greatest on the subject, thus insuring a presentation of our side of the question when most likely to prove effectiv. THE TRUTH SEEKER does this work gratis, supplying the publications needed at actual cost. It is a mighty help to our cause, and the fund should be liberally contributed to.

There is no doubt of the zeal and self-sacrificing devotion to the cause on the part of the live Liberals of Washington. They are sure to do their part. But the apathetic, the chronic indifferents, the indolent, and those willing the workers shall bear all burdens, should arouse to the fact that superstitious intolerance is still powerful, and as persistent as venomous; and is only coiled awaiting opportunity to renew attacks upon us should we relax our vigilance.

> We hav scotched the snake, not kill'd it;
> She'll close, and be herself, whilst our poor malice
> Remains in danger of her former tooth.

There are many matters of grave import to be considered and decided at the convention, among others the advisability of selecting an entire new set of officers, especially secretary, and deciding on the advisability of removing the headquarters and office of the Union to some other city. Seattle has had the honors for the past two years; other sections of the state hav rights and claims that should be considered.

Liberals of Washington (alike delegates and others), will you at once write the secretary of your intention to attend the convention on Sunday, June 5th, next?

Will you contribute to the expenses of the convention, and remit forthwith?

Will you call attention to the convention, and impress on Liberals of your acquaintance their duty to contribute toward the expenses? Those who cannot attend should, in justice, subscribe more than those who do attend, because they are saved the outlay for fare, hotel bill, etc., as well as loss of time.

If we hav a successful meeting it will very greatly help our cause, increase the courage of the workers, and renew the zeal of the burden-bearers, as well as force the enemy to respect us for our numbers and influence. A slim attendance will do us irreparable injury.

Liberals of Washington, do as you would be done by. Do not disregard this call, but sit down and write the secretary at once.

Let us hav a grand rally of the lovers of reason, right, and truth at Fremont Opera House, Seattle, June 5th, 6th, and 7th. What say ye?

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

Fremont, Wash.

My Second Campaign.

During my stay in Columbus, making the necessary arrangements for the state convention, I gave a lecture each Sunday night, with beneficial results.

There are quite a number of good and earnest Freethinkers in this city, but their chief drawback is that which has been the greatest hindrance to the progress of our party, viz., lack of organization.

I shall make efforts, however, to remedy this when I settle down in Ohio to take up my activ duties as the secretary, and shall, if possible, build up local Unions throughout the state; and it will not be my fault if they are not kept going. Columbus is an extremely Liberal city, and I might say that Ohio has perhaps one of the most Liberal constitutions of any state in the Union.

Here in the state capital the theaters are all open Sundays, and each new company visiting the city commence their engagements on that day; and it must be somewhat annoying to the preachers, who claim the absolute right to perform on the first day of the week, to see the crowds that emerge from the playhouses after each entertainment given therein.

Thousands, again, will go to see a ball game played on Sunday; and I thought that could our puritanical forefathers know what was occurring nowadays on the supposed "Lord's day," they would almost turn in their graves and shriek with pious horror.

The liquor stores are open and do a good trade on that day, as a matter of course, although they are supposed to be closed according to law, and the only semblance they manifest toward obeying it is to "draw down the blinds." Unlike New York, they do not hav to sneak in at the side door, for the front doors are open, while the guardians of the law, in full knowledge of what is going on, merely "wink the other eye."

Through the kindness of Dr. J. Snyder, late of Scio, now an assistant physician at the state insane asylum, I was taken through that institution on a tour of inspection. He took me in the large dining-room, where I saw seven hundred and thirty poor, demented creatures sitting down together at dinner. It was indeed a pitiable sight to see so many in one place who had completely lost their reason, and some of them did not know sufficient to attend to their own wants. Here both sexes meet three times a day—at each meal. This was first tried as an experiment, and as it was attended with success the custom has been permanently established. Everything was scrupulously neat and clean, and every little want of the patients was attended to with a promptness that reflects great credit upon the management.

A large number of the inmates had taken that form of insanity known as religious mania. And then we are told that religion is a blessing and will soothe the weary heart! Strange we never hear of any lunacy called Freethought mania, nor can any records be found of such throughout the annals of medical science, or works on lunacy. Christians might draw a good moral from this.

Upon another occasion, through the kindness and influence of Mr. Joseph Simpson, a prominent citizen of Columbus, and a successful business man, I was taken through another institution, the offspring of the Christian religion, namely, the Ohio state penitentiary. It was the first time in my life that I had been inside the gates of a prison; therefore the visit was a novel and an interesting one to me. It upset all ideas I had previously entertained of prison life, consequently it was worth a great deal to me for the experience I gained alone. It is a large colony of toilers, kept under strict surveillance and entirely shut out from the rest of the world. It seems almost a nation within a nation. At regular intervals guard-houses are placed upon the top of the high stone wall that surrounds the place. The guards are all armed and keep a sharp lookout lest anyone confined therein should attempt to escape. Inside it almost resembles a beehive. Near upon two thousand unhappy wretches are kept under lock and key, some of whom are to be confined here for life, and others serving out various terms of imprisonment. Nearly every kind of human industry is followed here, the convicts working away under the supervision of an armed guard. Here are tailors making clothes for the convicts, which consist of a coarse, rough flannel fabric, gray in color, with horizontal black stripes. Then again we saw the shoemakers manufacturing the coarse, heavy shoes worn by their companions in exile. Besides these were molders, blacksmiths, cabinet-makers, crockery-makers, all plying their respectiv vocations in a gloomy silence, except, perhaps, the noise and clash occasioned by the machinery and the workmen's tools. Exactly at 12 o'clock a large bell rings out the hour for dinner, when the men cease work and file out into a large square. They then march in sections to the dining-room with what is called the "lock step." They are allowed but twenty minutes in which to partake of their meal, which consists of a piece of bread, a small slice of bacon, and a bowl of water, and then back to toil again. By special permission we were allowed to visit the "annex," in which were confined five convicted murderers awaiting execution. They were kept in what is called the murderers' cage. On our way hither we had to pass the gallows, which is a permanent structure, and whereon these unhappy creatures would erelong be launched into eternity. I immediately thought of our wretched system of capital punishment and inwardly revolted against it, for any system that teaches the destruction of the criminal and which does not destroy the motivs or the causes that lead to the crime is based upon an exploded morality which must sooner or later die with that dismal superstition that has engendered it. We did not stay in this part of the prison very long; but short as it was it was sufficient for me, for as I viewed this instrument of death I could scarcely repress a shudder at the horrible sight. The cells are barely large enough for a man to turn around in, and are entered through a strong iron gate, by which means the guard can easily watch his charge.

Upon the gate of each cell is a small board, bearing the name and number of its occupant, whether or not he uses tobacco, and the particular religious denomination to which he belonged. I could but take a cursory glance at these, as our time was rather limited, but I could easily distinguish that every board bespoke some religious sect or another; and in my candid opinion, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, a large preponderance bore the inscription "Roman Catholic," the remainder being made up of the various Protestant sects. I did not observe one single professed Freethinker among this vast crowd. Mind, I do not say positivly there were none there; I only say that I saw none myself, and so far as I know, there were only two avowed heretics in the place at the time, viz., Mr. Simpson and myself. Another moral for Christians, and one they should take into serious consideration. It will giv them food for reflection.

During my stay in this city I was the honored guest of Mr. Joseph Simpson for a part of the time, and the remainder I spent with Mr. J. J. Burdge, an ex-school-teacher, and one who has felt what it is to be an Infidel. Both of these friends tried their utmost to make my visit among them as pleasant as possible, and their generosity to me has left many pleasant impressions to be remembered in after years.

Leaving Columbus on Saturday, the 24th inst., I commenced to fill my lecture appointments, beginning at Cincinnati the next day. The weather was sublime, and, leaving Columbus with a light heart, I reached my next stopping-place in exceeding good spirits. Sunday morning opened out bright and beautiful. The sun shone down upon the streets of this gay city in all its splendor. The heavy winter garments had been laid aside, and the appearance of crowds upon the streets in their light spring suits clinched a glad welcome to the joyous and buoyant springtime once more. In the evening I lectured before the Ohio Liberal Society to one of the largest audiences that this young though courageous organization has yet been favored with. It is now scarce four months since this society was established, I having had the honor to deliver the opening address on the 3d of January last, and now they will hav to move to larger quarters. At the time announced to commence my lecture every seat in the hall was occupied, and still they came. At the rear of the hall crowds were standing up, and they even filled the hallway and anterooms. Besides this, from fifty to a hundred had to be turned away. This is certainly deserving of great praise and encouragement to the gallant little band in charge of the society. They are undoubtedly among the most activ workers in our cause.

I am frequently asked by our friends in my travels, "Do you think our cause is growing?" Growing? Yes! Look at these splendid results accomplished in less than four months. Here is a lesson for the lovers of our principles and those who desire to see them propagated. "And verily, verily, I say unto you, go thou and do likewise."

The lecturers are perhaps the best able to answer the above query, owing to their contact with Liberals in all parts of the country.

And right here let me say that Freethought has come to stay in Cincinnati. Our cause is certainly growing here with a perceptible growth. Immediately after my lecture six or seven persons of both sexes handed their names to the secretary and became members of the society, enlisting themselvs in the glorious army of progress. Through the united efforts of the great and shining Light, the valiant Hogg, and the eager and willing Allen, Freethought is having what is called in common parlance a boom, and now they hav to look out for larger and more suitable accommodations. It is by such work as this that the path of the Freethought Pilgrim is made easier, brighter, and more cheerful than of yore. Freedom's pathway, which once was made to quake at the footsteps of a child, now trembles not at the tread of a giant.

I would that all Freethinkers should take courage and apply their shoulders to the wheels of progress. It would not then be long ere the monstrous superstitions that now seem to stop the very pulse-beat of our civilization would be shivered at their roots, and like a gallant ship with studding-sails and ribs of iron, truth would skim the seas, bearing loud protests against intellectual coercion that would paralyze priests and shake the thrones from under kings.

This magnificent audience, which greeted me with cheers when I stepped upon the rostrum, was sufficient to inspire any man to his best efforts, and was to me a grand encouragement to assist me in my work.

I could plainly distinguish many familiar faces in my audience, among them being Professor Beal, who declin s to run a marriage bureau even on a small scale; Dr. Wilson, a young physician, whose voice is frequently heard in our cause; Mr. Harrington, an old army veteran, who has now joined sides with us; Samuel Silverman, who, though small in stature, has a large heart, and makes his presence felt when necessary. I also had the pleasure of meeting here a gentleman from Gloucester, Mass., George F. Tarr, who desired me to correspond with him relativ to a series of lectures in that place.

Quite a large number of ladies attend these meetings, which is one of their most striking features (the meetings', not the ladies'). A good discussion followed the lecture, about eight of those present taking part therein. Among them was Mrs. Foster, an earnest and enthusiastic Liberal, and a Unitarian preacher, whose name I cannot now recall, but judging from his remarks there is not much difference of opinion between us, although he prefers to still keep clinging to that old "rock of ages," and believes in a mysterious something called God. On the whole, this was a gathering of the clans, and I was well pleased.

The next evening I had to lecture in Centralia, Ill., where I am booked for five lectures. Consequently, on Monday morning I had to rise with the sun and travel on in the same direction with him all that day. Leaving the Buckeye state I went on a journey of nearly three hundred miles through the beautiful pasture land of southern Indiana into Illinois. First we sped along by the side of the red, muddy, and turbulent waters of the Ohio river, which erelong merges to the left and disappears from our gaze, and now we find ourselvs steaming through woodlands, where the trees are just budding forth their bright-green foliage. Here and there we pass an orchard, with the fruit-trees in full blossom, glistening like pearls in the rays of the dazzling sun. Mother earth is wrapped in a rich green mantle of grass; the mating birds are flitting hither and thither in a careless and sportiv fashion, all of which brought to my mind those beautiful words of Massey:

This world is full of beauty, as other worlds above,
And if we did our duty, it might be full of love.

I reached Centralia just in time to change my travel-stained garments, get something to refresh the inner man, and prepare for the platform. I lecture here each night this week.

I hav still a few dates open which I would like to fill up, either in the northern part of Illinois or Indiana, between the 20th and 30th of May, exclusiv of these dates.

Friends desiring lectures will please address me at once, at 154 North High street, Columbus, O.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

Kansas Leads.

If in nothing else, Kansas surely leads in bigotry, ignorance, and cowardly attacks on freedom of the press and mails, as well as in liberty to form one's own contracts conjugally. The late confiscation of Lucifer shows a fixed determination on the part of the post-office officials, there at least, to set up a tyranny worse than exists in Russia. If men and women are not to be allowed to publish their opinions and send them to those who wish to read them by mail, what opportunity remains whereby the people can be taught the most important of all knowledge, that of the laws of sex union and the proper plan of gestating and rearing the generations to come after us? Are they to be subject to the same ignorant mistakes that the present is now suffering the resu'ts of? It seems, in Kansas at least, that all books, as well as papers, that teach the laws of proper generation must be forbidden the use of the mails.

It may be that all these lessons are necessary to teach people the tyranny of governmentalism, what it has the power to accomplish under the sway of vicious officials, in order to turn back the tide that has been set in motion toward government control in every department of life by the fascinating picture so graphically drawn by Bellamy.

A nation of paupers such as we see in this country to-day is appalling enough to contemplate, but the state of slavery that would be the natural and necessary result of state control of the individual in industrial and economic matters would be to my mind a more hopeless and degraded condition.

What we need is less law and more liberty, less compulsion and more natural spontaneity. Cooperation in nearly every department of human endeavor would be the natural result of a state of equality in opportunity and cessation of state interference in all endeavors to enlighten and free the people from church and state domination. If House bill 120 passes, the little liberty now remaining in the nation is throttled and all unorthodox papers and Liberal books will hav to be sent, if at all, by other methods than the United States mails. Never were truer words uttered than these by Wendell Phillips: "Liberty and civilization at present are nothing else than the fragments of rights which the scaffold and the stake hav wrung from the strong hands of the usurpers. Every step of progress the world has ever made has been from scaffold to scaffold and from stake to stake. The law has been always wrong. Government began in tyranny and force, began in the feudalism of the soldier and the bigotry of the priest; and the ideas of justice and humanity hav been fighting their way like a thunder-storm against the organized selfishness of human nature." Is there enough of the spirit of independence left in this law-crushed, time-serving people to rise in the dignity of their manhood and refuse to be thus tyrannized over, or are we to be still further crushed and enslaved and impoverished until all the sweets of life are turned to gall and the nation becomes the property of a few bigoted and autocratic plutocrats, and the masses, a race of abject slaves? I await the outcome of all these movements with a dread uncertainty.

JULIET H. SEVERANCE, M. D.

2 Warren ave., Chicago.

Little Blasphemies.

Deacon Sollemm (after his cuffs and collars): "My friend, are you a Christian?" Yung Lung: "Yessee. Me wantee sellee wifee an' mally pletty Sunday-school teachee."

Mrs. Dogood: "Can you find any place in the Bible where anybody ever gave nice biscuits to nasty tramps?" Fitz William: "Wall, dere was one poor cove what's related about, asked for bread and gittin' a stone."

Lectures and Meetings.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH'S lecture appointments:

Des Moines, Ia....	May 8	Columbus, O.....	June 12
Ottumwa, Ia.....	" 15	Cleveland, O.....	" 13, 15
Manchester, Ia....	" 17–19	Pittsburgh, Pa....	" 19
Angola, Ind.....	" 30	Butler, Pa.....	" 20, 21
Waterloo, Ind....	June 4, 5, 6	Philadelphia, Pa.	" 23
Butler, Ind.....	" 7, 8

He expects to lecture in Cairo, Ill.; Shumway, Muscatine, Ia.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Auburn, Pa.

PHILOSOPHICAL Association, Sundays at 3 P.M., Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D.—Lectures for May:

May 8th, Van Buren Denslow: "If Knowledge Were Universal, What Would Religion Be?"

May 15th, Mr. S. H. Wilder: "Self-Contradictory Evolution."

May 22d, Mr. Henry Frank: "Selections and Discussions from 'His Bold Experiment.'"

May 29th, closing service: Mr. H. Rowley, Review of the Season's Work.

W. S. BELL is now in Oregon, where he will lecture in May and June; afterward he goes to Washington. The following are his dates till June 12th:

Grant's Pass, Ore..	May 4, 5	New Era, Ore..	May 20
Coquille, " ..	" 8	Forest Grove, " ..	" 22–26
Marshfield, " ..	" 9, 10	Corvallis, " ..	" 27
Empire, " ..	" 11, 12	Silverton, " ..	" 28, 29
Bandon, " ..	" 13	Oswego, " ..	" 30
Langlois, " ..	" 14	Stella, Wash.....	" 31
Arago, " ..	" 16	Cathlamet, Wash..	June 2–4
Woodburn, " ..	" 18	Skamokawa, " ..	" 5, 6
Canby, " ..	" 19	Deep River, " ..	" 12

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments:

Toronto.....	May 22	Kaysville, and Farmington, Ind.	June 15
Columbus, O.....	" 24–26	Morgan City.....	" 16
Cincinnatti, O.....	" 29	Echo, Utah.....	" 17
Ottumwa, Ia.....	June 1	Reno, Nev.....	" 21
Blackhawk, Col...	" 3	Carson City, Nev.	" 22
Boulder City, Col.	" 4, 5	Virginia City, Nev.	" 23
Georgetown, Col..	" 6	Inyo county, Cal.	" 24–27
Scofield, Utah.....	" 9, 10	Athens and Cathlamet, Wash.....	July 3, 4
Salt Lake, Utah...	" 12, 19
Provo, Utah.....	" 13
Murray, Utah.....	" 14

During the months of July and August Mr. Putnam will lecture along the line of the Northern Pacific railroad at Tacoma, Buckley, Davenport, Spangle, Rosalia, Oaksdale, Palouse City, Dayton, Walla Walla, Colville, Wash.; Missoula and Bozeman, Mont.; Albert Lea and other places in Minn.; Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis. All those who desire lectures along this route will please address S. P. Putnam, at Salt Lake, Utah, care of H. P. Mason.

AFTER Mr. Albert Bach's lecture on "Lunacy" at the Manhattan Liberal Club, on the evening of April 29th, the annual business meeting for election of officers was held, with the following result: President, E. B. Foote, Jr., M.D.; vice-presidents, R. A. Gunn, M.D., Wilson McDonald, and Mrs. Emma Beckwith; secretary, Huldah A. Gunn, M.D.; treasurer, Miss Schachtel; librarian, Mrs. C. Leonard; trustees, E. W. Chamberlain, Dr. Julius Fehr, James Morris. The lecture appointments for May are as follows:

May 6th, "The Religious Conspiracy," S. P. Putnam.

May 13th, "Evolution and the Spiritual Theory," S. H. Wilder and T. B. Wakeman.

May 20th, "An Outlook for Humanity," Caroline B. Le Row.

May 27th, "The Government of Cities," Dr. L. G. Janes.

Meetings will be discontinued during July, August, and September.

A Week's Mirth for One Dollar.

From the Independent Pulpit.

"Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated"—a work of 395 pages, containing 200 full-page pictures, by Watson Heston. The Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York, publishers. Price, in boards, $1; cloth, $1.50.

The pictures contained in this book are the same that hav appeared from time to time on the backs of THE TRUTH SEEKER. They are certainly comical, whatever one may think of them as works of art, or as object-lessons in divine things. They are doubtless as true to the original as those we hav seen in family Bibles.

The stories are related in a humorous vein; at least they are free from any excessiv solemnity. We cannot vouch for their truthfulness throughout, though they appear to be corroborativ of certain biblical narrativs, thought by some good people to be as true as preaching, and who can say they are not?

Beyond this we are not able now to venture upon our own judgment of the work, for we hav only perused a very small portion of it. We met a friend on the street a few days ago who, as we approached each other, began to laugh immoderately. As soon as he could speak for laughing, he said that he had read this book the week before and had not been able to suppress his laughter since, except at intervals of a short while at a time. Of course the man had to eat and sleep some. Our friend says it is certainly the most sinful book he ever read, and he thinks it will entitle its author to the hottest place in hell.

Letters of Friends.

Good Work.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: My brother-in-law, having a lot of old TRUTH SEEKERS he would like to distribute, asks you through me to insert the following advertisement: Wanted, the address of about two hundred Freethinkers to send old copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER to.—Frank Weil, 2416 Dearborn street, Chicago. JNO. C. SPRONG.

It Will Banish the Bible to the Smokehouse.

BUSHNELL, ILL., March 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Bible Picture Book received. It is a quiverful of arrows sharp as needles. Every thinker should hav one and in pity for poor stultified believers let them read it. Anyone having a spark of reason left would take his gilt-bound Bible off the center-table and hide it away in the smokehouse.

S. L. BABBITT, M.D.

A Swedish Freethinker.

ST. LOUIS, MO., April 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $1 for the Bible Picture Book. As for THE TRUTH SEEKER, I was never a subscriber, but hav bought single copies thereof ever since I was able to understand the English language, and I can only say it is getting more and more valuable every week. Another good paper that I receive twice a month is Fritänkaren, edited by "Var Svenske Ingersoll," Viktor Lennstrand.

Very respectfully, NILS GRANT.

Be Buried As Befits a Man.

ROCKVILLE, IDA., April 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your TRUTH SEEKER of March 10th there is a letter from Geo. L. Pratt in regard to Secular funerals, which says, Be buried as befits a sensible man; which view suits myself and many others, if we only knew how to go about it. I write this hoping you will publish the same, as I want Mr. Geo. L. Pratt to write his views of how to go about it—what book to buy, and all the information that he possibly can giv—and maybe it may be the cause of hearing from others on the same subject. And right here let me say, if it could be arranged so people in rural districts could hav burials such as he speaks of it would do more for the Liberal cause than any other thing that could be done. Wishing you success and long life, I remain, Yours,

MRS. THOMAS RAMSEY.

The Plain Trnth on Bigots and Liars.

LEXINGTON, KY., April 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Nothing could be more shameful, in this age of light, than a gloomy and fiendish closing of the doors, on Sunday, of a great building containing articles whose exhibition is designed for the improvement of all classes.

Even if this could be done, which is hardly probable, the shameful disgrace thus brought upon our noble and progressiv republic would only add fuel to the fire which is now glowing, smoldering, just ready to burst into a blaze, which will speedily burn and destroy the machinations, the iniquitous plots, and the ambitious schemes by which this powerful nation is victimized and destined to be a mark for the contemptuous ridicule of future generations. To master the reason and moral sense of a nation by ghostly tales of heaven and hell is not a particle above the vulgar and degraded orgies of hoodooism and witchcraft. A man who will deliberately practice upon his neighbor's credulity, giving him a superstitious dose of reverence for a particular day—or, say, a portion of opium, deadening his faculties so that he can steal his money—this person is a thief and villain of the most atrocious stamp. ALHAZA.

The Mormons Less Intolerant to Infidels Than the Evangelicals.

CISNE, ILL., March 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I was a Methodist for two years and a Mormon preacher for thirty-five years. Now, the people do not generally know that the Mormons are Universalists in the fullest extent. According to their creed all people will be saved, Christian and heathen, except the apostates from the Mormon church. Quite an improvement on what Christ and the Presbyterians preach. They ought to hav credit for that; but they hav a way to save the apostate—not by repentance, nor the blood of Christ, but they shed his blood to atone for his apostacy. It is a matter of kindness to him. So you see they save all if the apostate does not get away and die a natural death. They say none but Mormons hav a part in the first resurrection. All the rest of the Christian and heathen world hav to wait for a thousand years and come up in the last resurrection. The unbelieving world and heathens will enjoy the second glory. Colonel Ingersoll, with all the Infidels, will be saved. That is good. They are quite liberal. They say all the other churches will be in the third glory. So the colonel will get ahead of them in the next world. He will be in class No. 2, the Christian in No. 3, the Mormon in No. 1.

They are a little selfish, but that is natural; rather hard on the other churches, but liberal to Infidels and heathens. Three cheers for the Mormons in that respect!

Yours truly, B. S. JONES.

Says Spirits Can Be Found.

CAMP ALAMO, LOWER CAL., MEX., April 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I see in your valuable paper of March 12th an article from J. Edw. S., North Baltimore, O., which has the ring of the true spirit of investigation. In reply, by your permission, I will make a few suggestions. He wishes to be informed on the subject of future life.

Take the Progressiv Thinker, published at No. 40 Loomis street, Chicago, Ill., by J. R. Francis. It is an eight-page paper; price, $1 per annum; thirteen weeks for twenty-five cents. There are many periodicals published on the subject of Spiritualism, but this one I, as many others, consider by far the best. It treats on scientific subjects in general. Many a single article is worth the year's subscription. The last number contains an article on Salem witchcraft that is worth more than $1. Send for sample copy by all means.

I do not expect you, nor anyone, to decide on future life by what anyone says of it, but, reading the evidence of others, you will see how to proceed to investigate and get evidence not only of a future life but of the possibility of communication with those who hav thrown off the mortal.

Spiritualism is not founded on faith, but on ocular demonstration, that each one must needs hav for him or her self, and all who are in earnest can get those demonstrations by seeking—perhaps not by the first effort, however.

When one seeks spirit manifestations to condemn the cause, it is very easy to seek a humbug instead of a genuin medium, or to report fraud when the alleged investigator had genuin manifestation, as I hav known. A very good way for investigators is to hold circles at home, or with a few earnest, honest friends. Let all enter into the matter with aspirations to get only truth and to be elevated. Holding circles for curiosity or in a frivolous spirit, is like children playing with edged tools. Then patience and perseverance is necessary for good results. All who seek can find proof positiv of the return of spirits by perseverance and proper method.

Yours for progress,

N. A. PICKENS, M.D.

Doctors and Diet.

SANGER, CAL., Feb. 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me to say through THE TRUTH SEEKER that the Atheist "Gray," formerly of Olive Branch, Miss., has left lately for some parts of Tennessee. I received a card from him since he has left Mississippi in regard to a "Pictorial Text-Book" for which I agreed to send him the "Positiv Philosophy" by August Comte. The writing on the postal card was nearly blotted out, and all I can make out is that he is somewhere in Tennessee. Now, if you publish this, he is very apt to read it, and then he can send me his order in plain writing and I will know what to do.

Allow me to express a few honest thoughts in this letter. I read THE TRUTH SEEKER carefully and I notice that it hits the reverend D.D.'s right and left, which is perfectly right, for they must become extinct, as their usefulness is no longer needed. They are a relic of a mighty ignorant past, and the sooner the people get rid of them the better. But there is another class that is as much of a human parasite as are the reverend devil-drivers. Their signs are found in newspapers, and on doors, where people can see. Back of their name stands "M.D.," which means Money Down. This latter class pretends to save the body, and the former the soul. The one livs on the credulity of the masses, while the other thrives and grows fat upon the sick. Of the two parasites, Mr. M.D. is the more prosperous, for people will spend more to hav their physical anatomy saved from destruction, than their souls, which they cannot locate. Now, I am certain that doctors can be got rid of a great deal easier than preachers, and all there is to do is for people to attend to their diet. The way the majority of people liv is enough to exterminate the race; and if the whole world would unite and liv as the average American does the human race would slowly but surely be exterminated, for each one would then dig his own grave with his teeth. The so-called American hog is an animal that every man and woman ought to abhor. Eating hog-meat causes more misery in the human family than all the rotgut whisky ever did. Catarrh is becoming a universal disease, and I think it has always been so among pork-eaters. The disease can be traced direct to the hog, as well as the tape-worm. Pork is a very poor article for diet. A pork-eater has little endurance or staying power. I hav not eaten a bit of meat of any kind for over five months, and I find it is a great success. Instead of getting weak, as my friends thought I would get, just the contrary is the case. I hav more endurance than I ever had. Coffee and tea are beverages that reduce health and grab wealth. The average coffee or tea pot is only a small cesspool. Coffee is made upon coffee and tea upon tea for days, and sometimes for weeks, until the coffee or tea drawn from such a pot is worse than water drawn from a city sewer. But few people seem to think of the importance of the diet, and as long as such is the case doctors will get people's hard-earned money, and they in return get a broken-down constitution. A doctor is to the sick what God is to the superstitious—a great comforter, one that promises everything and fulfills nothing, and still is everywhere wanted. It is a pitiful sight for one to see people gorge themselvs with what they call medicin. Last fall I laughed at a young fellow here that gorged himself with some "condemned" rot that he called medicin. He got on his ear and told me, "Where in —— do you suppose I would be by this time if I hadn't taken medicin?" I told him, "You would better say that in spite of the medicin you took you got apparently well." Now, I despise a preacher and I despise a doctor, and I think if I was the devil I should get away with both of them by setting them at variance against each other. I must close, hoping the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER will keep their eyes on the doctors as well as on the preachers. Both are bad eggs.

J. D. KAUFMAN.

Kind Advice.

SALESVILLE, MONT., March 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In renewing my subscription hitherto, I hav found no difficulty in procuring you a new subscriber. Now, however, I hav made no effort, as the constantly growing indifference of the unpriestridden has grown so pronounced that encouragement is small. This seems to be a general complaint of your correspondents.

It has been my experience when prevailing on those I hav in the past induced to subscribe or renew their subscription to hear them make excuses, a few of which I will enumerate. One class say there are too many long-winded articles written by narrow-minded cranks. The real reason, possibly, was that the subjects treated were slightly above their heads. Another class, however—an important one, I think; one whose tastes probably should be consulted so far as consistent with a paper devoted to the propagation of Freethought principles—are business men. Their objection is that the contents of the paper, as a rule, are so deep and abstruse that it requires too much time and attention to follow out all the ideas and theories set forth by the different writers. That the attention their business pursuits demand renders impossible the study essential to an understanding of profound disquisitions on deep subjects. They say what they want is short news items which they can glance over in a hurried moment and throw the paper aside.

Then there is another class of intellectual nonentities (that I need not mention, only that I cannot resist the temptation) important only in the sense that they wield the electiv franchise. A class that can giv no good reason why they do not believe in witchcraft to-day, and would only for the fact that the world has outgrown the belief. This class, of course, cannot be reached by any system of publication possible to institute, because of the fact that they read nothing: are anybody's man with whom they happen to meet last. Whisky and the excitement of a political campaign is of their mental caliber; then they at once swell to ponderous proportions, and talk as knowingly on political topics as a God—just about.

So far as the matter personally concerns myself (which has nothing to do with my present view of the case), I am well suited with the paper as it is—not that I find nothing in it to criticise, although as to the editorials and the editorial management I hav no criticism to make. I do not expect nor desire a paper published especially to please me. Should one start a paper with this end in view, allow nothing to enter its columns only such as would agree with me, I certainly would not take it. It would be throwing money away. Simply because there would be little or nothing for me to learn by reading such a paper. But it is the criticisms of which I hav written, and the fact that, and especially at the times when the church becomes crazy with heresy trials, so many newspapers grow so pronounced in their skepticism. I take a paper from your city that can almost outtruthseeker THE TRUTH SEEKER in Infidel editorials at such times. Even the Tribune editorially took occasion to point out to the ministers of the United States how far behind their ministerial brethren of Europe they were in point of liberality of doctrin and the higher criticism of the Bible. Editors everywhere are turning loose the dogs of war. The few editors I personally know are Infidels. Hundreds of them are editorially crossing the dead line and returning without brand or scratch. The fact is that many of them do now, and many more soon will, judging from indications, occupy the same fields of which THE TRUTH SEEKER, and a few other papers of its knd, are the pioneers. They will fill the want for which THE TRUTH SEEKER was founded—will survive in the struggle, competition being so sharp, by the greater variety of their reading matter. At least, it looks that way to me.

Although not feeling myself qualified, and having no intention of dictating a policy to THE TRUTH SEEKER, yet sometimes I hav thought that possibly a change might be for the best—that a greater variety of reading matter might giv it a more extended circulation and correspondingly a greater influence. To my inexperienced mind my ideal of a paper that would "take" would be to devote one or two pages to discussion by some able man of religious topics, biblical criticisms, etc.; conduct the editorials as at present, leave the department of "Letters of Friends," the "Children's Corner," and the advertisements as they are, and devote the rest to general news, foreign and domestic, giving the preference to those of Freethought.

I hav not written this for publication, but merely for your own consideration. It is ideas suggested by the criticisms I hav heard, not that I think my opinions of such matters worthy of consideration, though my experience and observations among people here might be.

THOMAS BURK.

P.S.—I forgot to say I should be in favor of the picture department remaining.

T. B.

The Giant and The Pigmies.

HOWICK, QUE., April 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The discussion evoked in the columns of the Telegram by Colonel Ingersoll's Christmas Sermon is the best incident of many days. It has not only brought the all-important subject of religion to the notice of many, but it has also exposed the weakness of religion by the inability of the clergy to defend it.

They hav all criticised Mr. Ingersoll without contradicting him. Some hav tried to belittle the great Agnostic by insinuating that he is moved by mercenary motiv; others hav tried to ridicule him for assuming the right of criticising their God; but none hav tried to meet his arguments.

Some hav tried the emotional plan with him, but that has no power over a man of his intellect.

More of them hav tried to convince him that they must be right because they hav many followers, but that is also inefficient to the man that understands reasoning from facts—that we first inherit our religion in the very wombs of our mothers; that we are imbued with the obligation of believing it before we are old enough to comprehend it, and that at mature age not one out of every thousand makes an investigation of his creed.

To this man the immensity of the number of Christians or followers of any religion—proves nothing.

I also notice that no minister fights the Infidel from his own standpoint. They all step up a few degrees above their own pulpits before they undertake to face the colonel.

The Roman Catholic priests they get out of Rome altogether, and face the Infidel from the standpoint of a Deist. Yet it is astonishing to see them do that much. Rome's argument has always been very short and positiv: "Shut your eyes, hold your tongue, and giv me your hand unless you wish to go to hades."

Another notable fact is that every combatant concedes a point or two to Mr. Ingersoll. So that between them all they concede about all that is claimed by the Infidel. Yet they all get their religion from the same book, and none of them find fault with the book for being so incomprehensible, but all blame Mr. Ingersoll for not understanding it right, and so far as each one agrees with Mr. Ingersoll he, of course, admits that Ingersoll understands it better than the other Christians.

Some of them defend their religion for the moral good of it and thereby show that they hav been so exclusiv in their study as to ignore the fact that morality is not the property of their religion, and are yet so enthusiastic in the pursuit of their avocations that they fail to see themselvs surrounded every day with people as good as themselvs who do not believe as they do.

Some of them exclaim, "Take away Christianity and where will you get men to fill your positions of trust?"

Great Scott! is it possible that those gentlemen do not know that there is any quantity of offices of trust filled by Agnostics to-day, and that these latter hav proved themselvs quite as honest and faithful as any Christians? Hav they not the sense to understand that it takes the most honest of men to hav such unpopular opinions and to liv up to them?

Rev. M. C. Peters quotes Geo. Bancroft the historian, who called Calvin the father of popular education. That was true enough in the days of Calvin as against the Roman church that was entirely opposed to popular education. Calvin was the Ingersoll of his days. But what good is that as an argument to-day?

Mr. Ingersoll once said: "The Roman Catholic church is in favor of just enough popular education to make good Roman Catholics and the Protestant churches favor just enough education to make good Protestants." Who can successfully contradict this assertion?

Is it not well proved by the fact that almost all newspapers refuse to publish anything, true or not true, opposed to Christianity, and that what few papers hav the justice and courage to publish both sides of any religious questions are immediately threatened with boycott?

In the letter signed "Cattévello" I find Mr. Ingersoll accused of acting from a pecuniary motiv. This looks like shooting the gun by the wrong end. It is easy enough to understand how a dishonest Infidel could profess Christianity for a pecuniary consideration, since he does not believe in a hereafter, but I do not see how anyone can suppose that such an intelligent man as Colonel Ingersoll could believe in Christianity and, for a pecuniary consideration, practice all his life what he knows will cost him an eternity of torture.

The same writer says, "Faith and belief are not synonymous." That is true enough. Faith is the absence of knowledge, while belief is the result of knowledge. But when this man explains that faith is a gift from God, and is not given to all men alike, if there is any such thing as "blasphemy" this must be the thing. What an injustice to accuse God of!

Rev. J. Benson Hamilton answers Mr. Ingersoll by saying that Infidels always recant at death. All that perplexes me in this case is whether to believe this gentleman so badly informed as to how Infidels die, or shrewd enough to feign such ignorance!

Why should he wait for the death of Mr. Ingersoll to see how an Infidel dies, while Infidels die every day just as peaceably as Christians? Did Rev. Mr. Hamilton never hear of D. M. Bennett, founder of THE TRUTH SEEKER; Mr. C. Palmer, a noted millionaire and a great scholar of New York, who died two or three years ago; of Mr. Doutre, a noted lawyer of Montreal? Did he not hear the answer of Victor Hugo to the priest who came to offer his clerical services when the noted poet died? "I am not taken by surprise. I am eighty-two years of age. Had I needed your services I would not hav waited to this moment, thank you."

The reverend gentleman mentions General Grant as having died a Christian, which seems to me a very doubtful case. Everybody knows that General Grant tolerated religion, as all politicians are apt to do, but never professed any religion himself. It is not at all likely that he felt much need of a clergyman at his bedside, though he may hav suffered one to be present.

It may hav been with him as it was with General Sherman, who after refusing religious assistance as long as he was able to signify his will, was after all administered to by a Roman Catholic priest after he got past resistance.

Mr. Talmage says: "Now, arguing from cause to effect, I say that such a lovely being as Christ was and is could not be author of cruelties such as Colonel Ingersoll charges." Now, Colonel Ingersoll does not make any charges; he only quotes the evangelists. If Mr. Talmage means anything, he must mean that he does not believe the portion of the gospel that represents Christ as having been so cruel, and that is just what Mr. Ingersoll says. He does not believe it.

Mr. Geo. H. Lacey says, by way of illustration: "If a person in the vigor of manhood should be stricken with disease of a virulent type, capable of cure, if the proper agents are used and availed of, as prescribed by his physician, and he is assured the agents are within his reach, and that if he uses them the cure is certain; but if he refuses to use them death is certain. He refuses and dies. Is there—ought there to be—any escape?"

What an illustration of the case of an unbeliever in revealed religion? How many physicians are there in the world? Which of them is the great physician? How can one tell him from the quacks? What man has a constitution that will stand to test them all? And after the patient is dead who knows whether he was rightly cured or not?

What is the use of language that means nothing?

The world is getting enlightened. Science has convinced us that this world was not created six thousand years ago; and in fact not created at all, as creating something out of nothing is impossible.

We hav then inquired after the savior and hav found no reliable evidence that such a being had ever existed.

Profane history completely ignores him. None of the marks and signs by which he could be identified can be found. No account whatever of a messiah between the time of King Herod and that of Emperor Tiberius.

The four gospels are known to hav been written some time after the death of their alleged authors.

Paul, James, Peter, John, and Jude say absolutely nothing in their epistles that can identify their "Christos" with the Jesus that the four gospels represent as having suffered and died under Governor Pilate. All they say of their savior is just as applicable to a myth of the same name who had then been worshiped in the East several hundred years. In fact, the first account we hav of Christianity is in the fourth century, when the sharp sword of Constantine made it compulsory all over the Roman empire. Only then began the organization of Christianity. From that time to this Christianity has grown to what it is to-day. From that time the books of the Bible hav been gathered and selected from an immense quantity of manuscript and judged to be genuin or spurious by votes. It was since that that the time of the birth and death of the savior was set by agreement after much divergence of opinion. Still later on was established the fact that Jesus was both God and man, and so on down to the dogma of infallibility of the pope of Rome.

We think we know all of these things. Now it devolves upon the Christian ministers to show us that we are misinformed.

It is useless to work on our emotions or to giv credit to Christianity for all the good that exists and blame its opponents for all the evil. There is no one disposed to believe that to-day. Nothing can avail but facts, truth, and reasonable arguments.

Yours for common sense, truth, and justice in religion as in everything else.

CHAS. LAPERCHE.

Spirited Defense of Labor and the Alliance.

CLIMAX, MINN., Feb. 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: An article of February 13th, written by one Sarah C. Todd, secretary of the Oregon State Secular Union, which appeared in your paper, contains but very little logic. As I am not a literary man, and no one seems to mention or criticise it, I would not hav bothered you if it had not been for the gross injustice it does to the Farmers' Alliance, and the official standing of Mrs. Todd, which might giv credit to her false and misleading statements.

Well, note what she says:

All of your, or rather our, reform journals are telling of the "oppressed poor;" of the wealth being wrung from the sweat of honest toil; of the rich corporations who rob the "honest poor" of his hard earnings, etc., etc. Allow me to present the other side of the picture, and I will not giv a case I do not know personally. I know a man who was left an orphan, with no help only his own earnings after he was ten years old. At sixteen he began to work for wages, $8 per month being the amount he got. He worked a year and took the man's note for $80, having spent only $16 during the year. He kept to that rule all his life. His motto was, "Always save a part of what you earn." He came West, worked, saved a little all the time, and put it at interest until he could buy a small farm. He married a girl who had worked in families—a disgrace, some think—and was not afraid to work. They worked and saved together, lived close, worked hard, and added a little to the place, until now at middle age they hav a handsome farm and every needed comfort. Would reformers call this land monopoly? And there are thousands of such cases. All our thrifty middle-aged farmers hav done the same. What ought they to do, divide with men who hav done nothing but agitate?

I can say that I admire this man, and I can comprehend his task, as I hav gone through similar circumstances, and hav gained a similar victory, although I do not believe in the penurious and Chinaman-like economy of living on $16 per year—although it may be excusable under certain circumstances. And I am sure there are very few, if any, reformers that will not rejoice in this man's good fortune, and wish everybody else in the same happy condition. People should hav a chance to work and produce what they need to liv on, even if they are not blessed with a financial brain. Sometimes the kindest and purest men and women are doomed to suffer in poverty, and very often the meanest enjoy great wealth. When I speak of wealth I mean millions, not thousands, and a man can never get a million by his own work. He must get it by getting the work of some one else. A millionaire and a tramp are like two dogs. One has overeaten himself and is lying awake at night watching his pile, that is so large that he could not consume it if he lived for one thousand years; and the tramp is like a dog walking and skulking around starving, and watching for a chance to steal a mouthful. In fact, both are miserable, and we are miserable for looking on.

The second character is only a spendthrift, and the acts of this man no reformer will try to defend, although it is hard to see that innocent children suffer for the wrong which they were not guilty in doing. This may be according to the Bible, but not according to justice and humanity.

And finally comes the third character, which is such a wonderful being it is hard to believe the story, but as Mrs. Todd says she knows it we hav no chance to doubt it, and so we will look this man over. He is a skilled workman that gets $4 per day, but livs up $6 per day. That is, he earns $24 per week but livs up $42. And this he keeps up for years. He livs for years with a shortage of $18 per week. Surely, Mrs. Todd, this man is a hero, and if you think the reformers of the country are fooling away their time fighting this man's battle you must be mistaken.

You say, "The reform journals and Farmers' Alliance must begin at the other end of the row and reform the other fellow, and in place of blowing up the millionaire with dynamite blow up the other fellow with a little dose of common sense." Now, Mrs. Todd, this is shameful language to use, and shows more bigotry than a member of any Secular Union should possess. We must throw away political bigotry as well as religious bigotry if we become free men and women. I wish you will come here to Minnesota next winter and attend our state Alliance meeting. You will find it the grandest organization that ever existed. It is not heavy on one side, but well balanced and broad on all questions. It has in view to emancipate woman and labor, and elevate humanity mentally and morally. Bigots and humbuggers may accuse us of being organized to get God in the Constitution or to blow up millionaires with dynamite, we shall still be the same grand people that are willing to giv even the devil his due, but no more, and the light of justice shall shine for all and humanity and justice shall rule in place of selfish greed and political and religious bigotry. And if Mrs. Todd thinks it is wrong for a poor man to send his children to college and giv them an education, it matters not. We will praise and honor every father and mother that will giv their children an education, and if they hav to die in poverty to giv them education they are only more praiseworthy. We should realize that ignorance and bigotry are the burden that humanity suffers under to-day. Mrs. Todd should understand that it is not the poverty-stricken in the Alliance that are at the head of this move. They would be, but they cannot afford to. It is the more favorably situated that spend their profits to better the conditions of humanity. And we shall not quit until we hav succeeded. All the bigots in the country condemn us for not spending our money for charity. We believe if we hav justice we will need no charity. The idea of women in the East making overalls for forty cents a dozen and men working for $1.15 per day and trying to support a family on it, while their employers are getting, some of them, from $5,000 to $25,000 per day, and still are trying to reduce the wages another ten per cent to swell their foolish profit a little more on the expense of starving or half-starving families. What brutal human greed! We shall hav no independent thinking under this form of government. As long as men are slaves bodily they must be slaves mentally, and freedom of existence will create freedom of thought. The need of the stomach and body must be satisfied first, and if this takes up all the time there can be no improvement of the mind, for the mind and body cannot work on two different things at one time. They must work together, as the mind is a creation or a function of the body. So we see that freedom of body is freedom of mind. And on this compass the Alliance will steer.

ANDREW STEENERSON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

"Jim Buttons."

Mamma with her willing hand
Was taking finishing stitches
To a dress—'twas "Little Pearl's"—
And for Jim a pair of breeches—
Thoughtful little head of curls.

Mamma called her little daughter,
And bade her get the buttons;
To get the ones all made of pearl,
Not the clear pearl, but the smoked ones:
"That's a darling!—mamma's girl."

Thoughtful Jim was then standing
Close and near to mamma's knee,
And in his dear mind expanding
Came a thought to one of three—
"Say, mamma," with a roguish glance,
"Hav you Jim buttons for my pants?"

U. J.

The Professor and His Cousin.

It was in the country, during days of convalescence after a serious illness, that two members of the old and aristocratic family of Arachnida exhibited their beauties and talents to me, one warm afternoon in June.

I had been watching the cloud-shadows drifting over the uplands beyond the creek, making wonderful studies in light and shade of the soft masses of foliage in the close-growing treetops.

The birds had sung their noon song hours before and were all quiet. Even our favorit ground-robin would not venture to parade on the sunny croquet grounds.

My hostess was taking her daily forty winks of sleep, when, emboldened by the stillness, Madam Brown Spider took a position on a chair near mine where books and paper were lying, and by graceful motions of her decorated forelegs invited admiration of her elegant, slender figure, robed in rich brown.

A narrow strip of velvety gray extended the length of what would hav been her backbone if she had possessed one. On this were outlined graded V's in a darker shade.

Her legs were encircled at intervals by gray threads; the same color covered her thin, disk-shaped head, and in a strip of white, like an old-fashioned bonnet ruche, which surrounded it, were set her shining black eyes.

To get a better view of her, she was placed on a piece of paper and covered with a clear glass tumbler. She immediately started on a tour of inspection, reaching up on the glass walls of her prison as far as she could, then, after an unusual effort, falling backward and displaying the stripes of dark brown that adorned her abdomen.

Sometimes she crawl d almost to the ceiling of her cell, and I could see her very odd forelegs or feelers, with the clumps of snowy hair on them. Once she wiped her face with the right, then with the left one, as if to express the heated state she was in, then down she dropped to the paper and renewed her circuit, ignoring the fly that had been put in, though she touched it as she made her rounds.

The tumbler was now reversed. A tap on the paper sent her to the bottom of it and the broad road to freedom opened; but she would not trust herself on the transparent glass, persisting in her treadmill routine until a wooden toothpick was offered her as a ladder.

As she made difficulties of its ascent, I had time to see the malignant expression of the four glittering eyes in her bonnet ruche, and to discover two more almost hidden by the brown and white hairs on her head.

The moment she was free she began to reconnoiter, raising the forward part of her body almost at right angles with her abdomen, and at last standing on tiptoe to see if the coast were clear; then away she ran to a place of shelter.

Evidently she was seeking adventures, for she soon came from her refuge, meeting, and exchanging greetings with, a black ant as she emerged.

On the painted porch-pillar she renewed her frog-in-the-well gymnastics, which led to her being exiled to a morning-glory vine and the severing of our friendship.

A crevice near the pump was the favorit resort of an agil black spider who first attracted my notice by his interest in a glass jar of water where four diminutiv pollywogs awaited their transformation into frogs.

Every day Professor Spider visited the jar to watch the pollies steer themselvs about with their long rudders; as they wriggled through the water in activ play he sat motionless, but when they sank to his level his quiescence was broken by furious rushings and mad racings around the outside of their shelter.

Two years ago I made my first acquaintance in this branch of the family. The poor fellow had lived where there was a famin, for his abdomen was almost flat. He was so feeble, so starved, I offered him a fly; he pounced upon it as a cat does on a mouse, and never relaxed his hold until he had sucked its juices; a second met the same fate; and, restored to aldermanic proportions, my guest hid in a window frame, from which he, for several days, made raids on the flies that gathered on the wire screens.

From his way of obtaining food, I named him the Jumper.

Soon after his cousin Brownie was banished, the professor appeared on my lap, and was at once immured in the glass cell.

He was black, but comely, with a white spot, the size of a pin-head, near the middle of his back, and several straight marks, like small white stitches, in a belt-shape below it.

His body was very hairy, and between the hairs on his legs tiny jet beads shone. His head looked like a high cap with a stiffened crown, and his face had the changeable colors of a bluebottle fly. The smooth surface of the glass was no obstacle to him; he preferred to climb to its highest limit to giv an exhibition of his skill.

Pressing his abdomen against the roof of his cell and exuding a wee drop of a white fluid, he traveled off, spinning as he went, and in a few minutes had woven a film which partly hid him from sight, and was securely anchored by threads attached to the sides of the glass.

At this juncture it became necessary to liberate the professor, but after the lamps were lighted he—or his ghost—advanced confidingly toward my book as it lay on the table before me; and from the animation of his countenance I am certain he could hav told how he intended to use that web, if he had not been tongue-tied by the diffidence natural to his family.

L. T. IRVINE.

Correspondence.

MT. CARROLL, ILL., April 18, 1892.

MISS WIXON: If the article inclosed is worthy of a place in the Children's Corner, it is at your service.

Some months since, a poem, ".This is the Ferry to Shadowtown," appeared in the department of THE TRUTH SEEKER which is under your charge. I had, six or seven years ago, set it to music as a lullaby for my dear little niece; in February last it was published, and I send you a copy as an evidence of my appreciation of your work in the field you hav chosen.

Very truly yours,
L. IRVINE STOCKWELL.

[Thanks for the copy of music. The composition is very sweet and pretty, and speaks well for the talented composer. We are obliged for the appreciation of our work in the Corner.—ED. C. C.]

PHOENIX, ARIZ., April 10, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner. I am thirteen years old. I like to read the Corner. We take THE TRUTH SEEKER, and like it very much. There is a large cemetery here at Phoenix that I visit often. There was a little child buried here, and I went to see it, but they did not open the coffin at all, but buried it before the sermon was preached, and the preacher said that the baby was in heaven, and in the arms of Jesus. But the next day a man was buried, and the preacher preached the funeral before the coffin was put in the ground, and he never said that the man was in heaven, because the coffin was open, and the people could see that he was not in heaven. Well, as this is my first letter to the Corner I don't want to make it too long. I like to look at the pictures in THE TRUTH SEEKER. My sister has written to the Corner once. I hope this will not go to the wastebasket.

Yours very sincerely, AMY DARROW.

FOX, ORE., April 4, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to the Corner. I hav one little sister and one little brother, and I am the oldest. I am nine years of age, Delia is seven, Ralph is five. Papa is a Freethinker and does not use tobacco. I hav a little canary bird. We hav had a long winter, but it has not been cold. I like to read the letters in the Corner. I like to go to school, but I go a mile and a quarter. And I am in the Third Reader. There are just lots of ducks here now.

Papa killed a goose the other day. I spoke "Heaven is Filled with Glory and Gilded Round with Gold" at the Literary, and next time "A Pious Parson." Delia and I help mamma wash dishes, and I can make bread and pie. I like to look at the pictures in THE TRUTH SEEKER. They would not let my grandpa join the Alliance, because he did not believe in a supreme being. I would be pleased to see this in the Corner. Yours truly,

AGNES WAINSCOTT.

HAMMOND, NEB., March 7, 1892.

MISS WIXON: My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am eleven years old. I help papa take care of the cattle and horses. Last night was a cold night, and this morning we found three little calves. Two were very cold, and we brought them to a fire to warm their little bodies. One got along all right, but the other did not. He seemed to be in great pain and misery, and I felt very sorry for him; but at last I had to giv him up for dead. I took him out and found under his head THE TRUTH SEEKER; so that, maybe, accounts for the pain and also death. My father is a Freethinker, and also my uncle. I would like very much to see this in print.

Yours respectfully,
MUNSON TAPPAN.

[We are very sorry for the poor little calf exposed to the cold. THE TRUTH SEEKER would hav warmed his little heart if it could, and had it not been too late. Munson must take better care of the calves next time.—ED. C. C.]

FLAT CREEK, LA., April 6, 1892.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav been reading the letters in the Corner about two years. Our family are the only Freethinkers in this country. Some of my schoolmates told me if I did not believe the Bible the devil would get me when I died. They said that they would be up in heaven and happy while I would be burning in hell. But that did not scare me, for I hav been taught better than to believe there is any such place. I hav been think ng I would write to the Corner for a long time, but I hav never written. I am going to school now. We liv in a mile and a half from the school-house. It is a nice school. I study grammar, arithmetic, history, geography, and elocution. We hav had three teachers in our school, but the professor dismissed one of them last week. That leaves us with only two now. I hav a pet goat, named Tiny, and four cats; their names are Coon, Mitty, Nigger, and Jack. I will be eleven years old in June. We liv on a farm in the country. My playmates beg me to go to Sunday-school, but I will not go. I would rather stay at home and read the Corner. This is my first effort in writing to the Corner. I will be pleased to see this in print. If you print this I will write again.

Yours for Freethought,
MINNIE SHUMAKER.

[Minnie is a brave, sensible, true-hearted girl. We are glad to count her among our friends, and hope to hear from her often. —ED. C. C.]

WENATCHEE, WASH., April 14, 1892.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: I thought I would hav a chat with the Corner to-day while it is raining and making everything disagreeable outside. I hav not written for a long time, so I guess you hav forgotten me. I think THE TRUTH SEEKER is progressing, but there are not letters enough. I wish you would start a paper. I would subscribe, and am sure you would hav a good many subscribers, for, of course, it would be a good paper if you would be editor, and Mary B. Finch, Ida Ballou, George Remsburg, and you would contribute to it. We hav had a very pleasant spring, except the last two or three weeks the weather has been rather cold. I hav not read either of your works, but am going to get them. I hav not any collection of minerals, but my sister has a small collection of specimens. My father owns a marble mine, and I will send specimens of it and other rocks to anyone who will send curiosities, etc. Our school has not begun yet. I like to go to school. I am fourteen years of age, and think I will enter the fifth grade next term. I would like to correspond with some girls who write to the Corner. I will close for this time. LOUISE C. PARRISH.

[We hav not forgotten Louise, but thought she had forgotten us. We thank her for her good opinion of us and of our friends. Some time, we trust, we shall see the paper we all so long to behold.—ED. C. C.]

CISNE, ILL., April 12, 1892.

MISS SUSAN WIXON, Dear Friend: I thought I would write again to the Corner, as it has been quite a while since I wrote. I see so many nice letters from our dear friends.

I saw an account in the Children's Corner this evening of the preacher's being away tending the Lord's business while his child got badly burnt. I will giv another event that happened last Sunday, not very far from where I liv. The preacher drove up, got out of his carriage, and was so busy thinking about his sermon, I suppose, that he did not tie his horse up, went in the church-house, and in a short time another team came hurrying by, his horse became frightened and found he was loose, ran away, and of course he broke the carriage to pieces. Now, doesn't it look very strange if there was a God that he would not pay any more attention to his blessed worker than if it had been one of his common friends? They would hav told him to tie his horse; while God, of course, according to the Bible, knew all that would happen and could hav told him just as easy as not to tie his horse, and he did not do it. I am afraid that shows God does not care any more for those that pretend to be so good and pious than he does for anyone else.

I wish we could hav some good Liberals giv us some lectures here. I think it would be much more elevating to listen to than these rascals of preachers that get up and tell you all about something that they know no more about than we do. But if we cannot hear Liberals I am glad we do hav the liberty of reading them sometimes; they are so good and interesting.

I am sorry to say I havn't any near Liberal friends, but I hav two Liberal correspondents; they are very interesting to me. I fear I hav taken up too much of your valuable space now, so good-bye.

From your kind friend,
GRACIE PRIDE.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

SOCIAL WEALTH:

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in Its Acquirement and Apportionment.

In proceeding toward any given point, there is always one line which is shortest—THE STRAIGHT: so, in the conduct of human affairs, there is always one course which is best—THE JUST.

By J. K. INGALLS.

12mo, 326 pp., large type, good paper, silk cloth, price $1.00.

CONTENTS:—Economic Schools—A Brief Review of Their Origin and Growth. Rise and Growth of Capitalism. Unearned Increase—Profit, Interest, Rent. Conservation of Wealth. Tools and Improved Machinery. The Nature of Wages. Private and Social Wealth. Land Ownership. Private Property in Land. Capital and the Productive Factors. Partnership and Cooperation. Law of Contracts. Money and Credit. Of Value, or Economic Ratios. Taxation as a Remedy. Reforms, not Remedies. Suggestions to Legislators. Summary of Definitions—Economic and Isonomic.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes,
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Martyrdom of Man.

By WINWOOD READE.

PRESS NOTICE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill. . . . The boldest and, so far as historical argument goes, one of the ablest assaults ever made upon Christianity.—[Literary World.

12mo, extra cloth, 543 pp. Price, $1.75.

THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN. M.D. Cloth. 50 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."
By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - 50 cents.

News of the Week.

MAY DAY passed quietly in European cities, except at Liege, Belgium.

THE pope's Episcopal Jubilee in 1893 will be "one of the grandest and most imposing celebrations of the nineteenth century."

THE insistence of Restaurant-keeper Dennett, of New York city, that his waiters shall join in prayer-meeting each evening, has led to trouble between him and the Central Labor Union.

ASSOCIATION with the ex-actress Mary Anderson, a fanatical Catholic, has resulted in the retirement to a convent of Miss Ruth Burnett, one of the brightest ornaments of New York and Boston society.

AT the departure of the steamship Conemaugh from Philadelphia with food for Russia, members of the Society of Friends held services on the vessel, asking the Lord's blessing on the relief work.

ROMAN CATHOLICS are incensed that the emperors of Germany and Austria are about to visit King Humbert of Italy, and thus honor one whom they call a usurper who has crowded the papacy out of its birthrights.

AT the anti-conventual meetings of the Protestant Alliance in England there are exhibited instruments of torture such as are used in convents, including scourges of rope, scourges of wire or steel, hair shirts and waistbands, and spiked bands and wristlets.

THE cargo of the American steamship Missouri saved thirty thousand lives in Russia. "Yet," reports Colonel McCrea, "it is only a drop in the bucket; little of the horrors of the famin is known to the world." The Russian clergy blessed the trains to which the cargo was transferred.

FATHER TREACY, of Burlington, N. J., told Matthew Gaynor that he must forbid the attentions of a Protestant young man named Charles Massey to his daughter Nellie or quit the priest's church. On the 1st Gaynor was driven out of his pew and out of the church by Father Treacy at the point of a revolver.

THE bishop of Nancy, France, is inciting his parishioners to resistance of the restrictions of the state. "The question is," he says, "whether the Catholics of France, including bishops, priests, and people, will bow their heads before such iniquities as are being committed and before such a state of servitude as is threatened."

IN an album containing inscriptions by the distinguished literary men of the country, got up to be sold for the Actors' Fair at New York, Colonel Ingersoll wrote: "'The world is a stage,' life a play, and all are actors. Let each perform his part so that when the curtain slowly falls he shall hear the music of applause. —R. G. Ingersoll."

THE old Catholic nobility of Italy are loth to hav dealings with the officials of the new government which is so imbued with Freethinking, but on the 29th ult. an explosion in the palace of Prince Massimo drove him to seek the authorities. His house is conservativ, and intimate with the Jesuits. The explosion is attributed to Anarchists. Arrests hav been made.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD has visited the great observatory at Mount Hamilton, Cal., erected by the Freethinker James Lick. He says: "Truly James Lick sleeps gloriously under the base of his big glass! Four thousand feet nearer heaven than any of his dead fellow-citizens, he is buried more grandly than any king or queen, and has a finer monument than their pyramids furnish to Cheops and Cephrenes."

AT the trial of Ravachol, the notorious French Anarchist, for his many crimes, the judges and the jury were so intimidated by threats of revenge on all who punished Anarchists that he and one of his fellow-criminals received only imprisonment for life, while the others were acquitted. This notwithstanding the French legislature had just enacted that all outrages with explosivs be punished with death At his arrest it was threatened that the proprietor of the inn in which he was taken, and the waiter there who betrayed him, would be killed, and in a few days the inn was blown up and the proprietor killed and others injured. As this was done in the teeth of special guards and precautions of the police, public confidence in those functionaries is lost. There is talk of vigilance committees and hangings, of supplanting the present civil authorities by ones that cannot be terrorized, or if these fail, proclaiming martial law and dealing with suspects summarily by court-martials and soldiers. Panic prevails. A number of nativ and foreign residents hav left. Anarchist violences are reported from various other European capitals, and feeling against the perpetrators is growing everywhere.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A Four days' debate between B. F. Underwood and Prof. O. A. Burgess, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Cloth, 80 cents.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Twelve Tracts.

BIBLE WORSHIP.
DARWINISM.
DESIGN ARGUMENT.
EVOLUTION.
JESUS NOT PERFECT.
UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD. Price, 25 cents.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
Star News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

Canada.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago. [Chicago.
Post-Office News Co., 103 Adams st.,
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

Indiana.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

Maine.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

New Jersey.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., New York.
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., New York.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

Texas.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. A. Andrea, 346 Main st., Dallas.
E. L. Merrill, 624 Elm st., East Waco.

Utah.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

England.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st., London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grand father's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners;

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

ABSOLUTE candor is the beginning of wisdom.—Ingersoll.

EVERY philosopher is destined to endure reviling and calumny. For one man capable of replying with reason, there are a hundred who hav nothing to advance but abuse, and everyone pays with the money which he possesses.—Voltaire.

I AM not sure but I should betake myself in extremities to the liberal divinities of Greece, rather than to my country's God. Jehovah, though with us he has acquired new attributes, is more absolute and unapproachable, but hardly more divine, than Jove. He is not so much of a gentleman, not so gracious and catholic, he does not exert so intimate and genial an influence on nature, as many a god of the Greeks.—Thoreau.

IF our deceased friends are in a conscious state, they thoroughly approve of any progress we make in truth in advance of their notions. It would be a pity to find we had been grieving them because we refused to accept the advance in knowledge since their day, or declined to use the electric light because they read by tallow candles or the light of the fire, as my father did, when a boy, for economy's sake.—Robt. C. Adams.

I AM the man, I suffer'd, I was there.
The disdain and calmness of martyrs,
The mother of old, condemn'd for a witch, burnt with dry wood, her children gazing on,
The hounded slave that flags in the race, leans by the fence, blowing, cover'd with sweat,
The twinges that sting like needles his legs and neck, the murderous buckshot and the bullets,
All these I feel or am.—Walt Whitman.

THOUSANDS of years before Christianity had ever been heard of, the polity of nations had obtained, there were commerce and manufacture, there were large and flourishing cities, agriculture was as well understood in China as it is here to-day; there were wise and salutary laws, and there was Freethought. Every thinker in the great school of Alexandria was encouraged to think with all the strength his mental constitution warranted, and in whatever direction his mental tendencies pointed. It is true that the world "grew gray at the breath" of Christianity, and that, as Professor Tyndall remarked at Belfast, the "victorious advance of Science" was arrested, and "the scientific intellect was compelled, like an exhausted soil, to lie fallow for two millenniums before it could regather the elements necessary to its fertility and strength." If this charge be true—and it is alas! too true—what a record of unutterable guilt this monstrous and blood-stained creed has to answer for! And what hav we got in return from it for all the darkness and blood and misery through which it has dragged us! Nothing. I speak deliberately and advisedly when I repeat we hav got literally nothing.—Saladin in God and His Book.

THAT man with all his eminent qualities and faculties is not a work of God but a product of Nature, like all his fellow-creatures, and has proceeded from a natural and gradual evolution and self-education—this momentous and notorious truth can only be doubted at this day by the ignorant or deliberately obstinate. During the short space of scarcely more than forty years the researches on the early history of the human race on earth hav grown into a comprehensiv science and hav shown that mankind has behind it a past in comparison with which the historical period is but very brief. As regards the biblical myths and fairy-tales about the world and man having been created some five or six thousand years ago by a creativ fiat, they are really too childish, too radically at variance with the most notorious facts and results of the whole geological, archeological, and archeogeological science, to be made the subject of a serious controversy. Not only has it been shown by the results of countless excavations, as well as by the investigations of Egyptologists, based on the reading of hieroglyphic scrolls, that in the venerable land of the Nile an admirable and highly developed culture and civilization existed at a period to which the Bible only traces the creation of the first man; but the researches of archeogeology, as the union of geological and archeological science is called, hav proved beyond doubt that man was a contemporary of the huge mammals of the diluvian age, which are now either extinct or hav emigrated from Europe; that he existed in one of the earlier periods of the formation of our earth, during which the surface of the globe had a very different geographical configuration and was subject to different climatic conditions from those that exist at the present time.—Buchner.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BEBRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

FITS.—All Fits stopped free by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. No fits after first day's use. Marvelous cures. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free to Fit cases. Send to Dr. Kline, 931 Arch st., Phila., Pa.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - - - - 40 cents.

The Proposed

POLITICAL, LEGAL, AND SOCIAL REFORMS.

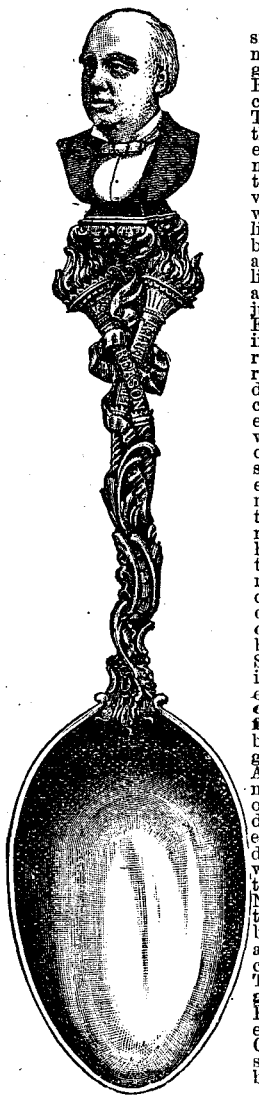
In the Ottoman Empire and Other Mohammedan States.

By MOULAVI CHERAGH ALI.

Published for the information of the Christian writers who suffer under the delusion that Islam is incapable of any political, legal, or social reforms.

Price, $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The



Col. Ingersoll SOUVENIR.

THE KING OF SPOONS

IN HONOR OF

THE KING OF ORATORS.

THE FINEST SPOON EVER DESIGNED.

Specifications: Designed (by kind permission of Colonel Ingersoll) and patented, Feb. 2, 1892. Magnificent portrait. The Torch of Reason and the Torch of Liberty, emblematical of the means our Great Orator and Leader of Advanced Thought would employ to enlighten the world, banish superstition and fear, and establish universal physical and mental liberty, justice and happiness. Exquisite scroll-work, in full relief, surrounds the spoon—a reverie of art. Students will study its charming lines. Lovers of the beautiful will go in raptures over it, and connoisseurs will want it to enhance the artistic merits of their collections. Exact size and model of cut (which, however, sadly fails to reproduce the correct likeness, power of portrait, and exquisite delicacy and charming lines of beauty, of original). Sterling silver. Massive. A precious souvenir of Our Greatest Public Benefactor, and a valuable family relic for generations to come. A suitable present for man, woman, youth, or child. For birthdays, anniversaries, engagements, weddings, token of reward and appreciation, for Christm s, New Year's, graduation, etc. There can be nothing nicer, so appropriate, so precious during life, as The Colonel Ingersoll Souvenir. Prices, $2.50 each; extra heavy, $3. Orange and sugar spoons, $3. Gilt bowls, 50 cents extra.

"THE TIME TO BE HAPPY IS NOW,"

and other mottoes, names, etc., etched in bowls in most artistic style, 50 cents extra. Sent upon receipt of price and money refunded if not satisfactory. Order of Designer if your jeweler does not supply it. Many are interested in their own inferior Souvenirs and will not sell the above. OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.
Established in 1857. Designer of "Otto Wettstein" Watch, and popular Freethought badge.

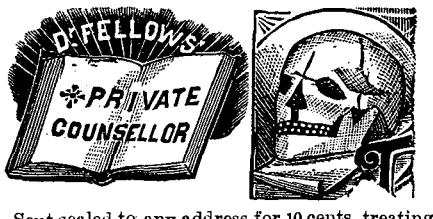
WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

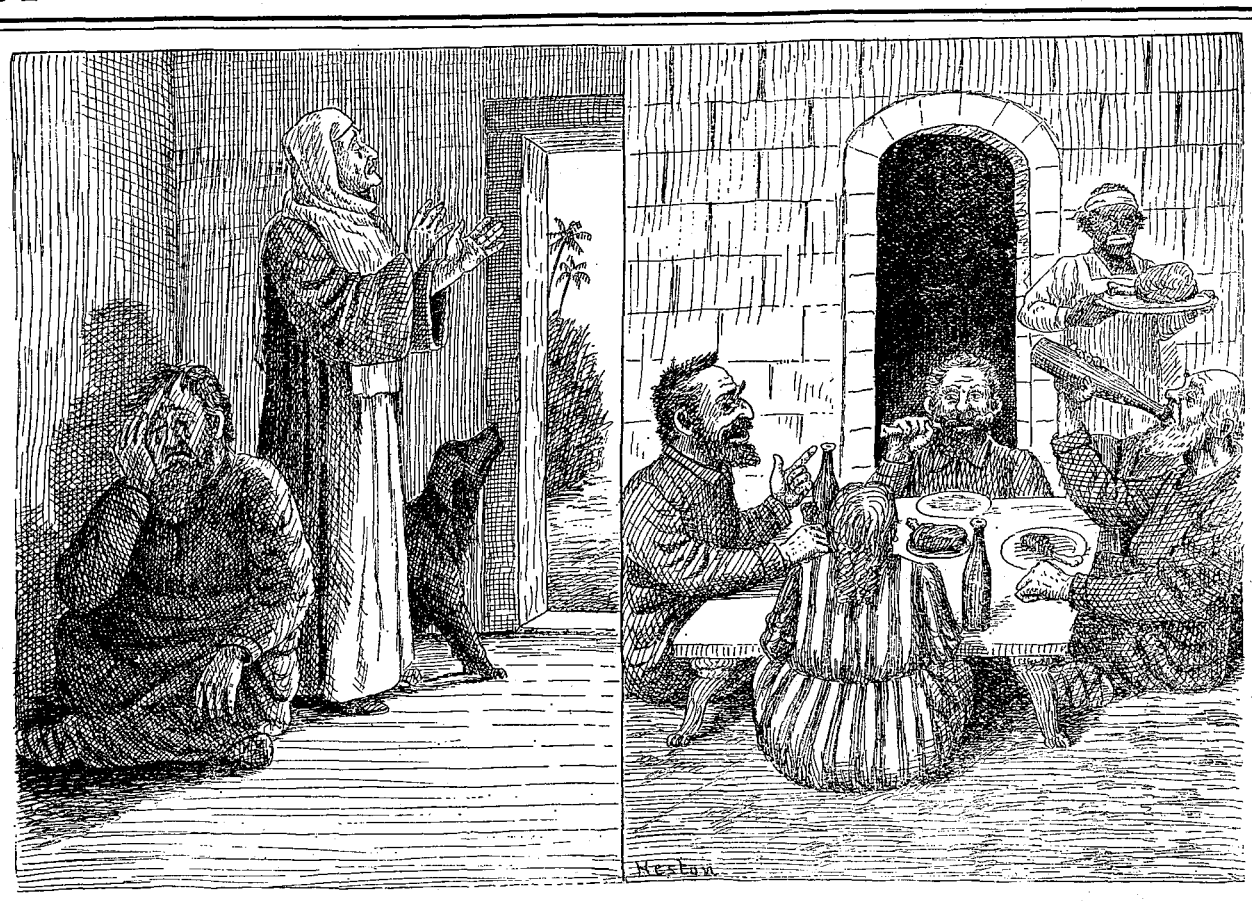
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street. Wilkesbarre. Pa.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.



ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville. Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE PREACHER CONTRADICTETH HIMSELF.

Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better. . . . Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry: for that shall abide with him of his labor the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.—Eccles. vii, 3; viii, 15.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price. 15 cts.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

Those of our readers who have not already signed and obtained signatures to this petition should now cut it out, paste it to a sheet of stout paper, get all the signatures possible, and send it before September 15th to John T. Dickinson, Secretary World's Columbian Commission, Rand-McNally building, Chicago, Ill.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago, who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

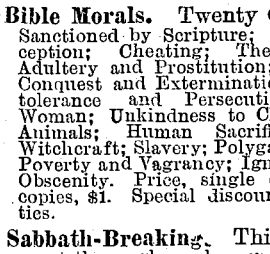
John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.



Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense.

This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

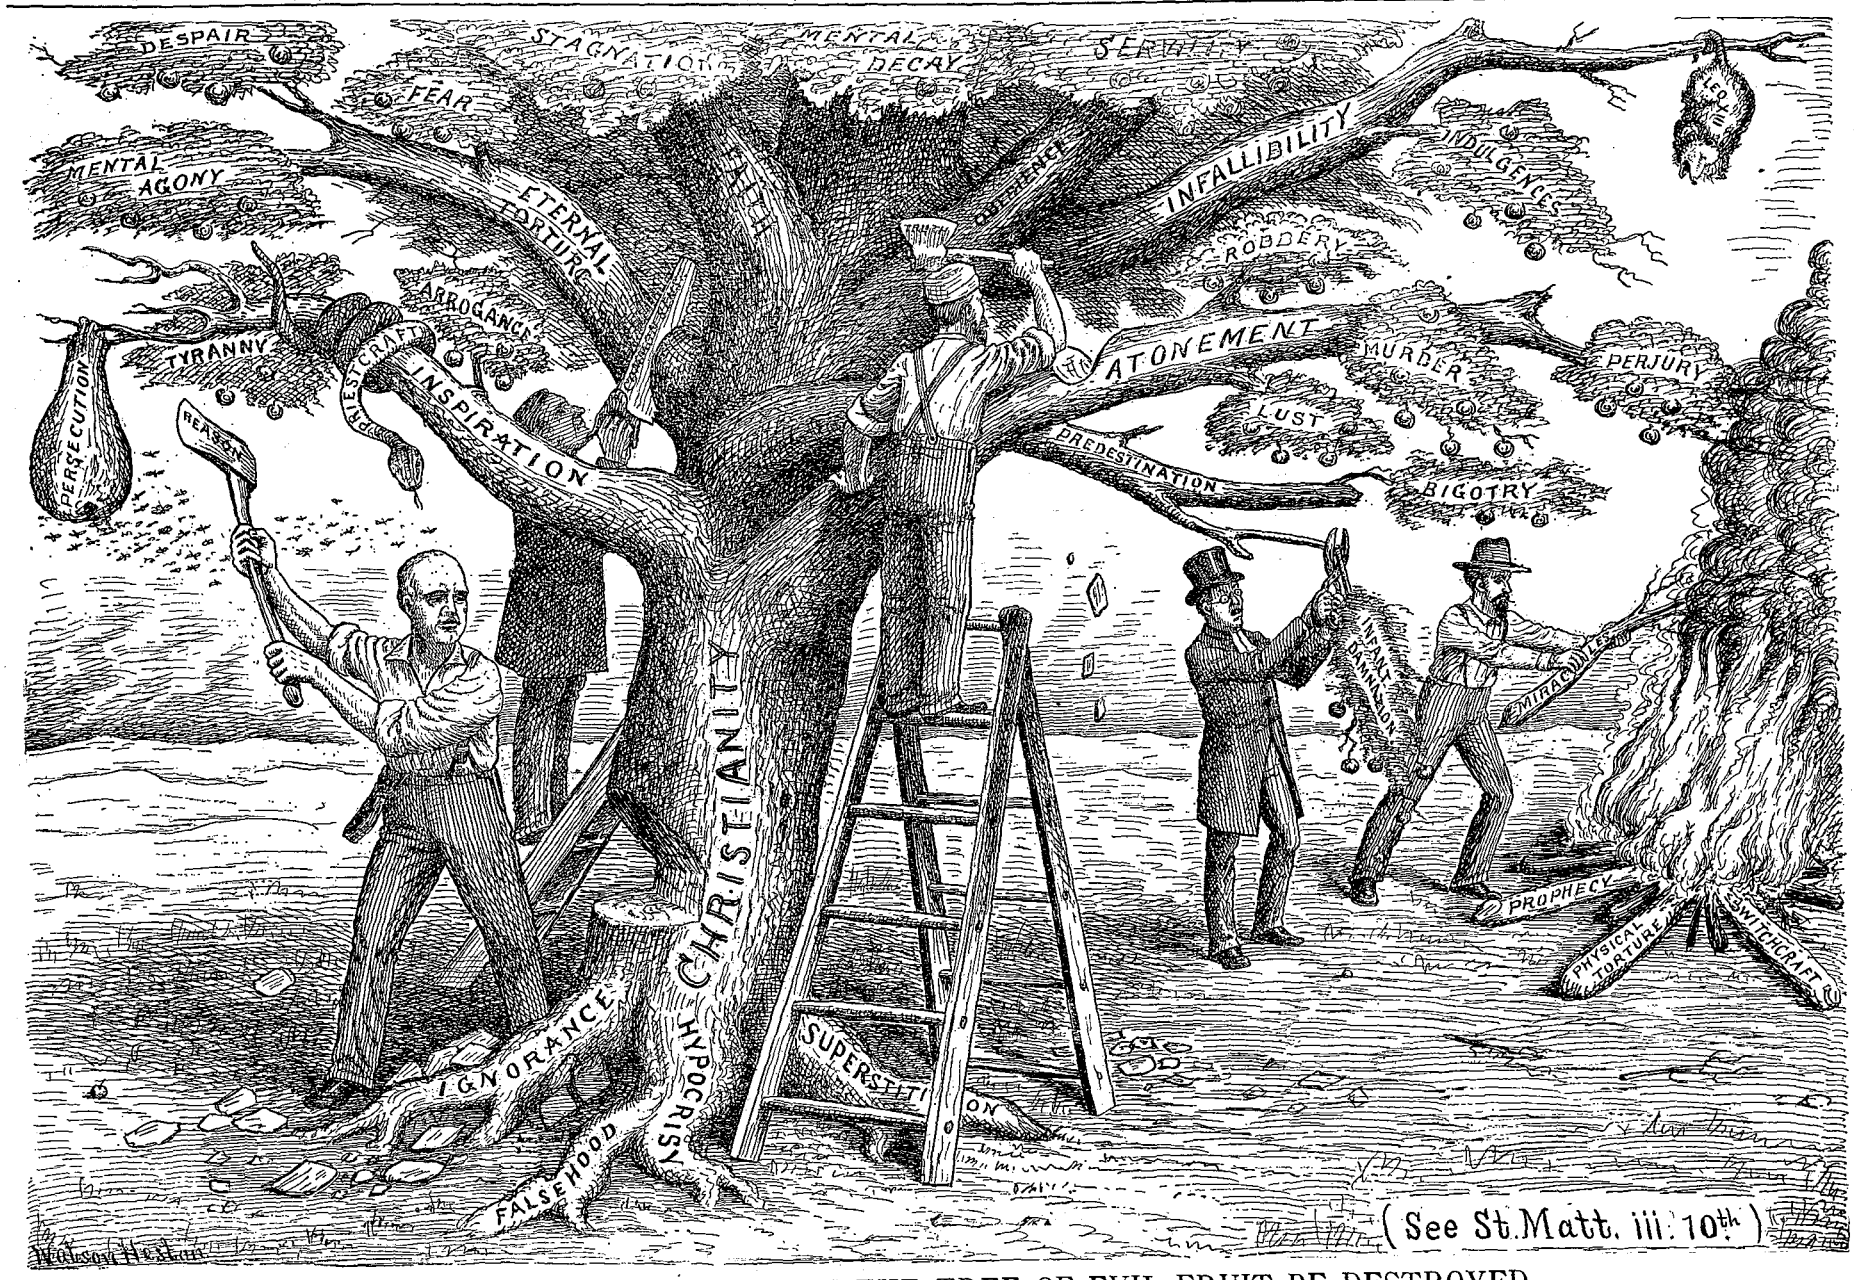
Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of

Supernatural Religion.



Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 20. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 14, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A SCRIPTURE TEXT—LET THE TREE OF EVIL FRUIT BE DESTROYED.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible.

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

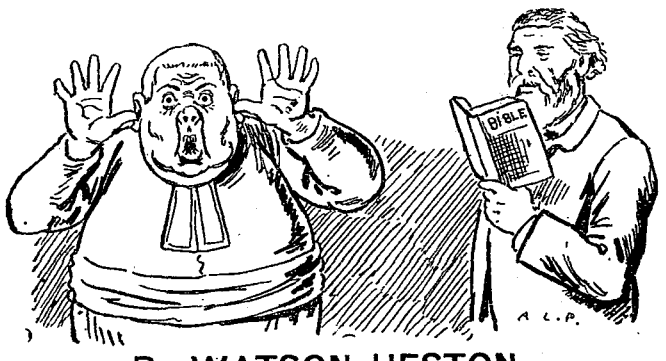
Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.



JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church." etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price. 25 cents.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth. 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX. M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper. 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886 Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literatnre. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth. 50c.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper. 50 cents; cloth. 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 20. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, May 14, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - MAY 14, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Cannot Fail to Hav a Good Effect.

From Secular Thought.

"Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated." By Heston. Four hundred pages; 200 full-page pictures, $1. New York: Truth Seeker Co.; Toronto: Secular Thought office. In this volume we are presented with a series of comical sketches which cannot fail to hav, on the whole, a good effect, though some friends may think them a little too "strong" for the milder section of the orthodox. For those who, however, regard the whole of the orthodox stories as dangerous delusions and myths, nothing that helps to put them in their real character before people should be objectionable. These sketches will certainly afford many a hearty laugh to every purchaser and reader of the two hundred pages of humorously told stories which accompany them.

The Effect of the Freedom of Worship Bill.

Senator David B. Hill went up to Albany last week and told Governor Flower to sign the Freedom of Worship bill; and it was signed. Probably Mr. Hill made a bargain with Mr. Corrigan to help him get the presidency.

The managers of the House of Refuge, a public institution conducted according to Protestant ideas, are wroth, very wroth. They must now divide their human religious spoils with the Catholics, who will undoubtedly be willing to furnish the capital to make Catholics out of the waifs and strays within the Refuge walls. It will not require a great sum, as the great majority of them were born of Catholic parents.

The managers of the Refuge will contest the matter, however, and resist any attempt to set up the machinery without which Catholics are not made with neatness and dispatch and in such quantities as to be profitable to the church. Soon after the bill was introduced in the legislature, when it first began to be understood that there was behind it an influence sufficiently strong, in all likelihood, to pass it and attach to it the governor's signature, there was an outburst of indignation among these managers, and several of them expressed their determination to resign in case the bill became a law. This sentiment seems to hav disappeared. Two members who declared a month ago they would resign declared yesterday they would hold on and "fight for all they were worth."

This change of front is due in part to the discovery of what are believed to be "oversights" in the bill, which, the majority of the managers believe, are sufficiently serious to render the bill practically inoperativ. There are two of these "oversights," and both occur in Section 3 of the bill, which is as follows:

"The rules and regulations established for the government of the institutions mentioned in this act shall recognize the right of the inmates to the free exercise of their religious belief, and to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences, in accordance with the provisions of the constitution, and shall allow (and provide for) holding religious services on Sunday and for private ministration to the inmates in such manner as may best carry into effect the spirit and intent of this act and be consistent with the proper disciplin and management of the institution, and the inmates of such institutions shall be allowed such religious services and spiritual advice and spiritual ministration from some recognized clergyman of the denomination or church which said inmates may respectivly prefer or to which they may hav belonged prior to their being confined in such institutions; but if any of such inmates shall be minors under the age of sixteen years, then such services, advice, and spiritual ministration shall be allowed in accordance with the methods and rites of the particular denomination or church which the parents or guardians of such minors may select; such services to be had and such advice and ministration to be given within the buildings or grounds where the inmates are required by law to be confined, in such manner and at such hours as will be in harmony as aforesaid with the disciplin and the rules and regulations of the institution, and secure to such inmates free exercise of their religious beliefs in accordance with the provisions of this act."

The managers think that their Protestantism is protected by the clause, "and be consistent with the proper disciplin and management of the institution," and the other clause near the end of the section, "in such manner and at such hours as will be in harmony, as aforesaid, with the disciplin and the rules and regulations of the institution," these constituting such a limitation of the act as will defeat its purpose by putting it in the power of the managers to declare that any and all purely sectarian services on Sunday are not in harmony with the rules and regulations and the "proper disciplin" of the institution; but are, in fact, inconsistent with the rules and regulations and with the maintenance of "proper disciplin."

To a Times reporter one of the managers said: "The board will fight. It will fight the bill clear through the supreme court. The large majority of the board is activly and vigorously opposed to the bill. Governor Flower announced that he would giv us an opportunity to protest against the bill April 28th. That opportunity was afterward denied us, and the governor signed the bill on the 30th, which fact showed clearly that his mind was already made up on the 28th. The board of managers look on the bill as an outrage on a non-sectarian institution. We rely on the two clauses in Section 3 in reference to our rules, regulations, and disciplin to render the act inoperativ, and we will, as a board, construe that act so broadly as to shut out all purely sectarian services. The next step will probably be in the shape of a complaint that some Roman Catholic inmate is denied a Roman Catholic service. On that complaint an application will be made to the supreme court to compel us to establish the Roman Catholic service in the institution, and the board of managers will go into court contending that the 'oversight' clauses in Section 3 giv the board the power to decide whether or not sectarian services conflict with the rules, regulations, and 'proper disciplin' of the institution."

So the immediate effect of the bill is to inaugurate a legal war, one side of which will be at the expense of the state, and of course these charges will not be light—they never are in anything when the fighters are using other people's money.

The only good that can come from this religious strife is that the people may get disgusted and eject both factions from the House of Refuge and other public institutions.

That Vanishing Theological Plague-Spot.

The striking from its creed by a Congregational church in Penacook, N. H., with only six dissenting votes, of the article requiring a belief in hell, has again started the controversy over that theological plague-spot. The action of the Penacook church is being widely discussed by the Trinitarian Congregationalists of New England, and is supported by a wide circle of preachers.

A few days ago a newspaper of this city sent its view-gatherers around to some of the more prominent clergymen of the town to find out what they think about hell. When Jonathan Edwards, the great New England Calvinist, was alive he did not hesitate to inform his brethren that when the damned majority had roasted till the sun, and the moon, and the stars had passed away, they would not then hav suffered a calculable portion of their torment, because it would last forever and ever.

The successors of this divine do not use such language, and it is hard to believe, says the World, that they hold the same views. Now, one hears that hell is an internal condition, and not a locality; that unending remorse, and not brimstone, will cause all the suffering. Every Protestant denomination has grown mild in its definition of hell and vague in its descriptions of it. Such a thing as avoidance of the subject because it is a disagreeable one has been heard of before, for does not Mr. Pope speak of a high ecclesiastical dignitary who never mentioned hell to ears polite? But that was quite another thing from palliating the terrors of the place of last resort. Moreover, Calvinistic pastors down to this generation were very far from avoiding mention of it as the dean did.

Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, of circus fame, was the first minister interviewed. It will be noticed that he, like some of the lesser lights of Calvinism, has a loophole into heaven for even the Infidels. The reporter asked:

"Do you believe in a hell?"

"Certainly."

"Do you believe that heathens who never heard of the Christian religion go to hell?"

"No, not necessarily."

"Do you believe in a personal devil?"

"Yes."

"Do you believe that Infidels go to hell?"

"No, not necessarily."

"Do you believe that infants go to hell?"

"No."

"What percentage of humanity goes to hell?"

"I am not learned in the arithmetic of eschatology."

The same questions were put to Dr. Greer, Episcopalian, who was a little hazy in his ideas. He said:

"Every man living in a wrong way is in hell. Hell is on earth. It is no less corruption because people like it."

"Do you believe that heathens who never heard of the Christian religion go to hell?"

Dr. Greer replied that he knew nothing of the future. "Sin is hell here and hereafter. Death purifies no one. The heathen will hav a chance, and if he takes it will get into heaven. A pure and unselfish life is heaven; an impure life is hell, everywhere. All laws are fixed, and are God's laws. Heaven and hell are not localities, but qualities."

"Do you believe in a personal devil?"

"There are lots of them in New York."

"Do you believe that infants go to hell?"

"No."

"How many persons go to hell?"

"I cannot answer without stultifying myself."

Dr. Gallaudet, also an Episcopalian, believed firmly in hell, but had a purgatorial annex for the heathen. He said:

"There is an intermediate state where those who hav acted according to their lights go. But after the intermediate state, in which those who hav acted according to their lights are happy, and those who hav not are miserable, comes judgment, when the Lord decides it all. The heathen does not go to hell if he has acted rightly."

"Do you believe in a personal devil?"

"I believe in a personal devil overruled by God."

"Infants," he said, "are happy in a future state. 'Men who are perversely wicked,' as Peter said, 'go to their own place.' There is a penalty for willful sin. How it is administered is unknown. The heathen will not suffer for not having acted up to a light which they hav not." Dr. Gallaudet believed in eternal punishment, but said that "eternal" is beyond any human conception. He did not believe that the perversely wicked would be annihilated. Nobody goes to heaven or hell, but to the intermediate state. What takes place after the judgment is too dreadful to speak about. Justice, however, will be tempered with mercy.

Dr. Messaros, "Free Will Baptist," said he believed in Plato's hell.

"Do you believe that heathens who never heard of the Christian religion go to hell?"

"No."

"Do you believe that infants go to hell?"

"No."

"Do you believe that Infidels go to hell?"

"Infidels make their own hell hereafter and help to make hell for people here. He who teaches a wrong thing or robs a human soul of its purity, hope, and aspiration must suffer until the remotest influence of the wrong that he has done is wiped out from the generations of humanity. I believe that men sin after they are dead."

"What per cent of people go to hell?"

"That percentage is a mathematical problem left to God. It is not my duty to hav any feeling with regard to that, but only with regard to saving sinners. I am in accord with the creed of the Free Will Baptist church, and when I change my opinions I am neither weak enough, mean enough, nor sufficiently cowardly to continue in a Free Will Baptist pulpit. If this life is a state of probation, will must necessarily enter into it, and those who hav not willed to reject salvation cannot be damned for its rejection. Of course this applies to the heathen."

Episcopalian Dr. Satterlee believes in hell, but thinks that infants and heathens who never heard of Christ will not be sent there; and he did not think it wise for him to try to judge Infidels. Dr. Virgin, Congregationalist, said:

"I believe in a hell just as much as I believe in a heaven, and I believe in them both as much as I believe in this world."

"Do you believe that heathens who never heard of the Christian religion go to hell?"

"That depends on themselvs. I cannot judge. Every man will be treated according to the light he has. Doubtless many so-called heathens are in heaven. 'Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?' (Gen. xviii, 25)."

"Do you believe in a personal devil?"

"I do, emphatically."

"Do you believe that Infidels go to hell?"

"If they reject the savior of mankind they do."

"Do you believe that infants go to hell?"

"No. The Lord is their savior. 'Of such is the kingdom of heaven.'"

"What per cent of people go to hell?"

"I hav no means of judging. The savior said in answer to the question, 'Are there few that be saved?' 'They shall come from the north and south and east and west to sit down in the kingdom.' Every man's duty is to look out for himself."

The Rev. Thomas Dixon, Baptist, but not the one with whom Colonel Ingersoll is having a small legal discussion, believes in hell and a personal devil, but thinks infants and heathen, who never heard of Christ, will not be sent downward, and that finally, when things are adjusted, hell will be pretty thinly populated. The Rev. B. S. De Costa, of the Episcopal church, who recently called attention to himself by praying with the young women whose iniquitous frolics the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst witnessed, in answer to the question as to the existence of a personal devil said: "I believe in something worse, in the existence of an all-pervading principle of evil. If the devil were a person, he might be dealt with by a club. There is, however, some personality." It is not thought that in this Mr. De Costa referred to Mr. Parkhurst.

The Rev. Dr. R. S. Macarthur, Baptist, would make Jonathan Edwards turn in his grave if that quaint worthy had telephonic connection with the doctor's study. He said:

"Heaven is a place—this we are distinctly told; but it is a condition as well. The same remark will apply to hell. Future punishment is not so much an external infliction as it is an inward condition. You cannot punish an innocent man. This the omnipotent God cannot do.

"I say it deliberately, no man will ever go to hell but the man who wishes to go, who is determined to go, who has elected to go; every man will go where, in his deepest nature, he wants to go. We hav only to analyze a man's deepest choices to discover whither he is going. God can not keep a man who loves him out of heaven."

"Do the heathen that hav never heard of the Christian religion go to hell?"

"Where there is no sense of guilt, there cannot be, in its deepest sense, an experience of punishment. There may be suffering, and intense suffering, but not the sense of punishment, which is inseparably associated with the consciousness of guilt. The heathen will suffer much. They will lose indescribably, but they will not suffer, they cannot suffer as men must who hav neglected greater opportunities, and who hav turned their back upon brighter light."

"Is there a personal devil?"

"Most assuredly. This point is to be determined by the same argument as we use in deciding on the existence and personality of Cæsar, Napoleon, Grant, or any other historical character. The scripture everywhere attributes personal agency in describing the character and conduct of the devil or Satan. Actions are ascribed to him which can be attributed only to a person. He tempts; he resists; he is charged with guilt. He is to be punished. Assuming that the sacred writers believe in a personal devil, they used exactly the language which such a belief would choose to express itself. If they did not so believe they are to be charged with falsehood in using language whose natural interpretation teaches such a belief."

"Do infants go to hell?"

"Baptists hav never so believed. There were times when they were almost the only Christians in the world who believed that the children of the Turk, the heathen, or the Infidel would be saved."

"What per cent of people will go to hell?"

"One does not wish to speak ex cathedra on a subject like this. The judge of all the earth will do right. No heathen will be condemned for rejecting a savior of whom he has never heard. He will be condemned for not walking in the light he possesses. The descriptions of heaven represent the number of inhabitants as unspeakably great. The number of saved children will make heaven bright and beautiful, glad and glorious, with their unnumbered throngs. The proportion of the saved, I gladly believe, will be vastly greater than the lost.

"The proportion of the lost to the saved may be no greater than that of the occupants of our jails and prisons now to those who enjoy the liberty which right lives giv. Doubtless many of these questions are sometimes merely frivolous and at other times merely speculativ."

Across the water, too, the same question is troubling the Congregationalists, as we see by a report in the Freethinker of a sermon by one of their preachers. In England as in America, says Mr. Foote, the churches are face to face with a great popular revolt against the old brutalities of faith, and are trimming their sails as far as they can to weather the storm. Much dogmatic cargo is being pitched overboard, and one of the first dogmas to disappear is "everlasting fire." Mr. Spurgeon's death is a relief to the churches. They are now more free than ever to carry on that process of adjustment which is necessary to creeds as well as to men if they are to liv. Mr. Foote cites as one of the proofs of this the sermon alluded to, in which the preacher declared the idea of a material hell to be "absurd," though like his American brethren he held to some sort of a place or period of punishment which is an "awful fact." But just what the place is he confessed that he did not know.

It is evident from the remarks of all these reverend gentlemen that while they perforce iterate a belief in hell as their creeds call for, they do not at all believe in the real hot old simon-pure place of everlasting torment of John Calvin and Jonathan Edwards. The men in the pulpits are becoming civilized because the people in the pews hav grown in intellectual if not in spiritual grace. That this growth, in this country at least, is largely due to the efforts of America's most popular speaker no one can deny. His greatness as an orator has commanded the attention of the press, and his convincing sentences hav commanded the adherence of the readers. In this glorious work the Liberal press has also effectivly shared, and we may modestly hope that in connection therewith THE TRUTH SEEKER has not been published in vain.

A Sacred Relic.

How deep in superstition the Roman Catholics are sunk is again shown by the arrival in America of a "relic," consisting of three inches of the wrist of St. Anna, alleged to hav been the grandparent, on his mother's side, of Jesus Christ. It is finally to be deposited in a Catholic church in Canada, but was exhibited in this city prior to being taken to its permanent place. The priest who had it in charge said that the arm of St. Anna has been in Rome for many centuries, and that the popes hav refused to consent to the removal of any part of it. The arm, he said, was in a good state of preservation when he saw it. He went with the prior of St. Paul's to the place where the relic is kept. The prior began to saw a piece off the wrist. The saw broke, and he had to use a saw he himself had brought. The fragment he secured is one-half of the wrist, about three inches long, and to it the skin and flesh, darkened and shriveled by time, still adhere. This was put into a casket of bronze lined with gold. The casket is about six inches long. It has a glass cover, through which the relic can be seen. Around the relic is a slip of paper on which is printed, "Ex brachio S. Annæ, M. B. M. V.," which means, "From the arm of St. Anna, mother of the blessed Virgin Mary." The abbot of St. Paul's put a seal on the casket, and it is still unbroken.

The church in this city where it was shown was visited by hundreds of poor foolish dupes, and its guardian had the impudence to manufacture a story that one morning a woman entered the church on crutches, hobbled to the altar, kissed the relic and touched it to the part of her body affected. Then she knelt in prayer for a long time. When she picked up her crutches she found that she was able to walk without them. "She left the church praising God and completely cured." As the relic is still in its glass case, with seal unbroken, it will be seen that, like spirits, glass is no obstacle to its influence.

We advise the Catholics, however, to get this relic to Canada as quickly as possible. Out in the backwoods of that ignorant country it will be much easier to get the people to believe these yarns.

The Literature Fund.

We hav exhausted our Literature Fund—overdrawn it, in fact—in sending literature on the Sunday question to Congressmen.

When the time for the Columbian commission to decide whether the World's Fair shall be open or closed on Sundays arrives there will be some rather heavy expenses to be borne in presenting our side, and we hope that our friends will again giv us a balance in the fund.

There is always something turning up requiring work and cash, and while we stand ready to do the work we cannot provide all the cash. That must be done by our friends.

The Catholic church has lost two slaves in Orange, N. J., by the greatest of all human passions—Love. Mary E. Campbell was excommunicated for being married in Lent, by a Reformed minister, and John J. Cullen was excommunicated for allowing a Protestant minister to unite him to the woman who loved him. We record these names with pleasure. In announcing these sentences the priest discoursed upon the evils of mixed marriages, but it occurs to us that these particular unions worked particularly well.

On the last page of this paper will be found the petition to the World's Columbian Commission asking that the World's Fair be open Sundays. We hope that every one of our readers who has not signed and obtained signatures to this document will follow the directions printed with it. And if those who hav obtained signatures to it can get others they ought to do so. We will also repeat the advice given previously, that whenever our readers see an editorial or communication in any paper asking that the Fair be kept open they should send the paper, folded with the article outside, heavily marked, to John T. Dickinson, secretary World's Columbian Commission, Rand-McNally building, Chicago, Ill.

The Ingersoll souvenir spoon, patented by Otto Wettstein, is a handsome piece of metal, and no doubt will adorn many Agnostic tables at banqueting time. It will also make an appropriate present for well-loved nieces and nephews of tender years, and Mr. Wettstein can no doubt furnish the usual accompaniment. The likeness to Colonel Ingersoll is very good, and the work upon the handle, representing two crossed torches of reason and liberty, is well executed. Prices and a fuller description will be found in our advertising columns.

In printing the photograph of Colonel Ingersoll at home, with his daughter's babe upon his knee, around which it appropriately prints the prose poem on Life, the Illustrated World's Fair says: "For the entertainment and diversion of our subscribers, we this month offer a novelty in the way of a reproduction from a very recent likeness of Colonel Ingersoll and his little granddaughter, Eva Ingersoll Brown, accompanied by the monograph called 'Life,' one of the masterpieces of the orator and poet who now, as far as we know, stands alone in the living world. Colonel Ingersoll is so well come upon the summit of fame that the ordinary scribe and the ordinary orator go together and meet him, only to be unitedly dwarfed into a sense of ridiculous egotism and pretension. This man, then, holds upon his knee a child just entered on the world of progress. The child unhesitatingly asks its elder what excuse he can giv for tarrying in the land given over to the conquest of youth. Delightedly, he makes no apologies. He cannot suggest a reason for staying. He must depart. It will suffice—it will alone suffice—to enthrone youth in its own empire, its heritage. Who on earth—who are you?—what business can you hav that you should encroach on my existence—on me, who hav the rich treasury of all the years? So says this baby to the most instant orator, the most terrible controvertist, the most resolute and considerate foe, the most seductiv of human entertainers." The photograph which induced this honest expression can be had for fifty cents.

In the West.

News and Notes.

On Wednesday, April 27th, I reach the broad acres of wood and field, beautiful in the flush of spring, that spread about the handsome home of Friend Shoemaker, who came to this country fifty-two years ago. Looking over the brilliant scene that greets the eye to-day, one can scarcely imagin the unbroken wilderness that stretched about the first pioneers. One can scarcely realize the trials through which they passed—the poverty, the suffering. The settlers had to go thirty and forty miles to the store and to the mill. A hundred dollars cash was looked upon as a fortune. Shoemaker relates that nigh on fifty years ago he went to a Fourth-of-July celebration at Auburn. He braided his own hat, knit his own suspenders, wore a "muslin" shirt and "muslin" breeches, and shoes without any stockings. He was happy as a lark that eventful day, and probably amidst all the fortunes of succeeding years he has not had any more unalloyed pleasure than when, a boy, he trudged to what to him was the most gorgeous affair possible.

Over half a century has rolled by, and a wonderful transformation has taken place. Railroads, cities, factories, farms, make a varied and cheerful picture; and the flag of Freethought also floats bravely. Shoemaker, like myself, has been through the religious phases of orthodoxy. He has been converted, and for years was an ardent believer. However, with the growth of civilization Freethought blossomed, and religion decayed.

There are quite a number of churches at Waterloo, but the Liberal element is well represented. I gave three lectures, and the audiences constantly increased. On the last evening the Opera House was full. There was a little flurry of a discussion the last two evenings. A young clergyman—just graduated, I should judge, and inexperienced in debate—endeavored to make some remarks, in answer to my lecture on "The Bible." He merely quoted, however, the eulogiums of Mill, Renan, and Napoleon as to the character of Jesus, which had no relation to what I had proved about the Bible itself. He desired to know what question I was willing to debate. I gave him the question which I thought best adapted to state the difference between Christianity and Freethought, namely: "Resolved, That the Bible is of divine origin." He did not want to discuss this question. He said there was too much in it for any Christian clergyman to tackle, as of course there is. He wanted to specialize the question. He read over about twenty propositions that he wanted discussed, and said he had twenty more that he would read if he had time. He wished to debate all these particular propositions in place of the general proposition, the divinity of the Bible. Finally he settled upon the question of miracles, and I accepted that. Whether he will meet the issue I do not know. If he does there will be some lively times in Waterloo.

I find in company with E. R. Shoemaker and his family a solid phalanx at Waterloo—Charles Voss, who is a most energetic worker; R. G. Daniels, who, I am sorry to say, is upon a bed of sickness, but "bates no jot of heart or hope" for the cause; A. Herzog, who enrolls on the TRUTH SEEKER list; also John Wittner and Scott Brecbill; Jacob Saltsman, always ready to help; William Jackman, John Campbell, E. Williams, Mr. Fisk, etc. I think Waterloo is one of the best places I hav visited. I hav had a royal good time. I hav rested to my heart's content amidst rain and sunshine in this ample country life, in a big house, with plenty of room and good company, a delightful prospect on every side, green fields and woods, beautiful skies resplendent with clouds, sunset, and the glorious night, the new moon radiant among countless stars.

With pleasant memories and hopes I leave this land which from the dark wilderness has bloomed to such luxury and wealth.

I stop over an hour or two at Fort Wayne. I meet J. W. Garman, Captain Stockbridge, Mr. Hull, and others. Fort Wayne, they tell me, is a pretty difficult place for Freethought lecturers. There are over thirty churches here, some of them of massiv appearance. They tower like ancient and vast castles, almost overwhelming one with their mighty spires. A whole square in the heart of the city is owned by the Catholic church. It is packed with buildings for schools, churches, libraries, etc., and is untaxed. Evidently Fort Wayne will be a rugged battle-ground one of these days for liberty and justice. Yet with these frowning evidences of future peril the Liberals are quiescent. There is nothing to do, seems to be the prevailing thought.

On Saturday night I arrive at Massillon and am welcomed to the home of J. H. Hunt and family. This is a delightful place when spring and summer weave their flowery dance. It is just outside the busy city—with its mills, its tall chimneys, rolling smoke and steam—on a soft undulation of hills, adorned with groves, a lake embosomed in the midst, glittering greensward around, and far prospects to the horizon beneath the sunny and cloudless skies. Here with books and papers and cultivated thought and genial society one can pass the hours with plenty of faith in the "good time coming."

But a cloud has passed over this home, not dark, but lustrous in its sorrow with the noblest memory. Salmon Hunt, always the stanch friend of Freethought, the father of J. H. Hunt, has passed away, at the age of seventy-nine years. He has lived a life of varied activity, one of the most prominent and successful business men in Massillon, honored and beloved in the community, a quiet, gentle, genial man, yet indomitable in his spirit, and of unquestioned integrity. He died calmly, philosophically, without fear and without regret. Although a thorough Freethinker, he believed in the immortality of the soul. By the process of his own reason he arrived at this conclusion. He is certainly immortal in the memory which he bequeathes to his children, and in the results of his life-work. He has ever been true to himself; he has been generous in his support of the Liberal cause, and just and hospitable in his treatment of the churches and creeds with which he did not affiliate. Death is made glorious with a life so benignant, so fearless, so fruitful. Mr. Hunt died seven weeks ago, and only four weeks ago another member of the family, Archer C. Corns, passed away, who only a few months ago was married to Mary L. Hunt, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hunt.

So youth mingles with age on the mystic roll of death. Mr. Corns was only twenty-six years old when he died, a beautiful life before him of happiness and of labor. Of him the Massillon Independent says: "He was the soul of honor, of loyalty, and of truth. He looked on the bright side of everything and of everybody. To his friends he was near and dear in a way that can scarcely be expressed or understood, and as a citizen he had lofty ideals."

So the beauty of life is mingled with infinit sorrow. All the million prayers of men cannot change it. But we will honor the dead and they shall be a cheer and hope to us in the battle of life. We will not lose our courage, although we cannot escape the iron hand. We will gem the darkness with flowers of love and memory. In the divine words of Ingersoll, "Tears for the dead, help for the living."

I lecture Sunday evening at Massillon. Not a large audience is present. I lecture on "Shall the World's Fair be Open on Sunday?" This question has been somewhat discussed by the press and pulpit of Massillon. It is to be noted that so far as Massillon is concerned the pulpit is not unanimous for the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday. Some of the clergymen here are brave enough and wise enough to favor Sunday opening. Christians are by means a unit on this matter. Massillon is a Liberal city, but the Liberals see so much progress within the churches that they think the world is moving on without their assistance. They do not realize that though these ancient dogmas may be banished from the pulpit, they are still imbedded in the laws, and that on that line a long and hard battle is to be fought, and the help of every Liberal is needed. Also Freethought is constructiv and everyone interested in intellectual and moral development should aid the power of Liberalism in this direction, for Christianity certainly cannot do this immense and important work. It is hoped that these latent possibilities of the Liberal element will be brought forth.

By the kindness of Mr. J. H. Hunt I went over to Canton Sunday afternoon to see the baseball game. Over a thousand people were present. There is quite a contest going on as to whether there shall be any Sunday games or not. The Sunday games, however, are winning the day in Cincinnati and other places. They are certainly powerful influences against church rule. The games are healthful, invigorating, and delightful. It is a moral good to witness these splendid exhibitions of skill and strength. The baseball game will capture the Sunday for the benefit of humanity, and will fling sunshine and joy in the place of ecclesiastical gloom. I enjoyed the sport not only in itself, but because I felt that every time the ball was struck the church itself received a tremendous rap, and that the flying globe was a new declaration of independence.

I must not forget Don H., who is one of the most remarkable objects in Massillon, and worthy of record because I feel that there is not a particle of orthodoxy in his superb frame. Don H. is a magnificent St. Bernard dog, owned by Mr. Hunt. It is simply a pleasure to look at him. He took the third prize at the New York exhibition. I think he will take the first prize at the World's Fair. He weighs one hundred and eighty two pounds and measures seven feet and a half from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail. He is magnificently proportioned and conveys an impression of strength and beauty such as you might imagin a lion would do. He is gentle as a child. Reposing on the greensward in the brilliant sunshine he is an image of noble animal perfection that givs one more faith in the "innate goodness of things" than several preachers or many churches would do.

On Monday evening I lecture at North Lawrence. Mr. Hunt accompanies me here. I find some stalwart Liberals, Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Higginbottom, and Mr. Jacob Lawrence, of Canal Fulton. All these take hold with a will and the lecture is a success. The hall is nearly full. This is quite a point for Liberal meetings. It is a mining camp, and not very large, but the Liberals manage to keep things moving, and the women are as earnest as the men. Mr. Higginbottom once walked nine miles to Massillon in order to secure the services of Mr. Watts for a lecture. I am sure that women ought to vote when they show such splendid enthusiasm for human progress. Where is the man's record that will beat this?

I hav had a most enjoyable time at Massillon. I must thank Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hunt for their kind attentions and the hospitality I hav received in their lovely home, where nature mingles its splendor with human hope and thought and toil. W. S. Moke, Mr. Lowe, and others are on the roll of workers.

I believe that Massillon some day, not only in spirit, but in number, will be in the front rank of Liberalism.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Massillon, May 3, 1892.

AFTER MANY YEARS.

Full and Unexpected Developments of the Russell Outrages.

The Guilty Parties Can Keep Their Secret no Longer.

Fifteen years ago, or, more particularly, Oct. 6, 1877, Dr. L. J. Russell, of Bell county, Texas, was decoyed from home by a mob and severely whipped. The only cause ever assigned for this treatment was that the doctor was a leader in a society of Liberals and that his Infidel doctrins were calculated to do harm to the youth of the country. Dr. Russell was then and is now one of the most highly respected of Bell county's citizens. In his long residence there he has always shown those traits of character that go to make up the perfect gentleman, and in the literary field as well as in medical lore he occupies a high position. He is a good speaker, a logical reasoner, and is bold and aggressiv in his utterances against any and every thing that is in his opinion a sham. The punishment inflicted upon him for his religious views was deeply deplored at the time by his many friends and by those who differed from him on religious points. The circumstances were commented upon extensivly; and all over the United States, and even in Europe, the act received the strongest condemnation. It was regarded as a fresh outbreak of that spirit of intolerance that for years had been sleeping and was supposed dead in our country, and of course was strongly resented by those of liberal religious views and regretted by the true Christians everywhere. The very barbarity of the crime against so respectable a man, taken into connection with the general belief that religion had long since ceased to use the stake as a means of conversion, caused many people to believe that there was no such outrage committed, and doubtless there are some yet living who always had their doubts about the matter. As the years rolled by and no one was apprehended, the circumstances had well-nigh passed from the minds of the public. Not so, however, with the victim and his friends. They hav been quietly on the hunt for the perpetrators all the time, and although positiv evidence came only lately, yet for a long time all the parties hav been suspected. Dr. Russell has borne himself as a true man in all his experiences, and has exercised a spirit of forbearance most commendable. Be it said also for the cause of Christianity that but one of the activ participants in the whipping was, so far as known, impelled by a religious zeal, the other parties seeming to be but handy tools imported from another county. To what extent religious enthusiasm inspired the whipping may perhaps be inferred from the statements of some of the parties thereto. The history of the outrage and the development of the long-concealed circumstances connected with it are given in the papers upon the subject now before us.

The Association of Freethinkers of Bell county, Texas, was organized at Little River Academy in the summer of 1875. The organization was kept up until after the whipping of Dr. Russell in 1877. They held lectures and debated with their Christian friends and others, and during the two summers had a Sunday-school. Dr. Russell delivered lectures on botany, illustrating them with flowers and plants peculiar to Texas. The Association sent a representativ to the first meeting of the Liberal League at Philadelphia in July, 1876. A charter was obtained and the organization became Auxiliary No. 43 of the National Liberal League. In July, 1877, Dr. Russell held a three days' debate with a Presbyterian preacher, Rev. Dr. Rawlings. Shortly afterward the doctor entered into agreement with a Christian preacher, Rev. Dr. Scott, for a debate, but the whipping took place before the time set and the meeting never took place, as the White Cappers exacted as one of the promises from Dr. Russell that he could not debate with Mr. Scott or anyone else.

The whipping was done as stated on the night of the 6th of October, 1877. A notice as follows was afterward posted on a tree near the Academy:

NOTICE—This is to certify that on Saturday night, the 6th of October, 1877, the Rev. Dr. Russell was called to see a mover's wife camped at this place, and that on the doctor's arrival three other men came out and captured him, and hit him a hundred licks with a leather strap, and let him loose on condition that he would not lecture or debate on infidelity any more in this county. Now a word to Nunnely, Posey, Marshall, and, in fact, to all the leading men of the Infidel club. If any of you take his place we will burn you out of house and home, and hang you until you are dead. If any man in this county is injured on account of what has been done, we will burn you all out. We hav got 50 men to back us. Gents, we mean business; infidelity has got to stop in this country as well as horse-stealing.

No clue to the perpetrators could be found, and after a time the matter ceased to be talked about, except by the parties most directly interested. It was not until this spring that the tale began to unravel. The notice as above printed was posted, as stated by Mr. Lacey, because he could hear nothing of the affair and desired to learn what public opinion would be.

Recently Dr. Russell learned that a man named J. W. Hill could tell him something of the affair. A meeting was arranged with Hill and from him the following affidavit was obtained:

THE STATE OF TEXAS, COUNTY OF BELL:

Before me, Otto K. Burwitz, a notary public in and for Bell county, Texas, on this day, personally appeared J. W. Hill known to me to be the person whose name is subscribed to this affidavit, after being duly sworn by me states on his oath as follows:

In the summer of 1879 a certain party told me that in the year of 1877 he had been solicited by Henry Lacey, living at that time in the Greathouse settlement in Bell county, Texas, to go to whip Dr. Russell, living near Harrisville, in Bell county, Texas, and on Dec. 24, 1881, I, J. W. Hill, met Joe Estes at the Willow Springs school-house, Falls county, and asked him as follows: "Joe, I want to ask you something I hav heard of, but I do not want you to question me where and of whom I got it. It is this: Who were the men that whipped Dr. Russell near Harrisville, on the night of about Oct. 6, 1877?" to which he answered: "It was myself, Joe Estes, Joe Copeland, Henry Lacey, and John Gable," saying further that he, Joe Estes, was the man who went to Dr. Russell's house that night requesting him to go with him to see his, Joe Estes's, sick wife, who was in need of medical assistance, upon which Dr. Russell followed him on horseback to the place where his partners lay in waiting. Upon arrival they made Dr. Russell dismount and tied and whipped him, and made him promis to never lecture on Infidelity again. J. W. HILL.

Sworn to and subscribed before me at Temple, Tex., this, the 11th day of April, 1892. OTTO K. BURWITZ,
Notary Public in and for Bell county, Texas.

After this Mr. Hill and J. C. Adams, of this city, went to Coleman to see Mr. Estes, one of the parties mentioned as implicated. They obtained from Mr. Estes the following information:

THE STATE OF TEXAS, COUNTY OF BELL:

Before me, Otto K. Burwitz, a notary public, in and for Bell county, Texas, on this day, personally appeared J. C. Adams, of Bell county, Texas, and J. W. Hill, of Falls county, Texas, both known to me to be the persons who signed the following affidavit, who, being duly sworn by me, stated on their oath as follows:

That on the 11th day of April, 1892, we, J. C. Adams and J. W. Hill, met Joe Estes at Coleman City, Coleman county, at the depot, and I, J. W. Hill, said to Joe Estes: "You remember the conversation we had at the Willow Spring school-house, Falls county, about December 24th, 1881?" to which he answered: "What about?" "About the Russell whipping near Harrisville, in 1877," I said, to which Joe Estes replied: "Yes, I do, and I hav received a letter in regard to that matter from Joe Copeland, of Falls county, yesterday, and I hav started to go to Bell county this morning to straighten the matter." I, J. W. Hill, then said to Joe Estes: "You recollect that you told me that yourself, Joe Copeland, Henry Lacey, and John Gable were the men that whipped Dr. Russell?" to which he answered: "I do not remember telling the names of the parties, but I know you know all about it, Jim. If I did giv the names I will not do it any more." Then I, J. C. Adams, said to Joe Estes, "It becomes your duty to giv the names of the parties connected with the whipping of Dr. Russell, there being a number of people who doubt that Dr. Russell has ever been whipped." Joe Estes made the following reply to me, viz.: "I know that Dr. Russell was whipped, and you can tell him that myself was one of the four men that whipped him, and I was the very man myself who decoyed him away from his home under the pretense that my wife was sick and wanted him to see her." On my asking him what reason he had, and his associates, for whipping Dr. Russell, he, Joe Estes, replied: "As far as I am concerned individually, I never had any personal acquaintance with the doctor, knowing him only by reputation as a good straightforward man, highly respected in the community where he lived for his kindness and integrity as a man and as a skillful physician. It appeared that some people in his neighborhood had been taking offense at his religious views and desired him to be chastised, so one of the men who was from the doctor's neighborhood stated to the other three men who were from the Dogtown neighborhood." And he, Joe Estes, said that it was the doctor's religious views that caused him to be whipped, and it was religious influence that caused him to be whipped. And he, Joe Estes, says to J. C. Adams, "Tell Dr. Russell that if it would be any satisfaction to Dr. Russell, that he, Joe Estes, would come and let the doctor whip him until he, the doctor, was satisfied." Joe Estes further stated that he expected nothing better than to serve at least two years in the penitentiary for being accessory in the whipping of Dr. Russell. J. C. ADAMS,
J. W. HILL.

Sworn to and subscribed before me at Temple, Texas, this, the 11th day of April, 1892. OTTO K. BURWITZ,
Notary Public in and for the county of Bell, Texas.

Following the clue further, Messrs. J. C. Adams and T. L. Hollingsworth, as friends of Dr. Russell, went to Milam county and interviewed Mr. J. H. Lacey. From him they received a confession and promis to write to Dr. Russell. The affidavit of these gentlemen is here given:

STATE OF TEXAS, COUNTY OF BELL:

Before me the undersigned authority on this day came and appeared J. C. Adams and T. L. Hollingsworth, both to me well known, who being by me duly sworn upon their oaths say and depose as follows:

On the 14th day of April, 1892, upon the farm of W. H. Lacey, near Rockdale, in Milam county, we met W. H. Lacey, and had with him in substance the following conversation. We stated to Mr. Lacey that we were reliably informed that he had participated in the whipping of Dr. L. J. Russell, which occurred in Bell county in October, 1877, to which W. H. Lacey replied, "Yes," and stated that he, Lacey, Joe Copeland, Joe Estes, and John Gable were the parties that whipped Dr. Russell at the time and place mentioned, and that he, Lacey, was the instigator of the whipping, and arranged it, but that he was partially led to do so by public expressions he had heard in the neighborhood in which he and Dr. Russell lived to the effect that Dr. Russell ought to be chastised for his views and expressions upon religious subjects. He, Lacey, further stated that at the time the whipping occurred that he felt and believed that the course of Dr. Russell was wrong and dangerous to the children and young people of the community, and that Russell had no right to express views calculated to injure and mislead the children and young people growing up in the community, and that he felt that Russell ought to be made to stop it and his object in whipping him was to cause him to stop it. However, he, Lacey, further stated that he had long since regretted his action in the matter, and felt that he had wronged and injured an honorable man for the expression of views he had a right to entertain. T. L. HOLLINGSWORTH,
J. C. ADAMS.

The foregoing was signed and sworn to before me, by J. C. Adams and T. L. Hollingsworth, this day.

Given under my hand and seal of office, this 15th day of April, A.D. 1892. W. S. BANKS,
Notary Public, Bell county, Tex.

Mr. Lacey fulfilled his promis to write, and following is his letter:

ROCKDALE, TEX., April 14, 1892.

DR. L. J. RUSSELL, My Best Friend (for I feel like I hav a perfect right to claim you as such since you hav reprieved me, as I will term it, from a term in the Sing Sing, that the truth of your statement in regard to the crime in regard to which I am going to write might be established): It makes me know that the men are not all dead yet that prize their word above rubies. If I had been arrested and brought to Belton for trial I could not hav asked the least favor of you. So you may hav some idea of my gratefulness to you for your kindness that I will never forget until I hav breathed my last. I will cut a long story short by saying that I can't thank you for lack of words. I hav been sorry but once since the rash act, and that has been ever since a week after the cowardly act. My uncle, J. J. Dyess, was speaking of the matter to me, not knowing who the guilty were. He said that to treat a gentleman that way was the lowest-down act that had come under his observation. Then I began to realize what I had done. All that I can do is to make a frank confession, which I hav made to the two gentlemen that came to see me, J. C. Adams and T. L. Hollingsworth, which was this: I was living with Tom Greathouse and heard you lecture once. There was a great deal of complaint against you among the Christians for preaching Infidelity, and many of them thought it ought to be stopped; so I took it upon myself, without being influenced by anyone, to get up a crowd and fool you out and whip you, which we did. There were four of us; three done the whipping; I am one of the three. You told me that you had heart trouble, which caused me to be lighter on you than I would hav been otherwise. I belonged to the church at the time and had no better sense than to believe that I was doing God's service. Now, doctor, I hav confessed the hidden past of my life. There is nothing back of this that is criminal, or that I am afraid for the world to know. Now, doctor, I hav no fear of you or any other Infidel doing me any harm for what I hav done, because the gentlemen that visited me told me to hav no fear, for not one of them would harm me, and in addition to that I hav many friends that are Infidels, and must say that I hav never had one to swindle me in a transaction; hence I believe they do right because it is right, and not because they are afraid the devil will catch them. Now that the world may read the worse part of my past life, I giv you my consent to publish this in the leading papers of the United States if you desire to do so, and besides, if the law wants to be satisfied, just tell the sheriff to write me a card to come to trial, and I will be on hand at the appointed day, and if the law says for me to shove a jack-plane or make negro shoes for one, five, or ten years, I will submit without a murmur, because I am to blame for the whole matter and no one else ought to suffer. Now, doctor, I will close by saying that I will come to see you about the first of July next if you desire to see me, for I would like to talk the matter over in person with you, and my last request is that your family forgiv me as you hav done. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am your friend now and all the time.

HENRY LACY.

Mr. Copeland was interviewed by a number of Dr. Russell's friends in Temple. He admitted knowledge of the affair, but refused to either implicate himself or to deny complicity. Mr. Gable has not been interviewed.

The parties to this affair are well known in the section. Mr. Estes now livs near Coleman City, but formerly resided in Falls County in what is known as the old Dogtown settlement. Mr. Copeland also lived at Dogtown, but is now living near Durango, in Falls county. John Gable livs on the E. F. May place near Temple, and Mr. Lacey livs near Rockdale at present. Dr. Russell, the victim of the outrage, if he ever harbored thoughts of revenge, has laid aside such intentions. He asks no more than that the public should know the circumstances. In fact, his mild manner of dealing with the perpetrators is a matter of considerable comment among his friends.

Comicalities.

The rich may hav their mansions here,
But poor men, when they die,
Will hav the pull, so we are told,
On the mansions in the sky.

Wool: "I never could understand why all the big bars in New York are decorated with such expensiv oil paintings." Van Pelt: "People want to see pictures on Sunday and no other museums are open."

Sunday Not a Holy Day Anyway.

It has seemed curious that no one has met the Sabbath racket from a Christian standpoint, as the enforcement of a Sabbath observance on the gentiles is as unchristian as it is un-American, unneighborly, and ungentlemanly.

Now, waiving the fact that there are two reasons assigned in the Decalog for an observance of the Sabbath, by the two copyists, and to accept either of those reasons is to indorse either the geocentric theory of astronomy, with its firmament for dividing the waters, its floodgates, and all of the nonsense connected with that theory, or the equally absurd record of three millions of people leaving Egypt in a single night so stealthily that they were not missed till the next day—with all of the prodigies connected with that prodigious people, from the first conception of the ninety-year-old lass that bore Ike with the help of the barefooted Lord that made the promis to Abraham—the record of the Jews, with their godly government, should be satisfactory to us so long as we are not burdened with such government; but for Christians to attempt to force that government on us should cause us to investigate their claims as to merits in practical use.

So, in starting out as a nation, we find them governed by a God, or Lord—the terms appear to be interchangeable—and all laws emanated from him and were also executed by his immediate command. The result was very unsatisfactory, both to the governor and the governed. Five hundred years of that government resulted in the massacre of some 239,000 of his subjects by his command or by his own hand, 50,070 harvest hands were slaughtered by his own hand when the ark was being returned from Ekron, and ninety-six years of bondage in servitude among the various petty nations were suffered as penalties for their crimes. He seems to hav been the most passionate sovereign on record. He became so exasperated at one time that he was determined to kill the whole nation, and it took Moses forty days and forty nights to cool him off, lying the while on his belly without anything to eat or drink; and it was only from fear of scandal from the Egyptians that he finally let up and let them liv.

Well, his government finally became so unpopular that he was requested to resign, which he reluctantly did, and they chose a king in his place.

He finally, from some cause, came down and had no hesitancy in condemning the fool laws that he instituted that resulted in such a deplorable failure. He says through his holy prophet Jeremiah (xxxi, 31): "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and the house of Judah; not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord: But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws in their inward parts, and write in their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgiv their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more."

Now, the above promis of a new covenant is claimed to be fulfilled by the advent of Jesus Christ, who is the mediator of the new covenant. And the gospel is designed to take the place of the law, so far as the ceremonial is concerned. And everyone that partakes of the ceremonies of the Jews is condemned by the Apostles in unmeasured terms. Nor did Christ in one solitary instance require such observance. To the one who came to him, as recorded in Matt. xix, inquiring what good things he should do to obtain eternal life, Jesus respon ed, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. And he saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honor thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man said, All of these hav I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast and giv to the poor, and thou shalt hav treasure in heaven." Mark and Luke record the same event in nearly the same words, but no command is given against anything but what he conceived to be crime. What criminal negligence, if such is required under the gospel dispensation! Why stop with but one-half of the commandments and leave that poor fellow to go to destruction under a false impression? And not only him, but also the whole Christian world. Either one of the two conclusions must be drawn from the circumstance—he was either criminally negligent in making known Christian duty, or he wished to eliminate the ceremonial parts of the law that had been such a stumbling-block to the Jews and made them the most outlandish nation of cutthroats on record. But Paul does not leave us in doubt in regard to the ceremonial, for he condemns the Decalog in these terms in 2 Cor. iii, 7–11: "But if the ministration of death written and engraven in stones was glorious so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance, which glory was to be done away; How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory. For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect by reason of the glory that excelleth. For if that which was done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious."

Now, could Paul hav stigmatized the Decalog as the ministration of death and condemnation if it was sound in all of its parts, as the clergy of our day would hav us believe? Like Christ, he holds to that portion that pertains to crime. Hear him in his epistle to Rom. xiii, 8, where Christian duties are being handled: he says, "Owe no man anything, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."

Thus it will be seen that the eliminating of the ceremonial part of the Decalog was no accident. And to find the estimate that those doctrins were held in by the Apostles it will be necessary to advert to the record. For we find that there were certain evil-disposed persons that went out from Jerusalem to preach that not only attempted to enforce the ceremonial part of the law, but also the ordinance of circumcision. Such were met by the fully authorized Apostles in controversy. And after much disputation, we read in Acts that Paul and Barnabas were delegated to go to Jerusalem and call a council to settle the dispute.

After arriving there and calling a council of the Apostles and elders, we read (Acts xv, 6): "And the Apostles and elders came together to consider of this matter. And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel and believe. And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith. Now, therefore, why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear? . . . Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the gentiles by them."

I am fully aware that the clergy of to-day admit that the ritual is in part eliminated from the Jewish law, but that of the Sabbath is particularly sacred and is the corner-stone of Christianity. But I desire to say that it is only the corner-stone of their bread and butter. And an enforced observance is equally as obnoxious to primitiv teaching as circumcision. We read in Rom. xiv, 5, "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike: let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind. . . . I know, and am fully persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean." Thus it will be seen that Sabbatarians hav no ground to stand on. There is not a line or word in the New Testament that they can call to their aid. And it may be well to show how those whelps that went out preaching the law to the gentiles were looked upon. Paul, in his epistle to the Galatians, in writing of them says (i, 6): "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we hav preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye hav received, let him be accursed. For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ." Again he says, in iii, 1: "O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, . . . before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you? This only would I learn of you, received ye the spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Are ye so foolish? having begun in the spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?" This is the kind of talk administered to the churches, while those who are guilty of this kind of teaching are denounced as Antichrist (1 John iv, 3), preaching Christ out of envy and strife (Phil. i, 15), dogs to be shunned and evil workers (iii, 2), and so on. Is it strange that it takes one hundred thousand in this land of ours to maintain their version of the teaching of the gospel? Honesty would relieve most of their labors, and they would cease to be dogs.

The above deductions seem to me to be conclusiv as to the ceremonial portion of the Jewish law. If Jesus, Peter, Paul, and Barnabas are competent witnesses, then modern orthodoxy is Antichristian. But my Christianity has its beginning and ending in the abolition of rights and ceremonies in our legislativ jurisprudence. The old conception of an anthropomorphic God of the male gender leading a bachelor life is outgrown or should be. If we must hav a God let us hav one that has common sense, and one that does not stand in need of so much help and advice. My advice to the Christian world is that they invite the whole trinity to resign, or else cease their efforts of placing such nonsense as their old funeral without a corpse as subjects of legislation. It may do them as a substitute for amusement, but partakes too much of the order of dissipation for common use. E. A. White.

Madison, Wis., March 16, 1892.

Meddlesome Legislation.

After the priest, with his Thus saith the Lord, the meddlesome legislator is the next greatest evil that befalls a people. The man who, without education or experience, is elected member of a legislativ body, at once imagins an influx of wisdom from some quarter, and feels himself called upon to enact laws for the special benefit of his particular friends. This sudden sense of wisdom which he never felt before is sufficient, without studying history or constitutions, to guide him. He not only feels qualified but desires to regulate everybody's affairs. And in exchanging votes with other members, so that each secures the passage of some favor, he fancies himself a statesman. He does not count the cost nor consider the probable effects. He is apt to imbibe a little divine-right-of-rule notion.

No doubt the principle of evolution holds good in regard to government; but it seems to operate in jerks and to sometimes retrograde. Our own Revolution resulted in a great advance of liberty, equality, and justice in government. It might hav been still better had a single national legislativ body been established, without the Senate, which is an imitation of the British House of Lords. Following the example of the federal government, each one of the states has its troublesome and expensiv house of lords. However, the most activ men of that day were familiar with the evils of church-and-state rule, with monarchs' prerogativs, and with paternalism. Knowing the proneness of rulers to magnify and increase their powers, they limited distinctly the executiv authority and specified the legislativ duties; and "all powers not delegated to the federal government are reserved to the states and the people." But as no Catholic, and few Protestants, ever examin the Bible for themselvs, so do very few voters examin our federal Constitution for their guidance.

The Constitution givs Congress no authority to interfere between capital and labor; to meddle with wages, education, or pauperism; to prescribe speech, belief, or Sunday observance; nor to pass partial laws for the benefit of individuals or classes. But Congress has from time to time usurped power in most of these matters. More than one-half the bills passed by many of its sessions are relief bills, every one of which is a violation of the Constitution. It enacted an unwarranted eight-hour law that resulted in an incalculable amount of injury between employers and employees. It has without right established a bureau of agriculture to send seeds and literature to a few prominent political farmers and increase the number of officials. It has enacted bankrupt laws to release speculators from paying honest debts. It has authorized the president to interfere with Freethought and prescribe morals, by censorship of the mails; and soon a fellow won't know who owns the post-office. Instead of only uniform pension laws, thousands of private ones are passed—making an enormous aggregate of cost. This great sum of more than one hundred millions of dollars annually, is drawn from all parts of the country, north and south; but nearly all of it is returned to the north. How long can the south stand the drain? And it is mostly returned to a small minority at the north on pretense of patriotic love. How long will the north stand that? Granting millions of acres of the best public lands to build at once two Pacific railroads resulted, when finished, in making a few millionaires, and leaving thousands of laborers without work. Privileges granted by the legislator, not the Jay Goulds, should be denounced.

